PEOPLE FLED IN PANIC

Valley of Los Alamos, Cal., Is Almost Deserted

A CHANGE OF TOPOGRAPHY

By a Series of Earthquake Shocks Which Have Run Great Fissures Deep In the Earth and Created Hills In Level Places

San Luis Obispo, Cal., Aug. 1.—A strip of country 15 miles long and four miles wide rent with gaping fissures and dotted with hills and knolls that sprung up during the night as if by magic, a village in ruins and hundreds of people fleeing for their lives, are the results of Wednesday night's seismic disturbance in the valley of Los Alamos, in the northern part of Santa Barbara county. During the last four days that section of country has been shaken by a series of earthquakes that is without precedent in the history or tradition of the Pacific coast, and the continuance of the disturbances and the increasing severity of the shocks have so terrorized the inhabitants that they are leaving for other parts as rapidly as possible and even now the village of Los Alamos is almost entirely deserted.

The most severe shock of the entire series occurred at 1:30 yesterday morning. Hills were shaken and twisted to their foundations and the valleys trembled and rolled like the surface of the ocean. Great fissures were run deep in the earth, hills and knolls appeared in level valleys, springs of water appeared in places that had been dry and the general topography of the valley was greatly changed in many respects. The disturbance had no general direction, but was what is known as a twister. It was preceded by a rumbling like that of distant thunder, which increased until the earth began to rise and twist and the hills began to tremble.

With the first warning of the sound of the approaching disaster the terror-stricken people rushed into the streets and sought places of safety. The terror inspired by the rumbling and trembling of the earth was increased by the sound of falling buildings, which gave some idea of the terrible destruction that was being wrought. In the darkness of the night it was impossible to determine the full extent of damage wrought, but with the dawn of day the stricken village had the appearance of the ruins of a city long deserted. A church had been levelled to the ground and not one brick building was left standing. There was not a building in town that had not been damaged more or less seriously. Not a piece of glass was left in any window in town.

A conservative estimate of the loss to property in the village is $30,000 and this amount will probably be greatly increased by the damage in the surrounding country. The extent of the most severe portion of the disturbance is 11 miles long by four miles wide, but the shock was felt throughout Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo counties.

The disturbances continued throughout the day at intervals of two hours, but none of the shocks was severe. The people have deserted the village. Every conveyance has been taken and the passenger and freight trains that have left here since the severe shock of Wednesday night have been loaded with people fleeing for safety. Since the first disturbances on Sunday night there have been more than 70 distinct shocks, and those who have been keeping records have now given up, as the disturbances have become almost continuous.

Still Another Shock

Santa Barbara, Cal., Aug. 1.—Another severe earthquake shock was felt at Los Alamos at 7:30 last night. It was almost as heavy as that of early yesterday morning. A slight shock was felt in this city at the same time.

Bryan on Tariff Reform

New Haven, Aug. 1.—For the third time within a week, William J. Bryan was yesterday a visitor in New Haven. He left today for New York. In an interview Mr. Bryan said: "I am glad to see that the Republicans of Iowa admitted the necessity for tariff reform, for while it will strengthen the Republican party in that state for the coming campaign, it will ultimately weaken it, for the Republicans cannot permit any reform in the tariff without endangering their whole system."

Colliery Disaster Abroad

Sydney, N. S. W., Aug. 1.—An explosion resulting in heavy loss of life has occurred at the Mount Kimbla colliery at Wollongong. Twenty-seven bodies have been recovered. The buildings at the mouth of the pit were wrecked. Many miners were rescued, but 100 are still entombed. It is feared their release is hopeless. A portion of the colliery is on fire.

HEAVY EMBEZZLEMENT

Charged Against a Lawyer Who Was Trustee of a Large Estate

Boston, Aug. 1.—The Post in its issue today says: The embezzlement of $200,000, involving the wiping out of the George B. Emerson estate, is the charge against Willard C. VanDerlip, a well known lawyer, one of the most prominent members of the Boston lodge of the Order of Elks, and part owner of a hotel at Cottage City.

A warrant for his arrest will be applied for today. Attorney William D. Sohier and John Lowell will ask for the warrant.

The details of the embezzlement include the allegation of forgery of the name of one of the sureties on VanDerlip's bond, which he gave as trustee 16 years ago.

Systematic falsification of reports is alleged for the period of almost the entire trusteeship.

For 30 years Willard C. VanDerlip has acted as confidential man for various well known law firms in this city. He has had the care of estates, the collection of dividends, the purchase and sale of securities and the disposal of real estate.

Last evening Mr. VanDerlip made the following statement to the Post:

"It is true that there was a defalcation, but it was somewhere around $100,000, not $200,000 as stated. I have given real estate I owned and all the money I had to settle the matter and arranged to pay up the balance in time. I thought the matter was all settled, but now this will ruin myself and my family."

A Much-Married Man

Nashua, N. H., Aug. 1.—The police of this city are searching for a man who gave his name as George A. La Liberte, and who married a young woman here on Tuesday who gave her name as Bertha Megan. On Wednesday a woman arrived in Nashua and stated that her name was Cameron, and that she was La Liberte's wife. The woman married by La Liberte on Tuesday is being held by the police, and when they find La Liberte they will arrest him on the charge of bigamy. It is claimed by the second woman that La Liberte had a wife before he married her, and had two children by this first wife.

Two Men and Woman Drowned

Phillips, Me., Aug. 1.—The upsetting of a boat on the Kennebago river brought death by drowning to three of a party of four, Mrs. Paul Virgin, Tom Paradise and Leon Martin. The survivor is Mrs. Virgin's husband. The men were laborers employed on a railroad, and they were in camp at Kennebago farm. The men and Mrs. Virgin left the farm in a boat to go to Indian Rocks camps for mail, which is taken to that point by stage. No particulars of the accident have been obtained, as Virgin is so unnerved that nothing definite can be made of his ramblings.

Two Women Drowned

Hull, Mass., Aug. 1.—Miss Anna D. Collier, a school teacher of Worcester, and Miss Jean Brown of Detroit, both summer guests at Bayside, were drowned in the surf while bathing yesterday. Miss Collier, who could not swim, had waded into deep water, and was carried off her feet by the undertow. She screamed and Miss Brown and Miss Christina McAdam started to save her. Miss Collier, in her fright, seized both the others. After a struggle Miss Collier and Miss Brown went down, while Miss McAdam managed to keep afloat until rescued.

A Mysterious Disappearance

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 1.—Thomas Gannon left here July 6 and has not been heard from since he took passage from Providence that day on a steamer for New York. He was seen on board the boat by two friends. It is believed by his relatives that he was lost overboard that night. Baggage belonging to Gannon is still in care of an agent of the steamer line.

High-Priced Entertainment

Boston, Aug. 1.—On authority of City Auditor Dodge the cost to the city for the entertainment of Prince Henry on the occasion of his visit here was $14,428.29. Not since the visit of Queen Kapiolani, in 1887, has the city entertained so lavishly. At that time the cost was $18,053.47, but her visit covered a week, while Prince Henry's was for a single day.

Delaney May Plead Insanity

Littleton, N. H., Aug. 1.—Norah McKenna, who was shot by William Delaney last Friday, is convalescent, and her arm, in which a bone was shattered by a bullet, will be saved. It is thought that Delaney will plead insanity as the reason for his act, as his sister, it is claimed, has been in an asylum, and her mother in one now.

Police Turnover at Boston

Boston, Aug. 1.—The biggest shakeup in the Boston police department for two years was made at rollcall last night, and by the orders issued two captains, two lieutenants, 13 sergeants, 95 patrolmen and seven reserve officers of the Boston police force will shift about and settle down in new berths at rollcall Saturday.

Veteran Found Dead In Hut

New London, Conn., Aug. 1.—Freemont Mesho was found dead in a hut near Groton yesterday. He had pension papers showing him to be 96 years old and to have been a member of a light artillery company from Bangor, Me., in the Civil war. He had lived a solitary life in the woods.

QUIET AT SUSQUEHANNA

City Shows Little Sign of Passing Through Severe Ordeal

NOT UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Troops Camped on the Outskirts and Ready to Respond Should Their Services Be Needed—Strikers Are Trying to Have Them Withdrawn

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 1.—Twelve hundred state troops are encamped on a hill overlooking Shenandoah. Down in the town, where rioters and policemen fought the bloody battle Wednesday night, all is quiet, and the indications are that so long as the militia remains the peace of the community will not again be broken. The riot which caused the soldiers to be sent here came like a flash and was over almost as quickly as it had started and since then there has not been a single case of violence reported.

The tens of thousands of idle men and boys in this vicinity who had been gathering in large numbers and marching from place to place did not repeat their demonstrations yesterday, so the authorities had little or nothing to do. The arrival of the citizen soldiery proved to be a great attraction for the large army of unemployed, and hundreds of men and boys came to town to see the troops.

Beyond the presence of a group of soldiers here and there on the principal street Shenandoah does not show any evidence of having passed through a trying ordeal. The large number of persons who had been attracted to the place by the coming of the militia have left and the town presents its normal appearance. The major portion of the population is made up of foreigners and, as a rule, they keep close to their homes. It is claimed by the citizens of the town that the foreign element was solely responsible for the trouble.

Contrary to popular belief, Shenandoah is not under martial law. The local authorities and the sheriff of the county have not relinquished control of the town or county. The soldiers are merely in camp on the outside of the town. It was deemed advisable, however, by Brigadier General Gobin to establish provost guards in certain parts of the town. So long as the situation remains as it is at present, there is no likelihood that the regimental companies will be scattered through the mining towns of Schuylkill county. It is the intention of General Gobin to have the troops occupy their time by going through drills, target practice and general camp routine.

The mine workers are greatly incensed over the calling out of the troops. They assert that this action was entirely unwarranted and is an unjustifiable expense to the state. The strikers are making an effort to have the soldiers withdrawn. The first step in this direction was taken yesterday afternoon, when a telegram was sent from here to Governor Stone asking him to send a personal representative into the town to investigate the conditions, "and after such investigation we believe that you will learn that the presence of the troops in this town is unnecessary and that the order should be revoked."

It is said the mine workers' officials intend to circulate among the citizens of the town for signatures a petition calling upon the governor to withdraw the troops.

The district leaders of the Miners' union held several conferences yesterday, at which the situation was thoroughly gone over. Committeeman Dougherty made a full report to President Mitchell by telephone. The miners' advisory board of this vicinity held a secret meeting, at which plans were devised to prevent any intended breaks in the ranks of the strikers.

There was a large mass meeting of foreigners held here yesterday afternoon and half a dozen speeches were made. General indignation was expressed by all of the speakers against the bringing of the troops to Shenandoah.

Of the 20 or more persons who were beaten with clubs or struck by bullets during Wednesday night's rioting, one man, Joseph Beddal, died last night. The four policemen who were shot and the strikers who were also hit by bullets will recover. Most of the wounded strikers claim they were merely onlookers.

The district attorney and the sheriff are prosecuting an investigation with a view of placing under arrest all those who participated in the riot. Several of the wounded strikers called at the miners' hospital today to have slight injuries dressed and after the doctors got through with them they were arrested and taken to the Pottsville jail.

Thinks Strikers Won't Weaken

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 1.—President Mitchell says he does not think that the presence of the state militia in the Schuylkill region will have the effect of weakening the ranks of the strikers and he does not look for the resumption of mining in that distruct under the protection of the troops.

Two Collieries Start Up

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 1.—The Oxford colliery and the Cayuga colliery resumed operations yesterday morning and worked all day. The Oxford had between 120 and 130 men underground. The Cayuga had 60 miners. Crowds surrounded both collieries when they were started up, but the police and sheriff's men prevented any disorder.

Texas Floods Subsiding

Dallas, Aug. 1.—The cessation of torrential rains throughout this state during the past two days has improved the situation in the flood stricken districts greatly and railroads damaged by washouts have resumed regular traffic with but few exceptions.

Policeman Was a Housebreaker

Washington, Aug. 1.—George Hambacher, a member of the Washington police force, who was arrested on two charges of housebreaking, pleaded guilty yesterday. There were nine complaints in all against Hambacher.

Rome, Aug. 1.—A number of anarchists were arrested here Wednesday and yesterday. The prisoners are said to have been in correspondence with comrades in Paterson, N. J.

Probably any reduction in tax rate is appreciated in the city of Marlboro. The tax rate of 1902 is $20, or thirty cents less than last year.

Some great records were made at the big Lowell muster. Thirteen hand engines played over 200 feet, and the first prize winner over 219 feet.

Senator Foraker said recently that the spirit of "true Americanism" which Theodore Roosevelt "breathed in with the air of the western prairies" doubtless accounted for his widespread popularity with the American people.

Now that our summer residents at Houghs Neck are united we are to have not only one gala day, but a carnival of three days. The street railway must prepare for the biggest crowd ever at the beach.

The examiners at the Patent office say that they are being flooded with applications for patents on devices for aiding or improving the games of golf and ping-pong. One inventor has applied for a patent on a mechanical "caddie" which is warranted a great improvement over the somewhat irresponsible small boy now in use.

Drift of Opinion.

☞When a man and his wife quarrel they have no right to accuse each other of insanity. Possibly their tiff is evidence of sound mind and discrimination.—Beverly Times.

☞It is getting to be quite the thing for the workers to have outing days and half-holidays and all the other good times along that line that can be arranged for in the "good old summer-times." It appears that the employers are none the worse off because of that fact. The general business suffers not at all; the special business of those at the resorts along the shores and elsewhere is made all the better.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞"I go away? Not much," answered the family man who lives down Quincy Park way when asked the seasonable question. "Why this is the time of year I live! To begin with, every blessed one of our big family is away, and, as I do a good bit of work at home, that counts. Then the two kids next door—the meanest and noisiest in creation—have been put to grass, and the forever-barking collies on the other side are also being boarded out in the country for their health. The female across the street, (some villain has told her she can sing,) is warbling at an ocean pier, no longer sets my teeth on edge. As for me, one of our ex-servants comes every morning to put things to rights, and I enjoy my meals in a restaurant. After a wearing year this dolice far niente sort of existence is a paradise! No doubt I'll be glad to see the Missus and the rest of them along in September, but for just now my motto is, "Man wants but little here below, but he wants that little all to himself, sometimes. The First Will Be Set Apart for the Children.

August 20, 21 and 22 will be gala days at Houghs Neck this year. This is the time set apart for the annual illumination and carnival. There will be but one illumination and it will be a grand one. The misunderstanding between the two factions has been cleared away and all are now united. Just what the program for the three days will be has not been decided as yet, other than that the first day shall be children's day. There will be games of all kinds for the children, a punch and judy show, and a dinner. The sail in the harbor will be omitted as the committee had rather cut this out than have any accident happen which would mar the whole affair.

Fifty ladies have volunteered their services for this day. They will be scattered all over the beach and will make it their duty to look after the children, so that mothers need not fear of any harm reaching their pets.

To raise the necessary funds to carry out the program the ladies will hold a calico shirt waist party next Monday evening at Kaplan's hall. The committee having this in charge are Mrs. Hattie H. Connor Chairman, Miss Lizzie O'Toole, Mrs. D. D. Driscoll, Mrs. Stropp, Mrs. Abbott and Miss Minnie Cockran.

The program for the other days will be announced in the Ledger as soon as the other plans are completed.

Alden Family Reunion.

What more fitting place to hold the second reunion of the descendants of the Pilgrim John Alden than at the old homestead where John and Priscilla spent their last days! Through the efforts of Miss A. Ella Alden of Middleboro, the first reunion in these parts of the descendants of John Alden of Mayflower fame, was held at Highland Park, Avon, Mass., last September, when an association of these descendants was formed. At that meeting, Mr. John W. Alden, who now occupies the old house at Duxbury, kindly invited the association to hold its second reunion at the old homestead. This invitation was accepted, and a committee was appointed to arrange for this second meeting on Aug. 28th. This committee is working to make this reunion the success it ought to be. Much interest is being taken in the matter, and the affair promises to be a very pleasant one.

Lynn Tax Rate.

The tax rate of Lynn has jumped up from 17.80 per thousand to $18 per thousand, the figure at which it stood in 1900. The tax rate of the city has never been above this figure and this is the second time that it has reached as high. The total amount to be raised is $993,534.66, with a total valuation of $52,759,481. There is a gain of 568 polls since last year, and of $385,405 in real estate and $132,051 in personal estate, a total gain in the city valuation of $617,456.

Side Shows.

An open race under the auspices of the Manchester Yacht club will be held at Manchester, Aug. 4, at 2 P. M., the races to be sailed under the rules of the Yacht Racing Association for association percentages.

The Crowhurst cup race under the auspices of the Manchester Yacht club, takes place Tuesday afternoon, starting off West Manchester at 2 P. M., the racing rules of Manchester club governing.

August Magazines.

The August National is primarily a fiction number. Eight young American writers contribute stories of genuine excellence. At least one of the number—Edward F. Younger of Chicago—gives promise of soon being reckoned among the foremost short story writers of America. His Tragedy at Hazelwood is a work of unusual power. Joe Mitchell Chapple's illustrated Affairs at Washington is even more than usually full and bright. Throughout, the National is full of new and attractive pictures of men, women, and places of interest.

A FAXON LOT.

Suggested for Federal Building---A Quincy Avenue Corner.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

My attention being called to the public hearing held Monday for a Federal Building by your valuable paper under the heading "Of many minds." I am also of another mind.

We all want a Federal Building. We desire to have it located as near the centre, and centre of business and population, as possible.

Now it is a well known fact that the Packard estate cannot be bought for the amount appropriated. The other lots, with the exception of the one, the corner of Washington and Coddington streets are out of question.

Why do certain business men desire to take from the revenue of the City, the taxes from any of the lots mentioned, when there are lots of land more centrally located and assessed as Pasture land?

What is the matter with the Faxon estate on the corner of Quincy avenue and Water street? Here is a lot of land about half between West Quincy and Quincy Point districts; five minutes' walk from Quincy or Quincy Adams R. R. stations. Five minutes walk to the Fore River works and ship yards on one side and the granite industry on the other.

It is located 300 feet nearer the exact centre of the city, than where the present postoffice is located. It is also situated in the centre of the different Ports where shipping is possible by reasonable depth of water. I believe that it is in the centre of population of the city and if anything the largest half live in this section.

It is not only central for Quincy, but also for the towns of Weymouth and Braintree and the other towns on the South shore, that might from time to time have business dealings with the department.

Trusting you will kindly favor me with a space in your valuable daily, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
Thos. R. Smith.

Going to Rhode Island.

The West Quincy ball team invite their friends generally to accompany them to Olneyville, R. I., Saturday afternoon when a good game is promised.

The West Quincys will, unquestionably, be the strongest team that has ever represented Quincy on the diamond and will be made up as follows: Duffy, l.f.; Tate, c.f.; Logan, r.f.; Kiley, Parks, 1b.; Spiller, s.s.; Rafferty, 3b.; Woods, c.; Rankin, p.

The players leave Boston on the 1.03 express to Providence, thence to Olneyville by electrics. The majority of rooters will leave on the excursion to Crescent Park. The train will stop at East Providence, where they will get electrics to Olneyville. The rates are half price on this train, which leaves Boston at 2 o'clock and on the return leaves Crescent Park at 9.10.

Did Not Take Beer.

Fred Edwards, whose name was connected with the beer raid on Adams street, denies all knowledge of the taking of the beer. It was in the vicinity of his stable where the beer was hidden, but the gang were mistaken in thinking that he took it.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

A hot day.

Saturday, fair and cooler.

Some of the skim coating has been put on at City Hall.

Mrs. Robert Fraser of Wollaston Park is visiting in Maine.

Henry Hewitt of Wollaston is visiting friends in New Hampshire.

The Flashlight has been reported at Manchester and Marblehead.

Evidently there are more deaths from drowning than from small pox.

The seven-master, the Thomas W. Lawson, is being painted white.

Mrs. J. C. Fraser and Miss Fannie Fraser of Wollaston Park are at Nova Scotia.

That's a catchy phrase of Fellows, the clothier—"You will melt if you don't freeze."

Many enthusiasts over bathing enjoy the cool refreshing water at Wollaston beach every evening.

George Nicholson, the popular Wollaston caterer, accompanied by his wife, has gone to Bass Point.

The new house on Marlboro street, Wollaston Park, is being built by Charles Copeland of Boston.

Rev. Nicholas Van der Pyl of Hollis-ton will preach at the Sunday services at the Bethany Congregational church.

Several Quincy families have summer cottages near the scene of the double drowning at Bayside, Hull, Thursday noon.

Many mourn the loss of Mrs. Flanders of Farrington street, Wollaston, who passed away suddenly in apparently good health.

The city bath house continues to be popular and crowds go down every day. On Thursday afternoon the water was black with people.

When the Ledger presses are moved down to the street floor electricity will be the motive power, an up to date motor having been purchased.

Mr. Alex. Nash informs the Ledger that he has an agent or clerk, who is furnishing his cream promptly to all who may desire notwithstanding his illness.

It is said that the Democrats will be more confused than the Republicans by direct nomination of candidates for the Legislature. There will be no convention.

Miss Bertha Hayden who has been ill for some time at her home on River street Quincy Point is improving each day. Her many friends hope to see her out soon.

Some of the Massachusetts towns which are prominent this week would not have been heard from, but for "Old Home Week." It is distinctively a small town holiday.

Quincy's public sewerage system has become quite a plant. Up to date 820 buildings have been connected and the Commissioners have a number of applications on hand.

James C. Dunn's latest musical composition has been set to music by Harry L. Hartz, and is proving popular. Oliver Ditson & Co. are the publishers, and it is for sale at C. F. Carlson's.

The temperature today at noon was higher than on any August day last year and is one of the hot days of 1902. There have been four days this year when the temperature has been above 90, viz: June 3, July 9 and 14, each 92 degrees, and today 91.

Work building the second track on Hancock street is being rushed rapidly. Practically all of the new rail is in, the only delay in using the whole of the new track being at the old turnouts near the Tubular Rivet Works at Billings road and near Squantum street.

Commodore Sheppard of the Quincy Yacht club has issued notices that the yacht Josephine will leave Quincy Point promptly at 7. A. M., on arrival of the 6.49 electric from Quincy, for the Cup races of Manchester, Aug. 4, 5 and 6. The yacht will not stop at Marblehead for lunch, but only long enough to take on passengers. There will be a caterer aboard.

Brothers Suffocated

Westminster, Md., Aug. 1.—Two brothers, Joseph and Samuel Trite, lost their lives yesterday in a well on the farm of their father near here, while rescuing their brother Edward. He had descended into a 60-foot well, discovered gas and signalled to the brothers to hoist him to the surface. When half way up he became unconscious and fell from the bucket. The two brothers then descended into the pit and placed him in the bucket. He was drawn up by neighbors, but the two rescuers were themselves overcome with the gas and were suffocated. Edward is in a critical condition.

I have issued no order restricting the furnishing of supplies to the striking miners."

EDITOR'S NOVEL PLAN.

Carleton F. Hodge Will Print the Bible as a Serial Story.

REASONS FOR HIS UNDERTAKING.

Assumption (Ill.) Publisher Who Intends to Run Portion of Scriptures Each Week In His Paper Says Interest Will Be Increased and People Will Read the Book Who Now Never Look Inside of It.

Carleton F. Hodge, who in a recent issue of his paper, the Assumption (Ill.) Weekly Independent, began the publication of the Bible as a serial story, in explaining his determination declares people who never look inside of their own Bibles will read the Scriptures in a newspaper. He claims that when printed in a newspaper the Bible will become sufficiently worldly to attract readers.

Mr. Hodge is undertaking a long contract. If he prints one column from the Bible in his paper each week, it will be nearly fifty years before he can write, "Concluded in our next."

Mr. Hodge argues that his serial will prove as entertaining as any fiction he can find and besides spreading the gospel will materially add to the circulation of the Weekly Independent. His scheme has already attracted much attention, and he is daily in receipt of letters from ministers and others, some praising his scheme and others censuring him.

In talking of his reasons for deciding to print the Bible Mr. Hodge said the other day to a reporter of the Chicago Tribune:

"Why do I publish the Bible? To the majority of persons the publication of this oldest of books would seem superfluous a senseless waste of space, considering its already vast circulation.

"Let us consider. How many people who own Bibles, have always owned Bibles and would blush to confess to the lack of one ever scan the inside of the book? How many of this number, were they so inclined, would be able, from their utter unfamiliarity with its character, to select a passage or section from which to read that would prove interesting enough to warrant a repetition of the experiment? Would they not lay it aside with at least a mental observation that it was 'dry?'

"The Bible, considered from a standpoint wholly foreign to moral sentiment, is a liberal education if read and studied conscientiously, or with perseverance, if you prefer. Then why not serve it to them in modest courses once a week, time enough between in which to digest the contents? And why not begin at the beginning? Does one thoroughly understand a question, a principle, a piece of mechanism, until he has gone to the bottom of it and worked up, step by step, every detail impressed upon his mind until the whole is a part of himself?

"For example, compare the man who is considered, to use a common expression, 'well informed' with the college bred man. Not in the light of individual merit and worth, understand me, but as to thoroughness and comprehensiveness. One has bits of knowledge, gathered from many sources, good and substantial of its kind, but disconnected, jumbled and incomplete. The college man, or the college education, typifies the system, beginning at the beginning.

"I believe the Bible as a serial in my paper will prove as interesting and entertaining to my readers as any fiction I could use. While I do not by that statement imply that my readers are more in the dark on the Bible than other sections or that I am making a strenuous effort to bring a colony of heathen into the light, I believe the majority of those who believe they have read the book will find something new and of interest in each installment of the story.

"There are, aside from those who are or claim to be Bible students, a large class of readers, newspaper and fiction readers, who are indifferent to the Bible and some who condemn it without so much as a trial. To this class the Bible, an equal associate of the good, bad and indifferent of general newspaper matter, will take on another complexion, become sufficiently worldly, as it were, to attract them.

"We shall see after the first number whether or not I have figured correctly. To be sure, there is no criterion. To the best of my knowledge the Independent will be the first newspaper in the history of the world to attempt the work, and a respectful 'stand aside' policy on the part of my brothers in the profession will be becoming at least until the result is discernible."

Device to Make War Bloodless.

Bloodless yet decisive battles are rendered possible by the hyposcope, an invention of a clergyman, which was exhibited at the national rifle meeting at Bisley, writes the London correspondent of the New York World. By an arrangement of a mirror in a vertical tube a marksman completely under cover can sight an opponent, who is also in cover, and take accurate aim at him. The inventor made some capital shooting under these conditions. His idea is that armies equipped with his device would shoot at hyoscopes instead of at the heads, the soldier being considered dead when his hyposcope is broken.

Civilizing Young Quails.

Miss Hattie Williams of Central Village, Conn., has twelve young quails which she is training to be domestic, says the New York World. She has them already so they will come at her call and anticipates teaching them some tricks.

PHILIPPINE TOPICS.

Trip of an Educational Party Among the Igorrotes.

Some very interesting reports of a half personal nature are coming into the war department from the Philippines, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post. One of the district superintendents of education writes picturesquely of the Igorrotes and their out of door life. He had gone to Benguet to help establish an agricultural school. The cooler climate and clearer atmosphere made open air exercises possible there and a fire at evening necessary. The piny woods, he writes, suggested home, while the mountain scenery was varied and beautiful. The people were simple, frank and honest and possessed a sense of humor not to be observed in members of the Christian tribes. Their religion seemed to be very like that of the North American Indian. From a schoolboy the writer learned that they believed the sun to be the father of all, the moon a good big Igorrote and the stars good little Igorrotes. If the Igorrotes are good, the sun smiles, and if bad hides its face and weeps. They have many feasts and dances. In their dances the woman represents the dove and the man the crow.

In time the route to Benguet will be by railroad to Dagupan and thence by highway a distance of thirty-five miles to Baguio, the capital of Benguet. The government is constructing this road, but it takes much money, time and engineering skill. When it is completed, Benguet will be the health resort for resident Americans.

This educational party went from Manila to San Fernando by boat, then by an army ambulance a distance of twelve miles to Naguilian, where they took ponies. "When I saw my undersized pony," writes the narrator, "I felt as if I ought to carry him rather than he me. To see me mounted on the little fellow, with stirrups so short that my knees were none too far from my face, was to suggest vividly the simile of the 'improper fraction.'"

On the journey the party met many of the American teachers, both in their schools and in their homes. They seemed happy and interested in their work. Each teacher thought his town the finest, his pupils the brightest and his pony the best. Their attitude was generally encouraging. At Bangued, the capital of Abra province, school conditions are not so favorable. The teachers are more isolated, and there is great difficulty in securing mail and supplies from Manila.

GOSPEL WITH A GUN.

Cowboy Preacher Going on Strenuous Evangelization Mission.

The Rev. S. G. Bettes, "the cowboy preacher," who opens his services with a demonstration of his ability to use the lasso, is building at Parkersburg, W. Va., with his own hands a boat 47 feet long, 18 feet beam and 8 feet deep, in which he and ten others expect to sail next spring for the headwaters of the Rio Negro in South America.

They will follow the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, cross the gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean sea and ascend the Amazon 1,200 miles and go nearly a thousand miles up the Rio Negro, says the New York World. Their purpose to establish a Christian settlement in a place 500 miles from the nearest [illegible] they have bought 1,000 acres of timber there and will operate it to pay the expenses of their work. They will take rifles, shotguns and revolvers as well as Bibles.

THE HUMBERT COFFERS.

Strange New Game Played by Paris Society.

The Coffers of Mme. Humbert is Paris society's latest game, says the New York Herald. It consists of three closed boxes the shape of the famous safe, which contain a coin, a button and nothing, respectively. Three guests make the choice.

The one who gets the box containing the money is at liberty to choose a bride from among the ladies present. The winner of the button is compelled to hand over the contents of his pockets to the bride, to be recovered by fair means or foul. The possessor of the empty box has a less exciting imposition. He is obliged to kiss all the old ladies in the company.

How Outlaw Tracy Came to Dinner.

A. B. Shruer of Winterset, Ia., received a letter a few days ago from his father, in the state of Washington, who met in an unconventional way one Harry Tracy, escaped convict from Oregon. Shruer senior, according to the New York World, writes that he was out hunting and was just about to eat dinner at his campfire when Tracy suddenly appeared and requested him to throw up his hands. Shruer did so. Tracy thought he wasn't quite expeditious enough, however, so he fired his gun and burned the old gentleman's hands with powder. Tracy said he was quite hungry and, dispensing with formalities, helped himself with his fingers. Then he absentmindedly took Shruer's six shooter and rifle, watch and money, and said he thought he'd be going and that it looked like rain. Shruer did not try to detain him.

Tribute to Lord Kitchener.

Doer of deeds, word sparer, whose firm will
Warped not with waiting, though the time was long,
In those dark hours, when weaker hearts stood still,
Thine own beat steadfast, and we knew thee strong;

But few divined how generous and how wise
Till peace revealed thee for all eyes to scan,
And through the warrior's seeming cold disguise
Out flashed in magnanimity the man.

—James Rhoades in London Times.

HYGIENE

The human body contains a complete sewerage system in which poisonous and disease producing refuse is constantly gathering and jeopardizing the health. The same rule which applies to municipal sanitation will also apply to personal sanitation, and the danger of disease may be forestalled by flushing out this sewerage system with an excess of water, says G. T. Palmer, M. D., in Good Housekeeping. Just as truly as the gathering of filth from the city in the "sewerage veins" endangers the lives of the inhabitants, so the poisons generated by the bodily metabolism, collected in the excretory organs, will jeopardize the lives of the millions of inhabitants of the body—the living cells. Every action of muscle or of nerve is accompanied by the destruction of cells which if not eliminated will accumulate like clinkers.

Aside from the mere "choking of the flues" we must bear in mind that the body is constantly generating poisons which if eliminated freely will do no harm, but which if retained will be productive of disease. Such a poison is uric acid, which is charged justly with causing rheumatism, gout, constant headaches, dizziness and a train of other symptoms, and it must be seen that if the accumulation of refuse is the cause of such conditions the logical means of cure is its elimination. Other "products of metabolism" create their own types of disease, and all may be prevented by the free use of water.

A beginning of kidney trouble lies in the fact that people, especially women, do not drink enough water. They pour down tumblers of ice water as an accompaniment to a meal, but that is worse than no water, the chill preventing digestion and indigestion being an indirect promoter of kidney disease. A tumbler of water sipped in the morning immediately on rising and another at night are recommended by physicians. Try to drink as little water as possible with meals, but take a glassful half an hour to an hour before eating. This rule persisted in day after day, month after month, the complexion will improve and the general health likewise. Water drunk with meals should be sipped as well as taken sparingly.

ENGINEERING

A marine engineer of Rochester, England, has patented a new system for steering twin screw steamships. His device, as described by the Scientific American, consists of a special throttle valve attached to each set of engines, the valves being connected by means of bell cranks and linkwork to a tiller.

When the tiller is resting centrally, an equal supply of steam enters each engine, but directly the tiller is deviated from its central position in either direction the throttle valve fitted to one set of engines reduces the supply of steam, so that the propeller actuated by that particular [illegible] revolves more slowly, the rotary motion of the crew diminishing according to the degree to which the tiller is moved over.

A Really Indigestible Thing.

Of interest to goats, boys and other omnivora will be the following item contained in a letter to W. J. Thiselton-Dyer of Kew from a veterinary surgeon of Australia: "It may interest you," he says, "to know that the hairy linings of the fruit of the sweetbrier (Rosa rubiginosa) caused the death of a number of goats here by forming hairy masses which eventually completely stopped up the intestines. The goats were put on the land with the idea that they would eat down the briers and ultimately eradicate them, but the briers came out best and eradicated the goats."

German Artificial Clay.

Consul General Richard Guenther writes from Frankfurt: Artificial clay, according to German papers, is receiving increased attention abroad. This ceramic novelty, which is used for the manufacture of artificial stone, tiles, gutters, etc., is composed of sand, chalk, cement, liquid glue and petroleum. The substances are mixed in certain quantities, and a claylike mass results, which can be formed at pleasure and acquires an excellent degree of hardness by being subjected to heat.

The Language of Letters.

Two-thirds of all the letters which pass through the postoffices of the world are written by and sent to people who speak English, says Bradstreet's. There are substantially 500,000,000 persons speaking colloquially one or other of the ten or twelve chief modern languages, and of these about 25 per cent, or 125,000,000 persons, speak English. About 90,000,000 speak Russian, 75,000,000 German, 55,000,000 French, 45,000,000 Spanish, 35,000,000 Italian and 12,000,000 Portuguese.

New Metal Invented.

Considerable attention has been given to a new metal which is not a compound, but simply a molecular modification of aluminium similar to that which makes steel from iron. It is called evabrite, is as bright as silver and as stiff as steel. It is absolutely unoxidizable and cheaper than brass. When tested, it was found to be equal to every claim. The engineers recommend that evabrite be substituted for nickel and copper in telephone and telegraph apparatus.

A VIGILANCE COMMITTEE

Formed by New York Hebrews as a Result of Wednesday's Rioting

New York, Aug. 1.—Hebrews met yesterday afternoon and formed what they call "the east side vigilance committee," the purpose being to prosecute police during the [illegible] of Wednesday. The Hebrews claim their people were abused by the officers. A committee was appointed to collect evidence which will be turned over to the law committee of the organization and in turn brought before the proper authorities. Mayor Low sent a message to the meeting saying that he was desirous of locating the responsibility for the trouble.

The building occupied by R. Hoe & Co. was guarded yesterday by a detail of 10 policemen.

Inspector Cross, who was in charge of the police during the disturbance, submitted a detailed report to Police Commissioner Patridge yesterday. After reciting the facts as already known, and giving various versions related to him as to what caused the riots, he says one peculiar feature is that bricks and other missiles which could not have been picked up in the street were found in the factory, "showing conclusively to my mind that those who broke the windows and destroyed the property of Hoe & Co. came there prepared to do that what they did do, showing, at the same time, that the attack on Hoe & Co. was premeditated."

Spanish Revenue Falling Off

Madrid, Aug. 1.—The minister of finance is the author of a statement to the effect that the revenue for the first three months of the financial year shows a decrease of about $1,100,000 as compared with the revenue for the corresponding period of last year. The minister anticipates a deficit for the year of about $5,000,000.

Chinese Troops Slay Rioters

Not Over-Wise.

ACTION OF A SPRING GUN

Led to Probable Identification of Perpetrator of Burglaries at Chester, Vt., For a Numer of Years—Accused Man Says He Was Shot by Robbers

Chester, Vt., Aug. 1.—Startling developments, through which many mysterious robberies that have taken place in Chester during the past 15 or 16 years are believed to have been explained, have been made in the past three days and are the sequel to the reported shooting of Clarence Adams, hitherto one of the most respected young men of this section, by a highwayman last Monday evening.

Adams claimed that he was fired upon by his assaliant with a shotgun, and the fact that physicians extracted more than 50 shot from his legs apparently confirmed his story. On Tuesday, however, C. H. Waterman, proprietor of a local mill, made the discovery that the shot taken from Adams' legs corresponded exactly with those with which he had loaded a spring gun which had been set at the entrance of his mill as a protection against burglars.

This discovery, together with the fact that the spring gun had been discharged during Monday night, at once drew suspicion toward Adams, and a search of his home was instituted, with a result that was most startling to those conducting it. An almost endless variety of articles, sufficient to stock a country store, were found in the chambers of his home and in the shed, much of which has already been identified as property stolen in the many breaks of the past 15 years.

Adams, who is still confined to his bed from the effects of his gunshot wounds, was placed under arrest yesterday, an officer being detailed to remain at his bedside. When charged with the burglaries he would have nothing to say. The accused man was regarded as of exceptionally fine character, and yesterday's developments have created intense excitement.

It is generally believed that others beside Adams were implicated in the various breaks, and acting upon clues which they have received officers are now searching for at least two other persons, who it is believed will soon be in custody.

The property recovered is being brought to the town hall and displayed for the purpose of identification. Already many of the articles have been recognized by their owners. It is said that a lot of shingles stolen from Mr. Waterman some time ago were found to have been used on Adams' buildings. A revolver stolen from a Mr. Spear 12 years ago was recognized by him yesterday among the miscellaneous collection, and J. H. Adams found among the lot a gold watch chain stolen from [illegible] glaries, it is believed, can be traced to Adams and his companions, as evidenced by the property recovered.

Empire Needs Better Organization

Johannesburg, Aug. 1.—Lord Milner presided at an important Church of England meeting held here yesterday. Dealing with the question of organization, Lord Milner said he felt that unless the future empire showed a more perfect organization than had been seen in the past it would tumble down. He deprecated the spirit of intolerance adopted by the Church of England toward other Christian churches.

SWORD FOR KITCHENER

"Makings of a New America" In England's New Territory

London, Aug. 1.—Amid tremendous enthusiasm Lord Kitchener was last night presented with a sword of honor, the gift of Cape Town. Lord Mayor Dimsdale of London made the presentation in the course of a South African dinner which was attended by many notable persons. When the enthusiasm had sufficiently subsided for Lord Kitchener to make himself heard, he modestly returned thanks for the gift and expressed the confident hope that in South Africa, at any rate, the sword would not again be drawn from its scabbard. Lord Kitchener eulogized Lord Milner and made an appeal, based upon his intimate and personal friendship with and knowledge of the South African administrator, that he be given the confidence and sympathy of the British nation.

Referring to the mineral and agricultural wealth of the new territory, Lord Kitchener said: "You may assure yourselves that you have nothing less than the makings of a new America in the southern hemisphere."

He said that when, as in South Africa, patriotism was joined to self-interest, he was not afraid they would fail to sow the seed and reap the harvest for which he hoped those who had recently been in South Africa had prepared.

Conservatives Hard to Turn Out

London, Aug. 1.—Lord Rosebery presided at a dinner of the Liberal league last night. In the course of a lengthy speech he dilated upon the recent bye-election for a member of the house of commons to represent North Leeds, which resulted in the election of Roland Barran, Liberal. The speaker characterized the North Leeds verdict as almost a vital blow to the prestige of the government. Yet, Lord Rosebery warned his hearers, 50 such elections as that of North Leeds might not turn out the party now in power.

Gold Democrat For Governor

Detroit, Aug. 1.—Judge G. H. Durand of Flint, who filled a vacancy on the supreme bench of this state in 1892, and who is classed as a gold Democrat, was nominated for the governorship by the Democrats of Michigan yesterday. The free silver element made a vigorous fight to defeat him. The only mention of national issues in the platform is an endorsement of the election of United States senators directly by the people.

Alleged Badgers Held

Boston, Aug. 1.—Theresa Ray and "Cheeky Ned" Hartman, the alleged badger workers, were arraigned before Judge Bennett yesterday on the charge of robbing D. C. Wyman of $400 in money and jewelry, and on the request of counsel had their case continued one week, bail being fixed at $1000. The court room was crowded by people anxious to see the woman, who is described as a beauty.

Possible Change of Program

Washington, Aug. 1.—There is a report about the war department to the effect that the army is to be aided in the coming army and navy war game by the flotilla of torpedo boats. When the joint maneuvers were decided on a memorandum was drawn up and by mutual agreement it was decided in order to avoid complications that the torpedo flotilla should be eliminated from the equation.

Retail Liquor Dealers' Combine

New York, Aug. 1.—Retail liquor dealers of this city met yesterday and took steps to form "The Central Liquor company." An official statement says the aim is to establish a distributing company to be conducted by and for the retail dealers, the company to purchase supplies in large quantities from distillers, thus saving the profits now exacted by middlemen.

American Annexation Favored

Kingston, Ja., Aug. 1.—The Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution yesterday condemning the imperial government's neglect of the West Indies and resolving to not notice the proposed grant of £10,000. Several speakers urged the idea of annexation to the United States and the newspapers are devoting columns to serious discussion of the matter.

Ship Owners Oppose Subsidies

London, Aug. 1.—At a largely attended meeting of shipowners held yesterday at West Hartlepool resolutions were adopted protesting against the proposed subsidies to the Canadian Pacific railway and disapproving all subsidies except such as are necessary to secure efficient mail service.

Big Job on Judge's Hands

Quebec, Aug. 1.—As Judge Caron is not yet ready to render judgment in the Gaynor-Greene case, the prisoners were again remanded today until Aug. 8. The delay is caused by the fact that Judge Caron has to consult the large number of authorities cited by counsel on both sides.

Naval Base In West Indies

Washington, Aug. 1.—The navy department is canvassing the advisability of establishing a permanent naval base at Culebra island, W. I. This island is just east of Porto Rico and was ceded to the United States by the treaty of Paris.

YOUNG GATES AS A JOKER.

Financier's Son Paid Profits to a Client In 40,000 New Pennies.

Charles G. Gates, a member of a famous brokerage firm in New York and son of John W. Gates, proved the other afternoon to one of his customers that he could do exactly as he was told, says the New York World.

"A friend of mine dropped in here just before noon," said young Gates to Colonel Elwood, "and asked me to sell a couple of hundred shares of something for him, as he needed the money. I told him it wasn't the sort of a market to sell anything short in, but that if he would order me to buy something I'd buy some stuff that would go up a couple of points and give him some spending money quick. He told me to go ahead, and I bought him 200 Louisville and Nashville. It went up two points, and I closed it out for him, making $400.

"I told him about it over the phone, but he evidently thought I was 'jollying' him, and he laughed and said if I had a profit for him to send it over to him in pennies. He'll drop dead in about twenty minutes, because I'm going to obey orders to the letter, and I've just sent two of the porters over to the subtreasury to get 40,000 new pennies. They've each got a half bushel sack to carry the stuff in, and when they land at my friend's office and dump his profit on the floor he'll think that he's a stockholder in a copper mine and that he's collecting his profits in raw material."

The programme was carried out, but the porters who carried the great mass of pennies to the office of the investor wouldn't repeat what he said. Mr. Gates wouldn't give the name of the victim of the joke.

BET PAID IN NOVEL WAY.

Band Played While Loser Rolled Peanut a Mile With a Crowbar.

James Coyle, according to a Philadelphia dispatch to the New York World, paid his wager on the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight in a novel manner. Several hundred men and a brass band aided him in discharging his obligations. Coyle bet William H. Smith that Fitzsimmons would win. The loser was to roll a peanut with a crowbar from Penn street and Pulaski avenue to Washington lane and Germantown avenue, one mile.

After staying up all night to learn how the fight resulted Coyle, equipped with crowbar and peanut, assembled himself at the starting point. The crowbar weighed forty pounds, the peanut one-fortieth of an ounce. Coyle wore a hat of straw.

The band played a funeral march as Coyle urged the peanut over the pavement with the point of the crowbar. Every few feet the peanut would roll into a crevice, and delicate manipulation with the crowbar was required to extricate it.

The distance was covered in two hours and a half.

SAGE'S KEEN MEMORY.

Aged Financier Recalls Dollar Debt After Twenty-five Years.

The following story illustrates Russell Sage's wonderful memory, says the New York Herald. It seems that he was making a settlement on a private contract in which $100 was paid, but there was still a balance of $1 due.

"Well, I'll pay you the $100," said the broker, "and I will have to owe you the balance."

That was twenty-five years ago. The broker forgot all about the balance, and it was never paid. Meeting Mr. Sage on the street a few weeks ago, soon after his recovery from his long period of sickness, the broker congratulated him and said he was glad to see him well again.

"I am also glad to see you," said Mr. Sage. "It's a long time since we have seen each other. By the way, do you remember you owe me a dollar?"

The broker paid.

USEFUL DEVICE FOR TRAINS

Station Agent's Wife Makes an Improvement on the Mail Crane.

Mrs. J. M. Hough, wife of the station agent at Woodbine, near Des Moines, Ia., has invented an improvement on the mail crane for fast trains, says the New York World. Mrs. Hough has an observant turn of mind, and she noticed that the crane in use didn't do the work as well as it might. So she set her wits to work and sent a model of her crane to Washington, where it was approved by the postal authorities.

The arrangement will be tried in a few days, and if the trial is satisfactory Mrs. Hough's crane will be used extensively, and in all probability she will make more money in a month than her good husband now gets in a year.

Chemical Food.

[Professor Berthelot of the College of France foresees in the "Chemical Synthesis of Aliments" the economical emancipation of the human race.—Paris Cor. London Daily News.]

You who now in pain and sorrow
Life's sad sufferings must rue,
Courage, for a glad tomorrow
Science has in store for you.
Lo, it gives, for your content,
Scientific aliment.

Now no more with irksome labor
Need his bread the peasant earn;
Jocund strains of pipe and tabor
For the future he may learn.
Wherefore should he till the field?
Science all he needs will yield.

Sweets from Hybla or from Narbonne,
Luscious bowls of Samian wines,
Reveling in hydrocarbon
These the epicure declines,
While he fills his aching void
With some choice albuminoid.

Yes, henceforward shall the glutton,
Out of humor now with beef,
Jaded with insipid mutton,
To his infinite relief,
When his former diet palls
"Victual free" on chemicals.

Pulseless the air, in sullen rest;
Sad is the look the meadows wear;
While, from each leafy, dripping crest,
The trees in moody silence stare.
Gray skies their color-nullity
Outspread above the dismal earth;
And one lone bird pipes tearfully
The requiem of vanished mirth.
And the lone, cheerless hours proceed,
Their minutes weighed as with chains:
Only the patient heart takes heed
To dream of sunshine when it rains!

About forty gathered at Lincoln wharf for the 2.20 boat and enjoyed the sail of little over an hour along the Winthrop coast out past Deer Island to Nahant. It is one of the prettiest trips out of Boston. Shortly after arriving a fine shore dinner was served at the Bass Point house in a large cool dining hall, with a full band of music outside, within pleasant hearing distance. After enjoying the clam in various ways and a social hour the return to Boston was made on the seven o'clock boat.

Judge Avery rendered his finding this morning in the cases against Charles L. Prescott, the City Scavenger, for violation of the rules of the Board of Health. There were two complaints against Prescott, both having been sworn out by W. F. Steadman. The first was that he dumped contents of cesspools and vaults in places not licensed by the Board of Health, and the second that he used teams for the transportation of this matter that were not properly numbered, lettered and covered.

Judge Avery found Prescott not guilty upon both complaints. In giving his decision Judge Avery said he had considered the question carefully and found one or two technical questions of law.

First, whether or not the complaint should not be brought by some member of the Board of Health or its agent, and whether in the complaint it should not appear that complainant was a member or agent of ths Board of Health. It had been passed upon by the Supreme Court that complaints for violations of town by-laws, etc., must be brought by its agents. The question of this technicality not having been received he should allow them to hold.

The next question was whether at the time of the complaint there were any regulations. Under the City Charter the Board of Health is appointed for one year, there are no hold overs. The court felt therefor that each Board was an individual Board and not under the rules and regulations established by a prior Board. If so there were no rules or regulations at the time the complaint was brought. To make regulations effective they must be published. If there were no regulations adopted there was no public notice to this defendant. The court felt that the Board of Health in Quincy were a new Board in relation to rules and regulations not like by-laws of a town which hold over.

Under the statutes the whole intent was that violations should be brought by the agent of the Board of Health.

Assuming that the regulations were in force, the first regulation was the one under which the City Scavenger was appointed and is acting. It was the duty of the Board of Health to fix the manner in which this shall be done. The evidence in this case does not show that the defendent has violated any conditions of the Board of Health. This matter is entirely in the hands of the Board of Health. It is doubtful if at the time there were any regulations, and the failure of the Board of Health to indicate to the City Scavenger how he should conduct his business is a neglect of duty on the part of the Board of Health.

Under the second complaint, the court found the City Seavenger had a permit from the Board of Health. Having a license it must be assumed he was conductiug his business to the satisfaction of the Board of Health, and it was a matter for them to deal with.

Under the third regulation which requires teams used to collect swill, fat, grease, bones or any decaying putrifying animal matter or vegetable substance, etc., to be lettered, numbered and covered in a certain way. The court felt that applied to all vault matter not covered by rule one, if they were in force.

In rendering his finding, Judge Avery cited several decissions by the Supreme court, bearing upon them.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

A TREASURY OBJECTION

To Tariff Revision Which Would Reduce Income

MIGHT RESULT IN DEFICIT

Because Agitation of the Proposition Would Cause Importers to Hold Up Goods—Next Year or Two Looked Forward to With Apprehension

Washington, Aug. 2.—Senator Cullom's declaration that the tariff revision idea is making great headway in the west has called forth some notes of alarm from revenue experts in the treasury. One of them said yesterday:

"We are in no condition for revision just now, if it means a reduction of income. Today's statement convinces me that the surplus will be very small indeed, if there is any at all, at the close of the fiscal year; it will certainly disappear altogether if importers are led to believe that it will pay to hold up their importations to await lower duties. Another very bad check of this sort, such as occurred in the general panic of 1893-94, would leave us $200,000,000 to the bad in a year. We have figured all this out by going over the statistics of that and other depressed periods."

This outburst sounds odd in the face of the surprisingly large returns from customs duties during July, which is usually accounted a dull importing season. The inconsistency is explained at the treasury, however, by the statement that the increase consisted largely of drugs, teas and other goods of that sort which were held back to get the benefit of the repeal of the war revenue taxes. The decrease in internal revenue receipts was about what had been estimated by the officials of the department.

The increase in expenditures is due in a measure to the payment of $3,250,000 to the different states, under the act of congress providing for the payment of Civil war claims. With these deducted the net deficit for the month would be about $4,500,000 in round numbers. But these figures, it is noted, do not furnish any indication of the growth of the deficit for the remaining 11 months of the fiscal year. Enormous expenditures authorized by congress are in sight, and with the beginning of active operations on river and harbor improvements and public buildings, the drain on the treasury may ultimately aggregate more than $100,000,000, provision for which must be made from the excess of receipts over expenditures. With the certain loss of from $75,000,000 to $90,000,000 by the repeal of the war taxes and the vast increase of expenditures, the financial wing of the administration is not looking forward to the next year or two with exceeding great joy.

Great Race Occurs Today

New York, Aug. 2.—The entire side bet of $40,000 for the match trotting race today at Hartford between Lord Derby (2:06½), owned by E. E. Smathers, and Thomas W. Lawson's Boralma, (2:07) has been posted, the final instalments of $10,000 each having been placed in the hands of the stakeholder in this city yesterday. Both racers are said to be in the pink of condition for the great contest, which practically will be for $50,000.

Horse and Driver Suspended

Columbus, O. Aug. 2.—The judges at the grand circuit races yesterday unearthed a job in the $5000 stake for 2:20 pacers, and by prompt action saved innocent speculators who had backed the field, a large sum of money. The guilty party, Driver Tom Stuart, and the horse Elderone were suspended for one year.

VAN DERLIP ARRESTED

Allegations of Forgery and Embezzlement of $200,000

Boston, Aug. 2.—Willard C. VanDerlip of 15 Berwick Park, a well known lawyer, was arrested at his home yesterday, charged with the larceny of four bonds of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads on May 21, the property of John Lowell, all worth $4000.

The prisoner was arraigned in the afternoon before Judge Bennett, and his case was put over until Aug. 7, bail being fixed at $8000. The prisoner appeared much disturbed.

It is alleged by William D. Sohier and John Lowell that VanDerlip is an embezzler to the extent of about $200,000, but they admit that it will be impossible to charge him with a large part of that in court, because it was committed years ago, the statute law limiting the prosecution for any offense, except murder, after six years have expired. By the alleged wrongdoing of VanDerlip it is stated that he has practically wiped out the estate of George B. Emerson, of which he was a trustee. It is further alleged that the details of the embezzlement include the allegation of forgery of the name of one of the sureties on VanDerlip's bond, which he gave as a trustee 16 years ago. Owing to the legal limitation no prosecution can be made on that allegation.

Important Case Settled

Augusta, Me., Aug. 2.—In the somewhat celebrated equity suit brought by the Lockwood company and the Hollingsworth and Whitney company of Waterville, against various saw mill and pulp mill owners in three counties, which has been before the supreme court for several months, Judge Whitehouse rendered a decision yesterday in favor of the plaintiffs and will grant a perpetual injunction against the owners of 46 saw mills and three pulp mills prohibiting them from throwing any mill refuse, sawdust or screenings into the Kennebec river or its tributaries. Seventy-nine defendants appeared.

Legal Proceedings Against Coe

Boston, Aug. 2.—Henry F. Coe, the former treasurer of the Bowker Fertilizer company, whose confession to the manipulation of the company's notes in connection with the business of the Dudley hosiery mills of Newton Lower Falls, of which he was also the treasurer, created a sensation in business circles on Wednesday, was arrested yesterday upon a warrant charging him with the larceny of a promissory note and moneys, the property of the Bowker Fertilizer company. Coe was taken to the city prison.

Well Supplied With the "Queer"

Providence, Aug. 2.—Philomena Testa, an Italian woman 46 years old, was arrested last night for attempting to pass counterfeit money. After her arrest, counterfeit $5 bills aggregating $165 were found on her person. Several of the bills had been passed in the city on Thursday, but the woman denied that she had disposed of any of them. She was employed as a domestic by a doctor.

Minister Drowned

Plymouth, Mass., Aug. 2.—Rev. Edward L. Atkinson of New York, formerly rector of the Church of the Ascension, Boston, was drowned in Boot pond yesterday. Man and Boy Killed

Boston, Aug. 2.—Two fatalities due to being run over by freight trains occurred in East Boston last evening. A 6-year-old boy named Haffey got under the wheels of a car and had both legs taken off. He died at a hospital. George Ames also suffered amputation of both legs by a train that passed over him while he was lying on the track.

Collided on Down Grade

Marlboro, Mass., Aug. 2.—Two electric cars on the Marlboro Street railway came together in a rear-end collision on a down grade here last night, but the material damage was small. To the hundred or more passengers who were on the cars the shock was not pleasant, and quite a number received slight injuries by jumping.

Not After the Nomination

Boston, Aug. 2.—Gamaliel Bradford, who has figured not a little the past few years in Massachusetts state politics, announces in a lengthy letter that he will not contest for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, nor will he be an independent candidate. His plan is to leave the field clear for Charles S. Hamlin's nomination.

Railroads Suffer From Rain

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Aug. 2.—A heavy rainstorm yesterday caused a break in railroad communication west, east and north of here. There are a dozen washouts on the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain railroad and many on the Boston and Maine road. The damage to highways in St. Johnsbury is heavy.

LEARN TO DARN WELL.

The Way to Make Your Children's Stockings Wear Long.

Children's stockings are an expensive item of dress, so that any plan which will make them last is welcomed by the economical mother. First of all, be willing to save money in the "long run" by spending it generously at the outset. Mark them well with the child's monogram. These initials can be had in any combination of two letters at the department stores. By offering her some slight incentive the dear little owner may generally be induced to sew them neatly upon her own stockings.

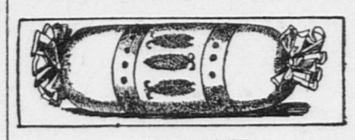

Before beginning your "stitch in time," which is the most worthy and usually neglected of all housewifely arts, array yourself in your most attractive and restful house gown. Place your pretty workbasket beside you. Be sure you have silver handled scissors and everything dainty to tempt you often to sew. Put on your aristocratic gold thimble, for any woman can take finer, prettier stitches when wearing a pure gold thimble.

Now take the blessed little stocking (and it is blessed, for it will not be long your privilege to darn little stockings, so fast do the baby feet stretch out), turn it wrong side out and place it upon the darning gourd. Run the heels and toes up and down with good ball darning cotton. Be sure to take a long stitch and then a tiny stitch, putting the stitches side by side. Reenforced in this way, the heels will withstand many months of hard wearing and washing. And it might not be out of place, good mother, to remark that if you have many steps to take the same device will serve your own stockings as well as those of the little ones.

Could your great-grandmother look down upon you she would give you her smiling approval at this revival of one of the old time lost arts.—Washington Star.

A Nightdress Case.

Procure some art linen, leaf green in shade, thirty inches long and twenty-two wide. Four inches deep from the top and bottom sew at regular intervals a few loops of mauve china ribbon. Two inches from the loops place inch and a half wide bands of mauve silk, running the whole length, worked with raised silk knots of crocus yellow silk. Between the bands draw or transfer a conventional design of crocuses worked in shaded yellow. The case is lined with mauve surah silk, and yellow ribbon threaded through the loops, drawn up and tied, gives the case a lobsterlike appearance.

NIGHTDRESS CASE.

The advantage of this shaped case is that it holds comfortably a heavy flannellette nightgown and bed socks, which are tightly folded and then wrapped round with the linen tying strips.

Another effective treatment is to embroider huckaback toweling in Russian embroidery of blue and red cross stitch.

Line the whole with mauve surah silk.

An Ancient Legend.

An ancient legend tells us that the angel on guard at the door of heaven was once asked by an inquisitive passerby if more married or more single women passed through.

"More married ones," he promptly answered.

"Indeed," said the questioner, who was a man. "Their husbands' virtues, of course, admitted them. That was right; the stronger should aid the weaker."

"No," replied the angel; "that is not the reason."

"Then what was it?"

"Well, if you must know," said the angel confidentially, "we pass them first on their own merits; lots of 'em get through that way. Then when we can't find any other recommendation for a married woman it is written against her name, 'These are they which have come up out of great tribulation,' and the gates fly open."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Saving For a Rainy Day.

Many girls keep all their most valuable presents and really loved trifles carefully stored away in preparation for their wedding day. These much prized objects remain untouched until that time when the shy eyed engaged girl shows her future husband her hoarded treasure.

These girls save in quite a different spirit from the average man. He generally makes wise preparations for a rainy day, a day on which trouble falls thick and fast. He hopes when that day comes to meet it with his savings and a stout heart. She saves for happiness. They are both right, but the girl finds the most pleasure in her task.

Late Hours.

If you wish to keep youthful and good looking, remember that you must take sufficient rest and that the two hours of sleep which you may get before midnight are not to be made up for by sleeping late in the morning. Late hours cause the skin to become drawn and wrinkled and give a tired look to the eyes, which is very damaging to beauty.

Convenient Bags.

Bags for holding soiled lingerie may be made by sewing together two towels. If these have borders and a deep fringe, it will add to the appearance of the bags. The top end should be turned over and stitched to form a casing for a ribbon to draw it up with. The bottom, of course, must be stitched across just above the ornamental part.

Not Over-Wise

ABOUT CARDINAL GOTTI

Candidate of the Jesuits For the Papacy

AN ASCETIC OF ASCETICS

Belongs to the Carmelite Body, and, Though Entitled to Live In Splendor as Prince of the Church, Lives as Much as Possible as a Monk

London, Aug. 2.—The Rome correspondent of The Times considers that the selection of Cardinal Gotti as prefect of the propaganda shows the determination of the religious orders not to allow such an important position to fall to a representative of the secular clergy. Cardinal Gotti is regarded as the candidate of the Jesuits for the papacy, for which he appears to be the strongest aspirant.

Cardinal Gotti, the barefooted Carmelite monk, has for several years occupied a position so conspicuous in the sacred college of cardinals that he has been frequently mentioned as a successor of Pope Leo XIII., and the democracy of the Catholic church would make it seem a natural transition if the triple tiara were to pass from the present pontiff, who was born Count Pecci, to the son of an obscure workman. Jerome Maria, Cardinal Gotti, is an Italian. He was born at Genoa in 1834. His extremely humble origin might have hindered his rise in the church but for the pious fervor and amiability of his disposition. His father was a dock laborer. The young Gotti seems to have inherited his devotional tendency from his mother. Thanks to her and to the interest of some friends of hers, the youth was enabled to prosecute his studies. He is deemed one of the greatest living authorities on probalist theology. But Cardinal Gotti never has concerned himself with theological theorizing as such. He stands rather as a student and follower of the moral law. Hence his name is identified with the religious party in the sacred college as opposed to the political school.

Cardinal Gotti in his priestly calling attached himself to the Carmelite body. This order of mendicant friars is not only very rigid in some of its branches, but it has peculiar attractions for those of devotional tendency. Thus one branch of the order is famed as the barefooted brethren. Long before his selection as archbishop of Petra Friar Gotti was known as an ascetic of asceties. He lived on the coarsest and simpest fare, dispensed with shoes, and spent weeks at a time in the seclusion of the monastery. His Carmelite brethren were the first, naturally, to discern the merits of the man, and he was gradually promoted in the order until he was at the head of his own priory. He studied, taught, preached and practised for 20 years, however, in comparative obscurity.

The work entrusted to Friar Gotti, who had been raised to the episcopacy, was in connection with the distracted state of the church in Brazil. The abdication of Dom Pedro, the radical legislation with regard to religious liberty that ensued and the undisciplined condition of the native clergy presented a serious problem to the Vatican. Archbishop Gotti was instructed to proceed to the new republic in the capacity of internuntius and to restore harmony. The success attending his efforts resulted in the creation of the Genoese as a cardinal at the consistory held on Nov. 29, 1895.

A cardinal's household at Rome is an elaborate affair. A cardinal has his coat-of-arms and his lackeys and his secretaries, and even his palace. Such members of the sacred college as have wealth and who belong to the old Italian nobility live in a manner calculated to do justice to the ancient splendor of the title of prince of the church. But Cardinal Gotti is not one of these. He deems himself bound to live, as much as possible, in the style of a Carmelite monk.

The Carmelites, who compose the most remarkable of the mendicant orders, in view of the antiquity of their origin, derive their name from Mount Carmel, the locality in Syria where dwelt the Prophet Elias. The Carmelites themselves have a tradition that their order held the sacred mount as far back as the time of Elias himself. Some historians assign their origin to the year 1156, the name of their founder being given as Berthold, a noted crusader.

The Carmelites rose rapidly to importance in the 12th and subsequent centuries. Some branches of the order practiced a rigid asceticism, which was subsequently modified by papal dispensation. Cardinal Gotti belongs to what is termed the reformed branch of the Carmelites. He is the only member of the Carmelite body who sits in the sacred college. The order claims two popes of the early church—St. Telesphorus, A. D. 139, and St. Dionysius, A. D., 269. The reigns of these pontiffs, however, belong to so remote a past in church history that little can be said of them with certainty.

International Tennis Play

BRITONS vs. AMERICANS

The Dohertys And Dr. Pim — Whitman, Larned, Davis and Ward

THE international tennis matches to be played Aug. 6, 7 and 8 on the courts of the Crescent Athletic club at Bay Ridge, New York, are sure to be memorable contests provided the standing of the players chosen to compete is a basis for judgment. Tennis enthusiasts from almost every state in the Union will be on hand to view the struggles, and it is very likely that President Roosevelt will also attend.

That the coming matches will be the most interesting of those yet played for the Davis International Challenge cup seems to be an assured fact. The selection of the American team, as made by Messrs. Dwight, Presbrey and Stevens of the United States National Lawn Tennis association, has given general satisfaction, although there are some who think the team as a whole is not quite so strong as it might be.

Notwithstanding their defeat in two of their four matches in the round robin tournament on the grounds of the Westchester (N. Y.) Country club recently Holcombe Ward and Dwight F. Davis were the logical choices to defend the international championship in doubles because they hold that title, as well as the championship of this country. They were defeated by George L. Wrenn, Jr., and Robert D. Wrenn at Westchester and also by Malcolm D. Whitman and Leo E. Ware, but it must be remembered that they defeated the Wrenn brothers earlier in the season at Orange, N. J.

For the singles Whitman, the unbeaten ex-champion, and William A. Larned, the present holder of the title, have been selected to uphold the American colors. Larned, up to the time he was chosen, had not taken part in a championship match this season, having forfeited the Canadian championship to Beals C. Wright and played an exhibition contest with Whitman, in which he won in straight sets. This match by no means proved him superior to Whitman, although he was an easy winner, for the reason that his opponent had been playing all the week in doubles, thus being unfitted for a quick change to singles.

Official notice has been given to the American committee of the makeup of the English team. Its members will be R. F. and H. L. Doherty and Dr. Joshua Pim. As the English association nominated but three men it was not necessary to designate which player should take part in both singles and doubles. The Doherty brothers have already arrived in America in order to be here to get practice before the contests.

The delay in the arrival of Dr. Pim is likely to help the American chances, as it will give him little if any time to become acclimated. Few here know what he is really capable of doing on the courts and of what a treat he is likely to give those who see him play even though he fail to get into first class condition for his matches.

In England he and R. F. Doherty are rated as the two most brilliant players ever produced. The English expert Mahoney once declared that he would rather see Pim miss a stroke than any other player he knew, because "Pim is a marvel when playing well and an awful 'duffer' when out of form."

Not so much has been heard of Dr. Joshua Pim in recent years. He was at one time the idol of the English courts, and has always been celebrated as the most skillful exponent of lawn tennis that England has ever known. He has held all of the championship titles worth the having, and it is currently said that his only reason for retiring was to give some of the other men an opportunity to win the laurels. In a letter just received from abroad from Louis J. Grant of the New York Lawn Tennis club he relates that some difficulty was encountered by the English Lawn Tennis association before Dr. Pim could be induced to compete in the international matches. He says:

"Although Dr. Pim had retired and is engaged in the practice of his profession in Dublin, he was induced to come out of his shell and take part in the strong effort that the Englishmen are making this year to win the Davis Challenge cup. Over here they bitterly regret the poor showing made by Black, Gore and Barrett two years ago and are bent upon retrieving themselves. Dr. Pim is surely the greatest player in all England, and that is saying a great deal. With him and the brothers Doherty on the challenging team the Americans will have to play tennis, and no mistake. These men will take a lot of beating, but I do believe that our men can hold the trophy if they all keep in good form. In any event it will be the best tennis that has even been witnessed in America. It is too bad that Dr. Pim could not arrange to come over with the Dohertys and play at Longwood. He will leave with time enough to connect with the dates of the international matches. This will hardly give him a chance to get rid of his sea legs, but then Dr. Pim is so good that he is likely to accomplish some remarkably surprising things even with this handicap. All of the experts and followers of the sport over here pin their faith and hopes of victory on him."

From every quarter the makeup of the American team appears to have won approbation. There is some curiosity, however, to know to what extent Beals C. Wright entered into the deliberations of the committee, as some profess to believe that he ranks with at least two of the men chosen.

The American committee in making its nominations designated Whitman and Larned for the singles and Ward and Davis for the doubles. As the English association has nominated but three men it was not obliged to designate which man would be assigned to the two parts of the contest.

Whether the selection was unanimous on the part of the committee is not known. Outside of the committee the preliminary discussion has been serious and diversified in character. Of the four Whitman's place on the team has been unquestioned from the start.

Larned being champion and his more mature experience undoubtedly threw the scales in his favor, though it is a great big question whether or not he is this year a better man than Wright. For the doubles there has been a real contest, and not a few followers of the game were in favor of some selection other than the one made by the committee.

With the seal of approval set upon tennis sport, and especially the international competitions, by President Roosevelt, the coming tournaments of the season are sure to shine with an additional luster. There never was a time in this country when there was so much excellent play on the courts, both by the veterans and the youngsters. The latter are rapidly pressing to the fore, treading closely upon the heels of the old champions and everywhere displaying a knowledge of the game and playing ability of a high order.

THE FRIAR QUESTION

Bids Fair to Be Settled by Vatican Without Further Discussion

Rome, Aug. 2.—According to statements obtained from reliable sources it is the intention of the Vatican that the friars of the Augustinian, Dominican, Franciscan and Recolleto orders now in Manila, who number about 450 men, should leave there in small numbers at different times, so that when the moment comes to resume negotiations between Governor Taft and the apostolic delegation all the friars will have left the archipelago in such a way that the friar question will have resolved itself without the necessity of further discussion.

The foregoing plan is interpreted as a late, but significant recognition by the Vatican that Secretary of War Root's first propositions made to the Vatican through Governor Taft were the most liberal that could be devised for the settlement of the question.

The great influence of the religious orders in Rome must be reckoned with, however, should they think it to their interests to resist these measures. From present indications this would seem not to be so, as the general of the Augustinians will soon leave for the United States to choose American Augustinians to replace the Spanish members of that order now at Manila.

Earthquake Reports Exaggerated

Los Alamos, Cal., Aug. 2.—The reports telling of the enormous damage done by the series of earthquakes which have visited this country, and this vicinity in particular, have been grossly exaggerated. It is an undeniable fact that there has been an unprecedented number of earthquakes, but the reports of great fissures in the earth and similar stories of the havoc wrought are untrue. Within the limits of Los Alamos the property damage will not exceed $4000.

A Virginia Hanging

Richmond, Aug. 2.—George Robinson was hanged at Wise Courthouse yesterday for the murder of another negro. On the first drop the rope broke. He was brought up the steps on the outside of the scaffold for the second drop and had to wait until the sheriff went to a store and secured another rope. He was conscious throughout the whole time and did not show the faintest sign of a collapse. A thousand people witnessed the execution.

Usual Procedure Reversed

Baltimore, Aug. 2.—A riding tournament, in which all the participants were young society women, took place yesterday in Baltimore county. The chief marshal and assistants, heralds, judges and time-keepers were women, as well as the 11 contestants. Their riding was spirited and daring. After the tournament had ended each of the victorious feminine tilters crowned her favorite male friend.

Hazers Must Leave Academy

Washington, Aug. 2.—Ex-Delegate Crandall of Arizona was at the war department yesterday in the interest of Cadet Pendleton, who was found guilty of hazing at the West Point military academy. He was informed that the law in the case is very explicit and that not even the president can prevent the dismissal of a cadet who is found guilty of hazing.

Wyeth, the winner of the American Derby, is not living up to the promise he gave early in the season. He has recently met his third successive defeat. His owner is contemplating shipping him east to race at Saratoga.

The advance in the price of admission at the Saratoga races from $2 to $3 has caused a protest from the patrons. Mr. Whitney defends the raise by saying that it will cost the association heavily to maintain a high standard of racing.

Every one who has seen Charley Herr lately says that Dave Cahill's wonderful son of Alfred G. is faster than ever before.

A WOMAN'S RISK

As a trapeze performer is greater than a man's. She must have a man's courage and a man's muscle to succeed. But she must also work under conditions of which a man knows nothing. Many an accident to women acrobats must be attributed to the sudden weakness to which all women are subject at certain times.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription heals the womanly diseases which cause weakness. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"With pleasure I write to-day in praise of Dr. Pierce and his medicines," says Mrs. Mary Conway, of Appleton, Lawrence Co., Tenn. "Was troubled with female disease; the back of my head hurt me so I could not lie in bed and I would have to sit up, and then I would have such pains from my waist down I could scarcely raise up. My feet and hands would feel almost like ice. Since taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I can sleep well all night. Could hardly drag around before I took your medicine, and now can do my housework and help my husband in the field. Words cannot express the thanks I owe to Dr. Pierce."

Weak and sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, containing more than a thousand large pages, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 21 stamps for the book in paper covers. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Good Afternoon.

July was a decidedly good month for job printing at the office of George W. Prescott & Son, not only being a July record breaker, but in excess of the busy months of January and February.

Charles de Lesseps, son of the great engineer, expresses gratification at the prospective transfer of the Panama canal to the United States. He believes the Americans will demonstrate the wisdom of his father in selecting the Panama route and predicts they will have completed the undertaking within six years.

The Daily Ledger is a great traveler making daily visits to country, seashore and mountains where its pages are eagerly scanned for home news by vacationists. Hundreds of copies are sent out of town weekly from this office besides the copies sent by friends. Notwithstanding so many Quincy people are away the circulation in town is on the increase.

From colonists, devoted almost exclusively to agricultural pursuits, the United States has developed into a nation of 80,000,000 population, raising everything needful to their own wants, and selling a surplus worth $1,500,000,000 abroad. Much of this has been accomplished under the protection policy. Is it surprising that the people are unwilling to change?

It seems that there has been nothing to prevent Henry H. Faxon from acting as his own scavenger this year, had he made a test case. The ruling of Judge Avery today, to the effect that the Board of Health for 1902 had no rules, whould have made it impossible to convict him. Probably Mr. Faxon is sorry that he did not act instead of wasting so much powder. Now that he has commenced, however, he will probably make it hot for the Board of Health and the City Scavenger.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ It is hardly probable that the dark horse will win in the Tenth congressional district.—Transcript.

☞ The Chairman of the Republican State convention has been harmoniously settled and Governor Long will deliver an address which all will enjoy Naturally eloquent, thoroughly familiar with the purposes of the administration, loyal ro the true American sentiment, he is sure to give the delegates, and through the press the country, something that will strengthen the hearts of the Republicans of the country, and have a happy influence upon the Congressional campaign. The anti-imperialists may rage, but the people will give heed to the words of Governor Long.

☞ Naval Constructor Baxter at the Charlestown Navy Yard is in charge of practically all of the work of construction and equipment on vessels there. The fact is worth mentioning just now, because some of the local papers have had special despatches commenting on Sec. Moody's "radical reform" in having one naval officer in charge of all the construction and equipment on government vessels at the Bath works in Maine, and this is described as an "experiment." Sec. Moody does not consider it so much of an experiment as a piece of plainly needed economy. He is merely asking that one officer shall do at a private ship yard what Constructor Baxter is doing right along at the big Charlestown yard.—Boston Advertiser.

☞ I shall have to admit that the New York girl is a peculiarly fascinating creature. She has an air, a dash, snap and certain poise that distinguishes her from the girls of any other city I have ever visited. She walks differently, gets an exclusive tilt to her hat and an individual grip on her skirts that a Chicago or Philadelphia girl could imitate if she tried until she was gray headed. When the New York girl is out on promenade or for a drive, her bearing is that of a member of the four hundred, whether she lives on Fifth avenue or Baxter street. She evidently considers the city hers and herself most essential to its happiness and welfare. It used to be said that the coy damsel who could throw fetching glances over the top of a fan had reached the top notch of attractiveness to masculinity, but the indifferent, independent glances of the girls of this town as they swing past a fellow or chat with him, put the fan to sleep every time. Their independent and natural ways are more killing than all the artifices known.—Boston bachelor.

MADE FAST TIME.

Flashlight Sails From Bug Light to Pig Rocks in 53 Minutes.

The Manchester Quincy cup defender Outlook and the Quincy challenger Flashlight are both at Marblehead getting in trim for the races for the cup, the first of which is to be sailed off West Manchester on Monday morning. The Herald says, the Outlook gave an exhibition of her reaching powers in the harbor yesterday and she moved very fast. Her performance was watched by Henry Faxon and his crew, who were at work on the Flashlight at Stearn's yard overhauling her rigging. They do not seem to be alarmed and feel that the Quincy boat will give an excellent account of herself. They think the boats are a close fit.

The Flashlight made fast time on the run over from Quincy to Marblehead, and, with a reef tied in, not being driven, it is stated on the best of authority, reached from Bug light to the bell buoy off Pig rocks in 53 minutes. This will give an idea of what she can do. She got a good pounding going over to Marblehead, but beyond starting a few rivets is as sound as when she came out of Smith's shop at Quincy. The races between the Outlook and the Flashlight promise great sport and are expected to be close.

The Boston Advertiser adds: The Outlook, Quincy's cup defender, was out in Marblehead harbor yesterday, and made wonderful time. In the strong easterly wind she cut the waves like a pursuing Nemesis, and at times seemed to barely touch water. Picturesquely the rest of the time she appeared as if about to capsize. It has certainly proved thrilling for her crew. Flashlight, the Faxon challenger for the Quincy cup, has gone 12 miles in 59 minutes, which is rapid marine transit without question. The Quincy cup races promise to be closer than anticipated.

WHICH?

The Flashlight received a hard knock from a yachting sharp yesterday says the Boston Advertiser. The flat scow-shape Quincy cup challenger was lying by the wharf at Marblehead when the old yachtsman exclaimed:—

"Hallo there, Mr. Faxon. I want to get aboard your boat, but I can't tell whether the landing here is your boat without a sail, or your boat is the landing with a sail."

"Hum," exclaimed Mr. Faxon, and proceeded to walk aft.

Fast for Length.

The Flashlight and Outlook are both boats of the same style—scows, with great beam and overall length, of the lightest possible construction and with an enormous sail plan. One of them will weigh, perhaps, three to four tons with everything on board, and will carry over 1500 square feet of sail, or over 400 square feet per ton of weight to be driven. Such a cup defender as the Columbia should weigh about 140 tons, and would carry, possibly, 16,000 feet of sail, or 115 square feet per ton of weight. With these figures in mind it is not surprising that these so-called twenty-one-footers are much faster for their length than are the defenders of the America's cup.—Herald.

—The average temperature of Great Britain has risen nearly 1 1-3 degrees within the last half century. January is now nearly 3 degrees warmer than it was.

—Besides the skylark, a number of other birds sing as they fly. Among these are the titlark, woodlark, water peppet, sedge warbler, willow warbler and win chat.

—In the Punjaub the deaths from plague average nearly 70,000 monthly. The squirrels at Harsan, Mysore, caught the disease, and have been completly wiped out.

A CHALLENGE.

Braintree Club Not Satisfied With Result of Ball Game.

In order that the citizens, in general, as well as the staunch supporters of the Braintree Base Ball Club, may determine the true merits of these clubs in regard to their ability as base ball players, individually and collectively, the following invitation is extended.

The Braintree Base Ball Club, as they are organized today, and a complete list of their players will be furnished at any time,—do hereby invite and challenge the Cochato Base Ball club of Braintree to play one or series of three games on strictly amateur lines, on the following terms: that each club donate $50, making a purse of $100, winner to take all, and 75 per cent of the winnings to be expended on the children of the town in the most practical way.

If this sum seems small to the Cochato Base Ball Club, the management will readily increase the purse to any reasonable amount.

The Cochato Base Ball Club of Braintree to be comprised of players who have been actual members of that club, and residents of Braintree at least 60 days; that professional players from other cities and States be barred. Games to be played on French's common, South Braintree, at the earliest possible date.

Each Club to have its own umpire.

The Braintree Base Ball Club will furnish balls and other equipment, and prepare the grounds for these games at their own expense.

We will meet the Cochato Base Ball Club half way on any other arrangements.

This invitation is open until August 9th, 1902.

We hope that this matter can be arranged, and that the best Club will win on its real merits as an amateur Club.

Yours Respectfully,
Charles H. Bailey,
Manager Braintree Base Ball Club.

Golden Wedding.

July 11, marked the completion of fifty years of wedded life for Captain and Mrs. Charles T. Derry, two of the best know residents of Sharon, and natives of Quincy. In honor of the event their children, grandchildren and other relatives, about fifty in all, gathered at their spacious home on Washington place, to extend congratulations.

Had Capt. and Mrs. Derry yielded to the wishes of the townspeople, the celebration would have taken the form of a public reception in the town hall, but the health of Mrs. Derry rendered any such demonstration inadvisable. As it was, the guests at their home were limited to relatives and it proved to be one of the most enjoyable of family reunions.

Charles T. Derry was born in Quincy March 10, 1828. He was the oldest of a family of five boys. He was obliged at an age when most boys are in school to add his contribution to the family purse by working at farming, bootmaking and various other employments.

At the age of eighteen he secured employment on a sloop engaged in carrying granite between Quincy and Boston. He followed this occupation for several years, being placed in command of a sloop after three years' service, finally buying several sloops and engaging in the business for himself. Later he organized the firm of C. T. Derry & Co., contractors for the building of sea-walls and wharves, a business which he has followed ever since, and has been very successful.

This firm was one of the pioneers in this industry. Many of the largest contracts in and about Boston were successfully fulfilled by them. Some of their most notable work was a sea-wall more than a mile in length for the foundation of Albany street, Boston, which required seven years to complete; a sea-wall on the Mystic river, a mile and a half long for the Boston & Maine railroad, and a mile of sea-wall on the Charles river in the rear of Beacon street. Also a contract of from $200,000 to $300,000 for 1700 feet of sea-wall for the Boston Gas Light Co., and furnished the stone for the foundation for the Boston & Providence Freight Depot and part of the stone for the passenger depot.

Capt. Derry married in 1852, Miss Almira W. Murdoch of Middleboro. She was born in Quincy in 1832, her parents being George and Almira Murdoch. Her father enjoyed the distinction of having commanded the first tow-boat which ever entered Boston harbor, towing stone barges from Quincy R. R. Granite Co. to Boston. On his side Mrs. Derry can trace her ancestry back to John and Priscilla Alden.

Maine's Trial.

The official trial of the new battleship Maine has been postponed from Aug. 18 until Sept. 1, as her builders desire to place her in dry dock Aug. 25 for the purpose of cleaning her bottom.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

The Ledger office has a large new chimney.

Rev. J. I. Asher of North Truro will preach at the Atlantic Methodist church Sunday evening.

Don't over sleep Monday morning if you intend to make the excursion to the Quincy Challenge Cup races.

Miss Sadie R. Melzard of Atlantic has been elected teacher of drawing for the coming year in the public schools of Foxboro.

Assistant Engineer John H. O'Brien mourns the loss of an infant son who died today. The funeral will take place at 2 on Sunday.

The Fore River Ship and Engine Co. have the contract for a six-master which will be built on the same stocks and for the same parties as the Thomas W. Lawson, recently launched.

James H. Flint, judge of the probate court for this county, held the July sittings of Suffolk county, in the absence of Judges McKim and Grant, who were away on vacation trips.

The attraction at Remick's pavilion tonight, will consist of all the latest songs of the day. Henry P. Furnald with his phonograph will please you. Everybody come.

While Rev. W. W. Dornan of Holbrook, recently of Quincy, was attending the Bryan meeting last week at Nantasket, he was robbed of his pocketbook. Fortunately Mr. Dornan was sensible enough to carry only a small sum of money, just enough for necessary expenses, hence his loss was not great.

The old stairway leading from the street to the office of the Quincy Patriot, built about four score years ago, has been removed this week and a new one erected near the centre of the building. Editor Prescott figures that he has gone up those stairs over 70,000 times since he commenced his labors carrying the Patriots in 1851.

The Methodist and Congregational churches of Atlantic will now unite during the next four weeks, Aug. 3 and 10 in the Methodist church, and Aug. 17 and 24 in the Congregational church. On Sunday morning Rev. S. H. Davis of Westerly, R. I., one of the strongest preachers in that section will occupy the pulpit.

Thus early in the season there are many beautiful dahlias in blossom at different points in our city; but a larger collection we have not noticed anywhere than in the rear of George B. Pray's residence on Wharf street, Quincy Point. A hundred or more blossoms all in one clump attracts the attention of all who happen to get sight of it. Too bad that such a handsome bed should be in the rear of the house.

July Temperature.

That the July temperature in Quincy was lower than usual is shown by a summary of the noon temperature for seven years. In 1902, the mercury did not go as high as in the six preceding years, and with one exception it had the lowest noon temperature. The summary:

	Highest.	Lowest.
In 1896,	96	65
In 1897,	94	65
In 1898,	101	60
In 1899	94	66
In 1900,	100	70
In 1901,	99	67
In 1902,	92	61

Iron Gives Strength

No let-up of work, no freedom from household cares, close confinement in ill-ventilated rooms, offices and stores have made many women pale, tired and wornout, just as too much study and too little outdoor exercise have made many school children spindling and delicate. They have weakened the nerves, impaired digestion, upset nutrition, so that the blood has become watery and thin,—a result plainly seen in the colorless lips, cheeks and ears.

Too much responsibility, anxiety and worry have, in the same way, broken down the health of many busy men.

Now, what is needed by all these sufferers is iron, a natural constituent of healthy, strong and ruddy blood, as combined in the new iron tonic, Peptiron, which strengthens and colors the blood, nourishes and steadies the nerves, cures paleness, weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia and sleeplessness.

Peptiron combines iron in the best and most approved form with other great tonics and nutrients. Does not injure the teeth nor cause constipation.

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

Fire at Barre.

Barre had another fire yesterday, the buildings of the Capital Granite Company at Graniteville being burned, including the engine house with the boilers and engines. The loss is estimated at $7000, and there is no insurance. The cause of the fire has not been ascertained. The loss is particularly unfortunate as the company has just received an order for 250,000 paving blocks from Worcester, Mass.

Over 100 Arrests.

The month of July was a record breaker for the police department, as far as arrests are concerned. During that month 103 persons were arrested for various offences. The largest number of arrests in any one month previous to July was 80 which was in June.

—A soldiers' monument will be dedicated at Melrose today.

NEW YORK FLOODS.

John Evans tells of Them and Also of the Big Farms.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 1, 1902.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Since I left Quincy July 24, I have been so busy that it has been impossible to fulfill my promise to you, but at last I will snatch a few minutes to give the readers of the Ledger a little account of my travels. When I came here, the Mohawk river had risen so high that the fine fields of grain, hay, potatoes and all kinds of vegetables along its banks for miles were covered with water. Now the water has receded and the once beautiful fields are ruined. The weather has been in central New York the same as in New England, the rainiest they ever witnessed.

There is a great undertaking going on here, that of changing the course of the Mohawk river. By it hundreds of acres of land will be saved to the city of Utica. Business is better through this section than it ever was. Men are very scarce; employers are raising the wages from 3 to 5 cents per hour without even the asking.

I visited the Masonic home here, it is a fine place on a beautiful site. The scenery is splendid. There is a farm of hundreds of acres of the best land in the world belonging to it. It is a paradise for the old and poor Masons. There is also a place for orphan children and Masons' widows.

When I look at these big farms with their various product and abundant harvest, and plenty of fruit of all kinds, it seems too bad that any speculators should come between them and the people, and corner the market so that the prices should be double what they ought to be.

We have been in Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, and Niagara Falls, and of course I have lots to tell about these places, especially Buffalo and Niagara. Watch for it in a few days.

JOHN EVANS.

Cochato Club Day.

Thursday July 31st was "Cochato Day" on the Boston Floating Hospital, and quite a number from the club, availed themselves of the invitation extended by the management, to make the trip. The barge, or the "Floating Hospital," left the wharf at 9.30 o'clock and was towed down the harbor, coming to anchor off Pemberton, at about 12.30. Here, an opportunity was given guests to land, or remain on the barge, for the return trip.

The day proved very fine and on the trip were 72 or 73 babies, regular patients, and about a hundred mothers and babies, who were making the day trip, the Hospital carrying 225 in all—65 of whom were help.

Mr. John R. Anderson, the assistant manager, who has proved himself such an able speaker, in Braintree, showed the guests every courtesy, personally conducting them through the different department and explaining every detail.

By his kindness the guests were shown the "Atmosphere Plant" which regulates the temperature of each ward, and the humidity as well, making it possible to "bring October weather into dog-days," the kitchen, the sterilizing department, the laundry, and the four wards.

At noon the guests were invited to partake of a nice lunch, and at 2 o'clock listened to a lecture to the mothers on the preparation of the milk.

A very pretty feature was the kindergarten, where all the day babies who are able, are taken to the lower deck and amused with different toys provided for them, this allowing the tired mothers a short respite. At 4 o'clock the Hospital dropped anchor in Boston, and already one poor mother with her sick baby, was waiting on the pier for admittance as babies are received at all hours of the day or night.

Among those from the Cochato club who enjoyed the day were Mrs. F. Edgar Norris, Mrs. Franklin D. Thayer, Mrs. Edward A. Haskell, Mrs. John Evans, Miss Josephine Norris and Mr. S. F. Pratt.

FARMER DALE'S MISTAKE

[Original.]

I was on a wheeling tour and stopped for supper and all night at a forlorn looking farmhouse. I was surprised to see no woman about, all the work being done by the owner of the place, Ezra Dale. After supper I lighted a pipe and sat on the porch smoking. Dale came and sat beside me.

"You have finished your evening chores early," I said. "When my wife is without a servant, she never gets the dishes washed before 9 o'clock."

"Waal, ye see, I don't do it that a-way. I wash dishes oncet a week. Then I put 'em all on ter the wagon, drive 'em inter the creek, take a mop, an' when I get through they shine like pewter."

"Don't you think a wife would be handy? She could do your mending."

"Don't need no wife. I got needles an' thread an' buttons. There's my kit." And he handed me a case containing the articles mentioned and no more.

"Where's your thimble?" I asked.

"Don't need no thimble I tried one oncet an' couldn't use it. It's handier to git the head of the needle ag'in the wall an' drive it through that a-way."

"Did you never have a love affair?"

"Yes, oncet. It was when I was a young feller—very young an' very green. I used to look on a gal as a heathen would look on a sacred image. There was a little one livin' across the creek, Farmer Owens' daughter Daisy. Purty? Ye bet, an' gentle as a kitten. She tuk a shine to me. I was a fair lookin' young feller then, straight an' slim an' light on my feet. One evenin' I was a-passin' Farmer Owens', and Daisy come runnin' out with her finger a-bleedin' an' asked me ter tie it up fur her. I had ter git her arm under mine somehow an' hold on ter her hand an' wrap the linen strip an' wind the string an' a lot of things all at the same time. While I was a-doin' of it her hair got ag'in my cheek, an'—waal, I lost my head an', turnin', put an arm around her an' kissed her.

"Do ye know, stranger, I've since made up my mind she done it all a-purpose. I b'lieve she cut her finger on-tentionally. I tell ye, women folks is tricky."

"I think that was a very nice feminine way of catching your attention," I remarked. "Go on."

"That's jist what I did do. I went on from day ter day, week ter week, till it seemed ter me if anything happened between me an' that gal I'd collapse. Somethin' did happen. Farmer Owens tuk a farm han' fur the hayin', an' what did Daisy do but take him out in her buggy that her father bought fur her at Christmas an' drive right by that house a-purpose ter show him off ter me. I tell ye, stranger, she had the wickedest eye in her ye ever see."

"Another feminine trait," I observed. "Miss Daisy was evidently a woman."

"She was a woman, stranger, an' the worst kind of a one," Dale went on lugubriously. "She broke me all up. I jist rented this farm an' went away. I didn't come back fur ten years. Then I made up my mind that women folks wasn't wuth worryin' about, an' I tuk my farm ag'in an' began ter work it. The fust time I went by Farmer Owens' Daisy come out—she had grown ter be a fine lookin' young woman of twenty-six—an' what do ye suppose she did?"

"I can't imagine."

"Asked me if I wouldn't tie up a cut finger. She had the same wicked look in her eye she had when she drove that lopsided farm han' by my house ten years afore. Women is the persistentest critters I ever see. I jist squared off an' said: 'Ye don't git me that a-way ag'in. Ye done it oncet, an' that's enough.' But, do ye know, stranger, she was so slick about it that in five minutes I had my arm about her an' she was a-restin' her head on my shoulder. She was a-cryin', too—cryin' crockerdile tears, no doubt.

"Waal, we was engaged, but it didn't las' long. The question come up as ter whether we'd be married by a justice or a parson. I don't like parsons myself, an' I wanted a justice. Daisy wanted a parson, an' she was so blame set about it that I reckoned if she was as obstinate about a small matter like that she'd be wantin' ter run the farm, so I called the thing off, an' I've been livin' alone here ever since."

"Mr. Dale," I said, "you have mistaken natural feminine traits for general cussedness."

"That's what they is, I tell ye, stranger. "Ye don't understand."

"You have declined to give up that which to a woman is a great deal, while to you it is nothing. Miss Owens was right to insist on being married by a parson, and you were ungenerous to refuse her. Now, let me give you a bit of advice. Miss Owens is still single? Yes. Well, go to her and tell her that when you first met her you were a blundering idiot and that later you were an obstinate brute. Say that if she will overlook your past errors you will spend your life in doing penance."

"Why, stranger, if I was ter do that I'd never have my own way about anything afterward."

"It is the only way to have your own way about everything with a woman. Toss it all into her hands, and she'll toss it right back to you. More than that, she'll expect you to lead, and if you don't lead she'll not respect you."

"Ye don't mean it! Say, stranger, what sort of a makeup do ye call that anyway?"

The next summer I rode past Farmer Dale's place. It was the trimmest looking farm in the county. After supper the farmer told me how much better contented he was while Mrs. Dale was washing the dishes.

LAUNDRY LINES.

In doing up fine lace do not use any starch, but in the last rinsing water dissolve a little fine white sugar.

Boiled starch is much improved by the addition of a little sperm or a little salt or a little gum arabic dissolved.

To take ink out of linen, dip the ink spot in pure melted tallow; then wash out the tallow, and the ink will come with it.

Always remove colored clothes from the line as soon as they have become dry, for exposure to the sunshine is almost sure to fade them.

It is all important to retain the heat in an iron while using. For this reason the ordinary stand is not good. Try a clean, white brick and see how much longer your iron will stay hot.

Always have the top of the range perfectly clean before putting the irons on, and never allow them to get too hot. If such a thing does happen, cool them by setting up on end on the hearth.

There are ironing gas stoves for the laundry in which the burners are long instead of circular and the irons slip inside of cast-iron frames with the handles out. These stoves come in different sizes, with from one to five burners.

What Mistakes Foretell.

An old proverb says, "Fools learn nothing from wise men, but wise men much from fools." We are all apt to make mistakes now and then, but as our success in life depends on making as few of them as possible it is necessary we should learn to avoid them. Milton tells us that "prudence is that virtue by which we discern what is proper to be done under the various circumstances of time and place." Carelessness steals our best gifts away, making our lives drift in unprofitable directions. The prudent woman never makes those little mistakes of the tongue which kill friendship, and her manner is never rude. Consequently she characterizes herself favorably. There is the mistake of expecting others to exercise more reticence about our private affairs than we do ourselves. And then there is the still more common mistake of making companions of those who are never fit to be such. The woman who knows how to discriminate between what is right and what is wrong regards mistakes as awkward impediments to one's higher welfare.—Julia Teresa Butler in Pittsburg Observer.

Domestic Economy.

It takes almost a lifetime to thoroughly master the intricacies of domestic economy without being mean and stingy. It is easy enough to do without things and teach others to do without them and to cut it so fine that you must go without. But to have everything you need, to buy it in the best market at the lowest rate and use it to the best advantage, and use it all, is a triumph of management continually yearned after, but seldom attained.

Managing money is like playing golf. The best player will sometimes find himself landed in a bunker, and it is only his experience which enables him to get out of it without a bad loss.

The Flat Footed Girl.

For the flat footed girl there is little hope. Very old persons whose muscles are almost dormant and who have difficulty in walking have the flat footed habit. They are usually heavy limbed persons of full habit. For a girl to walk flat footed is almost sinful, as it indicates a phlegmatic, heavy, careless disposition.

The girl who walks flat footed rarely wears good shoes and isn't likely to be well dressed. The flat footed girl is inclined to drag her feet along as if they were too heavy for her to lift. Generally the flat footed girl develops into a fat woman. She is never graceful.

Make Your Own Sachets.

To make your own sachets buy the powder and sprinkle on thin cotton inside the silk bags or pour on it half a teaspoonful of the oil of the perfume you desire, to which a few drops of glycerin are added. The glycerin keeps the perfume from evaporating. This gives a vigorous and diffusive perfume, pleasant for the rooms, and the sachets to hang in the closets or on backs of chairs should always be treated in this way by perfumed oil fixed with a little glycerin.

Dollars In Dress.

The woman who can make one dollar do the work of two is at her best on the dress question, but she is quite discounted in brilliant results by she who can make one dollar do for two and deftly give the result a four dollar chic by a few bewildering sleight of hand passes. Never mention cost to such a woman. The dollar sign, like the age sign, is only what it looks to be in dress.—Minneapolis Times.

Chenille Portieres.

Chenille portieres may be cleaned by shaking them free from dust and then brushing them thoroughly and evenly with gasoline. Hang on the line in the yard to remove the fumes of the gasoline. Do not use the gasoline when there is a fire in the house.

Table Damask.

When selecting a cheap or medium quality of table damask, choose a pattern that nearly covers the ground. Such a tablecloth will wear better and look better than one of the same quality where there is a great deal of plain surface displayed.

Matting Screens.

Those screens covered entirely with matting are pretty and serviceable, and for a little adornment the matting of each panel is sometimes bordered with narrow strips of leather closely studded with large brass nails.

The Heirs of Uncle James

By EVERETT, HOLBROOK

Copyright, 1901, by
Charles B. Etherington

IT was the bluest morning I had seen in five years, when my poor little business was looking worse than it had ever looked before. There walked into my office a tall and gray old gentleman named David Hawley. I knew him as a lawyer who had sometimes served my rich uncle, James Wallace of Detroit, in affairs requiring attention in the east.

Mr. Hawley wished me a courtly good morning, and after a few remarks intended to prepare my mind he laid a telegram before me on the desk. It was from my uncle's butler to Mr. Hawley:

Mr. Wallace died suddenly; heart failure; midnight. Please inform relatives.

I gripped the arms of my chair with that instinct which makes one steady one's body when it is the mind which really needs that service.

"Do you know who gets the money?" I demanded.

The old lawyer glanced cautiously around the room, though he knew perfectly well that it contained nobody except ourselves.

"I can tell you," he said, "but you must regard the information as strictly confidential."

I mumbled something with dry lips that had the effect of a promise, and he acknowledged it with a grave and formal inclination of the head.

"As you are aware," said he, "your uncle had resolved not to divide the property. There were three persons who might have reasonable hopes, Mr. Alfred Haven and yourself, being sons, respectively, of Mr. Wallace's elder and younger sisters, deceased"—

"For the love of heaven," I cried, "don't keep me in suspense! I know all this."

—"and Miss Emily Wallace," he continued, precisely as if I had not spoken, "who was adopted in infancy by Mr. Wallace's brother, also deceased. The family, in fact, may be said to be extinct except for the three persons named"—

"Cæsar's ghost!" I exclaimed. "The money! Who gets it?"

"Mr. Haven has been very close to Mr. Wallace since then," said he. "He is now in this city on business for him."

"He is a scheming, mercenary rascal!" said I. "He has had his eye on that money"—

"Vainly, vainly," said the lawyer. "In strictest confidence I am able to inform you that Miss Emily is sole legatee under the latest will. She gets everything."

"You mean it?" I gasped. "You are sure? Thank heaven! Thank heaven!"

I laid my head upon the desk and fairly sobbed with relief.

"You had no expectations on your own account?" he queried.

"None," said I. "It was merely a question whether Haven would succeed in displacing Emily. If he had, she would have been absolutely penniless. I shudder to think of it. We must tell her at once."

"I beg your pardon," said he. "We are under a pledge not to tell any one. She will probably not know her good fortune until the will is read."

"Have you seen her?"

"No," he replied. "Mr. Haven, whom I met quite by accident while on my way here, has agreed to break the sad news to her."

"Does he know about the money?"

"I did not inform him," said the lawyer guardedly. "I really should not have told you, but—er—it seemed to me you should not labor under a disadvantage."

"THE MONEY! WHO GETS IT?" I EXCLAIMED.

"You mean to tell me," I cried, aghast, "that Haven is going to take his last chance for a share of this money by trying to get himself accepted by Emily before she knows the truth? Not that the money would make any difference in her choice, but"—

"Mr. Haven is a handsome and fascinating young man," said the lawyer. "I understand that he has professed affection for the young lady in the past. Under the circumstances, he may perhaps renew his offers."

"And you thought I should have an equal chance?" I exclaimed. "My dear sir, you misjudge me. It is no longer possible for me to speak a word of love to her."

"For this scruple," said the old lawyer, rising, "you will leave the field clear to a man whom you have described as a conscienceless and mercenary rascal. I think that is carrying the point of honor too far."

He bowed himself out, leaving me in a state of mind accurately poised between joy and fear—joy that Emily would get the money, fear lest Haven might win her.

We all started west together on the 4:30 train, and the journey will long live in my memory. It was positively phantasmal in the falsity and hollowness of it. None of us had ever felt a strong affection for Uncle James. He was not a lovable man. Yet Haven, who had never loved anybody except himself, made so fine a pretense of grief for our uncle that he shamed Emily and even me into uttering tender fictions on the subject.

Though Haven openly professed to be entirely ignorant as to the disposition of the property, his manner was plainly intended to give the impression that he knew himself to be the heir. As time went on I could see that this bit of acting was beginning to have its effect upon Emily, though at first I had been convinced that she was aware of her own good fortune. This I had judged from her manner toward me, which had that indefinable and maddening constraint that money imposes. It was inconceivable to me that the prospect of a few hundreds of thousands of dollars should so change a girl whose mind had hitherto been open to me like some sweet, familiar book. But it is the way of the world. Yet what was I to do? She was an heiress and I a beggar, with a ruined business on my back.

The situation became unbearable, and after we had dined I sought the smoking compartment with Lawyer Hawley for company, leaving to my rival the clear field against which I had been warned.

It may have been 9 o'clock when we were surprised by the advent of Haven, who came to say that he and Emily felt the need of a conference. He had engaged the stateroom of the car for that purpose.

I had no idea what this portended, but I was not left long in doubt. Haven had convinced her that he was the heir and had persuaded her to entertain an extraordinary proposition, which was no less than a pool of all our interests. In other words, we three possible heirs were to agree that, whatever might be the terms of the will, we would divide the property into thirds.

It was gratifying news to me, for it showed that this shrewd rascal had given up hope of winning Emily's hand. I knew him for a sharp student of human hearts, and my own exulted in the thought of his defeat. Of course, knowing that the money was Emily's, I could not enter into any scheme for its division, and it was with considerable satisfaction that for an hour or more I resisted both Haven's and Emily's arguments. It was a grief to me that she should have been willing to take advantage of what she must have supposed to be Haven's generosity; but, considering the justice of the division and the extreme poverty with which she was threatened, I was quite willing to forgive her. She was lost to me in any case, but I was devoutly glad that she was also lost to Haven.

I think I was in far the best humor of us all when we separated for the night. Emily was on the verge of tears, and Haven was both puzzled and alarmed, as I could easily see.

The great and gloomy house where Uncle James had lived seemed like a giant tomb when we four entered it. The servants moved about in the dim halls like ghosts, and in the drawing room a dry old lawyer stood, as if carved out of black wood, awaiting us. He announced that he would read the will at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and that was all he would say. That the reading should precede the funeral was by my uncle's wish.

Shortly after this interview I missed Emily, and then a few minutes later came upon her in the library. She was in tears, and the sight restored me to my old bearing toward her. She was not weeping for Uncle James. For a long time she refused to give any reason. Then suddenly she said:

"I am so disappointed in you!"

"In me!" I exclaimed. "What have I done?"

"You have known all along that this money would go to you," she said. "If I had not been childishly silly, I should have seen it. Your manner toward me, Edward, was as hard as gold dollars when we met there at the depot. But I—I was persuaded that Mr. Haven was the heir. And it was for your sake, knowing how hard pressed you were in business, that I consented to the division. Mr. Haven said that only in that way could you receive anything; we must all agree."

"Haven is the champion liar of the universe!" I cried. "He knew the money was yours."

She shook her head sadly.

"No," she said; "he thought it was his, and only within the last few minutes have we known that you knew from the first that the last will was in your favor. Look at this."

She handed me a rough draft of a will making me sole legatee. It was dated only two days before my uncle's death.

"The housekeeper found this and gave it to Mr. Haven," she said.

"Saints of paradise!" I exclaimed. "Can this be true? Haven! Mr. Hawley!"

I called to them, hearing their steps in the hall, and they came hastily into the room.

"Haven," said I, "my view has changed. I desire the division which you suggested."

"I cannot consent to it," said Emily.

"You must," I replied. "It is absolutely your only way of being just to me. Otherwise I must bear forever the burden of your charge that I am a self seeker and a man of mercenary motives."

The words leaped out of me with the unmistakable force of sincerity, yet I had a long struggle to persuade Emily, though Haven, pale to the gills with excitement, labored in the same cause. We succeeded at last and with Hawley's aid drew up a contract. But for him we should undoubtedly have made a mess of it, but he showed the way. Had we contracted among ourselves there would have been no certainty, for the two favored ones might have withdrawn from motives of generosity, though it would have seemed to me that Haven at least could be trusted not to do such a thing. On the whole, however, it was better that each of us should assign his rights in the Wallace estate to Mr. Hawley as trustee for certain specific purposes. The trustee was made a party to the contract, which thus could not be broken without his consent. He pledged himself not to give it under any circumstances.

The document was duly signed and witnessed, and Lawyer Hawley put it into his pocket.

It was an exciting time, and when it was over I sought the solace of tobacco in the smoking room. Haven was there alone, sitting on a divan laughing aloud in a gently hysterical fashion.

"Eddie," he said as I stood staring at him, "I sized you up wrong."

"What do you mean?" I demanded.

"Why, it's no harm telling you now," he said. "We've made an unbreakable

"I'VE KNOWN FROM THE START THAT YOU WERE THE HEIR."

contract. This is the point: I've known from the start that you were the heir, but I told Hawley that it was Emily, pledging him to secrecy, but well aware that he would tell you. The old fox likes you. There was no doubt about what he'd do. Then I convinced Emily that the money was mine, knowing that she was in love with you and for your sake would consent to the division. Otherwise she'd never have taken a penny that was coming to me.

"The scheme worked like a charm, except that you had scruples. I wouldn't have believed it of you, but a man in love is an idiot at the best. I'm free to say that I thought the game was up, and it was merely to injure you in Emily's eyes that I sprung that rough draft on her. Behold the result. Do you wonder that I laugh? It has been a close call."

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Hawley, glancing in at the door, "we are about to read the will."

It proved to be a brief document, dated one day before my uncle's death, and after remembering the servants for small sums it gave every penny of the residue to Alfred Haven. Emily and I were cut off completely.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 3—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—The call to separation.—II Cor. vi, 14-18; I John ii, 15-17.

It has always been the desire and intention of God that His chosen people in this life should be separated from the people of the world. While in the world, yet it was never His intention that they should be of the world. This fact is fully testified to in the history of the chosen people of God. God developed the Jews into a distinct and a separate people. He led them from the land of Egypt to the land of Canaan, which was to be their distinct and separate possession. He there surrounded them with peculiar customs and laws, that they should be distinct and separate from the people round about them. The laws and the customs of the Jews made them as separate and distinct from the surrounding nations as it was possible for a nation to be. Even in the matter of dress God distinguished His people from the nations. It is His intention that this separation, in a different way, should exist today. The church of Christ is a distinct and separate institution from the world. The disciples of Christ are also to be separate and distinct in their lives. This is set forth in the New Testament. Paul says in the first reference: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness, and what concord hath Christ with Belial, or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." In the second reference John says: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

The necessity of emphasizing this truth of the Scriptures is very great today. It is evident to all that there is not the distinction between the church and the world and between the people of God and the people of the world that there should be. There have been days in the past when this separation was marked and distinct. In the early Christian centuries this was the case. By the difference in their lives it was possible for the Roman masters to distinguish their Christian and un-Christian slaves, and not only in these circles, but in every grade of church life, there was a distinct separation from the world. In the early part of the history of our own country there was this marked separation between the people of the kingdom of God and the people of the kingdom of this world. The Puritan fathers were particular to emphasize the duty of separation from the world. Today, however, there has been a great change in this respect. The church is in the world and the world is in the church to an extent that perhaps has never been equaled or surpassed in the past. The duty, therefore, to emphasize this truth of the Scriptures and this desire of God is evident, and we may well remember today God's call to His people to be separate and distinct from the world, a chosen people unto Himself and His peculiar possession.

The distinction between the people of God and the people of the world is not today to be manifested by any peculiar custom or the observance of different national laws, but purely in the manner of living. It is by the lives of God's people that they should be recognized as His people and as the followers of Jesus Christ. A clerical dress does not make a Christian minister, nor does a Christian Endeavorer badge upon the lapel of a young man's coat make a Christian Endeavorer. Christianity is a life. It is the life of God in the heart and the lives of men, and it is possible for the people of God to follow so closely in the footsteps of their divine model, the Lord Jesus Christ, as to be noticeably distinct and separate from those who are not believers in God or worshipers of Him.

Early Piety.

The command of God is to seek Him early in life, and the promise is that He will receive and bless those who thus come to Him. Youth is favorable to grace. The mind is not yet filled with worldly things; habits are not yet confirmed; associations are not yet settled. The child is more in sympathy with the finer and more spiritual things, because it is not warped and perverted by the evil that surrounds it and develops within. A life thus under the grace of God from childhood is purer and stronger in later years. It has had a solid growth and is firm in its texture and grain. It works up into whatever it is used for with more beauty than if part was spent in sin. It is a sweeter life, for there are no memories of sinful days which left their mark on the soul. It is a life nearer to that of the Child Jesus, whose unfolding was divine.—United Presbyterian.

The Saving Power of Hope.

In our strong reaction from the popular view of forgiveness as the blotting out of the inevitable consequences of wrongdoing, in our eagerness to teach that character is salvation, we must not ignore the saving power of hope. Souls burdened by sin and shame need not be pointed to the law of consequences. What they need is something to inspire in them new hope.—Presbyterian Banner.

TROOPS ARE PRACTING

To Pass the Time While on Duty In Disturbed District—May Not Be Withdrawn Until End of Strike—Mine Workers Expect to Win

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 2.—Absolute quiet continues to prevail here and the general feeling of uneasiness which has prevailed is rapidly disappearing. The troops spent yesterday in perfecting their camp arrangements and comparatively few of them were in town. None are permitted out of camp after dark.

Much sympathy is expressed by the citizens generally over the death of Joseph Beddal as a result of injuries received in the riot of Wednesday night. He was well known in the business community. Rev. W. K. Stewart of the Methodist Episcopal church says that Beddal on his deathbed denied that he was carrying ammunition to his brother Thomas, the deputy sheriff, who was besieged in the railroad station where the trouble occurred. The injured man said he did not go there to protect his brother, but that his only thought was for his brother's safety.

The inquest on the death of Beddal was begun yesterday and after four witnesses had been examined the further taking of testimony was postponed until next Thursday. According to the testimony of Dr. J. C. Biddle, Beddal received a terrible beating at the hands of the mob. The direct cause of death was a fracture of the skull four and a half inches long and one inch wide. Besides this the unfortunate man sustained other serious fractures and contusions. It was testified at the inquest that he did not use a revolver.

Two witnesses told the story of riot. It was brought out that Deputy Sheriff Thomas Beddal, who was escorting the three workmen from the colliery, did not use his pistol until after he had been assailed several times by a shower of rocks and bricks. His first shot was fired into the air and his second into the ground. There were more than 100 men in the crowd and many of them carried clubs.

Brigadier General Gobin says that while everything is quiet there is a feeling of unrest among the great army of idle men. The general will not talk about the length of the stay of the troops, but it is believed at brigade headquarters that the soldiers will stay in the field for some time or probably to the end of the strike. Targets will be put in against the culm banks and it is the hope of General Gobin to qualify as marksmen at least two regiments of the men now in the camp. He says he intends to make the most of the opportunity to increase the efficiency of the men.

The mine workers' officials are still at work obtaining signatures to the petition to be sent to the governor requesting him to withdraw the troops.

The strike leaders continue to express themselves as confident that the presence of the troops will have no effect on the strikers and that they will continue to remain out until victory comes to them.

Mitchell Addresses Strikers

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 2.—The first of the series of strikers' mass meetings planned to take place at the various strike centres was held yesterday in the Roundwoods. There were 7000 strikers present. President Mitchell's speech dealt only with the live issues of the fight. He said that the miners would pay the cost of the strike if they lost and urged the men to stand firm.

Injunction Not Violated

Boston, Aug. 2.—In the equity session of the superior court yesterday John W. Saxe, special master in the matter of alleged violations of the injunction issued in connection with the strike of the employes in the Puritan mill, Plymouth, submitted his report to Judge Braley. He heard the evidence in one case only, and completely exonerated the defendant, Michael Bagnall, who was accused of leading a riotous crowd in an assault upon a boarding house and intimidating employes of the American Woolen company.

Strikers Withdrew Demands

New Haven, Aug. 2.—The strike of the metal workers and polishers of the hardware factory of Sargent & Co. is virtually at an end. As the demands of the strikers for an advance in wages and an "all union shop" have been withdrawn, the old men will be taken back as rapidly as possible without making it necessary for the company to discharge the men hired since the strike began four weeks ago.

Fish Business Handicapped

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 2.—The tieup in the manufacturing branch, so-called, of the fish industry of this city, caused by a strike of the fish skinners, cutters and dressers, is complete, and the fight of the men for higher wages is on in earnest. This is the first time in the history of Gloucester that her chief industry has been directly assailed by a strike. The strike involves 700 men.

Objected to Overseer's Discharge

Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 2.—About 20 weavers of the Tremont worsted mills at Methuen went on strike last night because of the discharge of Overseer Jeffries and of the use of the two-loom system. A conference failed and the plant shut down.

Rooster Pulls a Baby Carriage

O. J. Plomsen of Luverne, Ia., has a Buff Cochin rooster that is a giant in the feathered kingdom. Mr. Plomsen made a light harness for the rooster and soon trained him to draw the carriage in which Baby Plomsen takes rides around the dooryard. The little one cannot drive, but her sister sometimes gets into the carriage and guides the feathered horse about the yard.

HOW PORCUPINES FIGHT.

Do Not Shoot Their Quills, but Drive Them In With the Tail.

There is something about the porcupine which draws the interest of a great many persons, according to the attendants at the New York zoological gardens in the Bronx. It is one of the first animals for which youthful visitors ask when they come to the park, and many of their elders also want to be directed to the porcupine pen. Some of the visitors have strange ideas about how the porcupine came to have quills and what he can do with them.

"See the pins sticking out of that little black ball," said a fond father who was giving his young hopeful a lesson in natural history. "That's a porcupine, and it fights with those quills. When the dogs come, it raises its quills and at the right time shoots them out, just like the powder shoots the bullet out of the gun."

"It does, does it?" exclaimed an old man who was peering through the bars at the same porcupine.

The father looked up quickly, and his glance asked, "And who the dickens are you?"

"I've lived most all my life up in the Adirondacks, where porcupines are thick," explained the old man, "and I've hunted them many times. It's a mistake about their being able to shoot their quills."

"But I've seen dogs with the quills driven into nose, chest and legs," returned the father. "How do you account for that?"

"Most people do not know," continued the man from the mountains, "that the porcupine fights with its tail, using it as a man would a club. The tail is heavy and well covered with quills, and the beast has perfect control of it when it comes to purposes of defense. It can strike a blow with sufficient force to drive quills into a stick of hard wood, to say nothing of a dog's flesh.

"When the porcupine turns tail it is time for the enemy to retreat, for the defense is about to begin. The blow is delivered quickly, without warning, and it leaves a bunch of quills wherever it strikes. This method of fighting with its tail is responsible for the theory that the porcupine can shoot its quills."—New York Tribune.

Little Shoes.

"Little shoes, dainty shoes, shoes of softest leather,
Why are you now clustered here, heel and toe together?"

We've danced among the falling leaves
And chased across the grasses
And climbed the mounds of garnered sheaves—
We shoes of lads and lasses.

We've raced with kitty up and down
The house with string and feather;
We've played "The king has come to town"
In misty, moisty weather.

Why, don't you see? We've lots of holes!
That comes from such hard playing
On never resting little soles,
And feet there is no staying!
—John Preston True in Youth's Companion.

When Jackie Saw the Sea.

It is interesting to note the early age at which the young idea in some infants begins to shoot regardless of any especial teaching. When Jack was eighteen months old, his mother took him from the city, where the boundary of his small world had been that part of Central park, New York, lying between the tennis grounds and the upper lake, to a farmhouse in the mountains at Liberty. On the stage ride from the station he hailed each passing tree as a "yittle piece of a park." At the farmhouse one of his chief delights consisted in watching a flock of waddling, solemn geese. Two months later baby Jack went to the seashore to finish his summer outing, and at the sight of the catboats which dotted the water with their white sails he clapped his dimpled brown hands, crying out, "Oh, mamma, hee 'e pitty doose boats!"

THE BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS.

A Chinese Story of the First Cocoon of the Silkworm.

A long time ago, it is said, there once lived in China a king who had no sons and but one daughter. Now, this king was very much troubled because of this, for when he died who was there to wear his crown? But there were certain strange men of the king's city who it has been told could read from the stars what would become of every man, woman and child. To these the king went, thinking that they might be able to give him some good news. And indeed they did, for they declared that his daughter would become of very great value to the kingdom and that at her death she would leave riches such as no one had ever dreamed of.

This story became widely told, and soon many admirers came to the king's palace to seek the hand of his daughter in marriage. The princess became so beautiful and so kind that hundreds of people came to worship her. The king, however, was very much troubled, for he knew not whom to choose from the many admiring young men as the husband for his daughter. But the time came when he must name his choice.

About this time a very strong king came while the father of the princess was on a hunting expedition and carried her away to a faroff country. Then the advisers of the king met together and decided that the person who rescued the princess should have her hand in marriage.

This was indeed a very difficult thing to do, and every attempt of the admirers was met with failure. But high up among the clouds was a spirit who loved the princess, yet he dared not marry her because she was mortal. Yet at least he determined to rescue her. So, entering into the body of the king's favorite horse, he broke away from the keepers of the royal stables, hurried to the strange land and returned with the princess on his back. But because a horse had rescued the princess the chief adviser of the king was very much disgusted and ordered the horse to be killed.

However, the king who had stolen the princess was very strong, and he came again and took her away. The only way out of the difficulty now that the king's advisers could see was that the princess should marry the eldest son of the strange king. The princess wept at the thought of what was to become of her, and when the bridal day came she rushed into her chamber, uttering terrible screams. A servant who had heard the cries came running with the skin of a horse, from which he intended to cut strings to bind whoever might be the offender. But the soul of the spirit now awoke in the skin of the horse and wrapped the skin about the princess. She fell asleep and became the first cocoon.

To this day in the silk growing districts of Japan when the silkworms come out of their shells little children can be seen playing with toy horses. This is to win the favor of the silkworm goddess by reminding her of her faithful lover.—Leslie's Weekly.

Allie's Code of Signals.

Little Allie was very ill, so ill that the good doctor had left strict orders that she must not talk. Her mamma, a very sensible woman, knew that it would distress her little girl not to be able to communicate her wants and desires, so she arranged a code of signals by which the little girl could make known her wants. To wiggle the first finger meant water, the second finger milk, the third gruel and the fourth that she wanted her dolly laid upon the pillow by her side.

This idea was very pleasant to the sick one, and in a short time every member of the family was able to answer Allie's finger wigglings without consulting mamma. The little girl was very weak, and her life had been despaired of, but the good doctor said she would recover if her appetite would only return. One day her mamma, who was sitting by her side, saw a thin little thumb wiggling vigorously.

What did the thumb mean? Surely the thumb had been overlooked.

"What is it, dear?" whispered her mamma, bending over her.

"Meat," came from Allie's lips.

When the doctor came in a few minutes afterward and was told all about it, he said: "Give her a tiny bit of meat. She will get well now."

And she did, but she never forgot the code of signals.—New York Mail and Express.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Scarcity of Fuel Appears to Be Chief Hindrance to Business

New York, Aug. 2.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Aside from heavy rains in Texas, the week's crop news is encouraging. Manufacturing plants are well occupied as a rule, iron and steel leading, followed by textiles and footwear. Fuel scarcity is still causing delay, although coke ovens are surpassing all previous figures of output, and bituminous mines are vigorously operated.

At most points, retail trade is active, and preparations continue for heavy fall sales. The leading departments of the iron and steel industry may properly be considered prosperous.

In textile manufacturing the feature was the opening of men's wear worsted fabrics for next spring with a general advance of 2½ to 10 cents.

Cotton goods tend in favor of purchasers, owing to the prospect of a large cotton crop, and the tendency of goods to accumulate because of the light export movement. Shoe shops are active on spring samples, and buyers are numerous in the Boston market. Factories at the east are well occupied, although the high cost of materials is against profits.

Grain prices declined sharply as the month of speculative manipulation drew to a close, and legitimate trading resumed a more normal volume.

Meats have shown a tendency to seek slightly lower quotations, but light receipts and poor quality do not promise any extensive relief in the immediate future.

Worthy of Investigation

Des Moines, Aug. 2.—Governor Cummins is investigating the recent reorganization of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway company with a view of ascertaining whether the organization is in all respects in harmony with the laws of the state of Iowa. He says: "The capitalization of the old Rock Island company was but $75,000,000, while the new company located in Iowa declares a capital of $125,000,000. There must be something, to my mind, to show more than is indicated in the above plan that the increased capitalization is not an excessive inflation, or that the stock which has been issued is not watered."

Smith Has Nothing to Say

San Francisco, Aug. 2.—General Jacob Smith arrived from Manila yesterday on the transport Thomas. He appeared exceedingly nervous and worn. His 62 years are plainly read in his every action and his intimate friends fear he is breaking down under the severe strain to which he has been subjected in recent months. Repeated efforts made to induce General Smith to discuss his campaign in the Philippines and his court martial failed entirely. He even declined to take up the subject with intimate friends.

The Pessimistic Seddon

London, Aug. 2.—Prime Minister Seddon of New Zealand was given a banquet in Liverpool last night. In the course of a speech Mr. Seddon again referred to the great menace to Britain and the colonies from the competition of American commercial combinations. He strongly deprecated the ovations which had been given Boer generals, and said he feared they would greatly shock the colonies. Mr. Seddon's remarks with regard to Boer generals were received with signs of dissent by his hearers.

Belvin Secures Bondsmen

Boston, Aug. 2.—William W. Belvin, a promoter who has been identified with some of the large financial enterprises of the country, and who was committed to jail on Tuesday in a civil action, was released from jail on bail given by two men. Belvin's case, which grows out of the payment of commission in a stock transaction, will be tried in the fall. Belvin once was vice president of the Northern Pacific railroad.

Colombian Forces Fighting

Panama, Aug. 2.—A severe engagement is being fought between the revolutionary forces under General Herrera and government troops at Agua Dulce. The battle began July 29. Two hundred of the revolutionists were said to have been killed or wounded by Wednesday. The government had then suffered 19 casualties. Ammunition is being sent from here to the fighting government troops.

Secret Service Men's Haul

New York, Aug. 2.—Fighting for their liberty, three alleged counterfeiters were arrested yesterday by W. F. Flynn, chief of the secret service, and several of his men at 326 Hudson avenue, Brooklyn. The men are Italians, and in their rooms were found 50 sets of plaster moulds as well as a collection of burglars' tools.

End of Texas Flood

Dallas, Aug. 2.—The flood in Texas, which has tied up railroads, washed away bridges and pikes, and caused loss of life to man and beast almost daily for over a week, is a thing of the past except in the northeastern end of the state.

Firmin's Army Moving Again

Port Au Prince, Aug. 2.—The Firminite army, commanded by General Jumeau, which retreated to Arcahaie after its recent defeat, has been reorganized and is now marching to the capital.

—The trading stamp scheme has been tried in Plymouth for the last three months. What has been the result? Everything in the line of trade as far as we can see, has gone along in the same course it would, had the stamp not been in existence. While some merchants have gained some customers, they have lost others. We do not know of any merchant whose trade has been greatly increased by the use of trading stamps, while a number have discontinued their use as far as they can do so. We do not know of any merchant who gives them unless they are asked to do so, and even then they become a source of annoyance and expense.—Plymouth Free Press.

BRAINTREE.

The Pond, Monatiquot and Union schoolhouses were beautifully decorated for "Old Home Week" much to the credit of Col. A. C. Drinkwater of the school committee.

There should be double tracks on Washington street in front of the Town House from Central avenue to French's Common. At the close of large gatherings at the Town Hall the majority of the people are often obliged to walk to their homes.

Old Home Week will conclude at Braintree today with a series of athletic games on the Town House grounds.

As announced on Sunday the church has been open to visitors during Old Home Week—except on Friday and Saturday—different ladies being in charge each day. Many have availed themselves of the opportunity thus given to view the memorial window.

The observance of the week which began so fittingly with the service of unveiling Sunday morning closed with the union service on Thursday evening—the address of Rev. George A. Thayer of Cincinnati being listened to by a large and appreciative congregation.

Editor Samuel Moseley of the Hyde Park Gazette and also Hyde Park's post master was a guest of the Old Home Week committee Monday.

A children's lawn party was held on E. W. Cotton's lawn Thursday afternoon.

Mr. E. H. Mathewson received the members of Nahanton tribe, I. O. R.M. at the close of the parade on Monday, he being a member of the order.

Capt. Frank A. Bates accompanied by Henry S. Thayer departed yesterday morning in the naptha launch Shore Acres for Lamoine beach, Maine.

Col. A. B. Hodges of the state detective force, with several assistants were in town Monday, but found the town free from crooks and other suspicious characters.

Rev. and Mrs. Legg are occupying the home of Mr. and Mrs. W.F. Rogers on the Heights while the latter are absent for a two weeks' trip to Niagara Falls, Quebec and Maine.

Edward Avery has the splints off his wrist and has almost recovered from his injury.

L. O. Crocker starts today (Saturday) on the yacht Eclipse to attend the Manchester races.

George M. Hayden, one of the popular clerks at E. W. Hunt's store who was operated on ten days ago for appendicitis is gaining rapidly, and will soon be about again.

Horace Faxon of Brockton formerly of Braintree and Nathaniel H. Hunt of South Braintree are now 82 years old and their birthdays are only three days apart. They were guests of the "Old Home Week" committee Monday. Mr. Hunt served Braintree as Selectman thirteen years and is the oldest ex-official living.

Charles Cavanagh is building a house to be occupied by himself on School street.

Mrs. C. Frank White arrived home Saturday from the Quincy hospital and is now on a fair road to recovery.

Miss Helen E. Hewes, formerly superviser of drawing in the Braintree schools, has been appointed superviser of drawing in the schools of Newburyport, Mass.

It is said that Mr. F. O. Ellis intends to build four houses on his land off Washington street. Two are under way and Contractor H. W. Borden has about eight carpenters at work on the first house.

George G. Sampson real estate agent, sold last week the estate of late Mrs. Anderson on Ash street to George F. Ricker of Chicago, employed by United Shoe Machinery Company.

Capt. Robert Ellis, Rev G. E. Whitehouse, Julian Morrow and a party from Boston are cruising to St. John's in Mrs. Ellis' sloop yacht. They are expected home in about a week.

Sachem S. P. Clark of Pequot Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, Brockton, was thrown from his horse while riding in the parade Monday, and severely injured about the head. The parade was over at the time the accident occurred. Mr. Clark had stopped his horse to converse with a group of Red Men. The animal, allowed a free head, began to browse. Mr. Clark was unmindful and, when the horse suddenly started, he was thrown forward. His foot caught in the stirrup while he was endeavoring to gain control of the reins, which made matters worse, and he was thrown over on his head. He received a terrible gash over the eye, from which blood streamed so profusely that he fainted after a few minutes. A physician was summoned and dressed the wound. Mr. Clark was taken to Brockton on the train and to his home in a carriage.

White Family Reunion.

Many decendants of Peregrine White, the original settler of historical Marshfield, gathered in the south part of the town Thursday and did honor to his memory. The exercises took place at the Herman Delano estate. It was the fourth annual reunion of the White family association.

During the morning hours there was a reception, and many stories of the olden days in Marshfield, were related. At 12.30 o'clock dinner was served on the lawn, about 100 being present.

One of the most interesting speakers was Porter Wright, Daniel Webster's foreman for many years, while other speakers were George Martin Baker, Mrs. Sarah E. Bosworth, Herman Delano, William Groce, Arthur J. Oliver and Mrs. Laura Walker.

The former officers were elected for another term. The fifth annual reunion will be held in the town a year from this week.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

The selection of W. S. Gilbert's delightfully ridiculous satirical comedy "Engaged" for production at Boston Music Hall next week will afford the admirers of this clever playwright a welcome opportunity to enjoy one of his happiest efforts. The characteristics of modern society have been shown little respect by Mr. Gilbert in this comedy in which truth is turned topsy-turvey in the most logical and absurd fashion. The fun of the scenes and situations consists in showing up the meanness and selfishness underlying the outside polish and good breeding and the humbugs of the world are turned inside out without a shadow of remorse. This comedy has always been a success with Boston audiences and the humorous results of habit acquired by its hero, of proposing to every girl he meets, have never failed to amuse. For the coming production at Music hall by the Castle Square Theatre stock company. The usual distribution of boxes of chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee. A production of "Fool's Revenge," is announced to follow "Engaged" on Monday, August 11th.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The phenomenal summer business at Keith's keeps up steadily, and late comers, especially in the evenings, have to content themselves with standing room privileges. The latest production of living pictures are attracting unusual attention, the universal criticism being that they are the best ever exhibited in this country. New tableaux are added each week. The petit concerts of popular music by the Fadettes woman's orchestra is another feature of this season's show that appeals to large numbers who are not regular patrons of vaudeville. Among the entertainers scheduled for the week commencing Aug. 4, in addition to the two special attractions mentioned, are the following: Louise Montrose, late of the "Prince of Pilsen" in songs and dances; the Kaufmann troupe of trick and fancy bicycle riders; Scott and Wilson, comedy acrobats; H. V. Fitzgerald in character changes; Maddox and Wayne, eccentric comedians, and Joseph West and Ida Lewis, in a German dialect comedy sketch, "A Night of Surprises."

THE YANADIS OF INDIA.

Some of the Peculiar Customs of This Queer Tribe.

In the Nellore district of the Madras presidency live the Yanadis, a strange tribe, as may be seen from a report which has been issued by the authorities of the Madras government museum. They live in forests and that they are little removed from savagery is indicated by the absence of implemental or monumental material, the animistic nature of their religion, the primitive hunting and fishing methods followed by many of the tribe and the habit of eating the almost raw flesh of the game they kill after slightly heating or scorching it. They are fearless in catching cobras, which they draw out of their holes without any fear of their fangs, and it is supposed that they protect themselves against the effects of snake bites by swallowing the poison sacs of the snakes. Especially singular is the manner in which they produce fire by friction. For this purpose they prepare two stocks, one short, the other long. In the former a square cavity is made, and it is held firmly in the ground while the long stock is twirled rapidly to and fro in the hole. Instead of charcoal powder they use rags or even dried leaves, which they find little difficulty in lighting.

The Origin of Many Names.

The popular terminations of pet names in earlier times were in, on, et, kin, cock and others. Emma was shortened to Em, and for love's sake it became Emmott or Emmet. Matilda was first Til, then Tillot. Bartholomew was Bart, then Little Bart or Bartlett. The popularity of these pet names is seen in the great number of them which eventually became family names.

The Tillotsons, the Emmetts and the Bartletts are numerous in England and America, although few dream that their names were originally pet and not surnames. Before the use of family names it was often necessary to use diminutive forms from the fact that the same name was not infrequently given to two or three children of the same family. The original of the surname Robinson is the pet name of Robin or Little Robert.

As Germans of today add chen to children's names as a term of endearment, making Anna Annchen, Elizabeth Lischen, so our English ancestry used the equivalent kin. Watkin was Little Walter, Simkin Little Simeon, Perkin Little Peter. Terminations in kin and cock were in use among the lower orders—that is, among the Anglo-Saxons—while the diminutives in, on and et were more aristocratic and used by families of Norman blood.

Ran Away From Doctor.

The family hope and pride, five years of age, was out of sorts. He didn't eat well, and he had a slight cold. Mamma thought the doctor should be sent for, and papa concurred. The doctor looked at the little chap's tongue, felt his pulse and left some little pills. The next day he came again. The boy's cold hung on, and so did the doctor. At the end of the sixth visit, however, the father thought the patient well enough, so he paid the doctor off with the understanding that he need not come again. Nevertheless, the next day saw the doctor arrive, and the day following. Not wishing to offend him, the family thereupon bundled up the boy and went away for a visit. The doctor could not charge for a visit to a locked up house, and that was an easy way to escape his attentions and his bill.—New York Press.

Hope Springs Eternal.

The patience of fishermen who really love the sport is the theme of many stories. One is told by a man who, traveling on foot through part of England, came upon a solitary fisherman who looked as if time and the world might pass away without disturbing his content.

"Have you fished long in this stream?" asked the traveler.

"Eighteen year," was the calm response.

"Get many bites?" was the next question.

The fisherman scarcely turned his gaze from the rod in his hands.

"Five year ago in this very spot I had a fine bite," he answered hopefully.

He Was Only the Master.

"George," exclaimed Mrs. Ferguson, with flashing eyes, "am I the mistress of this house or am I not?"

"You certainly are," replied Mr. Ferguson, with alacrity. "What's the matter now?"

"I've discharged that impudent hired girl, and she refuses to leave. I want you to go to the kitchen and bundle her out, neck and crop!"

"Settle it between yourselves, Laura," said Mr. Ferguson weakly. "I won't have anything to do with it. I'm only the master of the house."—Chicago Tribune.

An Apt Suggestion.

The Rev. Samuel Longfellow was a poet, as well as was his more eminent brother. He was the compiler of a hymnbook for churches, in which work he was assisted by a fellow clergyman of the same Christian name. On applying to a third member of the profession to give the book a title the latter suggested that it be called the Sam book.

Ship Combine.

It is announced in New York that the preliminaries to the formation of the Delaware River Ship & Engine Building Company, have been completed and that the new corporation will receive title to the shipyards and other properties included in the consolidation next week. The titles are being examined and it is expected that the guaranty company making the examination will be prepared to deliver guaranteed titles within a few days.

The new company has a capital of $5,000,000 common stock, and a $2,500,000 issue of 5 per cent. bonds. It has arranged to purchase the John B. Roach Shipbuilding Company of Chester, Pa., and the shipbuilding plant of Neffy & Levy. John B. Roach has been elected president, Osborn Congelton, vice president; E. L. Levy, secretary; and D. E. Ford, treasurer and general manager. None of the stock will be offered to the public.

Osborn Congelton, who is a member of the syndicate that is furnishing the capital for the new concern, says: "The purchase money has been deposited with the Commonwealth Trust Company of Philadelphia, subject to the examination of the titles. All the papers for the transfer of the property have been signed and all that remains to be done is the notification of the trust company that the titles have been accepted. We are accepting some contracts and are figuring on others and will be able to keep our plants very busy."

GUARDS ARE ATTACKED

Stones Hurled at Soldiers on Duty at Shenandoah

A REGIMENT CALLED OUT

In an Effort to Catch Offenders, but They Escaped—Orders Are to Shoot to Kill and Investigate Afterward If Further Attacks Occur

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 4.—The entire Eighth regiment was called to arms during Saturday night as a result of three attacks made by a band of men in ambush who threw stones at the troops now in camp on the plateau outside the town. These attacks are becoming so frequent that Brigadier General Gobin has decided to adopt stern measures to end them. Last night a double guard, supplied with ball cartridges, surrounded the camp, and the sentries were instructed that if Saturday night's stone-throwing is repeated they must shoot to kill and investigate afterwards. One of the attacking party, a Lithuanian, is under arrest.

The first attack, according to Colonel Hoffman, was made at 10:45 o'clock Saturday night. Private Payne, on sentry duty, saw a party of men on the Mahanoy City road, which separates the camp of the Eighth regiment from the Twelfth. He commanded the men to halt and called the corporal of the guard, but before the latter could respond a shower of stones and rocks were thrown at the sentry. One rock struck him on the chest, knocking him down and causing his gun to fall from his hands. He immediately jumped up and fired several shots in the air. As he did so the men ran down the road and were pursued by several strangers.

The outpost, which had been stationed some distance from the camp, heard the shot, and one of the pickets captured one man. The others escaped.

The shooting aroused the whole camp and the Eighth regiment was put under arms and companies B, E and K were immediately thrown in skirmish lines. They beat the underbrush and laurel all around the camp but they could find no one. The regiment was then called to quarters and 15 minutes later another shower of stones was thrown at the stable guard, which is located south of the Eighth regiment. The guard turned out and three men were seen running along the road in the opposite direction from where the outpost was stationed.

Shortly after 3 o'clock Sunday morning the third attack was made and it was of such a nature that the bugler, under orders from Colonel Hoffman, sounded the whole regiment to arms. This time the stable guard was again the object of the mysterious attack. Stones in volleys were thrown at the guard and at the sentries nearby. On account of the laurel, underbrush and the darkness, the soldiers could not see the offenders. However, the sentries fired about a dozen shots into the bushes, but no one was hit.

The noise of the firing stirred up the Twelfth regiment and the governor's troop of cavalry. Colonel Clement of the Twelfth regiment sent out detachments to investigate the trouble as did also Captain Ott of the cavalry. The Eighth regiment, Colonel Hoffman said, was under arms and ready for action in three minutes. Another thorough investigation was made without result, and then the command, after standing in formation for 30 minutes, was called to quarters and not again disturbed.

Colonel Hoffman put Stoponitz, the prisoner, through a searching examination. He said there were only four men in the body. General Gobin says that he will turn Stoponitz over to the civil authorities.

Colonel Hoffman said there is an ugly feeling among many persons against the troops. Reports are being made to him daily of soldiers being elbowed and otherwise annoyed on the streets. It was the intention of Colonel Hoffman to give a parade in the town proper as a compliment to the brigadier general, but owing to Saturday night's affair it was decided that it would be better to have the parade take place within the camp.

Won't Go Back Unless Ordered

Shamokin, Pa., Aug. 4.—At a meeting of the executive board of the United Mine Workers held here reports were received from every local in the district to the effect that not one member of the union has returned to work since the strike and furthermore that they have no intention of doing so unless ordered back to the mines by their officers.

No Change, Says Mitchell

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 4.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers says there is no change in the strike situation. He does not think that an attempt will be made to resume work at any of the collieries this week.

Police Conspicuous by Absence

Ironton, O., Aug. 4.—The strike of the employes of the Camden Inter-State Electric railway almost completely tied up the lines from Guyandotte, W. Va., to Hanging Rock, O., and to intermediate points yesterday. In seven hours all the non-union men were driven from the cars in this city by violence. Cars were held up all over the city until noon, when traffic was suspended. The crowds of union sympathizers had full sway without molestation from the authorities, not a policeman appearing at any of the points of disturbance.

NOBODY WAS HURT

Attempt to Wreck a Lowell House by Use of an Explosive

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 4.—An attempt was made about 3 o'clock Sunday morning to blow up the house of Mrs. Mary Sullivan at 30 Claire street. Thomas Sullivan, son of the woman who owns the house, is under arrest. The police say they have evidence which will make his predicament a serious one, although up to the present time the only charge against him is drunkenness.

A motive for the deed is suggested in the fact that Sullivan wanted to live in the upstairs tenement against his mother's wishes. Dualin was probably the explosive used. The kitchen of the house was badly wrecked and 20 panes of glass in other rooms were broken. The occupants of the house had a bad scare, but no one was hurt.

Striking Weavers' Attitude

Providence, Aug. 4.—The striking weavers at Olneyville held a mass meeting yesterday, at which an offer of a basis of settlement was expected. Instead it was reported that the committee which went to Boston had been offered no concessions for the weavers. The strikers passed resolutions setting forth that "efforts to tamper with the committee could not end the strike; that the weavers know the purpose of the strike, to prevent extension of the two-loom system; that they have been on strike seven months, and, if necessary, will extend the period to seven years.

Letter Worth $25,000 Missing

Boston, Aug. 4.—The Boston postal authorities are much disturbed over the loss of a letter containing $25,000 worth of notes which was mailed in this city for Lowell. On Wednesday, about 11 a. m., the trusted messenger employed by Blake Bros. deposited the letter in the Boston postoffice, and had the letter taken the usual course in the transmission of mail between Boston and Lowell, it should have been delivered on Wednesday afternoon. The letter was not delivered. The chief Inspector of postoffices is trying to trace the missing letter.

Getting After Clement

Barre, Vt., Aug. 4.—The regular Republicans, at a conference Saturday night, bolted the nominations for city committee made last June and elected a new committee of their own. State Attorney Hoar announced that the Republican state committee is at work preparing a set of affidavits from reputable people affirming that "P. W. Clement, in his recent campaign, expended or tried to expend more money in his canvass than he has charged either McCullough or Proctor with doing."

Methodists' Rules Defied

Belfast, Me., Aug. 4.—The controversy over the right of river craft to make Sunday landings at the Northport Methodist campground pier was brought to an acute stage yesterday when Captain Bennett of the steamer Golden Rod, with an excursion party from Bangor, forced a landing by breaking down the pier gates. The excursionists appeared to be royally welcomed by those who are occupying the houses on the grounds.

Set Fires to See Engines Run

Boston, Aug. 4.—A 9-year-old boy will be taken into court on complaint of Fire Marshal Dunn, who says that the youngster has confessed to setting numerous fires in Roxbury district. The shop of the boy's father was partially burned yesterday, and this gave a clue to the incendiary. The boy, whose name is withheld by reason of his youth, delighted to see the fire engines running, and this appears to be his only excuse.

Knife Wound May Kill

Providence, Aug. 4.—A number of Arabians were playing games on Corn street yesterday when a dispute arose and a fight ensued. Alexander Monsor was stabbed in the right breast and thigh by Habib Weeby. The right lung was penetrated and Monsor may die. Weehby is under arrest.

Lost Both Legs and Died

Braintree, Mass., Aug. 4.—Ernest French, 13 years old, who in his dying moments said he belonged in Los Angeles, Cal., was run over by a train at Capen's yesterday, losing both limbs. He died in a short time. He had been riding on the bumpers. It is thought the lad was a runaway.

Baby Drifted Away

Dedham, Mass., Aug. 4.—The 10-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. McMahon was drowned yesterday in a shallow bathing place in Cow Island pond. The parents were out in a boat which capsized, and before the child could be rescued it drifted into deep water and drowned.

SMITH WAS SURPRISED

At His Forced Retirement From the Army

ENDEAVORED TO DO DUTY

Says His Commands Were Not Unduly Severe With Natives of Samar, Who Resorted to Most Barbarous Methods of Warfare at Times

San Francisco, Aug. 4.—General Jacob H. Smith, who returned last Friday from Manila, will spend several days in this city and then go to his home in Portsmouth, O. Speaking on the subject for the first time since his arrival, General Smith said yesterday of his forced retirement from the army:

"It was an unwelcome surprise to me. I naturally supposed that I would receive a reprimand as a result of the verdict of the court martial, but nothing more. I have always tried to do my duty in a conscientious manner and conduct myself as a soldier. I am still in the government's service and not at liberty to discuss recent personal occurrences. I could be as readily court martialled now as if I were not on the retired list.

"I am feeling first rate, never better in my life, in fact. I spent most of the time I was in the islands in and around Samar. I always tried to do what seemed best for the service in both districts. The natives of Luzon seem considerably more civilized than those of the islands. Some of those in Samar are nothing but savages and, of course, cannot be treated like civilized people. They all would resort to most barbarous methods of warfare at times. Instances of the torture and slaughter of American soldiers are very numerous. Any one of my commands knows that they were not unduly severe with the natives. I have always tried to conduct my campaigns according to military regulations.

"There is no use asking me to talk about other things. It would not be military. I am a soldier and take what is coming to me. It is not for me to say whether I deserve it or not. I have done what I thought was right and am ready to settle down in quiet."

Colombian Warriors Still at It

Washington, Aug. 4.—"Battle still being fought desperately." These were the words contained in a dispatch received at the Colombian legation last night in answer to a message asking for information regarding the contest which has been in progress since Tuesday at Agua Dulce, when the Colombian revolutionists began to attack that place. The officials here are anxiously awaiting additional news of this battle. Agua Dulce, though only 75 miles from Panama, is in an inaccessible part of the country for ready communication.

Young Couple's Long Walk

Baltimore, Aug. 4.—To walk from Richmond, Va., to Dayton, O., is the task set by a young couple who left here yesterday. They eloped from Dayton four months ago. They had gone to Richmond, where the young man had secured employment as a conductor on a trolley car. Then came a strike and the husband lost his position. They had very little money and decided to walk to Dayton. The man is 27 years old and his wife 17. They declined to accept transportation to Dayton from the authorities.

A Unique Invention

Baltimore, Aug. 4.—An engine just completed by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, designed for the use of officials in making inspection trips, has a small passenger coach constructed on top of the boiler back of the smoke stack. The seats in the coach are arranged so as to give every one in the car a full view of the track and surrounding country. Passengers enter the car by winding stairs on either side of the front pilot. The engine may be readily run in either direction.

Trolley Passengers Hurt

Elgin, Ills., Aug. 4.—In a street car collision here yesterday two cars were telescoped and several persons severely injured. A switch to a siding, upon which stood three empty cars, was left open and a loaded car crashed into the standing cars. The passengers were imprisoned for nearly an hour and every one was more or less seriously injured.

Out of the Way at Last

Manila, Aug. 4.—Pablo Muros, a bandit who had terrorized the island of Romblon for the past 10 years, has been captured by the native constabulary on the island of Sibuyan. His arms were bound and he was placed in a boat to be conveyed to Rombolon. He sprang overboard, in a dash for liberty, and was drowned.

Socialists Out In Force

Paris, Aug. 4.—The Socialist demonstration yesterday in support of the government in the schools question passed without disorder. A procession of 3000 persons formed and marched, singing Socialist songs and shouting "Down with the priests." An imposing force of police and municipal guards preserved order.

Must Learn to Work

Vienna, Aug. 4.—The Hungarian government intends to introduce a bill in parliament with the object of civilizing the gypsies by compelling a certain number of them to live in villages and learn handicrafts and devote themselves to regular occupations or else enter reformatories.

Auto Driver Jumped In Time

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 4.—As C. L. Symonds was crossing the Boston and Maine railroad at Second street crossing in his automobile about 10 o'clock Saturday night a train bore down upon him. Symonds jumped and escaped injury, but his automobile was demolished.

A Gruesome Find

Bellows Falls, Vt., Aug. 4.—Boys in bathing in Saxton's river, near the confluence with the Connecticut, Saturday night, found a potato sack in which were the bodies of twin infants, boy and girl. The police are awaiting word from the coroner before making an inquiry.

A Gas Stove Fatality

Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 4.—Miss Selena Murzatroyd, aged 24, was working at a gas stove at her home when her clothes caught fire and before the flames could be extinguished her entire body had been burned. She died after a few hours of terrible suffering.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

Drift of Opinion.

☞People who sit in a derailed trolley car and mourn the loss of a few minutes ought instead to be thankful for the fact that more cars don't run off the track and that there are not more serious accidents on the trolley lines. That matters run as smoothly as they do at present is a tribute to the moterman and to the people who build and look after the condition of the roads. The careless handling of the cars would keep the roads piled up with useless and smashed cars all the while.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞The higher prices at home than abroad for products of Amercian labor are illuminating in more respects than one. They show that the wages paid do not cause the high prices at home, otherwise they would forbid the sale of such products abroad. The ability of the manufacturers to compete in foreign markets demonstrates their ability to compete in the home market if the tariff were removed entirely. Where it touches the trust particularly is in showing that domestic competition does not keep down prices, for the very ample reason that it is shut out by combinations powerful enough to control production at home.-Louisville Courier Journal.

☞There ought be a deal of interest on both sides of the water in the outcome of a recent investment of American capital in England. According to the New York Tribune, some New England cotton spinning men were traveling through Lancashire and were shown over several mills. They were convinced that the plants were not producing what might be expected of them under proper methods, and finding upon inquiry that the stocks were selling at a low figure they invested and now have control of the mills, into into which they propose to introduce American machinery and methods. It remains to be seen whether American working men and women are essential to the production of American results. —Haverhill Gazette.

☞Once a year at least the most confirmed pie eater will eat a piece of the sweet he condemns. And that is when the first new green apples come to town. Hardly does he like to partake of them raw for he cannot while doing so keep his mind off the funny man's paragraphs which have boys and that fruit mixed up to form a plot. Apple sauce for breakfast he favors, mildly. But after dinner if there is put before him a piece of pie, less than an hour's distance from the oven, its crust flaky and desirably brown, its inner contents of juicy, tender, new green apples, sweetened wisely, and flavored with a suspicion of nutmeg, he forgets everything for the moment but just that pie. He forgets everything so far indeed as to accept another piece of it is urged upon him especially if there accompanies it some rich, yellow-clotted cream. Apple pie and cheese may be traditional, but green apple pies in midsummer with cream to enhance their value are delicious treasures of the present. Boston Trancript.

OUTLOOK

Wins the First of Quincy Cup Races.

Finished 41 Minutes Ahead.

Excursionist From Quincy Have an Enjoyable Trip.

[Special to the Daily Ledger.]

Marblehead, 1.30 P.M.

The Flashlight was outclassed today in her initial race for the Quincy Yacht Club challenge cup by the Outlook by over 41 minutes.

The wind was light from the south south-east. The course was from Beverly farms to the flag boat off Satan Ledge. Not a dead beat on either leg but a long and short run.

The boats made a flying start at 10.30. The Outlook took the lead and made the first mark without a hitch while the Flashlight had to make a hitch.

The time at the first turn was:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	10	46	45
Flashlight.	10	52	30

Both boats then set spinakers. The utlook increased her lead on this leg rom 5 minutes 44 seconds to 9 minutes. The time at the turn was:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	11	13	15
Flashlight,	11	22	45

On the second round the Outlook gained steadily making the mark without a hitch, while the Flashlight required two hitches.

The turn was made at:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	11	41	45
Flashlight,	12	03	45

Now came the run home. The Outlook finished in a few minutes while the Flashlight required over half an hour. The time at finish:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook.	12	10	30
Flashlight,	12	51	46

The general opinion is that the Flashlight should have more sail.

The crew are in no way disheartened over the result of today's race, as it was well understood that in a light breeze the Outlook stood a better chance of winning.

HEAVY TRAVEL.

Thousands Carried by the Street Cars Sunday.

Seldom has the street railway carried more people than it did Sunday. The morning indications were for a hot day and people begun to flock to seashore early. Long before noon every available car, both open and closed, were in use and more could have been used on some lines.

On the line between Neponset and Nantasket it was necessary to run two and three cars at every trip and on the through line to Brockton two cars were run on every trip. Extra cars were also run on the lines to East Milton and Weymouth Landing.

On the Houghs Neck line the travel was phenominal. A stranger would have thought it was carnival day there by the crowds that were going and coming all day. There was no trip but what two cars were necessary and in some of the trips three, four and five cars were necessary to accommodate the people.

The car barn in City Square looked deserted. There was not a car in the barn and spare conductors and motormen was as scarce as they say coal will be this winter. It was a hard day for the men, but they did their work well.

Nervous Weakness and Paleness

Are often found together, for the reason that where there is nervous weakness there is derangement of the nutritive processes, and the blood loses color.

Peptiron, The New Iron Tonic,

Which is both medicine and food for the nerves and the brain, cures nervous weakness, reddens the lips, cheeks and ears, and brightens the eyes.

It is the only preparation of iron that does not cause constipation, however long taken, nor injure the teeth.

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell. Mass., U. S. A.

KILLED BY CARS.

Ernest French, Aged 13 Years, Run Over by Freight Train.

Ernest French, a lad from Los Angeles Cal., was run over by a freight train at Capen bridge early Sunday morning and had both legs taken off. He was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital, on a special train, where he died. It is supposed that the boy ran away from home and was stealing a ride on the freight train.

The little fellow never lost faith in the doctor's ability to pull through and expressed in many ways his gratitude for their attentions, and he received many of an unusual order at the hospital, where all the corps of physicians took much interest in the case.

The boy's body was well nourished, his muscles well developed and strong, but he was clearly as young as he claimed to be, the physicians declare.

He wore a blue shirt, a pair of canvas overalls, black socks and well worn low cut shoes, with a gray tweed coat that was much too large for him and an old bicycle cap.

Letter from John Evans.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 30, 1902.

We took the Empire state for Buffalo at 12.55 P. M. today. This is the fastest train in this country. The big engine, 2999, that was exhibited at the Pan American, pulled the long train, often at a mile a minute, as easily as if it had been nothing. The New York Central is the best equipped road out. It has all the conveniences that a traveler desires. We went almost flying throughout the most fertile land of central and western New York, and before we hardly realized it, the conductor called out, Buffalo! all change here.

After a lunch we took a trolley car to the new Steel Works. This gigantic plant is situated on the shore of Lake Erie, where once the people of Buffalo used to take steamers for a breathing spell, and where they enjoyed themselves in bathing, etc., the same as we do at Nantasket and Revere. Now they are barred out, for this rich and grabby corporation bought all the land and beach for miles. But in a certain way it is going to benefit the city more than the pleasure resort would. When I heard of this I immediately thought of the foresight of our Commonwealth in reserving our pleasure resorts and parks forever to the people.

Now I am looking at the beautiful buildings that many of your readers visited last summer,—the Pan American buildings. They look grand, although empty. It seems too bad that they must come down. The city thought once of utilizing some of them permanantly, but found it impracticable and now the decree has gone and the workmen are pulling down the great and beautiful electric tower which only a few months ago was the centre of attraction, and commanded the admiration of millions of people. It was a pity that this great undertaking did not pay. The people of Buffalo blame the railroads because they refused to reduce the fares sufficiently until nearly the end.

I want to tell you in our next letter of my impression about the Canadian and American frontier. Also something in regard to Gov. Brock's monument in Victoria park J. E.

ON THE DIAMOND.

Olneyvilles Have Now Heard from the West Quincys.

Surprised at Whipping Received.

The South Quincys Defeated by Hartford A. A.

The West Quincy base ball team with 40 to 50 rooters went to Olneyville Saturday with a strong aggregation and and won a decisive victory, the score being 9 to 1.

The story of the game as told by the Providence Telegram may prove more interesting than an original write up:

Olneyville went down before the West Quincy base ball team at Merino Flats Saturday. It was a defeat in which there was little comfort for the loyal rooters for the home team. They never had any definite notions about West Quincy, where it is located, whether it is a city or a town, or whether it sported a ball team of up-to-date sort, until this game was arranged. They never cared much about all that. In an indefinite sort of way they figured that they were going to get together at the game and experience the gladsome sensations of seeing the home team win. They never entertained any thoughts of a contrary result.

Manager Reiner had been spreading himself to get together a winning combination for Olneyville and that made them expect a victory. He was to have an Eastern League pitcher named Gilroy. They could not seem to remember any particular star of that name in the Eastern League constellation who had been a big winner, but they didn't care about that. Perhaps if Gilroy had been prompt in arriving, the game would have resulted in a victory for Olneyville.

But Gilroy from the Eastern League was late. The game was not started until shortly before 4 o'clock, because the management had no other pitcher at hand. Scouts brought in the sad news that there was no Gilroy and no signs anywhere on the horizon betokening the approch of Gilroy.

Just why Olneyville took the field in starting and allowed West Quincy to take first turn at bat with Olneyville shy on the pitcher may never be known. But it was done and Left Fielder Slade was sent in to pitch. West Quincy had a lovely time in the single inning in which Slade did the twirling.

They played the limit, from a base on balls to a home run, in that first inning, mixing in three singles and two doubles. It produced six runs for West Quincy, and then Gilroy from the Eastern League appeared.

The home partisans hoped to see Olneyville go in and swat away the handicap of six runs, and, with Gilroy in the game, West Quincy should be allowed to do no more scoring, at least not until Olneyville suould have a safe lead.

Gilroy did hold West Quincy down pretty well, for he kept the hits scattered, and only three more runs were scored by the visitors in the remainder of the game.

But Slade's single-inning experience doing the pitching was not the whole thing in the defeat suffered by Olneyville. There was a shyness of robust hitting on the part of the Olneyville batsmen, who were held at four scattered hits and a single run. They would not have scored that run bht for Gilroy's hustling in the sixth inning, when he ran out a scratch hit, stole second, went to third on a sacrifice by Slade and scored on a passed ball. Score:

Quincy vs Orients.

In a very interesting ball game at the Sea street Playground, North Weymouth, on Saturday the Quincys defeated the Orients of Weymouth by the score of five to one.

Much credit is due to pitcher, Sidney Patterson, who made the opposing batsmen look like seeds in a watermelon. He had them completley at his mercy allowing them but three scattered hits and striking out seventeen.

Cullen of the Orients was touched up rather freely, allowing the Quincys thirteen hits one being a three-bagger. Smith at second and Collins behind the bat for the Quincys did some brilliant work; Collins throwing to second being to perfection. Cullen and Mann for the Orients did some good work. Cullen struck out 11 but was unsteady at critical points.

Mann's work at first was all that could be expected. W. Craig and Spargo did some great hitting for the Quincys. Craig made four hits out of four times at the bat. His batting average for the day being 1,000. Spargo got three hits out of four times at the bat one being a three-bagger. The support was all that could be desired from either side.

The game was called in the first part of the ninth owing to the rain. Collins of Quincy being at the bat.

Not Over-Wise.

New Engineer.

The Brockton Enterprise says: Mr Everett Winslow, formerly assistant engineer at the Montello station of the Old Colony Street Railroad Co., and of late chief engineer of the Bridgewater station, has been transferred, and on Wednesday last assumed charge of the power station at Quincy. As this is a more important post, Mr. Winslow is in a way promoted. For the past six months he has been making his home in Bridgewater, but in a few days will move his family to Quincy.

Saturday's Shower.

It was a beautiful shower that visited Quincy late Saturday afternoon. The shower commenced shortly before 5 o'clock and for a time the rain came down in buckets-full turning the streets into running rivers and drenching the unfortunate who happened to get caught without an umbrella. At one time during the heaviest of the shower the sun shone brightly making a very pretty effect. The rain was needed badly by vegetation and it did a great amount of good.

—Benjamin P. Eldridge, ex-superintendent of the Boston police department, is lying critically ill at his home in Dorchester. His death is expected at any moment. A paralytic shock which he suffered yesterday afternoon is responsible for his condition.

Yachts Stolen.

It was reported to the police Sunday morning that the yacht H. A. owned by William Perkins and a tender owned by John Stewart had been stolen from Wollaston beach. The Quincy police notified the Harbor Police of Boston and Marblehead and furnished them with descriptions of the boats.

☞Once they said that the bargain prices established as a concession to women's rapacity were responsible for the great demand for one-cent pieces. Now it seems that the ninety-eight cent and the dollar and forty-nine cent purchase is not wholly responsible for the increased use of pennies, but that the slot machines and the sale of newspapers have helped to make the little coin necessary.—New Bedford Standard.

—William A. Creed, a well known resident of East Weymouth, died at Vassalboro, Me., Friday. He was a member of the firm of Kellogg, Creed Co. manufacturing jewelers of Boston. He was 45 years of age and leaves a widow and two daughters.

THE GIANT'S CAUSEWAY.

Formation and Appearance of This Odd Freak of Nature.

The Giant's causeway is situated at the northern extremity of County Antrim, a short distance from Port Rush, Ireland. It consists of countless hosts of basaltic pillars, varying in shape from a pentagon to an octagon, the average length of each column or pillar being about eighty feet, the whole stacked so closely together that a knife blade could hardly be inserted between them. But the formation of these pillars is not the least wonderful part about them, for, although they may be counted by thousands and tens of thousands, each column is fashioned with a symmetry that suggests a mason's handiwork. Their composition is a perfect fusion of one-half flinty earth, one-quarter lime and clay, one-quarter almost pure iron, each pillar being divided into regular lengths or joints which come together as a perfect, natural ball and socket union.

Although to be found in small detachments imbedded in the cliffs, sands, etc.) for some distance along the shore, the principal aggregations forming the causeway proper consist of three projections or tongues known as little, middle and grand causeways. These singular columns are of different lengths and present an astonishing appearance as they stand, an army of at least 40,000 strong marshaled on the shores of Erin as if ever ready to do battle with the rising tide.

The Word "Joss."

"It's a mistake to suppose that 'joss' is a Chinese word," says a retired ship's carpenter. "I've traveled a good bit in the orient in my time, and among the odds and ends of interesting information I picked up was a knockout of the genuineness of 'joss' as a Chinese word. Chinamen only know 'joss' when they come in contract with Europeans. A Chinese priest that I became chummy with in Hankow told me that there was no such word in Chinese. He explained that the word was a corruption of the Spanish word 'Dios' and had come into use through the missionaries. Many early missionaries, he said, were Spanish priests, and their pronunciation of 'Dios' was speedily corrupted into 'joss' by native tongues and applied to the Chinese deities. It's only on the Chinese seaboard that the word is understood by Chinamen. In the interior, the priest told me, the Celestials had no knowledge of it."—Philadelphia Record.

Street Etiquette.

In meeting a lady in a public thoroughfare in America a gentleman always waits for her bow of recognition before lifting his hat or addressing her. In Europe, however, the contrary is the established rule, it being the gentleman's place to bow first, when, if the lady desires not to recognize him, she ignores his salutations, thus giving the cut direct. It is not good form in any place for a lady to stop a gentleman in the street for the purpose of chatting with him, though she may with perfect propriety pause to speak if he take the initiative. Prolonged talks in the street are not, however, considered good form, even between persons of the same sex, the better plan being to walk on slowly until the conversation is concluded.—Detroit Free Press.

Why Coughing Is Weakening.

The amount of energy expended in coughing is very considerable. Indeed one of the patient statisticians for which Germany is renowned has calculated that a patient who coughs once every quarter of an hour for ten hours expends energy equivalent to 250 units of heat, which may be translated as equivalent to the nourishment contained in three eggs or two glasses of milk. In normal respiration the air is expelled from the chest at the rate of four feet per second, whereas in violent coughing it may attain a velocity of 300 feet.

Considerate.

Paterfamilias—See here! What does this mean? The parlor clock is stopped. Mr. Nicefellow was here last night, as usual, wasn't he?

Daughter—Yes, pa, and I told him what you said about the cost of coal and gas in the parlor every night, and we began to wonder how we could economize for you, and finally Mr. Nicefellow decided that we could at least stop the clock and save wear and tear on the works, you know.

Wholesale.

A Frenchman was teaching in a large school where he had a reputation for making some queer mistakes. One day he was taking a class which was rather disorderly. What with the heat and troublesome boys he was very snappish. Having punished several boys and sent one to the bottom of the class, he at last shouted out in a passion, "Ze whole class go to ze bottom!"

Relatively Speaking.

"He must be put out of the way," said the feudal king. "But, your majesty," protested the lord high executioner, "he is your first cousin." "I know; but I prefer to have him my 'cousin once removed.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Good Advice.

"Help! Help!" came the cry of distress through the midnight stillness.

The policeman in the neighboring doorway stirred uneasily. "Advertise in the want column," he muttered and resumed his nap.—Philadelphia Press.

A celebrated physician declares that the increase in height and weight of Britons and Americans during the last half century is chiefly due to the increased consumption of sugar.

YOUNG RAVENS.

Queer Story of the Changing Color of the Newborn Birds.

I have not learning enough to know whether in the earliest times ravens were accounted "unlucky." If so, why were they chosen from among all the birds of the air for the merciful errand of carrying bread to Elijah in the wilderness? Did they steal it? They are given to theft! Also in the written word we are assured that "God heareth the young ravens when they cry out unto him." And nothing of this is said of doves or of any other white or heavenly kind of bird. An explanation is given in the Egyptian commentary on St. Luke in the Coptic script by Epiphanius, A. D. 368-401. The passage is certainly very curious, and I am permitted to transcribe it here: "Why, then, did the evangelist mention no name among the birds except ravens only? Because the hen raven, having laid her eggs and hatched her young, is wont to fly away and leave them on account of the hue of their color, for when hatched they are red in appearance. Then the Nourisher of all creation sends to them a little swarm of insects, putting it by their nest, and thus the little ravens are fed until the color of their body is, as it were, dyed and becomes black. But after seven days the old ravens return, and, seeing that the bodies of their young have become perfectly like their own, henceforward they take to them and bring them food of their own accord."

It is for naturalists to ascertain whether or no this strange account of the young ravens holds good in our day.—Cornhill Magazine.

Got a Bargain.

Years ago, before the corrupt practices act, when a Scottish parliamentary candidate was canvassing his constituency he called at the house of an aged couple. Finding the old woman alone, he entered into conversation and asked her to use her influence in getting her husband to vote for him. While they were conversing the would be M. P. noticed a kitten playing about on the floor and offered £5 for it. The bargain was struck, and on leaving he again expressed the hope that she would secure her husband's vote for him.

"Weel, sir," answered the woman, "as I said afore, John's a man o' his ain mind and just does what stricks his ain noddle, but at ony rate, sir, you've gotten a real cheap kitten, for yer oppenent was in nae farer gane than yesterday, an he gied me £10 for its brither."—London Answers.

Golf in Old Dutch Picture.

By the seventeenth century golf in Holland had become almost entirely a winter game. The Dutch painters of the period seem to have found a peculiar fascination in winter scenes, with their clear, bright atmosphere and the moving clouds of figures in their various occupations of sledging, skating or golf. As might be expected, many a golfing scene is to be found in pictures by Van de Velde, Van der Neer, Avercamp, Van Goyen and others of their school. Several drawings of this period showing single figures or small groups give perhaps a better idea of the golf of the time.—Connoisseur.

Asking Too Much.

"Some people," remarked the druggist to his clerk, "are frightfully unreasonable."

"Is the man who just left an example?"

"Yes. He wanted me to give him something to cure a cold."

"That's very simple."

"Yes, but he wanted me to give him a guarantee that the medicine wouldn't make him feel worse than the cold did."—Washington Star.

CLAIMS OF REPUBLICANS

Set Forth In Textbook For the Pending Campaign

NO SHIRKING OF DUTY

In the Matter of Enforcing the Anti-Trust Law—Insular Policy, Gold Standard, Oriental Diplomacy and Cuba Are Touched Upon

Washington, Aug. 4.—The Republican textbook for the campaign of 1902 has been issued by the Republican congressional committee. The book, containing 380 pages, makes liberal quotations from the speeches of both McKinley and Roosevelt and also extracts from their messages to congress in support of Republican doctrine. The book reviews the record of the Republican party from its beginning to the present time.

Under the heading "Protection and Prosperity" 81 pages are devoted to advocacy of protection.

Twenty pages are devoted to the trusts and in opening the discussion the book thus describes the attitude of the two parties: "The attitude of the two great parties on the trust question is clearly defined. That of the Democratic party looks to constant agitation, with no restrictive legislation; that of the Republican party to such restriction as will prevent arbitrary advance in prices or reduction in wages through exclusive control, but not the destruction by legislation or injury by fictitious agitation of legitimate enterprise through great manufacturing systems by which production is cheapened, prices of manufactures reduced and permanency of employment assured."

Following this is the record of the Republican party on the trust question. The assertion is made that the share of the trusts in business is comparatively small. The book says: "The trusts have not occupied as great a place in the manufacturing industries as they have in public discussion."

Further along it is asserted: "The Republican administrations of Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt have made a good record in their efforts to execute the anti-trust law. There has been no shirking of duty because of the powerful financial influence behind the trusts. There has been no hesitation for fear the law would not prove effective. These two Republican presidents have recognized no man or corporation as above the law."

The assertion also is made that "Free trade England is the home of trusts."

Ninety-five pages of the publication are devoted to the Philippines and the Republican insular policy, which includes the early stages of the acquisition, the conduct of the army, declarations from prominent people that the Filipinos are not ready for independence and a large portion of Admiral Dewey's testimony before the senate Philippine commission in which he gave his opinion of Aguinaldo.

President Roosevelt's Memorial day address, so far as it refers to the conduct of soldiers in the Philippines, is quoted entire. There also is some discussion of trade with the insular possessions.

More than 20 pages are given to the discussion of the gold standard and an outline of the Republican party on financial questions.

A chapter is given to diplomacy in the Orient and a declaration is made that "McKinley's policy saved China from dismemberment."

The declaration by the late Amos J. Cummings: "When I refuse to vote to protect the lives of American soldiers I hope I shall be paralyzed," heads a chapter which declares that the "Democrats oppose army appropriations."

Reference is made to the repeal of the war taxes. Credit is given the Republican party for the isth nian canal.

Considerable space is given to Cuba and it is asserted "that the groundwork of a republican form of government was laid by the United States under a Republican policy."

Liberal quotations are made from President McKinley's last speech at Buffalo. Reference is made to Republican efforts to revive the American merchant marine. The Fifty-Seventh congress is referred to as "a distinctively business congress," and the principal acts of that congress are mentioned, especial reference being made to the new policy in aid of reclaiming the arid lands of the west. The Republican party is claimed to be the friend of the old soldiers and the pension laws it has enacted are enumerated. The claim is made that rural free delivery is due to Republican legislation and administration.

In the closing pages of the book is a chapter entitled "Democratic harmony."

mony." Reference is made to the Tilden club dinner, there being a quotation from ex-President Cleveland's speech and the comments of William J. Bryan and Henry Watterson upon it and the efforts toward Democratic harmony.

The book is intended for the use of campaign orators and is designed as an exposition of Republican policies generally.

Used Knife and Revolver

El Reno, O. T., Aug. 4.—At their home here yesterday Joseph Podawoski stabbed his wife four times in the back, the blade entering the right lung; stabbed his 12-year-old daughter twice and then shot himself and cut his throat. Podawoski died a few hours later. His wife and daughter will probably die. The man was despondent because of long illness.

"FOR AMUSEMENT"

Clarence Adams' Only Explanation For His Numerous Robberies

Chester, Vt., Aug. 4.—A partial confession by Clarence Adams, the gentleman burglar of this town, yesterday, covering incidents of the past six years, added to the excitement over this case and furnished more material for discussion. Adams had his legs peppered with buckshot one night last week, and, while he claimed that he had been held up on the road and shot, his statements yesterday prove that he got in line with a set gun in the grain mill of Charles Waterman, while trying to make an entrance.

In talking of the burglaries he does not connect them in order, and his partial confession has followed questioning by persons who have claimed goods. The breaks which he has confessed to go back only six years, and he has said that he began breaking into places about 15 years ago. When he was asked why he did these acts he made the single reply: "For amusement." He has nothing else to explain his singular experiences.

Serious Windup of Celebration

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Aug. 4.—By the premature explosion of an immense dynamite bomb, filled with colored figures, which was about to be sent into the sky, just before midnight Saturday night, four persons were seriously injured, scores were knocked down and thousands were thrown into a panic. It was the feast of the Madonna del Anco, and the accident happened while the Italians of Mount Vernon were concluding their celebration with a great display of fireworks.

Righteous Indignation

Mexico City, Aug. 4.—There is much popular indignation here over the formation of a pool among the bakers of this city to raise the price of bread. This trade is in the hands of half a dozen rich Spaniards. The agreement is for two years. The daily papers point out that this agreement is wholly unjustifiable, as the price of wheat has not altered in two years, while the taxes are the same.

Trains Wrecked and Lives Lost

Middletown, N. Y., Aug. 4.—A head-on collision between milk trains yesterday at Hortons resulted in the death of four trainmen, the wrecking of two engines and the ditching of several cars. The trains had orders to pass at Chiloway, one mile north of the wreck, but for some reason one train passed the point and met the other on a curve.

Church Declared Unsafe

Venice, Aug. 4.—A great window in the basilica of the Dominican church of St. John and St. Paul fell in yesterday as the result of having been shaken by a clap of thunder. The church itself has been declared by experts to be in danger of collapse. It contains fine monuments of the most famous doges who lie buried there.

Chinese In South Africa

London, Aug. 4.—The Johannesburg correspondent of The Times strongly protests against the attempts of some influential mining houses to remedy the scarcity of labor by the introduction into the colony of Chinese and declares that if these attempts are seriously pushed the government must intervene.

Life Saved Against His Will

New York, Aug. 4.—Captain Hoppe of the steamer Curityba, from Cuban ports, reports that last Friday Dwight Mitchell, one of the vessel's cabin passengers, who was suffering from melancholia, jumped overboard. A boat was lowered and Mitchell rescued. He is the son of a clergyman of Lebanon, N. H.

King Dines With Family

London, Aug. 4.—Up to Saturday King Edward had taken all his meals alone, but then, for the first time since his recent illness, he lunched and dined with members of the royal family. He now receives numerous visitors daily.

ACCIDENT TO BORALMA

Marred What Was Expected to Be a Famous Trotting Event

Hartford, Aug. 4.—The $40,000 match between Lord Derby and Boralma, which was decided at Charter Oak park, was not worthy to be called a race. The time, 2:08, 2:09½, 2:18 1-4, 3:44, tells in the strongest terms what a fizzle it was.

The match brought an injury and probable retirement to one of the greatest trotters we have ever had—Boralma. He went as long as he could, then grew tired, and cut his rear forward ankle just above the quarter, giving his pastern bone a severe bruise.

Lord Derby lost the first heat by a break when almost to the seven furlong post. It was a good one for him and he caught so well that Marsh was obliged to tap Boralma to get him to the wire first.

The second heat was very easy for Derby, who made no effort until into the stretch. Then he went by Boralma like a through express passing a way train.

Geers could have double distanced Boralma in the third heat, but instead won it by a couple of lengths in 2:18 1-4. The Boston trotter reached forward on the first turn, cut his ankle, and went to a break. This was the last straw, and he was all in. Still he struggled on, but only to make another break in the stretch. Before the fourth heat he was drawn and Derby walked over in 3:44, time never before Leard of in a big race.

Fatal Strike Riot

New York, Aug. 4.—In a riot in Harlem Saturday night Patrick Anjeline, an ironworker, was shot and died a few hours later. His alleged assailant is Martin McLane, who was locked up. The trouble was over a strike. McLane is superintendent for Bartlett, Hayward & Co., ironmasters. When the non-union men quit work Saturday night they received their pay and McLane, when on his way home, was chased and beaten by a crowd of men. McLane shot at his assailants and Anjeline was hit by the second shot. The crowd chased McLane into his own home, breaking in the door, which he had locked. Before they could locate him a squad of police arrived and rescued him.

Mysteries on the America

Christiana, Norway, Aug. 4.—Captain Johannsson of the America, which arrived at Honningsvaag, Norway, Aug. 1, with Evelyn B. Baldwin, the Arctic explorer, on board, has asked to be examined before a maritime court concerning incidents which occurred on board the America during the voyage of the Baldwin-Zeigler Arctic expedition. Another dispatch received here from Tromsoe says the pilot of the America has demanded an inquiry into several mysterious deaths among those on board the vessel which occurred during the voyage.

A Bandit's Nerve

Creston, Ia., Aug. 4.—A stranger resembling Harry Tracy, the bandit, and claiming to be he, came into a barber shop at Afton Saturday and with drawn revolvers compelled the eight occupants in the place to line up against the wall while he took possession of the tools and compelled the barber to shave him. The fellow was wounded in the side and sat upright, nervously watching the door until the barber was through.

Domestic Discord and Death

Boston, Aug. 4.—Domestic troubles which resulted in his wife's leaving him and sueing for separate maintenance led to the suicide of Harry Gould, an insurance agent, yesterday by shooting. Gould called at the house in Roxbury where his wife is stopping, and it is alleged that the door was slammed in his face. He then drew his revolver and fired four shots into his body, one penetrating the heart.

Church Visited by Lightning

New York, Aug. 4.—Lightning struck the Church of Our Lady of Solace at Coney Island yesterday just as Father Brophy had finished celebrating mass. The fluid entered the chancel and knocked down one of the acolytes. Two of the congregation were also hit and knocked unconscious. Father Brophy succeeded in preventing a panic. Those hit by the bolt were finally revived.

Probably a Total Loss

Halifax, Aug. 4.—With her forward compartments filled with water and a great hole in her bottom amid-ships, the big freight steamer Blaamanden, from Hamburg for Philadelphia with a general cargo, lies on the rocks at White Point ledges in a very dangerous position, and will probably prove a total loss. The steamer went on the ledges during a dense fog.

TO GUARD A FUNERAL

Governor's Troop on Duty In Shenandoah Streets

RUMORS OF AN ATTACK

Because Sheriffs Were Relatives of the Dead Man and Attended the Ceremony Failed to Materialize—No Signs of Resumption of Work

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 5.—While the situation in this region is calm the troops encamped here showed more activity yesterday than they have on any day since they were ordered to Shenandoah. They displayed great vigilance, due to the fact that the funeral of Joseph Beddall, who died as a result of injuries received on Wednesday's riot, took place.

Beddall is a brother of Deputy Sheriff Thomas Beddall, who was one of the principal figures in the fight, and a nephew of the sheriff. These men attended the funeral and in consequence there were rumors afloat that they would be attacked. These stories reached brigade headquarters and General Gobin decided to take every precaution possible to prevent any untoward incidents while the funeral was being held, without too great a display of the military force.

A platoon of the governor's troop was stationed on one of the town's principal streets near headquarters and one battalion of infantry of the Twelfth regiment was held in readiness in camp to march on short notice. Provost Marshal Farquhar also kept a watchful eye on matters with a detail of men. The funeral services were held at William Penn, a mile from here. Then the body was escorted by Shenandoah lodge of Masons to Shenandoah cemetery, which is located on a mountain north of the city.

A great crowd lined the sidewalks, the majority of the people being striking mine workers. Nothing occurred to disturb the funeral and after it was over the platoon of cavalry was withdrawn from the town.

Company H of the Twelfth regiment was placed on duty at Indian Ridge colliery of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company near the foreign quarters. This was done so that a town constable could be assisted in case he was attacked while making arrests of persons who were in last week's riot. The services of the soldiers, however, were not needed.

Rumors of a resumption of work in this territory are still in circulation, but there is nothing to indicate that these reports have any foundation whatever. There are in the Shenandoah district 19 collieries operated by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company, which formerly employed 12,000 men, and six collieries owned by the Lehigh Valley Coal and Iron company, which employed 5000 mine workers. Besides these there are several individual collieries.

The mine inspector for this district says that where a coal company desires to place a mine in operation it is compelled by law to notify the mine inspectors of the district in which the mine is located, so that he can make an inspection to see whether it is safe to permit men to enter it. Up to this time, he says, he has not received the slightest intimation that the companies are about to resume work.

Many Dissatisfied Miners

Shamokin, Pa., Aug. 5.—The headquarters of the Ninth district United Mine Workers were visited yesterday by hundreds of men asking for aid. They were accompanied by wives and children. Orders on stores for provisions were issued only to strikers in good standing in the union. A number of applicants who have not worked in the mines for years tried to obtain aid, but were refused, whereupon they threatened to go to work as non-union men.

Hartford Strike Continues

Hartford, Aug. 5.—Settlement of the team drivers' strike, which seemed probable yesterday, has been deferred for the present, President Stockford not being able to obtain the hoped for concessions from the Draymen's association. The detention of the competent non-union men employed by the draymen and refusal to recognize the old employes other than individually seems to be the chief obstacle in the way of a settlement.

Pullman Men on Strike

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Six hundred and fifty blacksmiths, blacksmiths' helpers and body builders in the car shops of the Pullman Palace Car company at Pullman went on strike yesterday for an increase of 50 cents a day. About 400 more are considering the advisability of walking out. Should they do so a general strike is expected. This would affect over 4000 men

WAGON LOAD OF BOOTY

Found In Apartments of Female Crook Captured by Boston Police

Boston, Aug. 5.—In the arrest yesterday of Miss Annie Gilbert, 27 years old, the police consider they have secured one of the most successful and generally feared thieves in the country, for whose arrest warrants are awaiting her in many cities and towns. After the woman was taken into custody her lodgings were searched, and from them were taken a wagonload of valuables, including diamonds, bric-a-brac, silverware, wearing apparel, bicycles and household goods worth many hundreds of dollars.

The woman's plan, the police assert, was to go to employment offices and hire out as a domestic to wealthy families. Then, after staying a week or so, she would suddenly depart, while the families would find their valuables missing. Some of the detectives believe that she was aided in her work by confederates, receiving only a share of the stolen goods, but others are of the opinion that she operated systematically and alone.

The woman was arrested in an employment office, while applying for a situation, and at first denied that she was Annie Gilbert, and also all knowledge of the crimes charged against her.

The property recovered will be placed on exhibition at police headquarters, that it may be identified by the owners.

Laid a Week With Throat Cut

Winsted, Conn., Aug. 5.—Every morning for the past week the dog owned by Louis Weigold of Winchester Centre has left the house of its master and returned again two hours later. Weigold followed the dog yesterday and found, lying near a stone wall, about two miles outside the town, in a secluded spot, his cousin William, with his throat badly gashed, but still breathing. Young Weigold disappeared from home just a week ago yesterday. It is believed that he has been in a serious condition, without food or water, for a week, the dog being his only companion.

Suit Over Bogus Bond

Boston, Aug. 5.—John F. Costello has brought action in $20,000 damages against Charles N. Barnard, a Boston note broker, on the ground that Barnard was responsible for the circulation of a bogus $5000 bond which Costello bought believing to be genuine. Barnard claims that the document purchased by Costello was a copy of the original bond, made by Barnard for record purposes, and that the copy was lost or stolen from his office. The original had been sold to the state.

Big Yacht Cruise Begun

New London, Conn., Aug. 5.—The greeting of Commodore Cass Ledyard to 87 captains on board the flagship Corona yesterday formally opened the New York Yacht club cruise of 1902. Grouped about the flagship at this time were over 100 of the finest yachts in American waters, ranging from palatial steam yachts to little yawls equipped with auxiliary motors. This morning this great fleet got under way for the initial run of the cruise to Newport, a distance of 40 miles.

Spencer Loses Leading Citizen

Spencer, Mass., Aug. 5.—Judge Luther Hill died yesterday, aged 77. He served as postmaster of the town under the Buchanan and Lincoln administrations, was 13 times elected to the board of selectmen, served six terms as representative to the legislature and in 1867 was sent to the senate. He had held the office of trial justice for more than 40 years and for 30 years had been moderator at town meetings.

Three Charges Against Him

Barre, Mass., Aug. 5.—Edward Isherwood, charged with holding up Mrs. James B. Taylor at the point of a gun and demanding her money, breaking and entering the house of E. D. Cole, and of holding up the hired man of C. S. Root, was yesterday arraigned in court and held in $3000 for the superior court at Fitchburg.

Brockton Man Beat Chicagoan

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 5.—John J. Little of this city won two out of three falls, catch-as-catch-can wrestling, from Frank Coleman of Chicago here last night. The stake was $250 a side and the gate. In the third Little picked up Coleman and threw him. Coleman struck on his head and was knocked out.

Eight Wagon Loads of Liquor

Barre, Vt., Aug. 5.—As the result of a raid on the Central Vermont freight station here, the authorities have eight wagonloads of liquor in hand. The seizure includes 70 packages, comprising barrels of lager beer, ale and whiskey.

Scenery All Destroyed

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 5.—Fire completely gutted the stage and settings of the Gaiety theatre last evening. Painters and decorators had been at work inside of the building. All of the scenery will have to be replaced.

Schools Closed by Force

Chambery, France, Aug. 5.—Crowds made demonstrations in two neighboring townships yesterday against commissaries of police who were closing up schools conducted by nuns. The tocsin was rung and the sisters refused to open their doors to the commissaries. The police were eventually obliged to make breaches in the walls of the buildings, whereupon the sisters, amid the cheers of their sympathizers, left by the front doors.

A PREDICTION OF WAR

To Result From German-American Rivalry

AN ADMIRAL'S WARNING

Would Have Army and Navy Prepare For Grave Crisis In Spring of 1907, When Supreme Test of the Monroe Doctrine May Be Forced

Berlin, Aug. 5.—The utterances attributed to Rear Admiral Taylor of the United States navy as to a probable conflict between Germany and the United States in 1907 was printed conspicuously here. The Tageblatt says it requires all the wrongheadedness of a jingo, combined with complete ignorance of European affairs, to imagine that Germany intends to annex the Netherlands. Any German admiral so indiscreet, The Tageblatt continues, would be relieved of his duties immediately.

In a recent dispatch from Washington Rear Admiral Taylor, chief of the bureau of navigation, was credited with having given expression to the ideas referred to in the foregoing message from Berlin. In this Washington dispatch Rear Admiral Taylor was described as thoroughly alive to the steady set of a current which is carrying the United States and Germany along converging lines in many parts of the globe and bringing these two nations into closer rivalry everywhere.

To Rear Admiral Taylor was given credit of warning the leaders of the United States army and navy that preparations must begin at once and be vigorously prosecuted from this time forth for a grave crisis in German-American relations in the spring of 1907. The time of this crisis is fixed coincident with the most efficient sea power Germany now contemplates—the time when the Panama canal will be occupying much attention in this country, when the Cuban republic may have about reached the end of its tether, when Jamaica and other West Indian islands will be prostrate in bankruptcy, when the Netherlands—according to Admiral Taylor's predictions—will have been absorbed by Germany, leaving Curacao and the other Dutch islands of the Caribbean sea as bones of contention to force a supreme test of the Monroe doctrine.

Navy Should Be Strengthened

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Rear Admiral Taylor denies the story wired from Washington to the effect that he believes the United States and Germany may go to war in 1907. When asked if he had set a date for a conflict between the two centuries he said: "Such assertions as have been credited to me are without foundation other than that I have said our sea coast defenses should be well protected against attack by any European power. All naval officers are of this opinion. It would be ridiculous for me to predict a war with any nation. Our navy should be strengthened in readiness for any possible war."

Cardinals Not of One Mind

Rome, Aug. 5.—The Vatican regards the present situation in France arising from the closing of unauthorized congregationist schools as most grave, as it is now believed to be the intention of M. Combes, the French premier, to denounce the concordat. Cardinal Rampolla is said to fear that hostile attitude of the Vatican toward France would lead to graver complications, while some of the cardinals advocate an entire rupture with France.

Pushed Through In a Hurry

London, Aug. 5.—The house of commons sat until 3 o'clock this morning passing estimates amounting to millions of pounds by the now familiar end of the session "guillotine" process, but without the "scenes" which usually accompany wholesale closuring. It is probable that the house will be compelled to sit until next Monday or Tuesday, instead of adjourning at the end of this week.

Drowning at Revere Beach

Boston, Aug. 5.—The first drowning accident in two years on the state reservation at Revere occurred yesterday. The victim was Cornelius J. Rogers, and it appears that he was taken with cramps while swimming, and after going down did not rise.

Victory For Haytian Government

Washington, Aug. 5.—Captain McCrea of the gunboat Machias yesterday cabled the navy department that the outbreak in Hayti is practically over. Captain McCrea requested permission to go to San Juan for coal. This was granted him, and the Machias probably will come north unless there is another outbreak in Hayti.

King Edward's Progress

Cowes, Aug. 5.—King Edward yesterday, for the first time since his illness, walked up and down a flight of stairs without assistance. He also enjoyed a stroll upon the upper promenade deck of the royal yacht, from which a splendid view of the yacht races was obtainable.

Shoe Workers Called Out

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 5.—The Joint Shoe Council yesterday called out 20 finishers and 17 sole fasteners from the shoe factory of C. A. Eaton & Co. The union officials state that the strike has been ordered because the firm discriminated against union men in its employ. They say that the question of wages does not enter into the matter.

Railway Blocked With Ties

Ashland, Ky., Aug. 5.—Not a car on the Camden interstate railway is running in this city. The road is blocked with cross ties between here and Catletsburg. There is some excitement, but no violence except shouts of "scab" and abundance of rotten eggs when attempts are made to operate cars.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Salem's tax rate goes down from $18 to 17.50. That counts for a good deal more than most of Mayor Hurley's speeches. Those speeches have made some of the taxpayers a little ashamed; but they feel proud of a cut of 50 cents in the tax rate.—Boston Advertiser.

☞More and more, I think, gentlemen, as one grows older, one comes to feel that it is not the sphere in which we perform the duty; it is the doing the duty counts. I do not care what the man's occupation is or what his standing is. If he does his duty well he is a good citizen, and if he does not he is not a good citizen. Compared with that fundamental question the other questions as to the particular position he occupies in public life, social, financial, any other way, those questions sink into absolute insignificance.—President Roosevelt.

☞A personal item in a newspaper about a man who is forging rapidly ahead in business announces that he is "only 45 years old." There is, than, hope for all of us. Only 45? We recall that in the old days in the country towns a man at 45, or at least at 50, was looked upon with much the same veneration that was accorded the "oldest inhabitant." Now, in the cities at least, a man of that age is not regarded as much more than a husky youth who is getting his growth and is likely to be quite a man if he keeps on growing. People no longer grow old in the large centres of population till their health fails them. Then they age faster than any people on all this broad earth.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞We have always found it difficult to predict, concerning any new mode of educating boys and girls, that it would or would not be a failure. We have never been able to say of any plan for the political emancipation of women that it would or would not bring a train of good or evil consequences. We have believed, and find daily justification for the belief, that the only way to discover what is good for man and woman in education, in domestic life, and in political action and privilege, is to discuss with perfect freedom all plans that the ingenious can devise, and then depend upon the will of the majority for their execution. What all women or the majority of all women want in the way of political privilege they will have. Whatever all women or the majority of women want the majority of men will agree to give them.—Christian Register.

Street Department.

Commissioner Knowlton's department is busy just at present having several street jobs under way. Among the work he is now doing is the rebuilding of Chubbuck and Grove streets and the resurfacing of Rawson road and the streets in that vicinity. He is also at work building the State road on Quincy avenue. When this job is completed the steep grade near Newcomb square will be considerably lowered.

FLASHLIGHT

Gets a Leg for the Quincy Challenge Cup.

The Outlook Was Disabled at Start.

The Quincy Boat Went Over the Course Alone.

Marblehead 1.30 P. M.

The Quincy Challenge cup race scheduled for today was a disappointment to the large fleet of pleasure yachts which gathered in Manchester Harbor.

The wind was fresh from the northeast, and the conditions were good for a fine race.

The course was a triangular one, which gave the boats two runs and a reach home.

Both boats came to the line promptly at the gun, and just as they crossed the line the Outlook parted the goose-neck of her main boom, and was out of the race.

The Flashlight sailed round the course alone, and was awarded the race, but it was an empty victory. No time was taken.

It is reported that the Outlook asked the judges for half an hour in which to repair damages, but the representative of the Quincy Yacht club protested, and time was refused.

On the last leg the Outlook came out and overhauled the Flashlight, and will undoubtedly give the Quincy boat a hard rub in the series.

Another race at 10.15 tomorrow.

COMMODORE SHEPPARD.

Accident.

Washington street continues prominent for accidents. Shortly after 7 P. M., Monday, a young son of Thomas Elcock left McGann's stable, driving John H. Dinegan's Rockaway coupe. In going toward Canal street the boy became frightened, and frighiened the horse, which increased his speed. Near Cherry avenue the coupe was overturned and young Elcock received a cut on the back of the head and other injuries. The horse kicked like a gattling gun and soon cleared himself. He was stopped on South Walnut street. The carriage was considerably damaged.

Music for H. H. Faxon.

H. H. Faxon of Quincy makes no bones of expressing his satisfaction over Judge Avery's censure of the Quincy Board of Health, which has been in office since February and has gone along all this time without adopting rules for the preservation of good sanitary conditions in that city.

Mr. Faxon for many years has had an honorary appointment under the Quincy Boards of Health, but the present board refused to give him an appointment and even intimated that his attention to sanitation was not as close as it should be in a public citizen of so much prominence.

When an alleged offender against the sanitary rules of Quincy was brought up before Judge Avery, the latter discovered that Quincy had no sanitary rules this year, the Board of Health having adopted none. The judge's vigorous comments on such neglect was music in the ears of the Faxon faction.—Boston Advertiser.

BADLY DAMAGED

House on Penn Street Struck by Lightning.

Eleven People Were in the House.

Chimney Demolished—Board Ripped Off---Underpining Moved.

A double house at Nos. 44 and 46 Penn street owned by William Dell of West Quincy was singled out by the lightning Monday afternoon. It is occupied by two families an Italian named Antonio Cellucci and also Oscar B. Ellis.

Almost all the damage was done in the southerly side occupied by the former. Half of his front chimney was demolished, that which was outside is scattered all over the yard and street, and more bricks are strewn about the attic.

The lightning evidently followed down the rafters to the front of the house ripping up the roof boards two or three inches. The window sash and glass in the attic were smashed.

In the front chamber the window casing was ripped off and considerable of the plastering. Near the floor, two or three of the outside boards were ripped off about two feet. The window glass was broken in this chamber and also in the second chamber, and a slight fire was started on the window casing in the latter.

In the front room on the first floor, there is a large hole over the front window, and the glass was smashed. A large picture hung on the front wall was thrown across the room onto a bed without smashing the glass.

In the second room were eleven people at supper, Mr. and Mrs. Cellucci, and three children and six men boarders. All yelled as if they had been seriously injured but none were hurt not even rendered unconscious.

In the cellar some large pieces of underpinning were moved and two pieces of stone weighing 5 and 10 pounds were clipped off and hurled about ten feet. One tub set inside of another and the outside one was demolished while the inside one was unhurt. The lightning evidently entered the ground in the cellar.

Mrs. Ellis and four little children went to the house of a neighbor, Mrs. Robertson, just before the storm broke.

Several neighbors were shocked including Mrs. William H. Warner and children, Mrs. John Troup and Mrs. William Kelley.

The damage to the house struck was $200 to $300.

An alarm was given from Box 39 but was unnecessary.

Large numbers visited the scene Monday evening and this morning.

Heavy Storm.

A heavy thunder shower passed over Quincy between 5 and 6 Monday afternoon, striking at least two buildings. As the 5.15 train from Boston was passing under the Hancock street bridge at Atlantic a tree nearby was struck and the passengers thought at first it was their car. Considerable rain fell.

Storm Elsewhere.

A barn of Benjamin W. Shaw at South Weymouth was struck and burned, together with five or six horses. Loss $5000.

The singular part of it was that the family of Melvin Bates near by did not know of the fire until after the storm.

Five buildings were struck at Rockand, also a barn at Stoughton.

MONDAY'S RACE.

Boston Dailies Agree Conditions Were Not Favorable.

All agree that the wind of Monday was too light for a satisfactory yacht race, and if there was any luck it favored the Outlook.

The time of the Flashlight on each leg will be of interest perhaps, the second round requiring nearly twenty-seven more minutes than the first round, and the leeward run in one case took more time than windward:

PRESS COMMENTS.

The Journal says: A comparison of the yachts as they sailed in yesterday's race cannot be made intelligently. There must at least be wind enough to keep the yachts moving in order to get anything like a correct line on them. Outlook seemed to point up better at times and footed faster than her rival, but the wind was fluky and favored the leading boat almost always. Outlook carried her crew on the lee rail at times, and also carried them amidships. Flashlight did not carry her crew other than to leeward at any stage of the race. It is only fair to say that the excursion fleet caused more or less annoyance to Flashlight by breaking up the little wind that existed. They followed the Outlook most of the time.

The Herald says: The race was sailed in a very light breeze from the southeast, which hardly ruffled the surface of the sea, which had a mirror-like look, with catspaws here and there. The conditions, however, were even and the contest was fair, and the outcome must have been disappointing to the hopes of those who had placed confidence in the ability of the Flashlight to defeat the Outlook. However, in justice to the Quincy boat, she was expected to be at her poorest in conditions like those that prevailed yesterday morning, while the Outlook in her trials with the Hades had proved herself to be very fast in light airs. What the Flashlight will be able to do in a breeze with the Outlook is yet to be determined, although the performance of the latter in all sorts of conditions proves her to be a very fast boat on all points of sailing and especially to windward. Her performance in this respect surprised her most ardent admirers and the win is most encouraging to the Manchester yachtsmen, who now think that the cup is already as good as safe. However, today's race will be over a triangular course, with only one leg to windward, and with a good breeze the Flashlight is expected to give a better performance, especially in reaching.

The Globe says: The Outlook drove a long nail for the Manchester yacht club Monday in its efforts to retain possession of the Quincy challenge cup, defeating the challenger, Flashlight of the Quincy yacht club, 41m. 16s. over a nine-mile course. The Manchester people are confident, as a result of this performanee, of the fleet machine designed by W. Starling Burgess, that the trophy will remain with them for another year at least. Quincy's yachtmen, however, while greatly surprised at the showing of their representative, are still hopeful that there will be a different story to tell before the series is ended. Probably no one in the large number who witnessed the race from steam and sailing craft was prepared for such a wonderful exhibition of light air ability on the part of the Outlook. Her victory was conceded 10 minutes after the start, for she not only pointed higher than her opponent, but footed faster. The result was that their courses out to the windward mark diverged with every foot sailed until by the time the Outlook rounded, the Flashlight was a strong quarter of a mile to leeward and far in the rear.

The Post says: Forty-one minutes behind the victorious Outlook, the Quincy cup challenger Flashlight, upon which the hopes of Quincy yachtsmen that the trophy might be brought home were hung, loafed across the finish line off Misery Island at the end of the first cup race on Monday. When the Manchester boat finished the Flashlight was a good two miles astern. The margin by which the Outlook won was too large to be decisive. Bad luck was the most prominent feature of the Flashlight's defeat. All the favors of the fickle god of the winds were showered upon the leading boat. When there was a breeze she caught it first and held it longest. If the wind shifted in direction it helped the Outlook and bothered the Flashlight. If there was any wash of power launches or wind broken by the innumerable sailboats which crowded the course the Flashlight got it. Not once did luck come her way from the time the preparatory signal sounded until she drifted across the finish line, the worst defeated boat in the history of the Quincy cup. There was just enough of boat to boat sailing, however, to show that the Outlook is the superior boat in a light wind chance. On the first few hitches to windward after the start the Outlook established a commanding lead, working to weather of the Quincy boat in astonishing fashion. The Outlook's backers feel that the cup is safe, unless by some freak of fortune the Flashlight finds her weather for three days.

The Flashlight went over the course with the 21-footers in the Manchester open race yesterday afternoon, and every boat in the restricted 21-ft. cabin class was in praying mood that she was not of them, says the Boston Advertiser. Commenting on the Quincy cup race of the morning, the Advertiser says: One great advantage about the Outlook is that she has 400 ft. more sail area, and this additional driving power is tremendous. That she should beat the Flashlight by over 40 min. is unjustified by other conditions and today, Quincy cup enthusiasts hope the Flashlight will have luck with her. Yesterday it was all against her. Today will be more of a real test of the comparative merits of the boats than yesterday. It stands to reason there is not 40 min. difference between the boats.

NEW WARSHIPS.

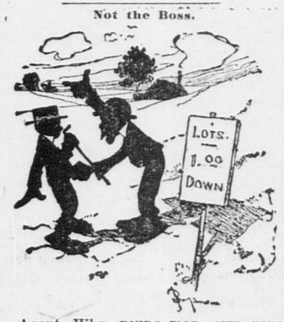

Will Be Built on Government Plans---Competition Wanted.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: Secretary Moody intends to prevent, if possible, any combination of ship builders for the division of the building program authorized at the last session of Congress.

He leaves the single battleship to be constructed at some private yard to the free competition of the various yards, only seven of which will bid on this ship, namely, the Bath (Me.) Company, the Fore River (Mass.), Cramps, Newport News, Union Iron Works, the Trigg Company of Richmond and the New York Ship Building Company.

A new feature in the call for bids is that the vessels of all classes will be built on plans prepared by the department. Heretofore the firms have usually submitted their own plans, in addition to presenting bids upon those of the government.

A VISION OF LIFE

[Original.]

I stood on a bridge, beneath me gently flowing water, on one side a declivity, on the other a meadow wearing that shade of pale green which belongs to early spring. Across the meadow above a clump of oaks was a spire. The sun was peeping above the horizon, tinting the fields, the hills and the water a soft yellow glow, while the cross on the spire shone like burnished gold. Birds were on the wing hunting a breakfast, now and again sending forth a soft, musical piping. The sky was a pale azure. There was not even one fleecy cloud floating over its great, domelike surface.

Suddenly from a clock in the church spire came a stroke, a harmonious blending of chords that I had never heard in earthly music. It seemed to me a fitting signal from heaven that a child had been born, a new soul launched on earth. While its entrancing melody was still filling my senses with a freshness that recalled the pulse of childhood a little girl emerged from the oaks which hid the spire and came quickly along the road leading to the bridge. She held in her hand a few wild flowers and stopped now and again to gather more. Coming on to the bridge, she passed me, tossing her ringlets and turning upon me a pair of blue eyes full of interest and wonder.

"Is it not a beautiful world?" she said. "I am going to the hills. They are so mellow. I shall love to play on their grassy slopes."

She did not stop, and as she receded the last word seemed to come from an infinite distance.

The scene changed. Where there had been fields there were dwellings. Trees had been cut away. Others that had been mere sprouts were casting broad shadows. The sun stood high in the heavens.

The clock in the spire struck 2.

There was a deeper, more intense melody in the strokes than before, both joyous and solemn, giving me an impression of great happiness blended with a sense of great responsibilities. The sound had not died away before there came from the hills a merry shout, and I saw a wedding procession moving toward me. The bride walked alone, followed by her family and friends. Reaching the bridge, she crossed it with a firm step, and when she turned her eyes to me I saw in them traces of the look I had seen in the little girl and knew that she was the same. She passed on, with her retinue, and was soon lost in the oaks that hid the church. Then there was a hush, and the strains of a wedding march burst forth. In another moment variegated tints were to be seen moving through openings in the trees. The married pair, followed by their friends, had left the church and were going to their home.

The clock struck 3.

This time there was a mellow sound in its tones suggestive of autumn. On the hills hung purple grapes. Orchards were ruddy with fruits. Here and there flushed a scarlet leaf. The sun stood midway between the meridian and the horizon.

Up the road came two figures, a woman and a youth. She was resting her hand affectionately on his shoulder, and it was plain that he was her son. The earnestness accompanying the words she was speaking to him, the sad look on her face, mingled with pride and hope, told me that she was sending him out into the world to play his part in life. At the bridge she embraced him, and he went on, while she stood looking after him. Turning, she fixed her eye momentarily on me, then slowly retraced her steps and was soon shut out of sight by the oaks. I had seen her for the third time.

A single stroke broke upon midnight, a wail, a dirge, an essence of infinite misery. I looked about me and through the darkness saw that it was winter. The stream beneath me was congealed. The hills were white with snow. As the vibration of the bell came on they lost their melancholy, swelling slowly into strains of heavenly music. As the first stroke had signalized the birth of a child, this was a greeting to a soul that had trodden its earthly path and was being welcomed in heaven. I looked up into the dark vault studded with stars, and fancy showed me one more picture, a face in which were blended the child, the bride, the mother. In it there was neither youth nor age, but a sexless spirit of rare beauty, flickering like an aurora.

It faded, and I saw my bedroom lighted by the faint glow of a night lamp. The vibration of the stroke I had last heard ended in the tones of the tiny bell of my repeater under my pillow. Reaching for the watch, I touched a spring, and it struck the hour of 1.

I had gone to bed and to sleep at a few minutes after midnight. In less than an hour the musical strokes of my watch had given me in four pictures a vision of an entire life. The first stroke at the quarter had brought me the child hastening to enjoy the beauties of the world. Two strokes for the half had painted her entering upon the duties of life at her marriage. Three strokes for the third quarter had shown her starting a new generation over the course she had trodden in maturity. The fourth stroke for 1 o'clock was a funeral bell changing into a welcome to a new existence.

There is no such thing as time. Between the strokes of midnight and 1 o'clock had I dreamed for an hour or lived a lifetime?

F. A. MITCHEL.

HE TOOK THE CAKE.

A Story of William Black, the Novelist, and Mary Anderson.

One time when Mary Anderson was playing in "The Winter's Tale" in Dublin William Black, the novelist, who was very intimate with Miss Anderson and her family, insisted upon assuming the part of one of the supers, who was dressed as a very old man with a venerable beard and locks that fell upon his shoulders. When Black went upon the stage in this disguise, he walked about among his fellow supers with unceasing restlessness and, judging by the wild motions of his arms, seemed to be addressing to each in turn an impassioned harangue. The audience began to wonder who the new actor was and what on earth he was doing in a play in which neither Shakespeare nor the stage managers ever intended him to appear.

Presently came the time when it was the business of Perdita to distribute flowers among the peasants, among whom Black had his place. Miss Anderson, carrying on the practical jokes of the family circle, had prepared a surprise for this moment, and, having distributed flowers among the less favored supers, she handed to Black a large cake crowned with a wreath of laurel, saying as she did so, "You take it," in allusion to his triumphs in the contests of wits at the supper table.

To her consternation, Black showed that he was quite prepared to carry out the jest, for, taking the cake from the hands of Perdita, he immediately distributed it in substantial portions to his hungry fellow supers, who, finding it to be of excellent quality, began to munch it greedily under the eyes of the house.—Exchange.

A Kicking Horse.

A writer in the National Stockman gives this method of treating a kicking horse: Put on him a strong surcingle and crupper. Have one ring where the check hook comes and one eight inches lower on the right side. Now run a strap from the lower ring to the crupper about where the hip strap passes through. Now take a five-eighths inch rope fifteen feet long, fasten it to the ring at the check and then hook through the ring in the halter and back through the lower ring in the surcingle. Strap up his left fore foot. This should be done in a straw yard. Now you have him ready. Take your rope and go ahead of him a few feet, a little to the right, and begin to pull. Hold him steady and let him fight this hard, but keep drawing his head to his side and he will go down to the ground. Now you have him where you want him. Show him you can do as you please with him. Keep him there until he gives up, if it takes all day. Show him you can handle him.

The Butcher Bird's Larder.

It is possible that the butcher bird's "curious and cruel habit" of impaling various creatures upon hedge thorn is his way of supporting his wife during her period of seclusion. Of many species the female is fed by the male on the nest, but the butcher bird's prey consists often of creatures which are too large to be eaten at a mouthful. Even if the male could always drag these carcasses to the nest it is obvious that the female could not eat them there; so the "larder" may have been hit upon as a happy device to get over the difficulty, the female flitting thither to help herself whenever she is hungry.—Country Life.

Easy Sailing.

Visitor—I would like to get you to teach me to sail a boat.

Boatman—Sail a boat? Why, it's easy as swimmin'. Jest grasp the main sheet with one hand an' the tiller with the other, an' if a flaw strikes ease up or bring 'er to an' loose the halyards, but look out fer the gaff an' boom or the hull thing'll be in the water an' ye'll be upset; but if the wind is steady y'r all right, onless y'r too slow in luffin', 'cause then ye'll be upset sure. Jump right in an' try it; but, remember, whatever ye do, don't jibe!"

Bees and Ants.

Bees will place their honeycombs in any place regularly or irregularly shaped, and when they come to corners and angles they seem to stop and consider. Then they vary the shape of the cell, so that the space is exactly filled. It could not be done more satisfactorily if the whole thing had been worked out on paper beforehand. Ants make hard and smooth roads and drive tunnels compared to which man's efforts in making such things are insignificant. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Trifles.

There is no such thing in life as a trifle; every event and action, however unimportant seemingly, has a root below and a branch above which twist and turn into some other root and branch, making part of the great substance on and in which we live. Its presence and absence both affect the entire mass of which it forms a part.—Exchange.

As He Called It.

"But why," asked the man who always wants to know—"why do you call that little jump you make from a tower into the water 'a leap for life?' They tell me it is not at all dangerous."

"Well," replied the "artist," "don't I make me livin' by it?"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Counting on It.

Eminent Philanthropist—I know it, Amanda. It will be $10 when it gets into the anecdote column.—Chicago Tribune.

The German Soldier's Wage.

One of the peculiarities about the military service in Germany is the paternal interest that the officers are required to take in the frugality of the men. The pay of the soldier is only 6 cents a day, but the army regulations guard it jealously. Each man is expected to keep his money in a little bag suspended from a string around his neck, and any officer during inspection may demand to have the bags opened and their contents shown. If it be found that a soldier is spending his pay too freely—think of that, with the pay at so low a mark—he is reprimanded and punished. He is compelled to make his pay cover his expenses.

CATHOLICS ARE SECURE

No Proselytism In Schools In the Philippines

NO INJUSTICE TO FRIARS

Will Be Wrought by America In Bringing About Changes Demanded by the Times—Personal Liberty In No Wise Interfered With

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 5.—"The Embarkation Day" reunion of the Knights of Columbus came to an end last night with a banquet. There were 500 covers. The orator of the evening was William M. Byrne, United States attorney for Delaware, whose topic was "Some Issues of the Hour."

Mr. Byrne gave a vigorous discourse on the relations of church and state in the Philippines. He spoke of the action of the Knights of Columbus in the protesting against the misrepresentation of Catholic interests in certain recent publications.

Mr. Byrne stated that it was not true that numerous Protestant clergymen were employed as public school teachers in the Philippine islands and showed that there are about 3500 Catholic teachers in the Philippine schools. In addition to the influence of these Catholic teachers instruction in the Catholic religion may be given in the school buildings three days every week.

"Surely," said Mr. Byrne, "with Catholic teachers outnumbering the Protestants three to one, with the young Filipino already grounded in the practices of the Catholic faith, with an adequate allowance of time to Catholic priests to give these schoolchildren in the school rooms instruction in the doctrines of the Catholic religion, it betrays a somewhat conscious weakness of our cause if we frantically accuse the government of systematic proselytism because a small proportion of the teachers in the Philippines happen to be Protestants."

Having shown the safety of Catholicism under the school system in the Philippines, Mr. Byrne proceeded to discuss the transition of the church there from a state aided institution to one free, independent and untrammelled.

"While American Catholics," said he, "will welcome the separation of their church in the exercise of her spiritual functions, the personnel of the governing class in the Philippines must not be so constituted as to produce in the mind of the Filipino the conviction that he must be a Protestant in order to become a member of the ruling class. In selecting its governing class in the Philippines, the American government must not make such selection as may operate as a Protestant propaganda among a people exclusively Roman Catholics.

"Much has been said in this country about the Spanish friars in the Philippines, but happily the American government has expressly disclaimed any participation in the accusations made against our religious orders there.

"Unlike England, unlike Spain, unlike Mexico, unlike most every other country dealing with the question of monastic possessions, the American government proposes that the change demanded by the times shall work no injustice to the friars. The condition of affairs in the Philippines demands that the friars no longer be extensive landlords. The boundless acres ought to be divided into small homestead lots for the benefit of the Filipino people, who would thus receive that impulse to industry and frugality arising from individual ownership of property. This is identical in principle with the Irish land problem, and what American Catholic can complain if the American government voluntarily does for the Catholic Filipino what the Irish Catholic bishops demand shall be done by the English government for the Irish peasants?

"Will the American government deal fairly with the Spanish friar in the change of ownership not so much desired by it as demanded by the necessities of the times?

"Ask Bishop Blenk of Porto Rico whether the American government has not restored to him church property taken without compensation by their Catholic majesties of Spain.

"Let us hope that the just and equitable conduct of the American government respecting church property in Cuba may not be reversed by the Cuban congress. Secretary Root declared that the desire of the government is for the 'voluntary withdrawal' of the friars, arranged not by the government but by the religious superiors of the friars themselves. Is there anything like expulsion or interference with personal liberty in that program? Regarding the personal liberty of the friars I would not be here a moment in support of any program that was punitive of those religious men. While I accede to the present condition of the separation of church and state prevailing in the American republic and will not import my church into state, I insist that the state shall keep out of my church."

Tracy Again Seen

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 5.—Harry Tracy, the outlaw, is believed to be hiding in the Rock lake country west of Harrington. He was seen three miles north of Odessa last evening, travelling north.

Root at Austrian Resort

Carlsbad, Aug. 5.—Elihu Root, United States secretary of war, arrived here yesterday. He intends to make a considerable stay in Carlsbad.

HANNA'S AMBITION

Declared to Be the Bringing of Capital and Labor Nearer Together

Cleveland, Aug. 5.—Nearly 800 employes of the Cleveland City Railway company, of which Senator Hanna is president, met last night and presented Senator Hanna with a valuable cane. In acknowledging the gift Senator Hanna expressed his sincere thanks to his employes for the gift and said it brought with it the satisfaction of knowing that so large a number of men in his employ have been satisfied with his career as an employer.

Concerning the anthracite strike, Senator Hanna said: "When the great anthracite strike was threatening, our Civic Federation worked hard for weeks to avert it—to bring men and employers together, but failed. After it was on we worked hard to settle it, but failed. However, in that matter it is my personal satisfaction to know that the statement that I made at that time that the men would not go back on their word has been kept and that a sympathetic strike has been averted.

"I believe in manhood. Labor organizations are not things which can be sued for breach of contract. They have no corporate existence. But I would rather have the promise of a laboring man, backed only by his sense of honor and his manhood, than any agreement which might be enforced by law.

"Manhood and integrity are the same, whether they belong to a miner, a street railway man or a boss. For myself I have no higher ambition than to work for the purpose of bringing capital and labor nearer together and to live out my life in Cleveland, where I have lived for 52 years."

A Tammany Split

New York, Aug. 5.—Borough President Haffen has broken with the triumvirs, according to The Tribune, and will not be at the much advertised conference at Tammany Hall today. Neither will Mr. Murphy, the leading man at the wigwam. He is believed to be at Saratoga. The breaking up of the triumvirate The Tribune says has not been entirely unexpected. It has been an advisory committee that has failed to get together in the interest of Tammany Hall, according to politicians.

After Something Besides Funds

London, Aug. 5.—The Hague correspondent of The Daily Mail says that it is becoming increasingly difficult to combat the generally accepted Dutch theory that the Boer leaders here are campaigning toward the ultimate subversion of British rule in South Africa. Several prominent Boer leaders are assembling here and nobody believes their story that their mission is to collect funds for Boer widows.

A See-Saw Running Match

New York, Aug. 5.—Ernie Hjertberg, former amateur long-distance champion, defeated Peter Hegelman, the veteran six-day pedestrian, in a 15-mile race here last night. He won by nearly one quarter of a mile, going the distance in one hour, 38 minutes. The contest was a see-saw affair in which each man led at various distances.

Must Leave Academy

Washington, Aug. 5.—President Roosevelt yesterday returned the papers in the case of Alexander G. Pendleton, Jr., to the war department, with an endorsement confirming the sentence of dismissal. Pendleton was a first-class cadet at West Point and was found guilty of hazing. He was appointed from Arizona.

Brigands Up to Old Tricks

Vienna, Aug. 5.—The Politische Correspondenz reports a serious state of anarchy in the Vilayet of Monastir, European Turkey, due to the activity of Albanian brigands, who are said to be murdering and mutilating people in order to extort ransoms and under the pretence of seeking Macedonian revolutionists.

THE PRISONER

Who escapes from jail is by no means free. He is under the ban of the law and punishment is written over against his name. Soon or late he will be caught again and bear added punishment for his short escape from his cell.

Those who by the use of palliative powders and tablets escape for a time from the sufferings of dyspepsia are in the same condition as the escaped prisoner. Soon or late they will go back to the old condition and pay an added penalty for temporary release.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Its cures are lasting.

"For about two years I suffered from a very obstinate case of dyspepsia," writes R. E. Secord, Esq., of 13 Eastern Ave., Toronto, Ontario. "I tried a great number of remedies without success. I finally lost faith in them all. I was so far gone that I could not bear any solid food on my stomach for a long time; felt melancholy and depressed. Could not sleep or follow my occupation (tinsmith). Some four months ago a friend recommended your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' After a week's treatment I had derived so much benefit that I continued the medicine. I have taken three bottles and am convinced it has in my case accomplished a permanent cure. I can conscientiously recommend it to the thousands of dyspeptics throughout the land."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

WILL PROBE CHARGES

Brodrick Says Government Will Not Overlook the Remount Scandals

London, Aug. 5.—The remount scandals were re-aired in the house of commons yesterday in the course of a discussion of the army estimates and the item of transportation and remounts. Sir Charles Dilke suggested the publication of the evidence bearing on the remount scandals obtained from the United States and Argentina. John P. Nolan condemned the loose system of contracts under which such dreadful scandals were possible, while several other members of the house deprecated the method of purchasing horses through middlemen.

War Secretary Brodrick, replying, said members overlooked the difficulties in the way of providing 150,000 horses in an emergency. He said the government intended to probe the charges, but that he believed the remount officers had been harshly judged.

In answer to the war secretary, John Dillon asserted that Brodrick's vague speech only strengthened his suspicions, and he pointed out, as an instance of this, that the government had not denied that Major Studdert had profited largely through buying horses in Ireland under a false name.

Mr. Brodrick denied that he had no disposition to push the Studdert and other investigations and said the government would go to the fullest extremes to convict the perpetrators of conspiracy and fraud.

The vote on the item of transportation and remount was agreed to.

Colombian Revolutionists Fleeing

Panama, Aug. 5.—Telegraphic communication with San Carlos was reestablished yesterday and General Salazar received a telegram saying that some revolutionary officers belonging to the forces under General Herrera had passed San Carlos in flight. They reported the defeat of the revolutionists at Agua Dulce. This news has not been confirmed and details and further information are awaited.

Beyond Hospital Relief

Minneapolis, Aug. 5.—War department orders for the removal of Sergeant Major Blair from Fort Snelling to the army hospital at Fort Bayard, N. M., reached here yesterday an hour after the death of the soldier from consumption. Sergeant Major Blair's home was at Providence. He served in the march of the allied army to the relief of Pekin and distinguished himself in the Philippine campaign.

Probably Beaten to Death

St. John, Aug. 5.—The body of William Doherty, aged about 20, was found yesterday carefully concealed in a clump of bushes just beyond Rockwood Park. A wound in the side, probably made by a bullet, four or five other wounds in the face and head, evidently caused by jabs with a sharp instrument, together with the fact of the concealment of the corpse, point to foul play.

Don Cameron In an Accident

Glasgow, Aug. 5.—While former United States Senator Don Cameron and wife were driving yesterday from Fort William to Inverlochy castle, Lochaber, which he has leased for the summer, the horses shied and the carriage collided with a cart. Mr. and Mrs. Cameron were thrown out, and the senator was severely injured in the groin. Mrs. Cameron was not hurt.

Convicts Enjoyed a Circus

Jackson, Mich., Aug. 5.—A circus performance was given in the state prison yard yesterday for the convicts. A ring was made and a full acrobatic performance that lasted an hour and a half was given. The performance was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience of prisoners.

PEACE STILL PREVAILS

With Undercurrent of Anxiety In Coal Region

TROOPS KEPT IN READINESS

To Instantly Respond to Call For Their Services—Arrest and Commitment to Jail of Men Who Participated In Fatal Riot at Shenandoah

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 6.—The peace of this troop-protected town remains unbroken. The unsettled feeling which has been apparent for the last few days, however, continues. Yesterday was a lively day at brigade headquarters, where all the staff officers were kept busy in connection with the movements of the troops and in keeping in touch with the situation in the entire county. There were many rumors of trouble, but excepting at Girardville, where a workman was shot and slightly injured, nothing of a serious nature occurred anywhere.

The brigadier general was unusually alert, and kept soldiers in readiness for instant use all day long. Many stories of threatened trouble reached him, but he was able in every instance to run them down without sending out a detail of men. Officers around headquarters feel that the tension is increasing and would not be surprised if some of the troops now in camp here were sent into the surrounding region. The brigadier general says he will not send for additional men until there is need for them. It is not unlikely, however, that a battery and another troop of cavalry will be in the field by the end of the week.

Probably the most important development in the Shenandoah region yesterday was the arrest and commitment to the county jail of two wounded Lithuanians who participated in the riot of last Wednesday. The arrest was attended with considerable show of military force, they being taken into custody by constables who were surrounded by a platoon of infantrymen and were taken through the streets under a strong guard. Each had been shot in the foot during the riot and was unable to walk. They were located in a boarding house in the heart of the foreign quarter of the town. The constables feared that trouble would ensue if they attempted to make the arrest themselves and upon their suggestion General Gobin sent a platoon to protect them.

The soldiers formed a line around the house and the two Lithuanians were carried from the house and placed in an open wagon. By this time a crowd of foreigners had gathered around the soldiers and followed them and the prisoners to the office of Squire Shoemaker, where the prisoners were given a hearing. While the hearing was in progress the platoon kept the crowd some distance from the place. The Lithuanians, along with a fellow countryman, who was arrested late Saturday night on the charge of being a participant in the riot, were then arraigned. The principal witness was Thomas R. Beddall, a deputy sheriff, who was in the riot. He identified the men and testified to having deliberately shot Klimovitz and Zukowski, wounding them in the feet. The three men were then held in $2000 bail each, and in default they were taken to the jail at Pottsville.

Not to Be Operated at Present

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 6.—General Manager Luther of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company says that no efforts are to be made at present to operate any of the collieries. Officials of the company held a meeting yesterday and decided that it would be inexpedient to resume operations at Indian Ridge colliery at Shenandoah. It had been rumored that the company would attempt to work this mine under the protection of the troops.

Non-Union Men to Receive Aid

Shamokin, Pa., Aug. 6.—From the Ninth United Mine Workers' district headquarters yesterday it was announced that hereafter all miners, whether they belong to the union or not, will receive financial aid. Idle non-union men have in the past week been threatening to go to work unless they were aided by the union to buy provisions.

Concessions to Strikers

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 6.—The Camden Interstate street railway strike, which has been on since Sunday last, was declared off yesterday and all the cars on the Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia divisions are being operated on schedule time by union crews. The company agrees to recognize the union and reinstate all men discharged without cause. The restoration of men discharged for cause is to be left for arbitration.

MEETINGS ALL PUBLIC

President Will Make a Few Speeches While In New England

Boston, Aug. 6.—The secretary of the president, Mr. Cortelyou, has telegraphed that the president will reach Boston on Aug. 23, and will go at once to Nahant, where he will pass Sunday with Senator Lodge. Aug. 25 the president will go to Newport, making 10-minute stops at Taunton and Fall River. He will return from Newport the same day, reaching Boston about 8 o'clock, where he will be received by the governor, the mayor and the Boston congressmen.

Aug. 26 he will go to New Hampshire, making 15-minute stops at Lowell, South Lawrence and Haverhill.

After a week in Maine and New Hampshire, he will return to Massachusetts Sept. 1, reaching Northfield late that afternoon. He will pass the night at Northfield. Sept. 2 he will stop at Millers Falls, Fitchburg, Worcester, Springfield and Westfield. He will leave Westfield either for Dalton, where it is hoped he may pass the night with Governor Crane, or for New Haven.

Mr. Cortelyou states that it is the president's desire that there shall be no public receptions held anywhere. The president will speak briefly at the various points indicated, but will hold no receptions of any kind. Any meeting which the president has an opportunity to address will be strictly non-partisan and wholly public.

Blackmar Sued For $25,000

Boston, Aug. 6.—The Advertiser says that General W. W. Blackmar, a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress in the Twelfth district, has been sued by J. R. McCreedy for $25,000 alleged damages as the outcome of a meeting of the two men in the lobby of the state house last May. Blackmar's property in Hingham has been attached. It is alleged by the plaintiff that Blackmar made an assault upon him, "pulling his nose with violence" and striking him several blows.

Wants to Go to Congress

Boston, Aug. 6.—Eugene N. Foss, prominent in business and financial circles of Boston, has declared his candidacy for the Republican nomination for congress in the new Eleventh district. With his declaration comes a statement of his political views, chief of which is his belief in reciprocity with Canada. Mr. Foss says he will strive for nomination even against Melvin O. Adams, whose name also has been mentioned for the honor in the new district.

Muriel Led the Way

Newport, R. I., Aug. 6—The initial run of the New York Yacht club fleet from New London to this port was on the whole satisfactory, the light, fluky weather at the start and the soft breezes along the Rhode Island shore being forgotten in the splendid seven-mile dash in an increasing southeaster at the finish. Charles Smithier's schooner Muriel led the fleet practically all the way, and covered the distance, 37 miles, in a trifle under 5 3-4 hours.

In Behalf of Rogers

Boston, Aug. 6.—A delegation of negro citizens visited the governor's office at the state house yesterday for the purpose of protesting against the granting of requisition papers in the case of Monroe Rogers, the negro who is under arrest at Brockton, and is wanted in Durham, N. C., on the charge of arson. The hearing on the question of granting the requisition papers will probably take place today before the aatorney general.

Alleged Theft of Bank Funds

Boston, Aug. 6.—Walter O. Nickerson, assistant bookkeeper in the National Suffolk bank of Boston, is under arrest, charged with having embezzled about $600 from that institution. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Fiske, to whom he signified a desire to consult counsel. The commissioner put the case over, fixing bail at $3000. Nickerson lives in Newton, and moves in good society.

Stole While a Solon

Chester, Vt., Aug. 6.—Clarence Adams, the gentleman burglar of this town, has not added to his confession of Sunday, but more stolen goods have been found in his house. A bunch of whips was found in a chamber, and Adams says he took them from the store of E. J. Davis. A box of neckties, found yesterday, he got in Montpelier while he represented the town in the legislature.

Railway Employes Seek Damages

Marlboro, Mass., Aug. 6.—Felix Sawyer and William Moore, the conductor and motorman respectively of the electric car that was in collision with another car on the Hudson branch of the Marlboro street railway on June 28 last, began suit yesterday against the railroad company for injuries alleged to have been received in the accident. Each plaintiff places his ad damnum at $15,000.

A BLOW TO PROHIBITION.

Samuel F. Pearson, the Parson Sheriff of Portland, Maine, Is Dead.

Portland, Me., Aug. 6.—Sheriff Samuel F. Pearson died at Poland at 12:15 this morning. With him at the time of his death were his daughter, Miss Evangeline, and Dr. Norcross. The sheriff became unconscious last Sunday evening and did not recover from that condition.

Sheriff Pearson went to Poland five weeks ago. The worry incident to his office had caused him to fail rapidly in health and he went away for a rest. Three weeks ago lightning struck the hotel and the excitement incident to this affair affected his heart and his illness thereafter assumed a critical form. He failed rapidly since then.

Mr. Pearson was born in Roxbury (Boston) July 16, 1841. In 1862 he enlisted for three years in the Fortieth Massachusetts regiment and served with distinction until the close of the war, being twice offered commissions and refusing to accept them. After the close of his army career he engaged in the chandlery and ship store business.

In 1872 Mr. Pearson came to Portland and immediately after his conversion engaged in temperance reform work and in 1878 he established a mission work in Portland. The work at once took on an impetus which led to an increasing interest and the successful maintenance of the mission, with Mr. Pearson at its head, a position he had practically held up to the date of his death. Mr. Pearson was ordained to the ministry Aug. 6, 1879.

Murder Attributed to Gamblers

Des Moines, Aug. 6.—Isaac Finkelstein, whose crusade closed the eight gambling houses in Des Moines, two weeks ago, was murdered last night. A man stepped out of the shadow of an alley and struck him a blow over the head with a heavy stick and crushed his skull. The murder is supposed to have resulted from Finkelstein's action in prosecuting the gamblers. He did not object to public gambling, but wanted the city to receive a revenue from it, he said, and when the police did not raid the houses he filed complaints with the sheriff. The resultant raids proved so expensive the gamblers closed their places.

Another Trace of Tracy

Davenport, Wash., Aug. 6.—Harry Tracy spent all day Monday at the home of L. B. Eddy, a rancher on Lake Creek, 3½ miles south of Fellows. The outlaw made his appearance Sunday evening and took possession of the place. Pinned to the well on a farm about a mile north of Odessa, where, apparently, Tracy had watered his horses, the following note was found yesterday: "To whom it may concern: Tell Mr. Cudihee to take a tumble and let me alone, or I will fix him plenty. I will be on my way to Wyoming. If your horses are any good would swap withyou. Thanks for a cool drink. Harry Tracy."

Great Shipments of Currency

Washington, Aug. 6.—Treasurer Roberts says that this year's shipments of currency to the west and south for moving the crops show a marked advance on those of last year at the same date. Down to the close of July they amount to $5,795,000. Last year the total to the same date was only $3,900,000. The August shipments last year were $3,450,000. If the same proportion of increase prevails this year, it will bring the aggregate up by Sept. 1 to about $11,000,000.

Would Leave It to the Pope

Philadelphia, Aug. 6.—Archbishop Ryan, who returned yesterday from his visit to President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, says: "My position in regard to the friars in the Philippines is not that they should be expelled, but they should be left to the pope to be exchanged for members of their orders of other nationalities, especially Americans, when this can be effected."

Firmin Makes Himself President

Washington, Aug. 6.—The state department has received a cablegram from Minister Powell at Port au Prince, Hayti, stating that General Firmin, on Aug. 4, set up a new government and denominated it the provisional government of Artibonite and Northwest, and proclaimed himself president and appointed cabinet officers.

The Galician Strikes

Vienna, Aug. 6.—The strikes in Galicia have led to 23 encounters between strikers and troops in the last two days. In one case 13 persons were killed and 118 wounded. In another case 200 persons were killed or wounded.

Fever-Stricken Sailors

St. John, Aug. 6.—Bark Birnam Wood, from Rio de Janeiro, with yellow fever aboard, has arrived at quarantine. There were nine cases, three deaths resulting.

Apostolic Delegate at Manila

Rome, Aug. 6.—Italia announces that Mgr. Guidi, at present in the office of the papal secretary of state, has been appointed apostolic delegate at Manila.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Arthur Stone, aged 50, hanged himself from a beam in the barn of his father at Machias, Me. It is thought he was temporarily insane.

John D. Campbell of Holyoke, Mass., was run over by a wagon at New York and received injuries which resulted in his death.

While playing in the street near his home at Brockton, Mass., Ira Coolidge, 2 years old, was struck by a watering cart and sustained a fracture of the skull. He died soon after.

Contracts have been signed for a large addition to the Austin Hall law school at Harvard university for which $200,000 will be expended.

Railway Refuses Requests

New York, Aug. 6.—Vice President Skitt of the Manhattan elevated railway yesterday gave to a committee that called upon him, representing the 500 engineers and motormen of the road, refusal of their request for a nine-hour day and other concessions. When the company's reply became known among the men there was immediate talk of strike.

Change of Heart and Mind

Munich, Aug. 6.—The betrothal of Archduchess Marie Annonciade of Austria and Duke Siegfried of Bavaria, which was announced from Vienna, June 15, has been broken off by mutual consent.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

New Advertisements Today.

Wanted—Housekeeper.

Good Afternoon.

Perhaps there is sunshine at Crescent Park, where the grocers reign today.

Some of the Boston dailies have not heard that the Quincy cup race of Tuesday was declared off that day.

With the yachtsmen off to the funeral of the Flashlight and the grocers off for their annual outing, it is rather quiet in Quincy today.

Sea street should be promptly reopened to travel. It is entirely unnecessary to completely shut off travel between Quincy and Houghs Neck.

Braintree needs curbing; her tax rate is $21.60 this year. But Braintree is not accumulating a large debt for current expenses as is Quincy and the cities of the Commonwealth.

Many doubt if under similar circumstances the skipper of the Outlook would have suggested that a race won be declared off. He may have an opportunity before the series is over.

The New England tour of President Roosevelt this month includes a visit to many Massachusetts cities, including Fall River, Taunton, Boston, Lynn, Nahant, Lowell, Haverhill, Lawrence, Northfield, Millers Falls, Fitchburg, Worcester, Springfield, Westfield, Dalton, and Pittsfield. Quincy, the birthplace and burial place of two Presidents should have extended an invitation to visit, or at least a request to tarry for a few minutes.

It should be evident from the course of ex-Commodore H. M. Faxon, in declining an empty honor, that the Quincy Yacht Club desires to win back the cup on merit or not at all. In the series of 1898 the Quincy defender was dismasted in one race, which was awarded to the Duchess. In 1899 the Heiress was disabled in one race, but the conditions were different then as there were five boats entered. In 1900 the Pompano was twice disabled but there were three and four boats in these races. If Quincy cannot win this year it can try again.

Not only the temperance people but the poor of Maine have lost a great friend in the death of Sheriff Pearson, and it will be almost impossible to fill his place. One so active, sincere, sturdy and honest. Mr. Pearson was converted during the reform club movement which spread rapidly in New England in the 70s, and has been a worker for temperance ever since, by prayer, by ballot, as a preacher and lecturer and as sheriff of Cumberland county. He spoke in Quincy to a very large audience during the last No-License campaign.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The secretary of the treasury is quoted as having said, in speaking of the new rule which permits home comers from foreign lands to bring in one hundred dollars' worth of souvenirs and newly purchased goods, that the government of this great country does not mean to be small, but that neither does it intend to relax its vigilance over the customs laws. There will be no discrimination in regard to the articles that may come in duty free with the traveler. They may be things to waar or curios or a bale of hay. All things will look alike to the customs inspectors until they monnt beyond the hundred dollar mark.—New Bedford Standard.

OUTLOOK AGAIN

Wins Second of the Quincy Cup Races.

Was 2 Minutes Ahead of Flashlight.

The Contest a Closer One Than Monday.

[Special to the Daily Ledger.]

Marblehead, 1.20 P. M. — Today's race for the Quincy Challenge Cup was close from start to finish, but the Outlook had a little the best of it from the start.

The Flashlight was defeated by less than three minutes, which raises the hopes of the Quincy enthusiasts considerably and foretells good races to the finish.

The course today was the triangular one as yesterday, giving a run, a beat and a reach. The wind was from the south.

The Flashlight was 3 minutes and 15 seconds behind at the first mark the time being:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	10	49	00
Flashlight.	10	52	15

The Outlook gained 12 seconds only on the beat to the second mark, the time being:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	11	34	48
Flashlight.	11	42	15

The Flashlight gained nearly a minute on the reach home, and would have won had it been longer. The time was:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	12	42	15
Flashlight.	12	44	46

The Outlook won the race by 2 minutes and 31 seconds. This makes two victories for the Outlook to none for the Flashlight.

At least one more race is necessary, and should the Flashlight win tomorrow still another on Friday will be needed.

Commodore Sheppard who witnessed the race, was much pleased with the result, and thinks there is yet a chance for the Quincy challenger.

Today's Excursionists.

The steam yacht Josephine made her last excursion today to the Quincy Challenge cup races off Manchester. The stormy weather and east wind have made it unpleasant and reduced the number of excursionists. Between 30 and 40 left Quincy Point at 7.20 this morning, and 20 to 30 were expected to board the yacht at Marblehead.

In today's party in addition to those who go every day were: Mr. and Mrs Joseph Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. James Edwards, Mrs. John Hall, Charles Miller and the Misses Miller, Moreton Swallow, Col. Anderson, H. H. Hill, William J. Parker, Frank Nightingale, J. J. Kenily and others.

A Quincy Man.

News comes from Clinton that the police have determined beyond question that the body which was discovered near the west towers on the Winston Bros.' contract Sunday in a badly decomposed condition, was that of Michael Dougherty of Quincy.

The man came to Clinton on Monday, July 28, with a companion named James Erving, both looking for work on the artificial pond on the Nathaniel Thayer estate in Lancaster. Erving was given a position, but Dougherty failed to get work, but was promised a position later. The men boarded at the residence of Daniel Matthews in Clinton.

Thursday morning, July 31, Dougherty left the house to purchase medicine, having been sick during the night. He did not buy any medicine but walked two miles to the reservoir, laid down in the brush on the embankment and died. The 25 cents which had been loaned him for the medicine was found in his pocket.

Three days later the body was found. The police have been able to find out but little about the man. The body has been interred in Woodlawn cemetery.

Fire at Norfolk Downs.

The alarm from Box 153 at 8.35 Tuesday night was for a lively blaze in the brass foundry of Daniel J. Nyhan near the railroad track at Norfolk Downs. The fire was discovered by Inspector McKay and Officer Lyons who were on Farrington street.

Their attention was attracted to an unusually bright light at the foundry which upon investigation they found to be a rousing fire. Officer Lyons ran to the fire alarm box and Inspector McKay drove to Mr. Nyhan's house and notified him.

By the time the department arrived the fire had worked through the rear end and also the roof of the building. Well directed streams soon had the fire under control. It evidently started from the furnace, as it was in that vicinity in was burning when the officers discovered it. The loss was $150.

GROCERS' OUTING.

Off Today for Their Annual Excursion.

With the Old Colony Association.

Crescent Park R. I., the Objective Point.

The poor ye always have with you, but not always the grocers. There is one day in the year when the grocers and provision dealers put up their shutters and take a sneak out of town. Today is that day.

The place where they usually come to life on these occasions is at Crescent Park, R. I., where in smooth Sunday clothes, and with a store cigar between their teeth they walk about like English lords. But they are not. They are plain, every day Americans, of a kind that are not only a credit to the city but to the country.

While the stores in Quincy as a rule have a kind of Sunday look, it is not all dead for the dry goods and drug stores are open and they furnish a little life. Most everybody gets the idea, however, that on Grocers' Day everything shuts up, even the gossiping neighbor, but it is not so.

However, the grocers are off for a good time, and everybody hopes that they will have so good a time, that tomorrow they will forget all about sanding the sugar and jacking up the price of sole-leather steak.

The train on which the party journeyed to the Park pulled into Quincy at 8.05. It had eleven cars and it is expected that everyone of those cars will be full. Do not misunderstand this and read it that anything but the cars will be full, of happy grocers, their wives, sweethearts and clerks.

The local committee were at station some minutes before the train arrived, and saw that all were supplied with tickets, badges, etc.

The bats, balls and other paraphenalia used in the game of base ball were stowed away in the baggage car. It is probable that by the time the two games are over the bats will be reduced to splinters and the balls to yarn. As for the mits, catchers cage, etc., they will probably be presented to the Historical society or Daughters of Revolution for preservation, for sometime they will be value-less relics.

Galen always takes in these grocer's outings, and he is with them today. He has a stock of new songs on hand such as "On the Bridge at Midnight", "Star Spangled Banner" and others, with which he will try to entertain. He always does his part toward making the day a pleasant one, even at the dinner table.

That the party will have a great time goes without saying and with the dinner and sports, time will not hang heavily on their hands.

A TRUE SPORTSMAN.

H. M. Faxon Has Race of Tuesday Called Off.

Did Not Care for Hollow Victory.

Press Comments on the Work of the Flashlight.

After the judges decided on Tuesday that the race was on, the Flashlight was put on her course and her spinaker broken out. The work of the challenger is reported by the Journal as follows:

She headed for Archers, and after she had gotten outside took in her spinnaker and reached for the mark. It was then a hard thrash to the next mark, which was off Red Can Buoy No. 2. Shortly after turning Archers the wind increased in strength and it was decided not to take any unnecessary risk. A reef was therefore taken in the main sail and it was one of the prettiest pieces of work during the day, occupying only about 15 seconds. The patent reefing points were used, and during the time that she was being reefed she was held on her course. She was not put into the wind in the manner that she would have been if there had been a competitor in the race.

She was eased over the whole course in order to avoid a possible strain. The sea was very lumpy and the ease with which the Flashlight rode was remarked by all. Her lee rail was well down all the time and the sharp corner of her bow cut through the seas like a knife. Yet she did not spank at all. If she went up she came down easily and gracefully. From windward her underbody was visible at times. She sailed on every foot of her long overhang. After beating out to the mark off the Red Can Buoy, she had a fine reach home, holding well until under the land. A few minutes before reaching finish line, the Outlook appeared having had the Hades's gooseneck placed in position where she broke her own. She mixed it up with the Flashlight for a few minutes until the line was crossed.

The Boston Advertiser says: Although the Flashlight had no competitor to press her she sailed a brilliant race, and the clever manner in which she was handled indicates that the races ahead for the Quincy cup will be close and exciting. No truer sportsman is there in the local yachting world than H. M. Faxon of Quincy, skipper of the Quincy cup challenger, and nowhere has this been evidenced more conspicuously than last evening, when Mr. Faxon called up A. H. Higginson, owner of the Outlook, the Quincy cup defender, and told him over the 'phone, that in view of the fact that the Outlook was disabled at the very start of yesterday morning's race, even before the Outlook had crossed the starting line, he did not wish the race to be considered as one of the Quincy cup series.

The Herald said: The accident was unfortunate, for there was a splendid breeze blowing from the northeast and there was a good sea ontside, which would have tested the qualities of the boats, and which did give the Flashlight a good pounding in her lonely run over the course. She went through it all right, however. The Manchester yachtsmen are confident that their boat will win easily in any weather, while the Quincy contingent think that the Flashlight will give a good account of herself in a breeze, and that had the boats actually raced yesterday it would have been a close contest. The Flashlight certainly moved faster than in Monday's race. One thing is very noticeable, however. She is not as quick in stays as the Outlook, and she cannot go to windward with her. What she would do reaching in conditions like existed yesterday is a question which will only be decided when the boats have it out in the same wind and water.

Now that the Outlook has been selected as the Manchester defender of the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup, and the Flashlight of Quincy as a challenger, the cup race series of 1902 will be much the same as in 1898, boat against boat instead of three or four against a single defender as in 1899 and 1900.

As will be seen by the summary below the Quincy 21-footers, the Recruit and the Hostess, successfully defenued the cdp against all comers, but in 1900 the Hostess was forced to surrender it to the Lookout of Manchester, an "improved Hostess."

Letter from Mr. Evans—No 3.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.,
July 31st.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Today we took a trip from Buffalo on the New York Central to Niagara Falls. It being a fine day we enjoyed every minute of it. Of course nearly all the readers of the Ledger have either seen or read enough about this grand and magnificent cataract to be almost as familiar with it as they are with Bunker Hill monument or the Boston Common. But then of all the millions of visitors that look at this the greatest of nature's marvels it does not impress any two alike. The more you study and the longer you look at it from different points of view the more sublime and powerful it seems. The importance of the great falls, rapids, and gorge of the Niagara river cannot be overestimated.

There is no doubt but that this beautiful scenery will for all time to come perpetuate its own fame as the foremost pleasure resort of America.

The city of Niagara has changed most wonderful since I visited it in 1891. Then it was only an insignificant town, with the park fenced in and closed to the public at certain times. Now you find one of the cleanest and liveliest cities of its size in the world; with the park beautiful and open to the people forever.

When I looked at this marvelous growth and activity on this side of the river, and then take a glance at the quiet, inactive, almost sorrowful look on the other, only across the bridge, my heart almost bursted in Thanksgiving, that I am an American.

Oh! the difference between the land of the free and the home of the brave from any and all lands. You will find it the same along the whole frontier. When in Detroit on our side I saw one of the finest cities on the continent but across the river in Canada they have the little town of Windsor and what few people there are in it must take the ferry boat every day to Detroit to earn their daily bread. Why don't they see a hole through a ladder and join us on our grand, glorious and enterprising march.

Next will be about Brock's monument, etc. J. E.

Aaron Holbrook Dead.

Aaron Holbrook, a widely known citizen of Holbrook died Tuesday at his residence on North Franklin street after an illness covering a period of eight months. Death was the result of a cancerous growth in the stomach. Deceased was 72 years of age and is survived by a widow, and a brother, Farrington Holbrook also of Holbrook, who is now the only survivor of a family of six brothers.

Aaron Holbrook was born a short distance from his late residence when that section was a part of the town of Braintree, and up to about 16 years ago was employed in the factory of the Thayer string company holding a leading position in that establishment for years. Since that time he has been engaged in farming on a small scale.

Waltham Valuation.

The Assessors of Waltham report the valuation as follows: Real estate, $15,621,000; personal, $5,346,556. total, $20,967,556. The increase in valuation is $486,111, divided as follows: Real estate, $309.500; personal, $179,611. The number of assessed polls is 6667, an increase of 155. Tax rate, $16.50, a decrease of ten cents.

A Question of Privilege.

Mistress (after a heated discussion with argumentative cook)—Are you the mistress of this house, I should like to know?

Cook—No, ma'am, I ain't, but—

Mistress (triumphantly)—Then don't talk like an idiot!

NO CARRIAGE WAY

Between Quincy Square and Houghs Neck.

Sewer Work Blocks the Street.

Might Be Serious in Case of a Fire at Beach.

Just at present Houghs Neck is cut off from the world as far as carriages are concerned, and the only way to reach the beach from Quincy is to walk or take the electric cars. The reason for this is that the contractor for the Metropolitan sewer has closed up Sea street between the Willows and the corner of Manet avenue. Up to Tuesday it was possible to drive down by using the private way known as Manet avenue. This is now blocked. A heavily loaded stone team attempted to use it and got stuck. The only way to get out was to unload, and two large blocks of granite were dumped in the street, making the block complete.

Commissioner Knowlton was appealed to. He says that Manet avenue is a private way and he cannot expend any city money in making it passable. He also says that the Metropolitan sewer Commissioners have a right to close any street, but that they must provide a way for teams to get through. He has notified the commission of the condition of affairs, and also that he should hold them responsibe for any damage that might arise. It is probable, therefore, that some way for teams to pass will be provided. Should the services of the fire department be required at Houghs Neck while all streets are blocked it would be a serious matter and someone would probably be called upon for a suit for damages.

True Sportsmanship.

Henry M. Faxon is winning plaudits even though he may fail to recapture the Quincy cup. The Herald says editorally: We think that all yachtsmen will agree with us that Mr. H. M. Faxon, the owner of the Flashlight, has taken the proper course in refusing to accept the race which his boat won yesterday, when the Outlook was disabled by an accident. Had the break happened after the boats had crossed the line and were on their course, it would be very very different. Boats must be built to stand the racket, and break-downs mean defeats.

In the recent matches for the America's cup there was an agreement between the owners of the competing yachts that, in case of accident to one boat, the other was to take her walkover — that is, both owners bound themselves to take races won by accidents, and when, in the scond race between the Columbia and the Shamrock, the latter boat lost her topmast, there was nothing for the Columbia to do but sail the race and score a win against her crippled antagonist.

In the Quincy cup races there is no such agreement, and really the Outlook never started, though technically the race is on after the preparatory signal. In the circumstances the best possible plan to follow was to call the race off. The judges could not do this; in fact, no one could but Mr. Faxon. That he decided to do so it is not surprising to those who know from experience what a fair and sportsmanlike yachtsman Mr. Faxon is. Had the shoe been on the other foot, we have not the slightest doubt that Mr. Higginson would have followed the same generous course that Mr. Faxon has adopted.

Rockland, Me., Aug. 6.—Dr. Benjamin Williams of the board of health, who has attended cases of contagious diseases in the city for 55 days and rendered a bill of $1100, which the city government reduced to $825, has refused to accept the sum and yesterday tendered his resignation.

AMOY'S GRAVEYARDS.

The City and the Cemeteries Are Hopelessly Intermingled.

The city of Amoy is on an island of the same name. For upward of 1,000 years it has been an important trading place. The population of the island is estimated at over 400,000, and it has been said that there are something like 5,000,000 dead bodies packed in its soil. For many centuries the hillsides of the city have been used as a burying ground. Now the city and the cemetery are hopelessly mixed. The graves touch one another at every point and form a solid white surface of rock, brick, porcelain and cement, covering more than 1,000,000 square feet. Near one of the josshouses 30,000 bodies are buried vertically to save space. They stand on a plot of ground of as many feet square.

The wells from which the city draws its water supply are shallow and are sunk on the edge of graveyards and even among the tombs themselves. The water is muddy and is colored by the perpetual turning up of the soil. It has no sewers, and the streets vary from two feet to six feet in width. No wheeled vehicle can use them. Here and there is an open place or plaza, dug out so as to be a huge receptacle into which the streets discharge their refuse. Filth abounds, and its twin sister, disease, flourishes. The atmosphere is laden with noxious smells, and the burial of the dead goes on at an alarming rate.

Lord Spencer's Bargain.

Lord Spencer of Althorp, one of the greatest of book collectors, was at home only in his own field. One day in browsing about Bond street, London, he went into the shop of a dealer in bric-a-brac. The dealer, who knew him by sight, said persuasively:

"Here is a fine bit of pottery which your lordship really ought to have, and you shall have it very cheap—only 2 guineas."

So Lord Spencer bought it and took it home and set it in a high place. One day a connoisseur of china paid him a visit, and Lord Spencer showed his bargain.

"What did you give for it?" asked the connoisseur.

"Two guineas," answered Spencer rather proudly.

"H'm!" said the connoisseur. "At that price the marmalade should have been included."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, that precious piece of yours is nothing more nor less than a shilling marmalade pot with a green thistle painted on it."

Not Over-Wise.

NAVY IS SHORT-HANDED

Recruiting Officers to Scour South and West

EFFORTS TO GET STRIKERS

Proved of No Avail In the Mining Regions—Those Who Applied For Enlistment Were Unable to Pass the Required Physical Examination

Washington, Aug. 6.—The United States wants recruits for the navy and cannot get them. The male population appears to be employed at better wages than can be offered. It is proposed to send recruiting officers through the south and west, with the hope of enlisting men who have been employed in the wheat harvest and are now temporarily idle. It is estimated that at least 2000 men could easily be placed.

Reports from the recruiting stations during the early spring and summer were most unsatisfactory. When the coal strike assumed such proportions that a prolonged lockout was assured, the department sent recruiting officers into the anthracite district, believing that the unemployed miners would embrace the opportunity of entering the service. They were disappointed. Most of the miners were almost as much opposed to service in the navy as to army and militia service, and they not only refused themselves to enlist, but discouraged their friends.

A somewhat surprising discovery was made by the recruiting officers, however. The accepted idea of a miner is that he is big and brawny and strong. These officers assert that a majority of the miners who did apply for enlistment were unable to pass the required physical examination. Many of them were color blind, or had other affections of the eyes due to their long confinement underground. Others were partly deaf from working in a close space where explosives are used for blasting.

The war vessels authorized by the present congress will create a demand for about 3000 additional recruits, and it is estimated that within a few years there will be need for 40,000 enlisted men in the navy. The demand just now, however, is for recruits to bring the force up to the 25,500 authorized and needed in the service. It is proposed to open recruiting stations as promptly as possible in Texas, Missouri, Alabama, Mississippi and probably other states in the same section.

Triumvirate Denies Break

New York, Aug. 6.—Two members of the advisory committee of three district leaders, which has had charge of the affairs of Tammany Hall since the retirement of Lewis Nixon as leader, Messrs. Murphy and McMahon, were at the hall yesterday ready for a meeting. Lewis F. Haffen, the third member, however, sent word that other engagements prevented his attending. A meeting was thereupon called for next Tuesday. The report of the breaking up of the triumvirate was denied.

Soap Was Treasured

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 6.—Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, gave a narrative of her captivity here yesterday. During the 172 days she and Mrs. Tsilka were held captives nearly half the time they were deprived of necessary articles of daily use, chief among which was soap. When a small cake of toilet soap was finally given them she says that they were so careful of it that they made it last three months.

May Try It Once Too Often

London, Aug. 6.—Diavolo, the American bicyclist, sustained a terrible fall while performing his act of "looping the loop" at the Aquarium last night. This was the third time Diavolo has fallen while performing this feat in the last 10 days. He has recovered consciousness, but it will be impossible to ascertain the extent of his injuries for another 24 hours.

No Deaths on the America

Tromsoe, Norway, Aug. 6.—In an interview yesterday Evelyn B. Baldwin, the Arctic explorer, said that the alleged trouble between himself and Captain Johannesson of the America is grossly exaggerated. He characterized the reports of trouble as a cheap sensation and said there has been no deaths on board the America during her trip.

Whales Off Nova Scotia

Baltimore, Aug. 6.—Captain Neilsen of the Norwegian steamer Tjomo, which arrived here yesterday from Sydney, C. B., reports that his vessel ran into a school of whales when southeast of St. Georges banks, off Nova Scotia. As many as a dozen of the monsters could be counted at a time from the deck of the vessel.

WHITE RESIGNS

Speculation Already Begun as to His Successor at Berlin

Berlin, Aug. 6.—Ambassador White has forwarded his resignation to President Roosevelt. The date set by the ambassador for his resignation to go into effect is Nov. 7.

There is much gossip in Berlin concerning Mr. White's probable successor and one circumstantial story is that the president intends to transfer Ambassador Tower from St. Petersburg to Berlin, Minister Storer from Spain to be ambassador to Russia, and to appoint Henry White, secretary of embassy at London, minister to Spain. Mr. Tower, who has been dissatisfied with St. Petersburg, expressed months ago a wish to be transferred to some other desirable post, preferably Berlin.

Andrew D. White was appointed ambassador to Germany April 1, 1897. In March last it was announced that he contemplated resigning because of ill health.

Washington, Aug. 6.—No information has been received at the state department indicating that Ambassador White had resigned, but the announcement was not unexpected, as a report was current some time ago that he would retire from public life upon reaching his 70th birthday. Several diplomats are mentioned in connection with the Berlin embassy, the most prominent being Dr. Hill, now first assistant secretary of state, and Bellamy Storer, present minister to Spain.

Shaw Talks For McCullough

Manchester, Vt., Aug. 6.—The political campaign in Vermont, which is considered an extraordinary one by reason of the bolting faction in the Republican party, headed by Mr. Clement contesting against Mr. McCullough, the regular Republican nominee for governor, was opened here in McCullough's behalf last night. The chief speaker was Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, a native of the state, and he dealt entirely with national questions. Mr. McCullough was presented to the audience and he received a hearty welcome. He spoke briefly in relation to his nomination.

Revolutionary Officers Executed

Panama, Aug. 6.—The revolutionary generals, Lacroix and Vidal, and Colonel Leicam, who were sentenced to death by a court martial composed of government representatives, have been killed by shooting at Barrigona camp. Other revolutionists were condemned by the same court to various terms of imprisonment. Lacroix belonged to one of the oldest and richest families of Colombia. He was a born fighter, and during the Cuban revolution he fought for two years with General Maximo Gomez.

American Capital Interested

Berlin, Aug. 6.—The Russian government has notified Mendelssohn's bank that it will withdraw $5,000,000 of its deposits during August. Russia's money with the Mendelssohn bank is the sum realized from the recent loan arranged for the new electrical railway at St. Petersburg. A good deal of American capital is going into the railway, but the names of these American investors are reserved.

Killed by Unknown Man

New York, Aug. 6.—William H. Thorpe, manager of a club house on the Speedway, was assaulted yesterday by an unknown man in a street car. The men boarded the car together and engaged in a heated argument when the unknown man knocked Thorpe down, fracturing his skull. He died later at a hospital. Thorpe had a wide acquaintance among horsemen.

Lost $20,000 Worth of Jewelry

New York, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Charles A. Spreckels of San Francisco, who missed jewels valued at $20,000 while on the way to Southampton to take passage on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, arrived on that vessel yesterday. She had heard nothing concerning the missing jewelry. A reward of $5000 has been offered for its return.

Won't Prosecute Levine

Boston, Aug. 6.—Superintendent of Police Pierce yesterday notified the Liverpool police authorities by cable that they need not hold Joseph Levine, arrested in Liverpool on a charge of swindling Barnard Rennett out of $2700. Bennett lent $2700 in gold $5 coins to a stranger in a plan to counterfeit English sovereigns.

China's Excessive Taxation

Shanghai, Aug. 6.—General Sharretts, the special American tariff commissioner, was given a banquet here last night. In the course of an address he said the Chinese people were ground to the verge of penury by the taxation necessary to meet the obligations of the central government.

Troops Catch Brigands

Constantinople, Aug. 6.—Turkish troops have attacked a large band of Albanian brigands in the neighborhood of Okhrida, European Turkey. The chief and 13 of the brigands were killed and others were captured by the troops.

Assassination Story Doubted

London, Aug. 6.—When questioned regarding the reported assassination of the King of Siam, the Siamese legation said it had heard nothing of the matter and declared it did not believe it to be true.

NO FAITH IN DENIALS

Of Discrimination Against Catholics In Philippines

CHARGES BY BISHOP M'FAUL

Says Introduction of Public School System Alone Was "Just Cause For Alarm"—Holds Americans Responsible For "Vices of Civilization"

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The American Federation of Catholic societies met here yesterday afternoon and evening. In the afternoon, after the addresses of welcome on behalf of Mayor Harrison and the Catholic societies of the city, the convention went into executive session and organized. It was evident from the tenor of the remarks made in the afternoon that the convention would not regard the manifesto of Archbishop Ireland, warning them against a discussion of the administration's methods in the Philippines.

At the evening meeting Bishop McFaul was the principal speaker and directed his attention to the treatment of the friars and the school question in the Philippines. The bishop said in part:

"The calm, intelligent observer must admit that some of the statements made in the public press regarding the situation in the Philippines were either incorrect or exaggerated. There was, nevertheless, a very substantial foundation of truth in most of the reports, which amply justified the strictures made upon those accountable for the abuse of power.

"No one is foolish enough to admit that in affairs of so important a nature mere denials are conclusive, particularly when made by interested parties. We had already been warned to be on our guard by previous contradictions of reports which were afterwards proved true and found worse than at first suspected. When the news arrived that the Catholic churches in the Philippines were desecrated and looted, officers of high rank in the army attempted to refute the charges, yet the desecration and looting of those secred edifices are now so certain that claims for damages to ecclesiastical property will be accepted by the government.

"Reports, too, of the frightful spread of drunkenness and immorality after the occupation of Manila by the American army were vigorously assailed. Is there now any one who has the audacity to question their truth? Since then we have all heard of the water cure and the murderous orders issued by an American general. The perpetration of these outrages were unknown for a time; they were, however, so flagrant that it was impossible to keep them from the knowledge of the public. The introduction alone of the public school system was just cause for alarm."

The speaker then declared that the federation is deeply interested in obtaining just treatment for the friars in the Philippines, "who had suffered," he declared, "so many cruel calumnies."

Bishop McFaul also charged that in selecting the school teachers for the Philippines, discrimination had been practiced against the Catholics, because of a total of 967 teachers, who, he said, had been sent to the islands, but 18 or 19 were Catholics.

"The impression has gone abroad," the bishop said, "that America is furnishing educational facilities to the Filipinos for the first time and that the people were in a state of dense ignorance. This is another calumny. During centuries the friars dwelt with the tribes of the Philippines, and it is to them that they are indebted for whatever they possess of education and religion. They are a chaste and a pure people, unaware of many of the vices of civilization until American soldiers occupied their soil."

King Leaves Yacht Today

London, Aug. 6.—King Edward will land at Portsmouth and entrain for London at 3:30 this afternoon and his train is due to arrive in London at 5:30 p. m. His drive to Buckingham palace will be by an extended route instead of the direct way, in order that the public may have an opportunity to see and congratulate the sovereign. The rehearsal of the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey yesterday afternoon was the most largely attended and elaborate one which has yet been held.

Unlooked-For Fireworks Display

Iowa City, Ia., Aug. 6.—At the conclusion of the program of the Modern Woodmen district meeting here last evening, at which an address on "Fraternity" by William J. Bryan was the feature, a premature explosion of fireworks created a panic in the overcrowded grand stand. Four men were burned and some sustained painful injuries from jumping.

Englishmen the Best Players

New York, Aug. 6.—Foxhall P. Keene, who was captain of the American polo team in the recent international match in England, arrived home yesterday. Speaking of the contests, Mr. Keene said the Americans were beaten because they were inferior players. The secret of the Englishmen's success was their combination play.

New York, Aug. 6.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against the firm of Cummings & Stockbridge, importers and commission merchants. It is represented that the firm have liabilities of $500,000 and assets of $100,000. Clarence S. Houghton was appointed receiver.

GREAT MORAL SUPPORT

In Behalf of Trolley Railway Employes on Strike

CARS WITHOUT PASSENGERS

"We Walk" Emblems Decorate the Coats of Citizens of New Haven, Who All Express Indignation at the Attitude of the Railway Company

New Haven, Aug. 7.—Under the most extraordinary conditions surrounding any conflict between capital and labor that has ever been waged in Connecticut the Fair Haven and Westville Trolley company is helpless before nearly 500 striking conductors and motormen. Its entire system is paralyzed. There is no traffic. Now and then a lone car moves passengerless over the lines, but its mission is one required by the government of the United States in the transportation of the mails.

But it is not in its physical aspects that the strike presents to the officials of the railroad company the greatest difficulties. A proposition that would seem almost staggering confronts the company in the outburst of public sympathy and public indignation in behalf of the strikers. The striking employes find themselves supported throughout the city by prominent citizens, lawyers, the clergy, the city council and various organizations of the city's business men, and even the newspapers of the city almost without exception lend editorial support in unmistakeable language to the cause of the strikers. Everywhere, apparently, this condition prevails, and the moral support given the company's unemployed is made all the more extraordinary by the fact that encouragement for the strikers takes the form of burning criticism of the methods and policies of the trolley company.

The people of the city are walking and with good grace. The streets are filled with pedestrians significantly bebuttoned, and the personnel of the wearers of the "We walk" emblems affords an example of the unusual conditions of this strike.

Not a passenger has ridden on one of the company's cars, as far as can be learned, since 9 o'clock yesterday morning, and in the present temper of New Haven's citizens disinclination to ride will be general, even if accommodations were to be had.

There has been no trolley communication with the suburban villages and resorts and business at the east and west shore resorts in paralyzed. The strikers thus far have been orderly and they are circulating in the crowds that throng the streets in an effort to prevent trouble.

The consensus of opinion marks it down as certain that a strike under these conditions cannot long continue, and as a matter of fact strikers and citizens anticipate a prompt adjustment. Predictions of a settlement, however, are merely tentative.

The men demand changes and reforms in methods of administration. The officials of the company have thus far refused to yield. Both sides insist that it is a fight to the bitter end.

Mayor Studley took decisive steps last night to bring an end to the strike. He issued formal notice to both the railroad company and the strikers that there must be arbitration as provided for by the statutes of Connecticut.

Corporal O'Brien Arrested

North Adams, Mass., Aug. 7.—Early this morning a special officer from Washington awoke Corporal Richard O'Brien at his home in this town and placed him under arrest on the charge of perjury in his testimony before the senate committee regarding affairs in the Philippines, on a bench warrant from the supreme court of the District of Columbia. O'Brien was corporal of Company M, Twenty-Sixth regiment, of which Captain McDonald was commanding officer. O'Brien made severe charges against his captain, which McDonald vigorously denied.

Caught by Indignant Crowd

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 7.—Fred Nadeau, a weaver, is locked up, charged with indecent conduct. The complainant is a 13-year-old girl who was carrying dinner to her father in a bleachery yesterday and whom Nadeau had insulted and chased. The girl's story made the bleachery employes so indignant that all left their work and surrounded the woods, finally catching Nadeau. Threats of whipping and other violence were made, but the cooler-headed men turned Nadeau over to the police.

AUGUSTA STRIKE LOST

Officers of United Textile Workers Order Operators to Return

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 7.—The big strike of the cotton mill operatives at Augusta, Ga., which was looked upon as a test of the strength of the United Textile Workers of America, was declared off by the executive committee of that body yesterday afternoon. It was decided that the mills had secured so much help that the strikers could not possibly win and they were so instructed by the officials of the Textile workers. This action ends one of the hardest fought battles known in the textile industry between labor unions and mill owners in the south.

These operatives went on strike last April for a 10 percent advance in wages. The United Textile Workers, which had been formed but a short time before, directed the strike through its officials in Fall River, and bent all its energy to win. Several times Secretary Hibbert went to Augusta to supervise operations. He established supply depots in various parts of Augusta, and operatives in Georgia and the southern part of North Carolina went out on strike in sympathy. These sympathetic strikers, at a meeting between their committee and the King mill officials, were allowed to look over the books of the company and found the claims of the mill owners correct. They then returned to work. Appeals were sent out to all labor unions, and the members were assessed 5 cents a week to assist the strikers in Augusta. Something like $10,000 in all was sent to them from all over the country.

Power Failed to Show Up

New York, Aug. 7.—Peter Power, complainant in the Northern Pacific merger case, who had been summoned to appear in the United States court yesterday to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, failed to come to court. Judge Lacombe ordered Power committed for 30 days. He also ordered George A. Lamb, counsel for Power, to appear on Aug 20 to show cause why he should not be suspended or admonished for unprofessional conduct in connection with the case, as it was believed Power was acting under counsel's orders.

Bryan Not a Candidate—But

Mason City, Ia., Aug. 7.—William J. Bryan addressed a large audience at the Clear Lake assembly yesterday. Asked if he had been correctly quoted when it was reported he refused to again be a candidate for president, he replied that only a part of the interview was used. He said he was not a candidate in the light of seeking again to lead the Democratic party, but if the party should decide he was the proper man to head the ticket he could not honorably say 'No.'

Winners of Astor Cups

Newport, R. I., Aug. 7.—Not for many years have the Astor or Goelet cup races been sailed in such a grand breeze as that which blew nine of the fastest of the New York Yacht club fleet over 38 miles of rough water yesterday. Henry S. Redmond's English yawl, Ailsa, proved the speediest of the single-masted fleet and to her was awarded the $500 cup offered by John J. Astor. The $1000 Astor cup was won by F. F. Brewster's 70-foot schooner Elmina.

Girl Strikers Made Demonstration

Trenton, Aug. 7.—About 300 girls employed by the American Cigar company gathered about the factory last night and made a demonstration. The police reserves were called out and dispersed the girls. About 50 of the girls are on strike because of the refusal of the company to extend the dinner recess from a half hour to an hour.

Soldiers Defeat Ladrones

Manila, Aug. 7.—A detachment of the Thirteenth infantry engaged and defeated a band of ladrones near Marivelez last Monday. The ladrones had looted a village located on a military reservation and the detachment of the Thirteenth was dispatched against them at the request of the people and officials of the villages.

Oshkosh, Wis., Aug. 7.—Samuel Burrows, 25, a farmer of Kekimi, who made a murderous assault upon two men who had stopped in front of his farm, intending to get a drink of water, was surrounded yesterday by Sheriff Potter and a posse, and in the conflict Burrows was shot and died soon afterward.

Another Shaky Bell Tower

Desperate Career of Outlaw Tracy Is Ended

CORNERED BY A POSSE

Received Wounds Which Would Have Proved Fatal, So He Blew Top of His Head Off Rather Than Submit to Capture—Story of His Crimes

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 7.—Harry Tracy, the notorious outlaw whose escapades have occupied public attention for the past 60 days, lies dead in Davenport. Sheriffs' posses and others are disputing the ownership of his body. His death was intensely tragic. For two days Tracy had terrorized the occupants of the Eddy ranch in the Lake Creek country. Then five determined citizens of Creston went after him. The posse found cover behind a large rock and for a while it looked like a siege. Then Tracy broke for a large boulder on the edge of a small wheat field, and this dash was his undoing, for just as he came to the rock he fell forward, a rifle bullet having broken one leg.

HARRY TRACY.

He plunged into the wheat and his bloody trail there shows the savage determination of the man, for, after receiving the wound, he crawled 75 yards on his hands and knees in order to reach a spot that would command the posse and enable him to pour a merciless rifle fire upon them. But once only was he able to fire from this vantage point. Then, weakened by loss of blood, he tried to staunch his wound, failed, and, with his revolver, sent a bullet through his brain.

By this time dusk had fallen and the posse, unaware of the seriousness of his wound and fearing that his silence was intended to lure them into a deadly ambush, posted themselves to prevent his escape and patiently awaited for the dawn. During the night others came on the scene and joined in the cordon. At daylight they found the outlaw's dead body.

None of the posse was wounded, though all of them had narrow escapes. When they were firing from the cover of their rock they had to lift their heads above the cover, and every time this was done Tracy's rifle rang out and a bullet clipped the rock.

Tracy's dead body was found lying amid the grain with his face toward the sky. His left hand, thrown over his head, held a revolver, which had inflicted the death wound.

Harry Tracy began his career of crime in Colorado in 1897 by killing Deputy Sheriff Valentine Hay, a wealthy cattle owner of Routt county, in that state. In 1898 he was sentenced to the Oregon penitentiary. He attempted to escape by seizing a locomotive, but the engineer outwitted him, and he was captured. In the scrimmage he wounded Detective Rainer of Portland. June 9, 1902, he escaped with David Merrill from the penitentiary at Salem, killing Guards Jones, Ferrell and Tiffany, and wounding Deputy Sheriff Biescher and Guard Ingram. The next day they returned to Salem, held up J. W. Roberts, whom they stripped of clothing, and then stole a team of horses and made their way to Portland. Near Gervais they held up two members of the posse in pursuit and took a horse and buggy. June 12 they broke through a cordon of 250 militia and made their escape. On June 14 they stole two horses and rode through Portland suburbs. Later they forced two men to ferry them across Columbia river. On June 23 they robbed the house of Patrick McGuire at Alacentre. July 1 Tracy killed Merrill, his companion. On July 7 the sheriff's posse, after a chase of 125 miles, returned empty-handed to Seattle. Since then he has appeared in different places, and has been "surrounded" many times, but managed to escape.

The body effects and the horses of the desperado were taken in charge by Sheriff Gardner and taken to Davenport, where they will be kept, pending the decision of the final disposition of Tracy's body. Reports come from Davenport that wild excitement prevails. Stores are closed and people are crowding around to get a sight of the outlaw. It is said that a heavy guard is kept around the morgue where the body is kept as well as around the corpse itself to prevent relic hunters from tearing the clothing to pieces and carrying away souvenirs.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Friday, Aug. 8.
Sun rises—4:43; sets—6:56.
Moon sets—9:24.
High water—2:15 a. m.; 2:45 p. m.

Fair weather and moderate temperature is indicated for New England. Along the coast fresh westerly winds will diminish in force.

Brattleboro, Vt., Aug. 7.—Colonel George W. Hooker, one of the best known Vermonters, died suddenly of heart disease last night. He had been sergeant of arms of the national house of representatives, state member of the Republican national committee, had served in the state legislature and was a leader in the Grand Army. He closed his war service in 1865 as lieutenant colonel.

THE PRISONER

Who escapes from jail is by no means free. He is under the ban of the law and punishment is written over against his name. Soon or late he will be caught again and bear added punishment for his short escape from his cell.

Those who by the use of palliative powders and tablets escape for a time from the sufferings of dyspepsia are in the same condition as the escaped prisoner. Soon or late they will go back to the old condition and pay an added penalty for temporary release.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Its cures are lasting.

"For about two years I suffered from a very obstinate case of dyspepsia," writes R. E. Secord, Esq., of 13 Eastern Ave., Toronto, Ontario. "I tried a great number of remedies without success. I finally lost faith in them all. I was so far gone that I could not bear any solid food on my stomach for a long time; felt melancholy and depressed. Could not sleep or follow my occupation (tinsmith). Some four months ago a friend recommended your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' After a week's treatment I had derived so much benefit that I continued the medicine. I have taken three bottles and am convinced it has in my case accomplished a permanent cure. I can conscientiously recommend it to the thousands of dyspeptics throughout the land."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

The smiling sky and the green earth seems to be the natural heritage of man and no one feels this quite so keenly as the one who has had a taste in youth of the sweets of rural life—Country Life in America.

☞ An apostle of vegetarianism induced a score or more of passengers on an ocean liner to eat no meat during the voyage, on the statement that abstinence from flesh food would secure immunity from sea sickness. None of the vegetarians were sick during the passage from Havre to New York. Neither were any of the meat eaters, so the experiment can hardly be claimed to have proven anything. Had the latter been sick and the former immune the vegetarians would have set up a great shout and the ocean liners would have saved money on their provisions, for those who fear mal der mer would eat no meat while the voyage lasted. The calmness of the ocean and the steadiness of the ship brought about a mistrial of the vegetable and meat theories, and the experiment must be started anew. —Lynn Item.

☞ Despite the present appearance of a disturbing element in the strike of the coal miners in Pennsylvania, we believe there are few, outside the limited circle of the operators, who do not sympathize with the employes and wish them success. There probably is no work carried on in this country more liable to perils and so poorly paid as the mining of coal. It is a matter of record that, taking the year together, the average pay of the miner is but a little over $1.00 per day, out of which the operators contrive, by one device or another, to pluck a very substantial total. The work is laborious and prolonged, and to eke out the family income it too often happens that children are forced to engage in the work who should be in school. The leaders have kept the men wonderfully in hand thus far, considering the class they have to deal with. —Waltham Free Press.

THE OUTLOOK

Wins a Third Race in the Quincy Cup Series.

Challenger Defeated by Over 4 Minutes.

Report Says That the Outlook Has been Protested by Flashlight.

[Special to the Daily Ledger.]

Manchester 1.30 P. M. — Today has been an ideal day for yacht racing, the wind being stiff from the west.

At the start of the third race for the Quincy Yacht Club challenge cup, the Outlook led by thirty seconds.

Fifteen minutes later the Flashlight was ahead and crossed the bow of the Outlook four or five times.

On the last tack to the turning point the Outlook gained, and passing the Flashlight rounded the mark with a lead of ten seconds.

The unofficial time was:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	10	54	10
Flashlight,	10	54	20

After rounding the buoy for the run home, the Flashlight set her balloon jib, while the Outlook shook out her spinnaker, which, however, she soon changed to a balloon. The Outlook then pulled away and completed the round by a lead of over one minute. The unofficial time was:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	11	15	57
Flashlight,	11	17	00

On the beat to the next turning point the Outlook lead all the way the unofficial time at turning being:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	11	51	40
Flashlight,	11	53	20

On the run home the Outlook continued to hold her lead and crossed the line at the finish with a lead of 4 minutes and 25 seconds.

The time at finish was:

	H.	M.	S.
Outlook,	12	11	00
Flashlight,	12	15	25

On the final leg of the race the Outlook crew hoisted a broom to her masthead, and as she crossed the line was given a rousing salute by the steam yachts and other craft in the harbor.

It is reported that the Flashlight has protested the Outlook.

New Stamps.

The bureau of engraving and printing is at work on the designs for the 1902 series of United States postage stamps. The design for a new border for the entire set of stamps, as accepted by the third assistant postmaster general, contains an arch over the picture in the center. In the upper right hand corners are eagle's heads gracefully arranged above an artistic scroll. The words "United States of America" will supplant "United States postage." Under the picture will appear the words "Postage" and "Four Cents" or "Six Cents" as the case may be. The picture of Grant will be on the 4-cent stamp instead of the head of Lincoln, which will replace Grant's on the 5-cent blue stamp. On the new 8-cent-lilac stamp which now bears the head of Sherman, will be a likeness of Martha Washington, the first woman thus honored by the American government. The special delivery stamps also will be changed in design and color. It will bear on the left hand side a picture of a messenger on a bicycle and will be bright red.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, hut in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

EXPECTED TO SAIL.

The Thomas W. Lawson Seven Master Nearly Rigged.

The Maritime News and Review of Baltimore reports that the Lawson will sail from Boston August 15, in command of Capt. Arthur L. Crowley, for Baltimore. The ship-brokerage firm of Gray, Irelan & Co. will be her local agents. It is generally believed that Capt. John G. Crowley will make the trip with his brother. The run to Baltimore will take about six days with fair winds. At this port the Lawson will take on the biggest cargo of coal ever sent out of Baltimore. It is understood that she will trade regularly between Baltimore and Boston, with incidental trips to other southern ports.

Capt. Arthur Crowley was here last in the 6-master George W. Wells. He is very well known and very popular here among the brokers, captains and a host of friends. He is one of the youngest skippers in the business, but at the same time one of the most capable. He was born to the sailing line, and has been at it since boyhood. Among the schooners of which he has been master are the Sagmore, Mount Hope, John B. Prescott, Henry W. Cramp, Henry S. Culver, in addition to the 6-master George W. Wells.

His brother, Capt. John Crowley is equally well known here. He has retired from deep water of recent years, and is now the managing owner not of the only Lawson, but of all the above vessels, and, in addition, of the schooners Van Allen's Boughten and J. C. Strawbridge. The Lawson on arrival here will berth at Curtis Bay coal piers.

Granite Firm Fails.

Fontana Bros., second largest granite manufacturing concern of Williamstown, Vt., has made an assignment to James K. Lynde of Williamstown, the papers having been made out Monday, says the Barre Times. The assignment is a large one, the liabilities being about $11,000, with assets of about $7,000. The creditors, who number about 100 including the workmen, are largely Barre people. The reasons given for the assignment are slack work at present and poor collections.

Antonio and Malato Fontana have been running a granite business a little less that a year, having moved here from Barre where they formerly conducted a business. They have done a large amount of cutting and carving and have employed, recently, nearly 60 men. They shut down their shop August 1.

Under James K. Lynde it is hoped that the business will be started up again tomorrow morning with the same workmen. The business is conducted in the old Grearson shed.

Plague of Tussock Moths.

Manchester, N. H., is threatened with an insect scourge similar to that of 1895, unless vigorous measures are employed at once. The city's beautiful shade trees will be ravaged by the tussock moth unless the citizens exterminate the destructive pest, whose eggs are appearing in white patches on hundreds of trees in the parks and commons of the city, as well as on private grounds.

Statue of General Stevenson.

Ell Torrance, commander-in chief G. A. R., has appointed a committee to organize and press to a speedy completion the work of erecting in Washington, D. C., a statue of General B. F. Stevenson, the founder and first provisional commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. The committee includes: Thomas Lawlor, Illinois; Thomas S. Hopkins, Corporal James Tanner and John McElroy of the District of Columbia and Louis Wagner of Pennsylvania.

Birthday Party.

Master Maxwell Thurston Cole entertained a number of his little friends at his home 57 Willard street, Wednesday afternoon, to celebrate his fourth birthday. Misses Mary Butler and Margaret Cole assisted in entertaining the little ones.

Among his little friends were: Misses Irene Reinhalter, Etta McDonald, Anna White, Alice Collins, Theresa Collins, Madaline Dufour, Estelle Dufour; Masters George Burke, Gerald Callahan, Allan Cole, Allie Sheehan, Rudolph Stacy, Will Foster and John Birmingham of New York.

Wrong Proportions.

"He offered her his hand and fortune."

"Did she accept?"

"No; the first was too large and the second too small!"

Self Taught.

The Mother—Now, Elsie, did I teach you to throw your clothes on the floor in that disreputable way?

Elsie—No, mamma; I learned myself. —Puck.

The lights in the theater set the men a good example; they seldom go out between the acts.

GROCERS' PICNIC.

A Party of 500 Enjoy Outing at Crescent Park.

The Grocers' had a grand good time Wednesday at their annual outing at Crescent Park, R. I. It looked in Quincy as though the weather would not be very pleasant but it proved a fine day at the park. It rained a little before the party, 500 strong arrived, but the balance of the day was pleasant.

For amusement there was a long list of sports for which prizes were contributed by the wholesale firms of Boston. There was quite a rivalry to see who would win these coveted prizes but none fell to anyone who hailed from Quincy.

In fact there was but one Quincy man who had the courage to try for any of the prizes. He entered one of the events but was not successful in securing a prize.

The two ball games created a great deal of sport and if any professionals had been present they could have easily learned a few tricks.

A special dinner was served which all pronounced to have been excellent. After dinner the sports were continued and when at 6.30 the train left for home the party were thoroughly tired out. The train arrived in Quincy about 9 o'clock. The Committee having the affair in charge were A. T. Faunce, Henry W. Mansfield, Osborne Rogers, W. F. Coughlin and J. A. Radcliffe.

The sports resulted as follows:

First, ball game, Drummers, 5; Proprietors, 3. J. F. Holbrook of South Braintree pitched for the losers.

Second, ball game, single clerks, 14; married clerks, 10. Frank Newhall and Charlie Orr playing with the former and Parker Hobart with the latter.

Third, 100 yard dash, for drummers; McGill of Rockland, first, Sawyer of Atlantic, second.

Fourth, 50 yard dash, J. F. Holbrook South Braintree, first; M. J. McCarty, second.

Fifth, 100-yard dash for clerks, M. E. Stevens of Marshfield, first; A. A. Hoyt of Whitman, second; C. J. Clements of Whitman third.

Sixth, running jump for clerks, A. A. Hoyt Whitman, first; C. F. Reynolds second.

Seventh, running jump for drummers, H. Masters Brockton, first; G. W. McGill Rockland, second.

The Wheelbarrow race was won by Frank Newhall of South Braintree who also won the pipe race.

Biggest in the World.

Emperor William will attend the launching of the North German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II, at the Vulcan shipyard at Stettin, Germany, Aug. 12. The daughter of Dr. H. Weigand, director-general of the line, will christen the ship, which will be the largest and is designated to be the fastest in the world. Her length is to be 707 feet, her beam 71 1-2 feet, her depth 49 feet and her draught 29 feet. The new vessel is to be of 39,000-horse power, 19,500 tons displacement and will accommodate 1000 cabin passengers.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

A patent has been issued to Joseph Lizzotte of this city.

A brick sidewalk is being built in front of the new street railway car barn on Hancock street.

The steam yacht Josephine is owned by William H. Gwyne of Cambridge. She is a 105 footer.

Mr. Henry Chubbuck accompanied by Mr. J. E. Hayward of East Braintree are spending the week at Onset.

The hottest days of August last year were the 11th, 16th, and 24th, each with 88 degree noon temperature.

The Quincy police are said to have a warrant for Annie Gilbert alias Annie McLoud, arrested in Boston for larceny.

Miss Laura King and Master Ellsworth King of Stonington, Ct., are the guests of Mrs. R. R. Smith of Granite street.

Mrs. Elizabeth Perry, her daughter Grace, and Miss Martha C. Kincaide are spending a few weeks at Round Pond, Maine.

Aug. 9 will be the anniversary of the battle of Cedar Mountain, Va., in 1862, and Aug. 10 the anniversary of the battle of Wilson Creek, Missouri, in 1861.

Fred H. French was in town Wednesday. He reports greatly improved train and mail service between Cape Cod and Boston, much better time being made.

Carl F. Prescott, the oldest son of the city editor, now in his fifteenth year reported Wednesday's race for the Daily Ledger. The news was bulletined in Quincy forty minutes after the finish, and printed in the regular edition at 2.30.

Deserving of Praise.

Now that the trips to the cup races, on the steamer Josephine are over, it will not be out of place to say a few words of praise for the most efficient manner in which these excursions were managed by Dexter E. Wadsworth. While the Josephine displayed the Commodore flag, and he witnessed the races from her decks the management of the party was devolved upon Mr. Wadsworth. He it was who saw to it that everybody was aboard before the steamer left either Quincy or Marblehead and during the entire trip gave his whole attention to the guests, striving in every way to make the trip a pleasant one. How well he succeeded all who participated will testify.

A GREAT RACE.

First Chance for Comparison of Two Boats.

Both Boats Show Great Speed.

Press Comments on the Work of the Two Boats.

The first real race for the challenge cup, between the Flashlight and Outlook was that sailed Wednesday, for it was the first time that there was any opportunity to compare the sailing qualities of the two boats.

There was but little wind at the start and it looked as though there would be but little sport. It continued to thin out nearly all the way to first mark. Then it commenced to strengthen. Outlook pulled out from the Flashlight's lee and had quite a lead before the leg was finished. As the wind freshened the Flashlight picked up wonderfully. After rounding the mark both got a good breeze and the water was much more smooth.

On the second leg the Outlook increased her lead from 2 minutes 10 seconds to 3 minutes, 30 seconds, which was made by the Outlook having two minutes more wind wardwork after turning the leg.

After rounding the last mark for the run home, the Flashlight started her sheets and came down the leg with a rush. It was seen that she was gaining and when the home mark was crossed had gained over a minute, so that she was only beaten by 2 minutes, 41 seconds.

The Boston Advertiser says: There was no accident to either boat and it was the first real test of the comparative merits of the two boats.

The course was a broad reach, a leg to windward and a reach home. There was a heavy downpour over two-thirds of the course, but the rain ceased with a shift in the wind.

The breeze was six knots towards the finish, having increased from two knots at the start, and made the conditions equally favorable to both boats. The Outlook showed conclusively that she is a wonderful boat for speed

The Globe says: Today the Flashlight was a different boat when compared with her previous performance. She had more life, made better weather of the going when it became rough, and although still slow in stays she did not "lumber." Her greatest improvement come on the windward work, on which she pointed almost as high and footed as fast as the Outlook. On the three-mile thrash from Hospital point to Gooseberry ledge the Outlook gained only 1m. 30s. on the challenger. It was an excellent test of their ability on the wind, for the breeze was strong enough to lay them out and stir up a long jump on the water. To the surprise of all, the Flashlight made less fuss in meeting the rollers than did the Outlook, but no fault could be found with the behavior of either.

The Herald says: Yesterday's race gave the supporters of the Quincy boat much satisfaction, for the Flashlight sailed a good race and raised the hopes of her admirers. She certainly proved fast in the conditions yesterday, and, had the wind not been light during the first leg of the course, she would have made even a closer race of it. In the early morning there was a splendid breeze blowing until just before the start, when it fell to a very light sailing air, and it looked as if it would peter out entirely. Outside, however, there were signs of it freshening, which it did before the boats had sailed the first leg. It was a miserable day for racing, for the wind, sea and rain combined to make oilskins none too comfortable for the racers and those watching the contest.

An explanation of the Flashlight's improvement might lie in the fact that she lowered her topsail after one turn to windward. The short time that she was carrying it on the wind it was bagging and doing her no good.

The Flashlight also demonstrated her superiority in reaching when there is breeze enough to put her down. On the last leg, a broad reach to the line, she beat the Outlook 1m. 20s. But that she must have wind was shown by their respective times on the first leg, which also was a broad reach.

The Post says: The Flashlight's showing was the best she has made so far in the series. Her performance to windward was wholly creditable, and although she was not fast enough to hold the Outlook, she came so near it that those who had scoffed at her as a failure were compelled to admit her ability. In a breeze she is a hard proposition, and only because the Outlook is undoubtedly the fastest 21-footer ever built was the second leg in the series won by the Manchester Club's defender.

FASHION HINTS.

A Handsome Street Costume. Gown Trimmed with Applique Taffeta.

A very handsome street costume made of blue cloth is shown below. The blouse waist is tucked, with slightly overlapping front and opens over a chemisette of white chiffon. The blouse sleeve is also tucked and between the tucks is a trimming of applique taffeta of graduated size framed with crochet rings worked with dark blue Corticelli crochet silk. A similar garniture appears on the panel front of the skirt, the latter being completed with a corded flounce, and above the flounce at the sides are more lengthwise tucks.

Picturesque effects are the rule and are in evidence on all sides, and flowered silks, flowered mousselines and gorgeously flowered parasols greet the eye everywhere. In fancy, at least, the pages of fashion have turned backward to the flower designs once so much in vogue. On the whole the trend of dress at the moment is toward greater elegance reaching out in all directions. The dainty mousselines in small patterns with wide and narrow borders of large flowers are in great demand.

Excursion to Newport

On Wednesday, August 13., there will be an excursion to Newport, Rhode Island, by special train from Quincy, Braintree, Brockton and intermediate stations to Middleboro inclusive, for which round trip tickets will be sold at exceedingly low rates, via the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. The season at the "Queen of Watering Places" is now at its hight, and the many attractions of the place have never appeared to better advantage. Ample time will be afforded for visitation of the many points of interest, all of which are readily accessible, transportation by barges, carriages and electric cars being always at hand, and at hand and at reasonable rates, for those who may desire to take advantage of such provision. As the number of tickets for this outing is limited, it is desirable that they be secured in advance.

BOON TO GARDENERS.

Simple Device For Transplanting and Removing Plants.

A very simple device has been invented which may be used for transplanting, inserting and removing plants from the ground; also for inserting fertilizer with the plants or at the sides of the plant roots. The device, as described by the Scientific American, consists of two jaws pivoted together and forming when closed a continuous round body, tapering to a point, and therefore adapted to be easily inserted in the ground. The handles, which extend upward from each jaw, are bent at right angles to the body and may be easily grasped in a single hand. Springs secured to these handles hold the jaws normally in closed position.

In using this device the plants may be placed therein when the planter is closed, and then after forcing the device into the ground the jaws are spread apart by pressure on the handles. Upon withdrawing the planter the plant will be left in the ground. It is obvious that at the same time of inserting a plant a fertilizer may be also inserted, or fertilizer alone may be inserted at the side of a plant or its roots.

While other devices for this purpose have heretofore been made, they are usually much larger, being designed to be operated by two hands and requiring foot power for forcing them into the ground. This planter, on the contrary, is of convenient size for small plants and may be very conveniently carried about and easily operated. Mr. John J. Olinger of 145 West Twentieth street, New York city, has recently received a patent for this invention.

BACTERIA AS FERTILIZER.

Agricultural Department Thinks It Has Solved a Problem.

How to do away with the use of artificial fertilizers compounded from the nitrates of Peru and other dry countries and thus anticipate the nitrate famine predicted by many scientists is a problem which the United States agricultural department thinks it has succeeded in solving.

If its ideas and methods stand the test of use, as there is every reason to believe that they will, the farmer of the future instead of spending time and money for expensive fertilizers brought from the ends of the earth will merely empty the contents of a test tube into a barrel of water, let it stand overnight, soak his seeds in it and then plant them. The result will be even better, says Crittenden Marriott in the National, than that obtained from the older and more costly methods now in vogue.

Ballooning Across the Sahara.

A journey across the Sahara by balloon is being discussed by French aeronauts. M. Deburaux is very anxious to attempt a journey from Tunis to the Niger, the winds permitting. Count Castillon de Saint-Victor, another French aeronaut, proposes to accompany him. Financial difficulties arise, however. To dispatch a balloon large enough to carry several aeronauts would entail a cost of about $60,000. It is therefore proposed to make a trial journey with a balloon controlled by an automatic device, this meaning an expenditure of but $4,000.

A most remarkable claim, the genuineness of which it is as yet impossible to test, says a cable dispatch published by the London Daily Mail from its Las Palmas correspondent, has been made by Senor Clemente Figueras, engineer of woods and forests in the Canary islands, for many years professor of physics at St. Augustine's college at Las Palmas.

It seems that for many years he has been working silently at a method of directly utilizing atmospheric electricity—that is to say, without chemicals or dynamos—and making a practical application of it without the need of employing any motive force.

A true revelation might rob him of his reward, and even now while he claims to have succeeded he is silent concerning the exact principles of his discovery. He asserts, however, he has invented a generator by which he can collect electric fluid so as to be able to store it and apply it for infinite purposes—for instance, in connection with shops, railways and manufactures.

He says he expects its effect will be a tremendous economic and industrial revolution. He will not give the key to the invention, but declares that the only extraordinary point about it is that it has taken so long to discover a simple scientific fact.

In addition to the discovery the Daily Mail says that, according to letters received in London from his friends in Tenerife, Senor Figueras has constructed a rough apparatus by which, in spite of its small size and defects, he obtains a current of 550 volts, which he utilizes in his own house for lighting purposes and driving a motor of twenty horsepower.

His inventions comprise a generator, a motor and a sort of governor or regulator, the whole apparatus being so simple that a child could work it.

Perhaps.

"I don't have no opinion of these newfangled women's notions," said Mr. Hyde when his wife timidly expressed her desire to join the woman's self improvement society.

"But we learn so much there," ventured Mrs. Hyde.

"Don't believe it!" snapped Mr. Hyde. "Women don't know much, that's a fact, but let 'em stick to their domestic duties and learn them. That's my opinion. Let 'em follow St. Paul's injunction, stay at home and ask their husbands if they want to know anything."

"But, John"—

"I've settled it, and that's enough, Jane."

"But, John, that's what women have been doing all this time, and perhaps that's the reason they don't know much."

And then Mr. Hyde threw his boot at the cat and boxed Freddy's ears for grinning.—Pearson's.

FIVE MINES ABANDONED

Means a Property Loss of About $1,500,000

FAILURE TO WORK PUMPS

Rendered Plants Useless by Reason of Becoming Flooded—Foreigners In Vicinity of Shenandoah Said to Be Drilling Quiet Reigns at Present

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 7.—William Stein, the state mine inspector for the Shenandoah region, yesterday announced that five collieries under his jurisdiction, which have an estimated value of $1,500,000, have been rendered useless by reason of having been flooded and have been permanently abandoned by the companies owning them. Mr. Stein estimates that out of the 36 collieries in his district only 14 are in a condition for immediate operation if the strike were immediately ended. The abandonment of the five collieries will compel 2000 mine workers to seek employment in other parts of the region. After the strike shall have been ended most of the workmen will have to remain in idleness for another period of time until the collieries are placed in working condition. Failure to operate the pumps is the cause of the trouble.

The situation so far as the peace of the Shenandoah region is concerned remains unchanged. Yesterday was probably the quietest day since the soldiers were called out one week ago last night. Two companies of infantry are still kept on guard duty in the town near foreign settlements. General Gobin has ordered the establishment of a signal system from brigade headquarters to the camp, which is nearly a mile distant. The heliograph and flag will be used in the day time and the torch at night. This will be the first time the signal system has been in operation since the Homestead strike 10 years ago.

General Gobin, in speaking of the conditions in this region, says that Shenandoah, for a town of its size, is more thickly populated than the worst tenement district in New York. He thinks the sanitary conditions in the foreign quarters of the place are extremely bad because of the lack of sewerage. In reply to a question he said he had been advised that foreigners in this vicinity were being drilled, but he would not say whether the information he had received was correct. He believed there are many smart men among the foreigners here who have been officers in European armies and have taken refuge in this country. A large percentage of the male foreigners, he added, no doubt have had military training in their native lands, where a term of years in the army is compulsory. The ex-officers, the general said, have considerable influence over the others and they were not to be trusted. He characterized the ex-officers as adventurers and degenerate heirs of noble sires.

Paul Pulaski, national organizer of the United Mine Workers, who looks after the foreign members of the union, came here yesterday. He denied stories of secret drilling by the Polanders and others. He said there is no secret organization within the Miners' union.

Strikers Seeking Funds

Hazelton, Pa., Aug. 7.—A committee of mine workers yesterday visited the business men of this place to solicit subscriptions for the relief of needy families. The responses were few, however, those appealed to claiming they were not making expenses. During the past few days the clamor for relief has increased, the contributions thus far being insufficient for the needs of the strikers' families.

"Jimmie" Was a Woman

Rochester, Aug. 7.—The town of Chili is excited over the discovery that a supposed boy who, for the past nine weeks, had been known as "Jimmie" McDougall, is Mrs. Theresa Denhart. Accused of masquerading and locked up as a vagrant, "Jimmie" confessed that she married Max Denhart in Cleveland, but after suffering much abuse escaped last May dressed in her husband's clothes, came east and secured a position as a farmhand at Chili.

Bad For Bulls

Chicago, Aug. 7.—Bulls in the grain pits were generally discouraged yesterday over the glowing reports from the harvest field. Everywhere came in advices of excellent prospects. Corn promised a bumper yield and with splendid weather for harvesting spring wheat, prices slumped off.

Rather Non-Committal

Madrid, Aug. 7.—Premier Sagasta was questioned yesterday as to his possible retirement and replied that while he felt that he had earned a rest, his relinquishment of office depended wholly on circumstances.

SUMMER COLONY SCARED

Case of Smallpox at Peak's Island Caused a Temporary Quarantine

Portland, Me., Aug. 7.—The summer colony at Peak's island was thrown into a state of excitement yesterday when it became known that one of the guests at the Hotel Coronado was suffering with smallpox. The victim is Mrs. H. F. Tarrant of New York, who came to Portland last Saturday. She had been visiting at Cambridge, Mass., previous to coming here and it is thought she may have contracted the disease in that city. She was ill when she arrived here, and has been confined to her room ever since. Yesterday her condition became more serious and a physician was called. He found that she was afflicted with smallpox and the board of health decided to take prompt and effective measures to guard against a spread of the disease.

A squad of regular police from the city went to the island and placed a strict quarantine on the hotel. The Coronado is one of the principal hotels on the island and nearly 350 guests were registered there yesterday. The Coronado has no dining room accommodations and the guests took their meals at other hotels and nearby restaurants.

Yesterday was cold and dreary and nearly all the guests were in their rooms when the guard was thrown around the house. For a time the most intense excitement prevailed. When it was learned that the victim of the disease had been at the island only since Thursday, and that she had been confined to her room all the time, it was recognized that the danger of contagion was slight. Last night Mrs. Tarrant was removed to the isolation hospital and after the residents of the hotel had been vaccinated the quarantine was raised.

Tar, Feathers and Rail Ride

Marion, Mass., Aug. 7.—This town was thrown into a fever of excitement last night over the tarring and feathering of James McDonald, an inmate of the family of C. F. Potter. The neighbors objected to McDonald's position in the Potter household, which was not according to their ideas of what it should be. Last night they secured McDonald, stripped him of his clothes and gave him a coat of tar and feathers. Then they rode him on a rail through the centre of the town to the Mattapoisett line, where, after administering a severe thrashing to him, they turned him loose. All the members of the tarring and feathering party were masked.

Gubernatorial Guaranty Wanted

Boston, Aug. 7.—Governor Crane yesterday received a delegation of prominent negroes interested in the case of Monroe Rogers, under arrest at Brockton, who is wanted at Durham, N. C., on the charge of arson, and for whom requisition papers have been asked. It was stated that not a man of the delegation desired to protect a criminal from just punishment but they feared that the man might be lynched unless some guaranty against such an act was obtained from the governor of North Carolina. The governor has the matter under consideration.

Further Charges Against Van Derlip

Boston, Aug. 7.—The Post says that two more estates are believed to be included in the case of Willard C. Van Derlip, who has admitted misappropriating a large portion of the George B. Emerson estate, of which he was trustee, in value said to be about $200,000. The estates of Miss Annie Cummings of Dorchester and of the late Charles L. Gibson of Boston are now said to be sufferers to the extent of at least $20,000 each through the acts of Van Derlip, who managed the properties.

Claim Reduced by One Half

Boston, Aug. 7.—The board of commissioners appointed four years ago by the supreme court of Massachusetts to report on the litigation arising over the sum of money involved by the change of municipal ownership of the Holyoke Power company in Holyoke, met here yesterday and submitted a preliminary report of the findings, in which the company is awarded the sum of $708,790. The sum is about one-half of the amount claimed by the company.

Shot by Man He Assaulted

Boston, Aug. 7.—An unknown man entered the Seaman's home on North Bennett street last night through a cellar window, and when Superintendent Smith confronted him, assaulted the superintendent. The latter then shot the intruder in the right side, inflicting a dangerous wound, from which he is now suffering at the hospital. Smith was placed under arrest.

School Official Shot Selectman

Colebrook, N. H., Aug. 7.—Objection to a schoolteacher by Selectman Knapp is reported to have culminated in the use of a gun by Mrs. William Brown of the school board, and the wounding of Knapp at Stewartstown yesterday. Knapp was shot through the shoulder, but not seriously. Mrs. Brown is said to have collapsed through fright and nervousness.

Refusal to Change Sentence

Boston, Aug. 7.—John C. Best, the Saugus murderer, will be electrocuted in October, notwithstanding the hearing before the governor and council yesterday on the petition that his sentence be commuted to imprisonment for life. After a session of three hours the council voted unanimously not to commute the sentence.

An Alleged Hotel Swindler

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 7.—L. O. Hoffman, arrested in San Francisco and brought to this city, was placed on trial yesterday on three charges of larceny from hotels, the total amount being $543. Probable cause was found, and Hoffman was bound over to the grand jury. Bail was fixed at $2100.

READY FOR CORONATION

King Edward Receives Hearty Greeting Upon His Return to London

London, Aug. 7.—King Edward arrived at the Victoria station at 5:30 p. m. yesterday. Free access was allowed the public, except to the platform reserved for the king.

He descended from the train without assistance, and entered an open carriage, which started after a few minutes' delay for Buckingham palace. The king looked extremely well, and appeared to be in excellent spirits. The decrease of his weight, caused by the operation, gave him an appearance of greater height.

Judging by appearances, the king not only will be able to go through the coronation ceremonies, but will be perfectly capable of performing all functions of the service without discomfort.

The admiring cheers of the crowd along the king's route from Victoria station to Buckingham palace were mingled with expressions of amazement at the appearance of the king riding in an open landau and much of the time bareheaded, he having removed his hat. The king kept continually bowing and smiling in response to the cheers of the people. There was little rain during the drive to the palace. The long route via Grosvenor place and Hyde park corner and thence down Constitution hill was followed.

The king passed through a great sea of waving hats and handkerchiefs as he drove up to the palace. He was apparently not fatigued by the excitement of his reception.

The following official statement was made at Buckingham palace last night: "His majesty has borne the journey excellently and is very well indeed."

Target Practice by Jackies

Greenport, L. I., Aug. 7.—President Roosevelt yesterday participated on board the Mayflower in mimic warfare. The maneuvers which the ship executed were precisely those which might have to be gone through in an active battle, the substantial difference being that the enemy yesterday was an inanimate target. The gun practice of the crew of the Mayflower indicates that they are even more efficient and accurate than they were at Manila or Santiago.

Cartridges Set Off by Lightning

Philadelphia, Aug. 7.—During an electrical storm yesterday lightning struck a storehouse at the United States arsenal in Frankford, exploding 500,000 condemned cartridges. Charles Lennings' chemical works, opposite the arsenal, received almost the entire discharge of bullets, which tore away the tiled roofing and shattered nearly every pane of glass in the building. No one was injured.

Boer Ex-Presidents Meet

The Hague, Aug. 7.—The visit of Mr. Kruger yesterday to former President Steyn lasted only two minutes. Mr. Steyn's physician forbidding a longer interview. Mr. Kruger shook hands with Mr. Steyn and expressed the sincerest hopes for the latter's speedy recovery. Little more was said. Mr. Kruger remained at the house about a quarter of an hour in conversation with Mrs. Steyn.

Stogie and Cheroot Combine

Philadelphia, Aug. 7.—A combination of the leading stogie and cheroot manufacturers of the country has been formed in this city. The new corporation will, it is claimed, control from 90 to 95 percent of the stogie and cheroot trade. The chief object of the combine is said to be to place the American stogie in the foreign market.

China Heeded Protests

Pekin, Aug. 7.—The protests of the foreign ministers against the conditions in Sze-Chuen province have resulted in the issuance of an edict summarily deposing the viceroy and several minor officials.

Our Hebrew Population Swelled

Washington, Aug. 7.—According to a report received at the state department, 19,599 Hebrews immigrated to the United States from Romania during the three years ended June 30, 1902.

THE SHENANDOAH RIOT

Jury Places Responsibility For Killing of Beddal

TWO NAMED IN VERDICT

Nearly a Dozen Men In Custody and More Arrests to Follow—Foreigners Said to Intend to Cut Off Ears of "Unfair" Men When Caught

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 8.—The coroner's jury which has been investigating the death of Joseph Beddal, who received his fatal injuries in the riot here last week, concluded its inquiry yesterday and rendered a verdict holding "Joseph Paluwicz, a butcher; Matthew Paulaskas, a one-armed saloon-keeper, and many other rioters unknown to the jury" responsible for the killing. The men named in the verdict are now locked up and other arrests will follow. The two men were taken into custody yesterday afternoon by two constables, who were protected by a platoon of soldiers.

A large number of witnesses were examined. Some of the testimony was considered very important by the coroner and the jury. Six policemen testified that as they ran up the street, pursued by the mob, firing pistols, men standing at nearly every saloon door shot at them as they passed. At one doorway three men stood blazing away at them and from an upper window of a building three other men were shooting down on them. The drinking places referred to are all owned by foreigners.

During the inquest a number of names of persons who, it is alleged, were in the riot and the location of others, whose names are withheld, were furnished the coroner. These names will be given to the proper authorities and arrests made. One other foreigner who was shot was arrested yesterday on a charge of rioting. Nearly a dozen men are now in custody, charged with complicity in the affair.

The situation in this section of the coal field remains unchanged and staff officers at brigade headquarters do not apprehend any trouble in the near future. The troops had a quiet day yesterday. Two companies are still on guard duty in the foreign quarter of the town. The governor's troop of cavalry took a practice march of 20 miles through the Mahanoy valley.

Rev. Charles Edwards, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, and formerly state president of the Young Men's Bible society, said yesterday that the young men in his congregation, when is made up principally of mine workers, have informed him that foreigners have determined to cut off an ear of every man who returns to work, so that they will forever be marked as "unfair workmen." Mr. Edwards says his young men are in a position to know, and he believes the story. The foreigners think this is the easiest method for preventing attempts to break the strike.

Honors were even yesterday between the strikers and the operators in the matter of resumption and cessation. The Pancoast washery at Throop started up and the Nayaug washery at Dunmore shut down, the men having been induced to quit by a committee of strikers.

Hustling For Money

Scanton, Pa., Aug. 8.—Committees were appointed yesterday by the district board of the United Mine Workers to make a house to house canvass of the city and suburbs for financial aid for the strikers. It is understood the same plan will be followed in all the cities and larger towns in the coal regions.

Charged With Stealing Coal

Pittston, Pa., Aug. 8.—The Pennsylvania Coal company yesterday caused the arrest here of a number of miners who mined coal for their own use in abandoned workings and outcroppings. An official of the company says that since the strike began hundreds of tons of coal have been stolen from the company. The men taken into custody were bound over for court.

Coal Shipping Figures

Philadelphia, Aug. 8.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company, for the week ending Aug. 2, carried only 920 tons of anthracite coal. For the same week in 1901 the tonnage of anthracite amounted to 98,439 tons. Last week the company carried 587,035 tons of bituminous coal, against 385,747 tons the same week last year.

Churchmen to Manage Schools

London, Aug. 8.—The house of commons yesterday, by a majority of 122, adopted the clause of the government's education bill which gives the predominance in the management of voluntary schools to churchmen. This clause had been hotly opposed by the opposition, and its adoption will enable parliament to rise this week.

TRIPLE DROWNING

Two Men and a Woman Caught by Undertow at Old Orchard

Old Orchard, Me., Aug. 8.—A strong undertow, caused by the brisk east wind and high tides of the past few days, claimed the lives of three bathers here yesterday. The dead are George Ford, aged 70 years, of Ottawa; Walter Basham, aged 55, of Montreal, and Miss Florence J. Thomas, aged 20, also of Montreal.

The exact details of the accident probably never will be known as the three persons who formed the ill-fated party were the only bathers on that section of the beach at the time. The first that was known of the tragedy was when friends of the bathers, becoming anxious because of their prolonged absence from the hotel, went down to the beach just in time to see the body of Mr. Basham thrown up on the sands by an immense wave.

Boston, Aug. 8.—William C. Van Derlip, the lawyer accused of stealing property held by him as a trustee, appeared in the municipal court yesterday and had his case continued until Aug. 20. It is now said that in addition to the $200,000 which Van Derlip is alleged to have misappropriated from the Emerson estate (the property belonging to Judge Lowell's widow) two other properties are involved. According to Ely Bishop, who has been retained in regard to them, these further losses may amount to $50,000.

Four Persons Badly Hurt

New Britain, Conn., Aug. 8.—A two-seated carriage driven by John Slaney, and occupied by three young women, was struck by a third rail car at Forestville and all four persons were seriously injured, two of them probably fatally. The view of the track was obstructed by a freight train. The other occupants of the carriage were Miss Emma Dalton, Miss Sadie Dalton and Alice Spencer. The horse which Slaney was driving was killed and the carriage demolished. The crossing is a dangerous one.

Repairs Would Be Too Expensive

Boston, Aug. 8.—The Eastern Steamship company has surrendered the steamer Cumberland, which was recently badly damaged by collision in the harbor with the steamer Admiral Farragut, to the companies which insured her, and she is to be sold. It would cost between $65,000 and $70,000 to repair the Cumberland, so it was decided that it would be better to make a settlement with the insurance companies.

Shot Killed Intruder

Boston, Aug. 8.—The unknown man shot by George C. Smith, superintendent of the Phineas Stowe Sailors' home, Wednesday night, who had secured an entrance to the building presumably for the purpose of burglary, died yesterday. Smith, who is about 60 years old, feels keenly his position. He was arraigned in court and held in $500 to await the medical examiner's report next Tuesday.

Old Police Officer Dead

Boston, Aug. 8.—Former Superintendent of Police Benjamin P. Eldridge died yesterday after a long illness from Bright's disease. He was 64 years old. He joined the city police force in 1875, having previously been a member of the state police, and rose through the various grades to become superintendent in 1891. In 1901 he retired from active police duty on a pension.

Horse and Driver Had a Tumble

Rockland, Me., Aug. 8.—Spectators at the Knox trotting park yesterday were startled during a race when Morning News suddenly fell and both horse and Driver Pottle lay prostrate after rolling over several times, man and beast being dead so far as the horrified crowd could tell. Neither proved to be seriously hurt, however, and both took part in the next heat.

Shoe Plant Crippled

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 8.—The Joint Shoe council called out 30 cutters from C. A. Eaton's No. 2 shoe factory yesterday, making 230 now out, on account of alleged discrimination against union employes. The first strike benefits ever paid by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union in this city will be paid these strikers. The No. 1 factory of the firm has been shut down.

Preparing For Maneuvers

Block Island, R. I., Aug. 8.—A fleet of warships comprising the battleships Kearsarge, Alabama and Massachusetts, and the cruisers Olympia and Brooklyn and a dispatch boat, arrived off the old harbor yesterday and anchored. No one has come ashore and no one from here has boarded the fleet. Rear Admiral Higginson is in command.

Probably Struck a Wreck

Boston, Aug. 8.—The British steamer Mora, while entering port yesterday, struck an obstruction, which, it is feared, resulted in damage to her bottom. It is thought she bumped on some old wreck, which has been carried into the channel by the action of the tide, as the chart where she struck shows an ample depth of water.

Gubernatorial Aspirations

Exeter, N. H., Aug. 8.—General Stephen Hill Gale, two years ago a prominent candidate for congress, announces his candidacy for governor of New Hampshire. General Gale is a shoe manufacturer. He was a member of the staff of Governor Smith and has been a state senator and councillor.

SITUATION IS HOPEFUL

But New Haven Strike Still Remains Solid

BUSINESS MEN ARE ACTIVE

In Efforts to Bring About a Settlement by Arbitration—Refusal by Either Party Will Result In a Compulsory Hearing

New Haven, Aug. 8.—A better feeling is apparent in the big trolley strike situation and the members of the state board of mediation and arbitration were so satisfied with the outlook that they returned to their homes last night. The board arrived shortly before 4 o'clock and went at once to the mayor's office where a short conference was held with Mayor Studley. They commented favorably upon the quiet and orderliness that was manifest on the streets. After the conference with the mayor it was agreed on all sides that it would be well not to attempt to have a third party in the discussion at the present stage of the situation, especially as reports from the business men's committees were hopeful. Later in the afternoon and early in the evening a sub-committee from the business men met with the mayor and the members of the board of mediation and the situation was canvassed.

When the arbitration board left the office it was with the understanding that if an amicable settlement by arbitration cannot be reached today they shall be notified. Upon such information they will offer their services to the parties in conflict, and will endeavor to smooth out the trouble. If either of the parties, the strikers or the company, refuse to arbitrate, the board will proceed with an investigation, and, as they have power to do under the law, compel a hearing, and make report to the governor.

The business men's committees at their meeting late yesterday afternoon succeeded in clarifying the situation greatly. It was agreed to recommend to the company and the strikers that a committee of three men who are large employers of labor in the city shall sit as a board of arbitration and hear the company's evidence as to why 27 men were discharged prior to and soon after the formation of the union. The company claims that it was because of incompetency. If the committee of three is agreed upon it will be left to them to decide how many of the discharged men shall be reinstated. As to the other demand made by the men, namely that their union be recognized, there is now no doubt that the company will agree to it.

So far as could be ascertained no "strike breakers" have come into the city and no attempt has been made to run passenger cars. Travel is by stages and carriages. The streets are crowded in the centre by pedestrians, but all is quiet.

A thousand persons, the great majority being men, crowded into Music Hall last evening to attend the mass meeting called to express sympathy with the striking motormen and conductors. Strong resolutions to that effect and in denunciation of the methods of the management, were passed. Speeches, some of them denunciatory in tone and others less radical, were made by several prominent citizens.

King of Siam Is Scheming

Paris, Aug. 8.—The Matin, referring to the requests made by the French charge of affairs at Bangkok, Siam, to be recalled, declares it to be due to the intrigues of the King of Siam to seek protection from Japan or entry into the Anglo-Japanese alliance, but that France has ample military forces in the far east to make her rights respected. The Matin exonerates the Indian government from any responsibility for the King of Siam's intrigues.

Vatican's Course Disapproved

Chicago, Aug. 8.—The convention of Federated Catholic societies yesterday refused to express satisfaction at the manner in which the Philippine friar question is being handled by the Vatican and a resolution sanctioning such a course received only one affirmative vote. Resolutions were adopted expressing confidence in President Roosevelt and sympathizing with the friars.

Great Future For Porto Rico

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 8.—Governor Hunt of Porto Rico is in Lowell. He says the Porto Ricans have accommodated themselves to American institutions with most creditable and practical progress. Commerce is growing fast. Business men, he says, must remember that Porto Rico has a million people, and with free trade relations the sales of goods will be a large item.

No Change In Venezuela

Willemstad, Aug. 8.—The political situation in Venezuela remains unchanged. President Castro with an army of 6000 men arrived yesterday at Cua. The revolutionists continue to hold up railway trains. Political prisoners to the number of 40 who were in Caracas have arrived at Maracaibo in chains.

Canadian Boat First

Montreal, Aug. 8.—The first race in the Seawanhaka cup series on Lake St. Louis ended in a victory for Trident, the Canadian defender. It was a regular procession and the start really decided the day.

Viking Ship Unearthed

Christiana, Aug. 8.—A Viking ship 49 feet long has been unearthed on the island of Karmoe.

Fifteen Killed In Wreck

Marshalltown, Ia., Aug. 8.—At least 15 persons were killed and 40 injured in the freight wreck on the Milwaukee road. Of the injured two or three cannot recover. It is thought possible that more bodies may be found, as the wreckage has not been entirely cleared away.

Stepped In Front of Train

Woonsocket, R. I., Aug. 8.—Two young men as yet unidentified, while walking on the railroad track here last night, stepped out of the way of a freight train and were struck by a passenger train. One was instantly killed and the other died a short time later.

His Skull Fractured

New Haven, Aug. 8.—Falling 60 feet to the ground and striking the iron work on the big tank which the New Haven Gas Light company is building, Frank Blue's skull was fractured. He died at a hospital last night.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

The Tecumseh, selected as a challenger for the Canada's Cup, was not in it. Thursday with the Trident, the Canadian defender. The Flashlight should challenge the Tecumseh.

The Weather Bureau reports that devastating rains have caused floods in many sections, while crops are burning up in others. The corn crop has, perhaps, been the greatest sufferer—but the chances are there will be more than an average crop. Peaches are said to be plenty, Connecticut alone furnishing 600,000 baskets.

Quincy people have taken considerable interest in Quincy designed boat, sailed wholly by a Quincy crew, which made a gallant attempt to win back the Quincy challenge cup. We appreciate the favorable comments on the course of Skipper Faxon, who surrendered the race which he won by a walkover. The presence of so many Quincy people at the races was encouraging, and it surprised the Manchester people. Try again.

Drift of Opinion.

☞This is a Kansas year. Everything in Kansas is in demand. A Kickapoo man has just sold a billygoat for $60. Nobody but a Kansas man could have gotten 60 cents for him.—Arkansas Traveller.

☞The twenty "brave bachelors" of Dedham who have agreed among themselves to shun the society of women ought to be let severely alone by the marriageable maidens, but it is not likely that they will be. When a young woman thinks she would like to annex one of the score, let her alone for finding a way to do it. It will not be at all surprising if every one of the twenty bachelors become a benedict before another summer. — Boston Transcript.

Information has been given out that the Attleboro jewelry manufacturers find their business dull, with a small market, and that they do not look for an increased demand until the prices for the necessities of life are lower. It is not impossible, of course, that the increase in the prices of provisions, coal, and rents should cause a slackening in the demand for jewelry. In those cases where income has not increased, or has increased but slightly, men and women are finding that they are not having so much surplus as they had to spend on luxuries. According to a report recently issued by the Massachusetts bureau of labor statistics, the quantity of roasting beef purchasable for $1 now is 16.64 per cent. less than it was in 1897. The same money now secures 32.29 per cent. less of mutton, 28.10 per cent. less of fresh pork, and 25.21 per cent. less of salt pork. Of poor beef, fit for soups or corning, four pounds less can be bought for $1 than in 1897. As prosperity does not enable men to eat less than is consumed in adversity, naturally some of the money that would go into watch chains and breastpins is diverted to pork and beef. For the best returns to the jewelry makers, incomes should be large and the cost of provisions should be small. —New Bedford Standard.

THURSDAY'S RACE.

Some Comments of the Boston Dailies.

Good Work of the Flashlight.

Outlook, However, the Best All Round Boat.

More than once Thursday it was remarked to the Ledger representative at the Quincy Cup race, during the beat to the windward, that the Josephine and the Quincy excursionists should be present to witness the work of the Flashlight. It was a grand struggle, and when the Quincy challenger took the lead fifteen minutes from the start and allowed the crew of the Outlook to read her name for nearly half an hour, the prospects seemed good that she might win a leg for the cup. The way the Flashlight dashed through the water was very satisfactory to the small Quincy contingent present. Commodore Sheppard and party were there in a small launch and also two or three of the cruising yachts.

The press is under obligation to Mr. E. C. Swift, of the Chicago meat firm, who kindly tendered the use of his spic and span and speedy little steamer, the Helena, during the races. The Ledger would also return thanks to Mr. C. E. Cotting and family for valuable assistance. It surprised many to see Quincy take so much interest in the races.

SHE CAN GO.

The Globe says: There is no question of the Outlook's superiority, but there were several moments of anxiety for the Manchester crew and adherents, for 13 minutes after the start of the race the Flashlight crossed her bows and led over the greater part of the first windward leg. The Quincy boat lost her commanding position when near the turning mark and was handicapped on both runs by not setting a spinnaker. The Flashlight's showing was astonishing, compared with her previous exhibitions on the wind. The conditions of wind and water were more nearly to her liking than hitherto and she demonstrated that she can go.

LOOKED LIKE A WINNER.

The Journal says: The race was an exciting one. At times during the first half Flashlight looked like the winner. On the thrash to windward in the first half of the race she did clever work, but later, when the wind fell off, she was not able to do so well. She proved herself an excellent boat in a strong breeze. Outlook, however, stands without a rival on all points of sailing. In fairness it should be stated that Flashlight was bothered considerably during the first half of the beat by sailing and steam craft. Her wind was broken time and again, as the judges saw, and in answer to Faxon's protests they succeeded in driving the fleet to leeward of her. It is strange that masters of steam and sailing craft will crowd racing boats on a course invariably getting to windward of them. It is quite a common event, however.

THE FEATURE.

The Boston Advertiser says: The feature of the final race was the work of the Flashlight over the first leg to the Little Haste bouy. By short tacks off Misery Island, she tried to cross the Outlook's bow, but Capt. Boardman had the right of way, and the Outlook kept her lead. Again the Flashlight tried to pass the Manchester boat, and she succeeded. On the beat to Little Haste she opened up a lead over the Outlook, and with a strong 12 knot breeze it looked for the first time as if she might get a cup leg. Wider and wider became her lead, and for the first time in one of the cup series the Faxon 21-footer beat out her rival. However toward the finish of the first leg, Outlook passed her.

SPINNAKER NEEDED.

The Herald says: Those who saw the race were of the opinion, however, that had the Flashlight's spinnaker been set she would have held the Outlook better off the wind. Both skippers handled their boats well, and both boats were hit hard and knocked down time and again by heavy puffs. The Outlook, with less sail in the weather work, took the puffs easier than the Flashlight. The latter threw her weather centreboard completely out at times, and seemed to be almost on her uppers before she was eased. Boats of the scow type, of such extreme beam, seem to be heeled worse than they really are when it blows. They throw out quite a side to weather, but yesterday both were laid out at sharp angles at times. Designer Burgess did well in the Outlook, both in design and construction. The Flashlight proved a good boat in a breeze.

GOOD SHOWING.

The Post says: Although beaten by a more decisive margin, the Flashlight made the best all around showing of any of her performances. In the first leg to windward she actually beat the Manchester scow. None of the weaknesses she showed in windward performances in her first two races was noticeable. She fared better because for the first time her club topsail was not set. It had been hindering her more than it helped her.

Flashlight Returns.

If there was any protest of the Outlook by the Flashlight on Thursday, it was not allowed, for there was no race today. The Outlook having won three races of the series has successfully defended the Quincy Challenge Cup, and it will remain for another year at least in the possession of the Manchester Yacht Club.

The Flashlight left Marblehead for home early this morning, and put into Nahant when the storm broke. She reached Quincy this afternoon.

West Quincy Line Up.

The West Quincys will have the former battery of the Rice and Hutchins team for their game of Saturday in Boston with the Roslindales—Sawyer and Henry. The other players will be: Parks, 1st; Kiley, 2d; Rofferty, 3d; Spiller, s. s.; Duffy, lf.; Tate, cf.; Logan, rf.

For Congress.

Hon. Charles I. Quirk of Ward 17, Boston, made the announcement Thursday that he would be a candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination in the 10th district, now represented by Congressman Henry F. Naphen. W. S. McNary and Fred S. Gore are also mentioned.

VOLCANOES.

Some Facts About These Vents to the Earth's Interior Fire.

Eons ago the earth on which we live was a huge mass of "fire mist." Astronomers tell us that today in the heavens we can see vast nebulæ, suggesting what the earth was once. Gradually the surface of the "fire mist" cooled and hardened, but the interior is still intensely hot. Whether it is solid, liquid or viscous we do not know. This heat, raging miles below the surface, at times escapes through the hard crust by vents or volcanoes.

There are from 300 to 360 volcanoes on the globe. This estimate includes merely live volcanoes which within recent times have been in action. If we should count the many mountains scattered over the earth which show today signs of volcanic action in more remote past, the estimate would have to be increased by many hundreds.

Volcanoes would seem to be arranged with more or less symmetry in belts circling the great oceans. A ring of fire surrounds the Pacific. Starting at the South Shetland islands, several hundred miles south of Cape Horn, a belt of volcanoes extends up the west coast of South America, Central America and North America; from Alaska it crosses the Pacific along the Aleutian islands to Kamchatka; thence it follows the east edge of the Pacific through the Kurile islands, Japan, Formosa, the Philippines, the Moluccas, the Solomon islands, the North Hebrides, New Zealand and finally ends in Mounts Terror and Erebus, on the Antarctic continent.—Geographic Magazine.

Economical.

A young man living on Walnut Hills is a close worker in money matters—that is, he stays close to the shore with his expenditures. He had the good luck to marry a girl whose parents are quite wealthy and is at present living with his wife in one of his father-in-law's houses.

One day not long since while discussing affairs with a friend the latter asked:

"Did the old gentleman give you that house?"

"Well—er—no, not exactly," was the answer. "He offered it to me, but I wouldn't accept it."

"How's that?" asked the friend.

"Well," answered the man who had made the lucky matrimonial venture, "you see, the house really belongs to me. I'm living in it, rent free, and I'll get it when the old man dies. If I accepted it now, I'd have to pay the taxes."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Sleepwalking.

"Ten per cent of the world's population is more or less somnambulistic," said a physician, according to the Philadelphia Record, "and every one, at one time or another, has done a little sleepwalking. I myself when a lad got up, dressed, took my books and went to school on a summer night, my father following close behind to see that I should come to no harm.

"Blond persons are more apt to be somnambulists than dark folk, and in cold climates there is more somnambulism than in warm ones. In certain Greenland villages, I have been told, the hut doors are locked from without by a watchman in order that those within may not come forth in their sleep and maybe freeze to death, but in Egypt and such like hot lands such precaution is unnecessary."

AT THE SHIPYARD.

Will Soon Bend Sails of the Lawson—Keel Laid for Car Float.

The keel has been laid for the first of the two big car floats that are to be built at Fore River for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. The blocks are set on the beach between the cruiser Des Moines and the stocks from which the seven-masted schooner has just been launched. All of the materials for both floats are on hand now and the construction work, which is somewhat peculiar, will be pushed as fast as possible.

The Lawson's topmasts have been stepped at Fore River and Captain Crowley expects to begin bending the schooner's sails in about a fortnight. The steering gear is already installed, the joiner work in the cabin is nearly finished, and the other work on the big fore-and-after is going forward so fast that she seems likely to be ready for sea sooner than was expected.

The first section of concrete of the new Fore River fitting-out dock is completed and the piling for the whole structure is practically finished. The gantry crane is as nearly assembled as it can be before the track on which it will travel up and down the dock is laid. The basin will be ready to receive the cruiser Des Moines immediately after her launching, September 20.

Receivers Appointed.

The Cape Ann Granite Company of Gloucester and Rockport is in the hands of receivers. By order of Judge Colt, issued Thursday afternoon in the United States Court, M. F. Dickinson and R. F. Herrick were appointed receivers. The Cape Ann Granite Company was incorporated under the laws of Maine and operating granite quarries at Gloucester and Rockport, Mass.

Several names are signed to the petition—bondholders and creditors of the corporation, but the leader in the movement to regulate the future affairs of the company is the Boston & Gloucester Steamship Company.

According to the papers filed in the case, the receivership is asked for by creditors and bondholders on the ground that the company is insolvent, "has defaulted in paying the interest on its bonds," an that attachments have been made in several suits," and "that a receivership would be for the best interest of all concerned to prevent any waste or undue loss in the failure of the business."

—Daniel Murray, a quarryman employed at McDonald, Cutler & Co's quarry at Barre, was fatally injured by a blast on Thursday.

How it reddens the skin, itches, oozes, dries and scales!

The suffering from it is sometimes intense; local applications are resorted to—they mitigate, but cannot cure.

Not Over-Wise

AT THE SEASIDE.

Houghs Neck Is Having an Unusually Good Season.

The season at Houghs Neck is at its height. Practically every cottage is taken and one cannot be hired for love or money. As a whole the season has been a very successful one. The weather has not been all that could be desired, but there has been an unusually large number of visitors this year. Free transfers on the street cars have been the reason. The man with a large family cannot afford to take them for a long excursion, but five cents from any part of Quincy makes it possible to give them all an outing at this place. The street railway company has given excellent service this year and there has been no cause for complaint.

According to all reports there is need of a night officer to preserve order and make it possible for people who so desire to sleep. It is said that there are crowds of young men and girls who make things lively after the officer has taken the car for Quincy. While he is about they keep rather quiet. After that they "whoop her up," and sleep is an impossibility for those unfortunate enough to live in the cottages near by.

There was a large attendance at the shirtwaist party Monday night at Kaplan's hall. The object was to raise funds for the children's day, during the carnival. A goodly sum was realized.

R. J. Teasdale of West Quincy is at a cottage on the shore front.

J. C. McMannus and family of South Boston are in a cottage on Winthrop street.

J. C. Miller and family of Dorchester are at the Colonial cottage on Great Hill.

The finance committee are making a round of the beach soliciting funds for the Carnival. The elaborateness of the program depends on the amount of money raised.

Mrs. McCarthy and family of Dorchester are in a cottage on Bay View avenue.

Mrs. J. J. O'Callahan of the Ivy Bank cottage is entertaining Miss Minnie McSweeney of Woburn.

Mrs. Mary Hart of West Quincy is the guest of R. J. Teasdale.

Water Award.

Holyoke is going through the same experience as Quincy. The commissioners appointed four years ago by the Massachusetts supreme court to report on the litigation resulting over the amount of money involved by the change to municipal ownership of the Holyoke water power company, met Wednesday in the Boston office of Judge E. C. Bumpus and submitted a preliminary report of its findings. The commission awards the company $708,790, about half the sum claimed by the company.

The preliminary report will be submitted to the counsel for the contending parties, Nathan Matthews, Jr. and A. L. Green representing the city, and W. H. Brooks the company. They will present any questions to the Supreme court together with this finding in October, when the court will pass finally upon the case. The commisssoners, beside Judge Bumpus of Quincy, are James E. Cotter of Hyde Park and Edmund K. Turner of Marblehead,

The case is the first under the municipal lighting act passed in 1897, and the cost of litigation has been very large. It has been estimated that the expenses of the commission and the counsel fees will reach $250,000. It is believed that the award will be generally considered by the citizens a fair one.

TODAY'S COURT.

Bradford W. Gay was fined $1 for assault on Michael Allen at Weymouth and put under $100 bonds to keep the peace for two months.

Daniel Mahoney was fined $3 for drunkenness at Quincy.

A BUSY MONTH.

July Crime Far in Excess of Other Months.

The month of July was a record breaker for the district court, as far as criminal cases are concerned. Never since the court was established in Quincy has there been anywhere near as many cases in one month as in July.

Probation Officer Francis A. Spear reports the whole number of criminal cases before the court during the month to have been 203, against 134 for June, 182 for May and 104 for April. Of the July cases, 71 were for drunkenness; 21 for assault; 17 for violation of by-laws; 12 for larceny; 8 for malicious injury to real estate; 24 liquor cases; 6 for threats; 5 for disturbing the peace; 4 for peddling without a license; 3 each for bastardy, malicious mischief, trespass and search for stolen goods; 2 each for adultery, cruelty to animals, keeping pool table without a license, non-support, riding bicycle on sidewalk, sale of leased property, stubborn child, vagrant violation of Board of Health rules; one each for assault with intent to murder, burning an American flag, sale of incumbered real estate, lewdness and receiving stolen goods.

On the first of August there were 30 unfinished July cases; 10 June cases; 7 May; 3 April; 6 March; 2 February and 1 January.

Unknown Killed.

One of the large cars on the Nantasket line in charge of Conductor Fred Belcher and Motorman William Clark, ran over and killed an unknown man about 9 o'clock Thursday night on Lincoln street, Hingtam.

The car was coming toward Quincy but was not heavily loaded. The place where the accident happened was one of the darkest on the line. The conductor had no warning of anyone being on the track until he felt a grinding under the wheels. He stopped the car to investigate and found a badly mutilated body of a man under the car. The body had evidently been dragged one hundred feet. The car had to be jacked up before the body could be taken out.

It was that of a man apparently 25 or 30 years of age. He had a sandy mustache and dark hair closely cut. He wore a soft black hat, blue faded overalls, white cotton undershirt and blue coat and vest.

On the track there was found a pocket mirror and in the clothing sixty cents and a tobacco pouch containing a piece of soap.

There is no clew to who the man was and up to this noon he had not been identified.

It is believed that the man was under the influence of liquor and laid on the tracks and went to sleep. No blame is attached to either the motorman or conductor.

There are 13,289 polls assessed, an increase of 782; valuation of buildings, $13,438,225, an increase of $433,025; valuation of land, $11,853,118, an increase of $58,875; total of real estate, $25,348,005; value of personal estate, $4,071,451.50; increase of $246,703.25.

One of the interesting events scheduled by Quincy Yacht club for Saturday is a race between naphtha launches. Quite a rivalry exists between Mayor Bryant and W. J. Tilley as to who has the fastest launch, and it is expected that this race will settle the question.

DRESS HINTS.

A woman is not well dressed if she has a hole in her stocking.

A blond may wear pure white with advantage, but the brunette nearly always looks better in cream colored fabrics.

To remove grease from cloth sponge it with a solution of salt in alcohol. The right proportion is one teaspoonful of salt to four of alcohol.

If an ecru tinge be desired in lace, place powdered saffron in water and allow the lace to lie in it, increasing the strength until the desired tint is obtained.

A piece of inch wide white satin ribbon sewed inside the neckband of a bodice protects the throat from the defacing mark that is a common result of wearing high dress collars. Sew it in so that it will not show at all on the article.

Always iron coat collars and cuffs that are to have several rows of stitching round the edge before putting them in the machine and again after the stitching is done and put skirts into the band and see that they are the right length all round before finishing off the bottom hem.

How One Mother Managed.

"Why do you always dress your two daughters alike?" queried a society woman of a friend. "It must be a great deal of trouble, and, as they are not twins, it is not necessary."

"Well," answered the other quite frankly, "it is because of the effect. My girls are rather ordinary looking—not plain; in fact, rather pretty, I think, and with fairly good figures, but quite unnoticeable in their appearance. If one were in brown and the other in blue on the street, no one would ever give them a second glance, but dressed alike they look really distinguished.

"It is the same in a ballroom. When they go in together in pretty, fresh gowns, they accentuate each other, so to speak, and the simplest toilet becomes striking. A pink bow by itself is a pink bow and nothing else, but two pink bows become immediately an arrangement.

"You see that idea exemplified on the stage in a ballet. It is the repetition of dress that gives the effect. If the dancers were in different costumes, it would be lost completely. Of course, as you say, it is a bother to have everything to match, and when one frock is ruined that renders the other useless too. Still, I think it pays."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Care of the Nails.

A young woman who has been living in Paris for a year says that no French manicure who treated her hands used a cuticle knife about her nails or a steel nail cleaner. The little orange wood sticks sharpened to a broad point were used to push back the encroaching cuticle and to clean the nails after each washing of the hands. In this way the delicate enamel of the nail is not injured and the under surface of the nail point is kept smooth. The French manicures, too, polish more often with a bit of chamois than with a regular polisher and cut the nails with a clipper instead of curved scissors. These clippers come in pairs, one for cutting the nails of each hand. An emery board or a velvet file is recommended for the little filing needed to shape the nails. Never cut the cuticle around the nail, but press back lightly with the orange wood stick. Daily brief care, when the nail is soft from the use of soap and water, is all that is needed to keep the hands in good condition, with a weekly manicuring. Use lemon juice instead of any other acid to remove stains.—Harper's Bazar.

Service Plates.

Service plates are put at each place and remain usually under whatever dish may be used for the preliminary courses until the first hot course. For example, the oyster or clam plate rests on the service plate, and when it is removed the bouillon or soup plate takes its place. With the hot fish course the waitress removes the service plate and substitutes the filled plate. She places the service plate on a side table. The plates should not be in a pile before the carver, but the waitress takes a hot plate from the side table or buffet and places it before the carver. One of the newest fads is to have service plates of silver or rare china, which are placed on the table at the beginning of the dinner and remain on until dessert. In case you possess some extra rare or pretty plates this is an excellent way to show them off. It is also a fad to have the service plates harmonize in color with the floral decorations.

Housework Dresses.

The woman who does her own housework should first of all supply herself with suitable dresses. Cheap material should be employed, and they should be simply made, so as to be easy to be laundered. Heavy cambric, white ground, figured in black or any color, is the most serviceable material. It should be made severe shirt waist fashion, cut V shape at the neck, thus doing away with the high collar, which would be very uncomfortable in the kitchen. The sleeves should be finished in as simple a fashion as possible and end just below the elbow. Three or four of these dresses are absolutely necessary.

A Table Decoration.

Hand painted ribbons make a pretty table decoration for a change. A wide white satin ribbon is placed all along the table at either side, bearing hand painted designs at intervals. Hunting scenes make the most effective designs, with all the scenes placed in proper order from start to finish, but I have also seen designs from the seasons very effectively arranged in this way, so that it was spring at one end of the table and winter at the other.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

She Ventured.

She ventured in the briny deep
A little while ago
And yelled for murder, fire, police!
A crab had pinched her toe.

And, though at that momentous time
Her screams were plainly heard,
Yet when a lobster squeezed her waist
She didn't say a word.

ENTIRELY TOO CLEVER.

Experience of a Doctor In Prescribing For a Patient.

An anonymous physician who has written some "confessions" for the Independent tells this story about himself:

"I received a request to call from an old patient who was afraid she was taking scarlet fever. I responded at once. The patient was one of two elderly sisters whom I had attended for many years. I greeted her in the sitting room and noted her pulse while in the act of shaking hands with her. By some witty remark I contrived to make her laugh, which enabled me to see her tongue. Then I said in a playful tone: 'If you will get me a glass I will treat you to some of my patent soda water.' She did so. I put a tablet in the water and she drank it.

"I want you to know that I take pride in my original methods. I try to educate my patients to like, and not to dread, the visits of the doctor. In this case all of my work had been done without the direct knowledge of the patient and I felt very good over it. So I bade my patient goodby with extreme cheerfulness.

"She looked surprised, and then said: 'Of course you will come upstairs and see my sister?' 'Not today,' I said. 'Give her my respects.' 'Why,' she said, looking mystified and startled, 'how strangely you talk!' 'Strangely?' I echoed. 'Why?' 'Because I sent for you to prescribe for my sister and you decline to see her.' It flashed over my mind in an instant. I had prescribed for the wrong sister. I was entirely too clever."

Where Smoking Is a Sin.

Palgrave, in his interesting book describing his journey to the sacred city of Mecca, gives an amusing account of his conversation with a mollah.

On asking the reverend gentleman which he considered the most deadly of all sins the holy man replied:

"Smoking the shameful."

"And next, O son of the prophet?"

"Drinking."

"Are these the two greatest sins, father?"

"Verily, my son."

"And murder?"

"Ah, that's nothing—nothing. It's forgivable."

"And stealing?"

"Ah, that's forgivable too."

"But smoking?"

"It is the unforgivable crime," replied the mollah sternly and looking keenly at the fictitious Mohammedan.

And this is the Afghan's creed. Murder and theft are forgivable crimes, but for smoking and drinking there is no redemption.

The Man With the Fiddle.

The little old man fiddled very hard as he stood near the curbstone in Twenty-third street. The passersby looked at him curiously. Some of them smiled. No one gave him a penny. Presently he was seen to totter and then to fall, but he kept on fiddling just the same, even when he lay prone upon his back. A man helped him to his feet. He never missed a note. A little boy who had been regarding him with keen interest went up to him. Suddenly the bow hung poised and motionless. The little old man had run down. The boy bought him for a quarter, however. The vender showed him how to start the fiddle up again, and the two went off together, happy and contented.—New York Press.

Unconvinced.

A Presbyterian preacher in the central part of New York state tells this story on himself:

"It was Sunday morning, and I had started for church. The family were preparing to follow when the youngest, a five-year-old, protested, "I do not want to go to church."

"'I don't feel much like it myself, Fred, this morning,' replied his mother, 'but we must go. Father has to go—has gone already, and he has to preach.'

"'Yes,' said Fred, unconvinced, 'but we have to listen, and that's worser.'"

How Do You Make a Circle?

The intelligence of people may be gauged by asking them to make a circle on paper with a pencil and noting in which direction the hand is moved. The good student in a mathematical class draws circles from left to right. The inferiority of the softer sex, as well as the male dunces, is shown by their drawing from right to left. Asylum patients do the same.—London Family Doctor.

The Suit.

Lawyer (to timid young woman)—Have you ever appeared as witness in a suit before?

Young Woman (blushing)—Y-yes, sir; of course.

Lawyer—Please state to the jury just what suit it was.

Young Woman (with more confidence)—It was nun's veiling, shirred down the front and trimmed with a lovely blue, with hat to match—

Why He Cried.

Old Gentleman—Why are you crying, my little man?

Small Boy (sobbing)—I dreamed last night that the school burned down, and—

Old Gentleman (sympathetically)—Oh, but I don't believe that it has.

Small Boy—Neither do I. I kin see the top of it over the hill.

Never Make a Player.

First Caddie—I saw ye carrying for the minister, yesterday, Donald. What kin' o' player is he?

Second Caddie—Man, he'll never mak' a gowffer! D'ye ken what he says when he misses the ba'?

First Caddie—No; what does he say?

Second Caddie (disgustedly)—"Tut, tut!"—Glasgow Times.

Making History.

While we read history we make history. Every great crisis of human history is a pass of Thermopylæ, and there is always a Leonidas and his 300 to die in it if they cannot conquer. And so long as liberty has one martyr, so long as one drop of blood is poured out for her, so long from that bloody sweat of the agony of humanity shall spring hosts as countless as the forest leaves and mighty as the sea.—George William Curtis.

A Bee Line.

The directness of the bee's flight is proverbial. The shortest distance between any two given points is called a bee line. Many observers think that the immense eyes with which the insect is furnished greatly assist if they do not entirely account for the arrowy straightness of its passage through the air.

WATERMAN'S PATIENCE

Became Exhausted by Systematic Robberies

RESORTED TO SPRING GUN

Because His Mill Had Been So Frequently Entered During Past Sixteen Years—Finally Led to Undoing of the "Gentleman Burglar"

Chester, Vt., Aug. 8.—C. H. Waterman, at whose grist mill, it is believed, Clarence Adams sustained the gunshot wounds which led to his detection as a burglar, has explained how he came to resort to the expedient of a spring-gun in order to find out who was robbing him. He says that times without number for the past 16 years the mill has been entered, and from attempting to blow the safe the robbers turned to carrying off grain. During the past three years, the visits of the thief had become systematic, but so alert was the robber that all attempts, short of the trap into which Adams is believed to have fallen, failed. It was only that the miller felt that he had stood the situation beyond possibility of further endurance that he decided to take the serious measure which he did, and, having set the gun, was sure that it was so pointed as to damage only the legs of a person by its discharge.

Waterman and his brother bought the mill 16 years ago. They had been there only a few days when the mill was entered and the safe blown open with powder. The robbers got very little, but the safe was ruined. A new safe was obtained. A few months later an attempt was made to wreck this, but only the lock and handle were broken.

During the next few years Waterman Bros. were not aware of losing anything by theft, but breaks were almost continually occurring in different parts of the town. The railroad station, postoffice, almost every store, and many private hou s suffered a loss of from a few dollars to $1500 or more, and during all this time only a single arrest was made, and nothing was proven in that case.

Last spring the depredations at the mill became so numerous that Mr. Waterman thought of setting the gun at the window where the thief entered. He hesitated, and still his property continued to disappear. On the night of July 3 a large lot of grain was stolen. Then Waterman's patience ceased. He set a gun, loaded with small shot, in such a way that it would hit the thief in the legs if he attempted to enter the window again. On July 4 it was placed in position. Mr. Waterman carried the mill keys himself, and knew positively that no one could be injured by it except the thief who attempted to enter the window. It was taken down in the day time. On the night of July 28 the gun was discharged, and Waterman says he was as much surprised and shocked as anyone to learn that Clarence Adams, his honored fellow townsman, has apparently received the shot.

Took Only "Necessary" Methods

Tromsoe, Aug. 8.—Evelyn B. Baldwin, the Arctic explorer, in an interview yesterday characterized the reports of difficulties on board the America during the recent Baldwin-Zeigler expedition to the north as incorrect. He said further that he had only taken such measures on board the America as were necessary for the interests of the expedition, and that he would pusue his aim to reach the north pole as vigorously as ever.

THIRTEEN MINERS KILLED

Explosion of Fire Damp Responsible For Disaster In Colorado

Trinidad, Col., Aug. 8.—An explosion occurred last night at No. 3 mine at Bowen, a small camp about 10 miles north of this place. Thirteen lives are known to have been lost. The exact number of men working on the night shift and in the mine at the time of the explosion is unknown. The mine is worked by the Union Coal company of Denver. It is a slope mine, situated on the mountain side and about 400 yards from the tipple below. The explosion occurred about 800 feet from the mouth of the slope and was caused by fire damp.

Immediately after the night shift had started in the slope a startling explosion occurred, entirely filling the mouth of the slope and shaking buildings and breaking windows a mile distant. As the mouth of the slope was filled the rescuers were delayed for some time, but succeeded in reaching some of the men through an old slope and eight dead bodies were quickly brought to the surface.

The mine is filled with gas and smoke and the rescuers are afraid of after damp and are able to stay in the mine but a very short time. Mothers, wives and children of the dead and imprisoned miners are almost crazed with grief and the scene presented at the mouth of the mine is a most pathetic one.

The powder house in the mine, usually containing 1000 pounds of powder, blew up, and it is this which caused so great a disaster.

The general belief is that the entire mine has been ruined and if not it will take months to get it in working order again. The rescuing party is pushing forward with all possible haste and before many hours the exact number of lives lost and the total amount of damage can be determined.

Constellation Led the Way

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Aug. 8.—The run of the New York Yacht club cruise from Newport to this port was made in a magnificent westerly breeze which sent the yachts over the course of 37 miles at a fast clip and proved record-breaking in the history of runs between these two ports. The Boston schooner Constellation covered the distance in 3:32:01, and won the race in the large schooner class. Schooner Corona won in class B, schooner Elmina in class D. For the sloops, the Yankee won in class H, the Queen Mab in class I, the Humma in class K and the Ondawa in class L. There were a number of minor accidents.

A Railroad Battle

Baltimore, Aug. 8.—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company has served notice on the Western Maryland Railroad company that it will discontinue the business turned over to the latter at Cherry Run. This is a formality in connection with the threatened diversion of traffic. It is regarded here as the first blow aimed by the Pennsylvania railroad at the Western Maryland railroad in retaliation for the plans of the Gould's to convert this property into a trunk line competitor of the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania.

KING EDWARD'S FEELINGS

Expressed In a Proclamation of Thanks to His Subjects

London, Aug. 8.—The following message from King Edward to his people was made public last night:

"To my people: On the eve of my coronation, an event which I look upon as one of the most solemn and important of my life, I am anxious to express to my people at home and in the colonies and India my heartfelt appreciation of the deep sympathy they have manifested toward me during a time in my life of such imminent danger. The postponment of the coronation ceremony, owing to my illness, has caused, I fear, much inconvenience and trouble to all who intended to celebrate it. But their disappointment has been borne by them with admirable patience and temper.

"The prayers of my people for my recovery were heard, and I now offer up my deepest gratitude to divine providence for having preserved my life and given me strength to fulfil the important duties which devolve upon me as sovereign of this great empire."

King Edward's proclamation was conceived and written by himself in a letter to Home Secretary Ritchie. In addressing this communication to the home secretary the king is following the traditions observed by the late Queen Victoria when she addressed personal messages to the nation.

Gotham's "Hotels" Are Numerous

New York, Aug. 8.—Mayor Low, on the subject of the police and the excise law, specifies the requirements of the Raines law and says that the police will be expected to enforce them, adding: "But they are not bound and neither will they be expected ordinarily, in the enforcement of this law, and of others like it, to go beyond what they can accomplish in full uniform." The mayor says that a large number of places which to the ordinary sight appear to be saloons have a legal right to sell liquor on Sunday, about one saloon in five being a "hotel" under the provision of the Raines law.

Treasury Won't Pay the Bill

Washington, Aug. 8.—Some days ago the secretary of the navy, in a letter to the controller of the treasury, stated that it was deemed desirable that the committee on naval affairs of the house be given an opportunity to witness the naval maneuvers during the coming month, and asking whether if a vessel was placed at their disposition for this purpose the expenses of their necessary and proper subsistence on board could be paid out of the appropriation for the contingent expenses of the navy. The controller has replied in the negative.

Zionists Will Try Again

Dr. Herzl says he still has hopes of being able to convince the porte of the beneficial results which would result from the settlement of Jews in Palestine.

A Flourishing Industry

Twenty-four freight ships are under contract and every berth at the lake yards is filled for the entire winter. The present season will be the most active in the history of ship building and transportation ever known on the American lakes.

KING EDWARD VII.

Edward VII Proclaimed King of Great Britian and Ireland and all the British Possessions.

The Social Realm.

'Tis sweet to linger in the mellow grass
Beside the margin of a lisping stream,
And watch the clouds in white flotillas pass,
While Nature slumbers in a fragrant dream;
To list the robin's song so soft and sweet,
Like ripples of an Eden interlude,
Float down cool woodland avenues replete
With benisons of drowsy solitude;
To note the fingers of the lazy breeze
Play symphonies upon the languid ferns,
And on the bearded wheat make mimic seas.
With bliss the idle dreamer dizzy turns
And thinks, as kine bells tinkle on his ear,
Keats' melodious spirit wanders near.

Woman's World

A BUSY WOMAN LAWYER.

Miss Margaret Burnet, a Portia of the New York Bar.

It is trite, but none the less true, to say of Miss Margaret May Burnet of New York that she combines the dignity and astuteness of a Portia with the athletic prowess of a Diana. Imagine Portia modernized and strictly up to date, and you will have a fairly accurate idea of the personality of the young woman lawyer who presides over the Rockefeller branch of the Legal Aid society.

Imagine Shakespeare's cleverest heroine after a strenuous day in the halls of justice—the erstwhile sober, hard headed Portia—relaxing her bench stiffened legs by a run over the golf links; imagine her tossing the tennis ball and tackling on the college gridiron or developing the judiciary biceps by a friendly bout with the "gloves."

Just imagine the charming, clever Portia of classic memory doing all these modern athletic "stunts," and if you would see the materialization of your fancy step into a tiny office on the second floor of 741 Tenth avenue. Here Miss Burnet can be found every workday of the week from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the evening, and it is safe to say that here you will find the hardest worked lawyer in this city, barring none.

When visited about 11 o'clock one morning recently, there were fifteen clients awaiting Miss Burnet's return from the Tenth District court, where [illegible] engaged in a trial. Her clients were men [illegible] the middle and lower walks of life.

"Yes, I do everything in the athletic line," Miss Burnet said in answer to a question. "I play golf, baseball, football, basket ball and tennis, which I like best of all. I am also very fond of boxing, and I think it one of the best recreations for women. I am only surprised that more women do not learn the art of handling the gloves, especially women whose work takes them out a great deal unprotected."

As an example of athletic young womanhood Miss Burnet is probably unequaled by any other girl of the period. At her home in Madison, N. J., she is as famous for her prowess in outdoor sports as she is for her scholarly attainments among the members of her profession.

There is nothing in the line of athletics which pretty Portia does not do and do well, and added to this is a reputation as a fine cook and seamstress.—New York Letter in St. Louis Republic.

Mrs. Cornwallis-West on Dress.

"If I were asked to write or speak concerning the ethics of clothes, I should take as my text one word only—'suitability.' Many women buy a hat or a gown or a cloak because it happens to appeal to their fancy at the moment. Very few of them, however, stop to inquire, 'Is it suitable?' You may go to a garden party or a seaside fete in the most delicate and fanciful sort of costume, with a hat all roses and tulle and a dress that is a suggestion of Le Petit Trianon brought up to date. In rustic surroundings such a costume is charming, but wear the same sort of thing in town without a qualm of conscience, and at once the thing becomes vulgar and unsuitable.

"I fear that Englishwomen are greater offenders in this regard than are my own countrywomen. They are less apt to be so correct in detail as your well dressed American, but a mistake made by women of both nations, I think, nowadays is in allowing young girls, especially at evening entertainments, to wear the same dark colors, rich materials and heavy ornamentations as do the married women of their circle. Surely the charm of a young girl is her daintiness, her sweetness and her youth. When she wears heavy black velvets and trailing satins and elaborate creations in applique lace, like her own mother, how can she expect to retain this most potent charm of her personality? Again I come back to my text word, 'suitability.'"

A Talk to Girls.

We sometimes say of a woman that she does her work as well as a man, so that it cannot be distinguished from a man's work. This sounds like praise, but it is really blame. Something has been lost. Distinction is the crown of work.

I am no advocate of a narrower life for woman, but of a life which shall be broad enough for her to unfold her own nature. The worst slavery is that which makes a woman pretend to be a man.

The strenuous life for a girl is a form of hysteria. It is a functional disorder. It sacrifices strength for spasms.

Suppose she is at college, studying. How shall she get the best intellectual results—accuracy of perception, breadth of vision, delicacy of taste, respect for truth? By disregarding the balance of her physical and mental nature and plunging into an intense pursuit of special knowledge, a fierce competition for marks and honors and prizes? The achievement, whatever it may be, will hardly compensate her (or us) for its probable cost. Poise is more precious than penetration. Learning may be a climb, but wisdom is a growth. The best that we know is the harvest of a quiet mind. The sanity of scholarship depends upon a normal life. The finest woman's college is a college for women. The best girls in it are never imitation boys.—Henry Van Dyke in Harper's Bazar.

A Practical Suggestion.

Every girl on a small dress allowance should take lessons in dressmaking and millinery and learn these two branches thoroughly, not with a view to starting a shop, but in order to be able to tie a bow with some suggestion of lightness and to be able to make her own blouses, petticoats and undergarments from really good patterns. This will not only furnish you with employment, but will be a great saving in your dress expenditure, and you will have the satisfaction of being as well turned out as your richer cousins. Such a knowledge will never come amiss. You will learn by experience what lines and curves best suit your figure, but always remember that taste, without experience, is not worth much in the world of dress.

Advice From a Trained Nurse.

"It is well known that the skin is a great absorbent, and nutrition even can be conveyed through its agency," says a trained nurse. "A physician once ordered a beef tea bath for a baby I was nursing who was apparently dying of some exhausting bowel trouble, and with admirable effect. And I myself have found that rubbing delicate persons with warm olive oil is an excellent tonic. If I had charge of a puny, sickly baby, I should feel inclined to give it oil baths instead of water baths and try the effect. The oil is quite as cleansing, and it stands to reason that such tiny beings, particularly if they are badly nourished, should not have the natural oil of the body continually washed away."

Handy Iron Holder.

Try making your iron holder this way if you don't want your hand to get dry and heated on ironing day: Cut from the upper part of an old boot the holder to be. Cut a piece of brown paper and two pieces of flannel or cloth the same size, says Home Chat. Then cover the holder in the ordinary way except that on the top two thicknesses of material should be put instead of one. Sew all round the edge; then slit the top upper covering across the center and bind the edge of the slit. This forms a pocket on each side, into which one's thumb and fingers are slipped.

Tact In the Household.

It requires continual tact and sedulous care on the part of the house mother to allot to each one in the household her share of the work and yet arrange so that no jar in the domestic machinery can affect the quiet atmosphere of the home. It requires as much executive power as to command a ship to arrange all the petty details of the house so that the routine flows in harmonious lines. Yet it is just this executive power that is needed in the household, and thus it is that the silly woman always fails to make a capable wife or mother.

A Sachet Pillow.

A sachet pillow to perfume the hair is a belonging of many dainty girls. It is merely an oblong of folded wadding between whose layers powdered orris root is sprinkled, the whole slipped in a case of fine linen that is lace edged. This pillow is used on top of the ordinary bed pillow just at the point where the head will rest.—Harper's Bazar.

The Neck and Throat.

The neck and throat may be whitened if the following paste is spread on a soft rag and wrapped round the neck every night: Take one ounce of honey, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, six drops of oil of bitter almonds and the whites of two eggs, and to these ingredients add enough fine oatmeal to make a smooth paste.

Shellacked Floors.

Floors that have been shellacked may be cleansed without injuring the polish by wiping over rapidly with clean cloths dipped in clear warm water to which kerosene has been added in the proportion of a tablespoonful to a pail of water.

Careful housewives see that their pieces of linen are used in rotation, for if one be on the table oftener than another it is pretty sure to wear out long before the rest of the set.

For the woman who likes to do a little pressing at home there is a single gas stove the size and shape of the iron upon which it fits.

The law in Germany limits woman's labor to eleven hours, with a midday rest of an hour and a half.

A ten cent wooden bowl may be converted into the prettiest sort of a hanging flower dish.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 10—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—A suggestion in addition.—II Pet. i, 4-9.

The reference here is to the familiar passage in the epistle of Peter in which he sets forth the necessity and importance of developing many of the Christian graces. The Christian life consists of no one virtue, but of many, and these are intimately associated together, and the development of one oftimes leads to the development of another, and the neglect of one will also often hinder the growth and development of others. Therefore, the apostle says to his readers, "Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue and to virtue knowledge and to knowledge temperance and to temperance patience and to patience godliness and to godliness brotherly kindness and to brotherly kindness charity." This is the sum in addition to which the topic refers.

The lesson before us in addition consists of eight parts. (1) Faith. Faith is the foundation. It is not taken for granted. Without faith it is impossible to please God or to serve Him. A life might contain many noble virtues, but unless based upon and inspired by faith in God through Christ it is not acceptable unto him. (2) Virtue. This is not charity, but valor. It refers to bravery or to Christian courage. It is the courage that inspires a man with no fear of doing right, but makes him afraid to do that which is wrong in the sight of God. (3) Knowledge. The knowledge here referred to is not the knowledge which comes through the study of books, but practical knowledge. It is a knowledge that makes us know the right and the wrong and includes the power of doing the right and shunning the wrong. (4) Temperance. The word temperance here means self control. It has no special application to sobriety or temperance in drink. It includes temperance in all things—control of the tongue, the temper and the appetites and the passions. (5) Patience. There is no more important virtue than that of Christian patience. God Himself is our greatest example of patience. How patiently He bears with us in all our shortcomings and in our transgressions against His law! In this respect we should follow His example. (6) Godliness. Godliness refers to reverence for God or to piety. It should include reverence for everything that pertains to God and should manifest itself in a pious and godly life. (7) Brotherly kindness. All men are brothers in the Lord Jesus Christ. It follows therefore that brotherly kindness includes all men. It refers not to those who are bound to us by the natural ties of life, but those who are bound to us by the common tie of relationship to Jesus Christ. Our attitude toward all these should be that of kindness. Kind words and kind deeds all men. (8) Charity. Charity means love. It includes love to God and also love to men.

The importance of all these virtues, both singly and in combination, is evident and apparent to us all. The beauty of a life founded upon faith and developed by the addition of such virtues as the apostle has mentioned until it reaches its climax in love to God and love to men is self evident and is at once seen to be worthy the ambition and the desire of all Christians.

It is worth noticing also that these virtues are intimately associated the one with the other. If one figure in a problem in addition is wrong, it necessarily makes the entire problem wrong. It would be impossible to get the correct result if one of the parts of the problem is defective. It is also true in our moral lives that one defective virtue may destroy the beauty and the glory of many others. How many people there are in the world who would be looked upon almost as models if it were not for one defect in their lives. A false note in music will destroy the entire harmony; so a false note in one's life will destroy its harmony. These graces must be developed in the developing of each one of them. Therefore it well becomes us to give time and thought to the solution of this problem suggested here by the apostle. We should strive to be proficient in adding one virtue to the other until we shall possess the entire list and are able to demonstrate in our lives that this example has been correctly solved.

The Spirit and the Method.

Never has the spirit of the Master been more richly shed abroad in the hearts of His disciples. On the other hand, never was the Christian church so tempted by wild and impossible schemes, so open to all kinds of delirious talk, so trustful to unknown and irresponsible adventurers, so considerate to faddists and amiable eccentrics, so impatient of common sense and moderate counsels. Never was our religion so zealous or so impulsive, never so devoted or so excited, never so ready to hear or so careless whether the speaker be a prophet or a charlatan. Never has there been more of Jesus' spirit or less of Jesus' method.—Ian Maclaren's "Life of the Master."

Contentment.

No grace is more essential to happiness and usefulness than contentment. —"Windows For Sermons."

Her Angelus.

Among the leaves she hears the old sweet story
That nature loves to tell in twilight hours;
Along the western sky she sees the glory
Of sunset splendor caught from heavenly bowers.
She stands transfigured in the tall dark grasses;
The mystic scene and spell her heart rejoice;
She feels God's presence as the daylight passes
And in the stillness, praying, hears His voice.

AMOY'S GRAVEYARDS.

The City and the Cemeteries Are Hopelessly Intermingled.

The city of Amoy is on an island of the same name. For upward of 1,000 years it has been an important trading place. The population of the island is estimated at over 400,000, and it has been said that there are something like 5,000,000 dead bodies packed in its soil. For many centuries the hillsides of the city have been used as a burying ground. Now the city and the cemetery are hopelessly mixed. The graves touch one another at every point and form a solid white surface of rock, brick, porcelain and cement, covering more than 1,000,000 square feet. Near one of the josshouses 30,000 bodies are buried vertically to save space. They stand on a plot of ground of as many feet square.

The wells from which the city draws its water supply are shallow and are sunk on the edge of graveyards and even among the tombs themselves. The water is muddy and is colored by the perpetual turning up of the soil. It has no sewers, and the streets vary from two feet to six feet in width. No wheeled vehicle can use them. Here and there is an open place or plaza, dug out so as to be a huge receptacle into which the streets discharge their refuse. Filth abounds, and its twin sister, disease, flourishes. The atmosphere is laden with noxious smells, and the burial of the dead goes on at an alarming rate.

Lord Spencer's Bargain.

Lord Spencer of Althorp, one of the greatest of book collectors, was at home only in his own field. One day in browsing about Bond street, London, he went into the shop of a dealer in bric-a-brac. The dealer, who knew him by sight, said persuasively:

"Here is a fine bit of pottery which your lordship really ought to have, and you shall have it very cheap—only 2 guineas."

So Lord Spencer bought it and took it home and set it in a high place. One day a connoisseur of china paid him a visit, and Lord Spencer showed his bargain.

"What did you give for it?" asked the connoisseur.

"Two guineas," answered Spencer rather proudly.

"H'm!" said the connoisseur. "At that price the marmalade should have been included."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, that precious piece of yours is nothing more nor less than a shilling marmalade pot with a green thistle painted on it."

Self Taught.

The Mother—Now, Elsie, did I teach you to throw your clothes on the floor in that disreputable way?

Elsie—No, mamma; I learned myself. —Puck.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

THE RACING CYCLISTS

"Plugger Bill" Martin and His Career

Iver Lawson, the Rival of Kramer

THE cycling arena presents many interesting sides just now, and followers of every branch of the game—motor pace, sprint and long distance—find much to think about and varied topics to discuss.

Probably the most talked of pedal pusher at present is "Plugger Bill" Martin, who is appearing in sprint contests. Martin is an American, although he has raced abroad so long that few people on this side know much about him. His fellow countrymen remember him best as a six day "plugger." But he is no longer merely a "plugger." Like many others, Martin had to go abroad to meet with the fullest measure of appreciation. He went to Australia, where he has for four years been the undisputed king of the cycle path at any and all distances.

"Martin comes very near to being the most wonderful man that ever straddled a bicycle," said an official of the National Cycling association recently. "Certainly he is the best all around rider the world ever produced. While no one knows his exact age, he is not less than forty-two and may be forty-five. He began to race in 1885, and since 1890 he has been at it almost continuously, and today, despite his age and his seventeen years' campaign on tracks in all parts of the world and despite an accident that left him with one leg shorter than the other, he is riding faster than he ever did in his life.

"People have raved over Jimmy Michael and Zimmerman and a few others, and, while I do not decry any of them, Bill Martin is every whit as much a marvel. Michael and Zim and all the other champions were comparative youngsters and were specialists. Zim was good only at short distances, Michael only at long ones, and they were at their best for a few years only. Martin is good at any distance and can do his twenty-five or fifty behind pace as easily as he can do his mile in open competition.

Except for a short visit to this country in 1898, when he defeated even

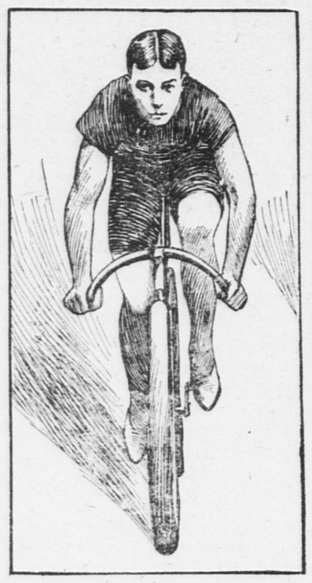

"PLUGGER BILL" MARTIN.

Zimmerman and won several championships, Martin, since 1895, has raced abroad in France, Belgium, Spain, Italy, Hawaii and South Africa, but most of the time in Australia. In that country he has won every race of importance, topping off his career last fall by winning the "Austral," a two mile handicap, which in a cycling way is as big an event as is the English Derby or the Suburban in horse racing. It annually draws 50,000 to 60,000 spectators. Martin last fall also cracked all records up to ten miles. In Australia he is so popular that a sketch of his life, "Plugger Bill's Biography," has been published in book form and has enjoyed a large sale.

Previous to 1895 Martin kept no record of the events in which he competed. Since and including that year he has won 344 firsts, 114 seconds and 57 thirds. Last year his winnings, without regard to appearance money and other perquisites, amounted to $8,000. Martin stands 5 feet 6 inches high on his good leg (his left one), and weighs 133 pounds. He usually uses a bicycle geared to 104 inches. Martin has had several terrible falls. In one of them he broke his right hip, the accident leaving that leg an inch shorter than its mate.

Among the foreign cyclists now in this country none is doing better work than Iver Lawson, the stocky Swede who gave Frank Kramer a hard fight for the "pro" sprinting championship of last year.

Lawson came to the United States in order to be present at the opening of the grand circuit, and with him came "Plugger Bill" Martin, the winner of the great Austral wheel race, and F. S.

IVER LAWSON, SPRINTER.

Beauchamp, a noted Australian rider of the scratch variety in handicaps. Martin and Beauchamp are to remain in this country until the end of the season, when they will return to Australia via San Francisco. Martin's worldwide reputation assures him plenty of engagements and an enthusiastic welcome. Beauchamp's place is in the front ranks, and he is certain to be a prominent figure in the circuit competition.

On the first day of the world's championship at Rome Lawson easily won his heat in the thousand meter race, ran second in a semifinal and was a close third in the final, which was won by Ellegaard, the Dane, with Meyers, the Hollander, second. The tandem event of 3,000 meters was won by Lawson and Ellegaard in very fast time.

Perhaps.

"I don't have no opinion of these newfangled women's notions," said Mr. Hyde when his wife timidly expressed her desire to join the woman's self improvement society.

"But we learn so much there," ventured Mrs. Hyde.

"Don't believe it!" snapped Mr. Hyde. "Women don't know much, that's a fact, but let 'em stick to their domestic duties and learn them. That's my opinion. Let 'em follow St. Paul's injunction, stay at home and ask their husbands if they want to know anything."

"But, John"—

"I've settled it, and that's enough, Jane."

"But, John, that's what women have been doing all this time, and perhaps that's the reason they don't know much."

And then Mr. Hyde threw his boot at the cat and boxed Freddy's ears for grinning.—Pearson's.

"What are your natural inclinations?"

TROLLEY STRIKE HOLDS

Hitch Over Specific Recognition of the Union

RAILWAY COMPANY YIELDS

To Practically All the Demands of Its Employes, Who Are Advised by Citizens' Committee to Return to Work—Contest May End Today

New Haven, Aug. 9.—The executive committee of the striking employes of the Fair Haven and Westville railroad, after having considered for three hours the terms submitted by the railroad company, left their headquarters last evening without having arrived at a settlement. The situation appears to be as far from settlement as ever.

It was learned from a member of the citizens' committee that the committee told the strikers' executive committee at their final session yesterday afternoon that in their opinion the railroad company have in good faith acceded to practically all that the strikers demanded, and that they hoped the men would see fit to go back to their work at once.

"We told the men," said this man, "that the railroad would surely receive a committee from them and would not inquire whether they were union men or not if they desired to present their grievances. We urged the men to take out their cars immediately and 15 minutes later send a committee with their grievances to the officers of the road."

It is understood on very good authority that State Organizer O'Neil insisted at the conference that the union be recognized specifically. It is also learned on good authority that a number of the men are in favor of overriding O'Neil. If this latter action is taken, it is believed that the strike will be speedily settled.

The meeting of the board of aldermen last night was attended by many of the strikers. The session was productive of a sensation. A resolution was presented and carried by a big majority providing for the appointment of a board of five members to examine and license applicants for positions as motormen and conductors. Another resolution introduced and carried by a majority provided for investigation into the feasibility of municipal ownership of the trolley roads here. Still another resolution introduced provides for an immediate investigation of the present trouble and to report at the next meeting.

At 11 o'clock a bulletin was prominently posted that the strikers' committees were in session and that a decision might be expected before midnight. A crowd of motormen and conductors were waiting. At 11:15 the executive committee adjourned and the strikers were hurriedly summoned to the meeting hall.

At 1:15 the meeting was called to order. A motion was immediately made that the meeting adjourn until today, because of the fact that but half the members of the union were present. The motion was carried and the question of a settlement is once more postponed.

Adverse Influence of Strike Outweighed by Good Harvesting

New York, Aug. 9.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Bright prospects in agricultural sections far outweigh the adverse influence of labor disputes, which are still retarding trade and manufactures. Railway earnings are fully sustained, the latest returns showing an average advance of 3.9 percent over the corresponding time last year and 21.8 percent over 1900.

Aside from the fuel scarcity and some congestion of traffic, the iron and steel situation continues propitious.

Footwear factories are well engaged on fall orders and spring samples, and the tone of the market is firmer, although actual advances have been few. Split shoes were put 2½ cents higher. Buyers are numerous in the Boston market and forwardings increase. The pressure for heavy shoes is such that Massachusetts makers will not guarantee shipment before November.

Dry goods buyers are coming into this market to a considerable extent, yet without placing orders of any size. A few lines of cottons are fractionally lower, and further declines are possible. Further lines of worsteds have been opened with an advance in keeping with last week's quotations. Raw wool is fully sustained at recent advances.

Splendid growing and harvesting conditions have prevailed in most sections of the country. In view of the distinct progress, it was natural that prices should tend lower, and this affected exports favorably, which in turn had a steadying influence.

Will Fight Extradition

Clinton, Mass., Aug. 9.—The requisition papers for Julian Foster, colored, who is held here on a charge of murder committed in Greenwood, S. C., are looked for Monday. Foster was arrested last Monday and he will fight extradition in the courts. His wife has some money and they have engaged counsel. Foster admits killing a negro, but says he knows nothing of Thomas White, a negro detective, for whose murder he is charged. Foster says that he expects to be killed if he goes back to South Carolina.

Another Lithuanian charged with rioting was released on $2000 bail. It is understood that a large number of other arrests will be made and more charges of murder will be brought. The region remains very quiet.

The crowning joy of womanhood is motherhood and the crowning joy of motherhood is to have healthy children. But there can be no joy in motherhood without health, and without health for the mother there can be no health for the child.

It is of vital importance for women to know that the health of mother and child is in general entirely within woman's control. The thousands of women who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription when expecting motherhood, have testified that it made them healthy and happy in the days of waiting, made the baby's advent practically painless, and gave them health to give their children.

Mrs. W. J. Kidder, of Hill Dale Farm (Enosburg Center), Enosburg, Vt., writes: "During the past year I found myself expecting maternity, and in rapidly failing health. I suffered dreadfully from bloating and urinary difficulty. I was growing perceptibly weaker each day and suffered much sharp pain at times. I felt that something must be done. I sought your advice and received a prompt reply. Took twelve bottles of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and also followed your instructions. I began to improve immediately, my health became excellent, and I could do all my own work (we live on a good sized farm). I walked and rode all I could, and enjoyed it. I had a short, easy confinement and have a healthy baby boy."

Drift of Opinion.

☞Such glowing accounts of King Edward's physical appearance were printed after his public entry into London that one is almost permitted to ask whether the illness he has suffered should not be regarded as a health lift. His majesty may wish to be attacked that way now and then just to recuperate. At all events, his recovery surpasses expectations, and the congratulations of the world upon his coronation will be sincere and cordial.

Charles Herbert, a paving cutter employed at Rogers quarry had his left leg badly shattered this noon by being hit by a flying rock from a blast.

The blast was fired at Birnie's quarry and the explosion was followed by a shower of rocks. One large piece struck Herbert in the left leg, which snapped off just like a pipe stem.

He was removed to the City Hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the leg below the knee. Herbert is about 55 years of age. He is married and lives at 10 Filbert street.

THE LAWSON SAILS.

The Largest Suit Ever Made for a Schooner.

The canvas equipment of the seven-master Thomas W. Lawson which is fitting out at the Fore River shipyard, where she was launched last month, is awaiting shipment at the sail loft of E. L. Rowe & Son, at Gloucester. It is certainly much the largest suit ever made for a schooner, 83,000 square feet of 2-0 duck being required for it. Of this 43,000 square feet are in the vessel's 25 sails, beside which the equipment includes awnings for the forecastle and poop decks, two sails for small boats, sail covers, boat covers, etc. The duck is of the same weight as is generally used for large vessels, but is of extra quality, having been especially made by the mills from raw material selected with the greatest care.

The ropes are the size of an ordinary schooner's cables. Three tons of manila, bought especially for this contract, were used in making them. It was impossible to splice them by hand on account of their size and a "horse" such as is used for splicing ships' cables was employed. The leech ropes are covered with duck and wire cringles are used to keep the thimbles in, while the clew rings are the heaviest ever put into sails. There are eight thicknesses of duck in the clew patches or reinforcements.

The whole canvas equipment weighs 18 tons and fills 3700 cubic feet of space. As much material and labor were required for it as would be needed for the suits of nine ordinary Gloucester fishermen. It will be taken to the Fore River yard on a lighter.

Lightning at Braintree.

About 5.30 o'clock Monday afternoon while Mr. Julius Heurlin was seated in front of his desk with his son Victor in his arms, and with his wife near by holding little Spencer, an uninvited and unwelcomed guest entered his dwelling and departing left destruction behind him.

This guest, whom we call lightning, yet know only by his actions, was very inconsiderate. He did not use Mr. Heurlin's property carefully. On the contrary he ripped off the blinds and carried them into a meadow. He took out the windows and left them on the lawn. He then tore holes in the front and sides of the house wrenching off clapboards, raising and splitting the weatherboard in the front gable and made merry with the shingles. He found the electric bell and destroyed it.

He took the electric wire and waved it around. He ripped up a corner of the carpet and shook it. He made holes in the parlor walls. He ran along the walls behind the chair containing Mrs. Heurlin and child and threw chair and occupants upon the floor. He then tipped over the heavy desk against Mr. Heurlin and Victor who were saved from falling by a table in the rear. He then looked over the sewing machine and split the cover.

Indeed the fluid made himself very much at home and made his hosts very uncomfortable. Yet strange to say, although destruction almost incredible reigned about this family not a hair of their heads was injured. Neither are the members suffering from nervous shock Mr. Heurlin is conducting his large business in his usual self-contained manner. Mrs. Heurlin is about her household duties and the children are still happy.

The fluid apparently entered the house in many places as is attested by the ruined walls. Where it departed is simply a matter of conjecture. It certainly played all around the house inside and outside, even scorching the top of a young maple tree in the front yard, fifteen feet from the dwelling. Mr. Heurlin is to be congratulated on the very narrow escape from instant death of himself and family.

The Cochato Club.

The following is the program that will be rendered this Saturday evening at the promenade concert, the music for which will be furnished by the Braintree Orchestral Club. It will be seen that as time goes on these programs become more and more varied. Especial attention is called to the overture "Tancred" by Rossini; the selection from "Rob Roy" by De-Koven and to Fr. Chopin's Trauermarsh. While these numbers are called standard it does not mean that the program will be a stiff and heavy one for all of the remaining numbers are from popular operas or are the productions by the best of the up-to-date composers.

INTO THE SEWER.

Engineer Branch's Plan for Disposal of Cesspool Matter.

Work has been commenced on the scheme devised by Engineer Branch, of the Sewer department, by which the matter taken from vaults and cesspools will be taken care of by the public sewer.

The first tank for this purpose will be erected in the rear of the old water pumping station near the woods, and an eight-inch sewer pipe is now being laid from the public sewer on Columbia street to the site.

The scheme is a simple one, but it is believed that it will solve a problem that has long been a perplexing one.

The dumping tank will be located in a one-story building 17 feet by 28 feet, which is large enough for a team to drive in and then permit the doors to be closed while the matter is being dumped.

In the centre of this building there will be a tank 6 feet deep, 17 feet long and 8 feet wide.

The matter taken from vaults and cesspools is dumped into one end of this tank. It is then diluted and broken up by jets of water, and the dissolved matter passes through a coarse screen into a sort of sluiceway. This will cause all tin cans, rags and other coarse matter to be retained in the first tank.

After passing through the first screen the matter, which is then in the form of a liquid, flows along the sluiceway and as it does the ashes and other heavy matter which may have got through the first screen settles. At the end of this sluiceway is a second screen of fine mesh and after passing through this it enters the public sewer. On this sewer, near the building is a man-hole with a sump. That is the bottom of the man-hole is considerably lower than the level of the sewer pipe so that any gravel, ashes or other heavy matter that would serve to stop the sewer pipe, has another opportunity to settle.

After a load of vault matter has been disposed of the water is shut off and the foreign matter collected in the tanks or in the sump of the man-hole can be easily removed as often as required.

Considerable water will be required to dissolve and flush the tanks, and the plan is to use the old main, that carried water from the reservoir to the pumping station. This will give an ample supple and at no expense.

It is expected that the tank will be in operation within a month.

Twentieth Anniversary.

Tuesday August 5 was the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. George H. White of Town Street South Braintree. Many had planned a suprise for them but owing to the inclemency of the weather several from out of town were detained from being present. At 10.30 A. M. the party including relatives and friends from Brockton, Winchester and Roxbury met at the residence of E. S. Loring to march to the house.

They made their approach known by blowing of horns. Mrs. White took in the situation at a glance and met the party in the driveway ringing a large dinner bell. Happiness and good cheer were everywhere seen and felt and time sped swiftly.

About 1 P. M. a fine dinner was served by the visitors after which Mr. Walter C. Carter in one of his happiest moods presented in behalf of the many friends a dinner set to Mr and Mrs. White. The afternoon was spent in a social way interspersed with music. Telegrams of congratulations from absent friends were received and read.

At 6 P. M. supper was served after which the friends with best wishes for the happy couple and with the hope that all and many more would be present at their 25th anniversary returned to their homes having spent a most enjoyable day. It is seldom that a surprise is carried out more successfully than this was.

—Neponset lodge of Odd Fellows will attend the funeral on Sunday of B. P. Eldridge.

Home Again.

[From the Braintree Observer.]

We visit Scotland, England, Switzerland, Paris, Venice and Rome; we see many beautiful, interesting and grand places and things; magnificent works, of art and science; palatial residences, renowned halls and vast museums; peoples of highest intelligence and refinement,—as well as those steeped in beggery and embedded in utmost squalor,—we are enchanted with the beautiful Mediterranean, gaze upon the lofty and soul inspiring Alps, and yet, when we return and anchor in the fine barbor of Portland or Boston or New York's magnificent one, on a sunny day in June or October, we feel that we have at last reached a glorious home, verily a port of heavenly rest. And as we come nearer to our individual homes how rapidly the blood courses in our veins and warms our hearts till when we enter the cottage gates we must give breath to the dear old song. "There is no place like home, sweet, sweet home."

Ah yes, the lively entrancing chorus, with trombone accompaniment, from the frog pond, the whispering pines, the lindens' lullabies, and the nightingale song woo us to sleep never elsewhere found.

On Sunday we go to the old church of our childhood and sit upon seats so high that our young feet in days of yore could no more touch bottom, the floor, than our brains could fathom the awfully dark theology.

We cast furtive glances into this pew and that in search of Mary and Dolly whose bright eyes in days of youth, our springtime life, often cast beams of friendship and love across the aisle upon us, and upon whose door-steps at eve, the silvery moon alone watching, in a halo of love entranced, we listened to semi whispered warm and endearing words, but they are not there; some time ago they went across the way to the beautiful garden of the sleeping, their bodies lie at rest beneath the shadows of the hawthorne, the locus and the willow and their spirits have soared on angel wings to heavenly bliss.

But in another pew we faintly discover Sarah and Lydia with faces fair and silvery threaded heads, they whom on our schoolward marches we so often vexed and behind whose broader garments we trudging along found a lee, a shelter, from the wintry blasts and storms, yet, Low espying us they give smiling recognition.

Away in the corner slip we discover Samuel and Washington who with us and a score of others in their teens cut the icy ponds with our upturned, fancy skates and with bonfires illuminated the night and part of all creation and who on summer evenings took positions on fences or stone walls near enough to all passing sining school girls to tantalize or timidly offer to convoy them to their desired places.

What pleasant days were these, what days of purist friendship.

"Friendship! naught beneath the sun
More beautiful, or excelleni, or fair
Than face of faithful friend; my early friends,
I remember, and will ne'er forget,
Our meeting spots, our chosen sacred hours,
Our burning words that uttered all the soul."

We look across the church to where we boys gathered about Capt. C., who expounded to our Sunday class the doctrines of St. Paul and the loving John, and well remember that while some good boys were trying to sing the words set to the tune of Dundee. "Let not despair nor fell revenge, be to our bosoms known," the rogues of the class were proding our rears with pin points! But the good old Captain was not there, he went homeward years ago. And so has gone the good old lady who sat in the minister's pew and who when errands called us to the door, always filled our pockets with apples and put into our hand a big slice of molasses-covered white bread.

Up to the choir gallery we squint, but only the old chorister, the kind old Deacon D., is left. How freshly come back to our minds our strenuous efforts at singing such good old anthems as "Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised, in the City of God." Our voices reached nearly, if not quite to the third heavens. Ah, those were lively and joyous days.

But we feel at home in the old church, we begin to study what can be done to improve it and soon conclude that a few dollars left there will please both the giver and the old churchers.

On Monday we stroll around the village and town and discover that it would be nice to have a good broad sidewalk here and a fine park could be laid out there and we conclude that a few hundred dollars invested in these will add greatly to the pleasure of those who dwell where many a "moss covered bucket still hangs in the well" and we pull out and leave the last greenback that's in our wallet.

Home, oh, yes, our boyhood home, may we never forget it nor the many pleasures it brought us.

Now, with tearful eyes we take the parting hand of cousins, uncles and aunts, with warmer pressure till we grasp the hands of father and mother and depart hoping we may in shorter time than ever before return to the blessed spot. T. H. Dearing.

The Van Cortland Honeymoon

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1901, by Charles W. Hooke

IN a corridor of a quiet and luxurious hotel in Boston I encountered an individual named Wasson whom I knew to be Archie Van Cortland's valet. The newspapers had informed me that Van Cortland and his bride were staying at this hotel, and I should not therefore have been surprised to see the valet had I not read that the multimillionaire, with true democratic simplicity, was making his wedding journey without servants.

"Wasson," said I, checking him as he was hurrying by, "I hope that Mrs. Van Cortland is better today."

The bride had fallen ill on the way up from Newport and had been under a doctor's care during the first two days of her unlucky honeymoon.

Wasson jumped as if I had stuck a pin into him, and at first I thought he did not recognize me, but he gathered his wits speedily.

"Yes, sir; much better, sir, thank you," he said. "She'll soon be quite well."

"The newspaper reports were really alarming," said I.

He glanced anxiously toward the parlor door of the suit from which he had just emerged.

"Yes, sir; very alarming," he said and attempted to pass on, but at that moment a servant of the house came up with a special delivery letter and some cards upon a tray.

Wasson took them and gave the servant a silver dollar as a fee, which greatness surprised me and also the recipient, who choked himself with thanks. He backed away, stumbling ridiculously upon a rug, and just then a slow and dignified voice behind us said:

"I will call again about 3 o'clock, Mr. Van Cortland, though the condition of the patient is so much improved that it will hardly be necessary."

It was Dr. Marshall Whiting, a pompous old physician of the fashionable Back Bay district, and he addressed the remark to Wasson, who did not reply. The doctor, with a courtly bow, walked toward the elevator.

I turned an eye upon the valet, and he was as red as a boiled lobster.

"Wasson," said I, "what does this mean?"

His voice came in a gasp.

"For the love of heaven don't tell on me!" he cried. "It—it's all right."

"Well, I'm by no means sure of it," I rejoined. "You are engaged in a monstrous imposition unless I am greatly mistaken."

He seized me by the arm and fairly dragged me into the painfully luxurious parlor of the bridal suit. The door of a bedroom beyond was very slightly ajar. Wasson closed it and then faced me. The man was at bay, and, I'm bound to say, he bore it well. He is rather a superior creature, as a matter of fact, and at that moment he looked much more like a gentleman than he did like a "gentleman's gentleman."

"You've got me," he said. "You can ruin me. But what's the difference? I've ruined myself already. But I've done my best to serve Mr. Van Cortland, my level best, and I simply wasn't equal to it; that's all. I might have done better if I hadn't been so worried about Millie. But with that and all the rest"—

"Who is Millie, if I may venture to inquire?" said I.

"She is my wife, sir," said he. "She was Miss Van Cortland's maid. Let me tell you the whole story:

"I was packing up the last of Mr. Van Cortland's things that he was to take with him on his honeymoon journey. The wedding breakfast was nearly over downstairs. I could hear the carriages of the swell people that had come from the church to the house stirring about in the grounds, as if it was time to be going.

"Then in come the bride and bridegroom—right into the room where I was. 'Archie,' says she to him, 'this makes me positively ill. It spoils everything.' Mr. Van Cortland shook his fist at one of the windows, and I could see him swear, though he didn't really say anything. Suddenly he turned to me.

"'Wasson,' says he, 'you're smart, and here's where you've got to prove it. If you do, it'll be a pretty penny in your pocket. You know me!'

"Well, sir, I did know him for as liberal a man as ever lived. So I said, 'What's the trouble?' And he told me.

"It seems that he had made arrangements to get away secretly with his bride. There was a shabby looking carriage by the east door, and they were to get into that and be driven to a place on the railroad twelve miles out of Newport, where Mr. Van Cortland's private car was waiting. He had engaged these rooms in this hotel, where nobody knew him, and he imagined that he could hide in them for a little while and be at peace.

"'I tell you, Wasson,' said he, 'I've seen my private affairs in print till I just can't stand it any more, but there's no escape. The reporters have found out all about my arrangements. They're waiting to follow the carriage on bicycles. What can I do?'

"Right there I got an inspiration. I almost wish I hadn't now, but for a time it looked like the making of me.

"'Why not have somebody else go in the carriage?' said I. 'Let the reporters follow the wrong parties, and when they're all out of the way you can go where you please.'

"'That's great!' he exclaimed. 'But who'll go?'

"Then the two of them fell to discussing this one and that one, but there was always some objection. People that might be willing didn't have the right appearance. It was easy to get a man or a woman who could play the part, but to get a man and a woman was a different matter.

"Finally Mr. Van Cortland struck the desk that he was standing by so hard that the ink bottle jumped up into the air.

"'Is it a fact,' said he, 'that you are going to marry my sister's maid?'

"I answered that I hoped to some day. She had given me her promise. The fact was that we had already got the license, but the sight of all the money spent on Mr. Van Cortland's wedding—all the flowers and jewels and fine clothes—had taken the heart out of both of us. Somehow we felt as if poor people didn't have any right to get married. You see, we had it all under our eyes, and it was quite a strain. You may not understand it, sir, but it was.

"Well, I've told you enough so that you can understand the rest. I'm the same height and build as Mr. Van Cortland, and Millie has golden hair like the other bride. They got Mr. Van Cortland's cousin, who is a clergyman and was among the guests downstairs, and we were married. Mr. Van Cortland gave me $2,500 as a wedding present and promised me a different and much better position when I got back from my honeymoon journey, or his honeymoon journey, to be more exact, for we took the shabby carriage at the east door and the special car and this outfit of awful magnificence here, and everybody was fooled. They fixed us up with their clothes, and—well, sir, you've seen the newspapers.

"Millie was taken ill on the train, and she hasn't been able to hold her head up since we've been here. It's the grip and perhaps the excitement of it all. Why, she couldn't even eat the dinner that we ordered when we got here that evening, and you ought to have seen that dinner! Millie cried at the sight of it and took to her bed, poor girl. Isn't it hard luck? Mr. Van

"TWO MEN PHOTOGRAPHED ME."

Cortland told me to spend all the money I could. He gave me a roll as big as my head for expenses. He was afraid I'd get found out by not spending enough. And Millie can't eat anything but dry toast nor drink anything but beef tea. I've been miserable, miserable, sir. I never thought my honeymoon would be like this. Anxious? Great heavens! Why, see how I'm fixed. That doctor doesn't know anything. He's an old fuddy duddy; that's what he is. But I don't dare to send out for a good, cheap doctor that's had experience among people that were poor enough so that he could afford to cure them. It would give me away.

"I don't know what to do with all these cards and messages. If I even step out into the hall, the reporters are on top of me. Why, I can't even smoke, and I'm nearly dying for it. I wouldn't do it here for fear a whiff of it might get in there and annoy her. I went out on the fire escape to smoke yesterday, and two men photographed me from across the street. It's dreadful. I've sat up two nights, walking the floor most of the time. Ah, I'm a wreck, sir; that's what I am. And that interview— Of course that caps the climax."

I knew that he referred to an interview in a morning paper of the day before, wherein "Mr. Van Cortland" had been quoted as positively denying the story, previously believed by everybody, that the C. R. and N. railroad would absorb the Northern Dispatch line. This denial had been taken as authentic, and the Old Nick had been raised with the stock market as a result.

"I'll tell you how that happened," said Wasson, with a groan. "I'd refused all sorts of pleas from newspaper men—they sent them up in the beginning at the rate of two a minute—when along came a message from a woman. It seemed that she was young and inexperienced and the only support of her mother. Her editor had told her to get an interview with Mr. Van Cortland, and her position depended upon it. It seems that he had told her so straight out, and she wrote a very affecting note. Well, I just tried to think what Mr. Van Cortland would do under the circumstances. He has a very kind heart, and—well, Millie thought I ought to see the girl, and I did.

"She wasn't as young as I had been led to believe, but I said to myself that the mother depending on her would be the older and feebler on that account. So I agreed to say a few words. As a matter of fact, she did most of the talking at first and took it all down in her notebook. I was afraid she would ask me about society people, and I wouldn't know what to say, and I was relieved when she spoke about that railroad business, for I happened to hear Mr. Van Cortland tell old General Warner one day at the house in Newport that there positively was nothing in that story. So I spoke with confidence. I didn't suppose it was of so much consequence, though I noticed that the reporter chewed her pencil in two and cracked her finger joints more or less while I talked. Afterward she begged me, for her mother's sake, not to tell anybody else, and of course I said I wouldn't.

"Oh, I'm an idiot; that's all. What else could be expected of me? Why, it seems that I've stood the whole country on its head. Look at the front page of that paper."

"It is the first authoritative word on the subject," said I. "The nation has been waiting."

"What will Mr. Van Cortland do to me?" he groaned. "I'm waiting to hear from him now. I've got messages from stockbrokers and railroad men begging me to deny the interview, but I won't. Mr. Van Cortland will be crazy, but he wouldn't ask me to crawl out of it by laying the blame on a woman. I know him too well for that."

"By the way," said I, "where is Mr. Van Cortland?"

"They're in Pittsfield, at the Darnley inn, under my name," he replied in a whisper. "I've written to him, but the harm can't be mended now. I suppose I might as well open this," he added, taking up the letter which he had received in the hall.

As he read it his face turned white. At the close he sank back in his chair, and it seemed to me that the breath went out of his body. Then, with an effort, he straightened up and passed the letter to me. This is what I read:

"Wasson, you're a dream of delight. Your interview has knocked Northern Dispatch down 12 points, and we'll pick it up like a ripe strawberry. Of course you heard me tell that story to General Warner, but how did you know it was a lie? How did you have the supernatural wisdom to spring it just at this moment? If I'd done it myself, they'd have given me the laugh. You must be a better liar than I am. My respects to Mrs. Wasson. I am sorry to hear that she is ill, but she will soon be well again. Don't worry about anything in this world. I'll look out for you. Mrs. Van Cortland joins with me in all good wishes.

"A. VAN C.

"Don't forget to spend money."

Worse Yet.

"I don't suppose there's anything that makes a woman more angry in glancing over the report of a social function at which she considered herself a prominent guest than to find her name left out."

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

STORY OF A FIELD MOUSE.

How She Made Her Nest In a Boy's Trousers Pocket.

Many stories have been told in the past tending to show that wild animals, when in trouble, will display surprising confidence in man—in fact, will often seek his assistance when sore beset. The writer when a boy on a farm in Minnesota had an experience with a field mouse which illustrates this trait in wild creatures. It was stacking time, and the men were all busy in the fields lifting the shocks of cured grain and stacking them in hive shaped stacks in the barnyard.

The boy had been following the wagons in the field all the morning in a vain endeavor to capture some field mice to take home as pets. He had seen a number of the drab little creatures, with their short tails, but had failed to lay his hands upon any of them, owing to the thick stubble and the nimbleness of the mice. At last, as a particularly large shock was lifted, a broken nest was disclosed, and the youthful mouser was put upon the qui vive by the slender squeaks of seven hairless little beings that were so young as not to have opened their eyes as yet.

The mother disappeared with a whisk, whereupon the young hunter sat down in a critical attitude beside the nest and began to examine his find. He had already put one of the young mice in his trousers pocket when the mother reappeared out of the stubble beside the nest.

The boy held his breath and awaited developments. Much to his surprise, the mouse mother after carefully examining the ruined nest entered his pocket, which as he sat opened very near to the nest. She seemed to come to the conclusion very quickly that her lost little one had found a very good home and in about two minutes had transferred the remainder of her offspring from the nest to the pocket, carrying them one at a time in her mouth.

The writer has had many experiences with wild animals, but none of them impressed him so strongly as the episode of the mouse mother in the wheat stubble.—Exchange.

Fire Drawings.

Here is a nice trick for an evening party. We show the audience an apparently blank sheet of white paper, touch it with a glowing match, and in a short time we have a figure burnt out of the paper.

The preparation of such fire drawing sheets is simple, and everybody with a little talent for drawing can produce them at small expense.

Dissolve a tablespoonful of saltpeter in a tumbler of water and draw, with the help of a pointed brush, an outline figure on thin white paper and put it aside to dry. The drawing on the paper will be invisible. Then light a match, blow it out immediately and touch a certain point in the outline figure (which has been marked secretly) with the glowing match. The saltpeter will catch fire immediately and burn along the line drawn with the brush, burning out the figure as it goes along.

A Game Little Indians Play.

Can you fancy Indian children on the wild western plains playing at anything as mild as "Button, button; who's got the button?" or "London bridge?" Yet these games are two amusements of which they are very fond. They make much more of these games than we do and usually play them out of doors, with often a big circle of braves and chieftains for spectators.

Another game, which is the greatest favorite of all, is "woolball." One of the young warriors winds a bit of raw wool or loose cotton into a light ball. All then seat themselves in a circle, and the leader takes his place in the center. The ball is tossed toward the leader, and the game is begun. As soon as the ball gets near enough to him the leader, without touching the ball, blows it to some one in the ring. It is immediately blown back to him, and so the play goes on. When the leader succeeds in blowing hard enough to send the ball outside the circle, he is relieved from his post in the center, and in his place is put the one who has allowed the ball to go outside.

Dolly's Dose.

Come, my darling, drink it up.
Oh, you mustn't make
Dreadful faces! Though, my pet,
I know it's hard to take.
But little dollies must be good
And take their med'cin as they should!
For when you get a bigger doll,
My precious little pet,
The med'cin's they get worser,
And sometimes worser yet.
But great, big dollies must be good
And take bad med'cins as they should!

KING EDWARD SEVENTH

Proclaimed by Divine Right and Grace of God

CEREONY IN OLD ABBEY

Carried Out In Much the Same Manner as Coronations of Centuries Ago—Peers and Church Dignitaries Present In Large Numbers to Pay Homage—Public Saw Their Majesties In Procession From Buckingham Palace to Church and Return

London, Aug. 9.—At 4:36 o'clock this morning salutes from the Tower of London and Hyde Park boomed at sunrise of Coronation Day. The day opened fine, but rather cloudy and with cool breezes.

The exodus of society people from London caused many vacancies among the allotted seats in the abbey. These were given to officials of governmental departments. It is said that 200 tickets to the abbey issued to members of the house of commons were returned yesterday. These include the tickets sent to the Irish members of the house, who have gone to Dublin. The early trains to London brought throngs of people from the suburbs.

The celebration was orderly, with public enthusiasm tempered by heartfelt relief over the passing of the shadow which so recently overcast the empire.

This morning people arose and breakfasted before the morning papers had gone to press. By 4 there were twice as many about as there usually are at 10, the hour when London shops ordinarily open their doors. By 6 o'clock carriages were rolling in black streams toward the abbey, and two hours later every one was in his place, whether peer or commoner, waiting for the king.

The Procession

The first section of the procession to the abbey started from Buckingham palace at 10:30 o'clock and consisted of dress carriages and pairs, containing members of the royal family, headed by trumpeters, the Royal Horse Guards band, the First life guards and the Royal horse guards. Then came the carriages, occupied as follows:

First—Grand Duke of Mecklinburg-Strelitz, Grand Duchess of Mecklinburg-Strelitz, Duke of Cambridge and Prince Frederic.

Second—Princes Andrew and George of Greece and Princesses Victoria and Louise of Battenberg.

Third—Princes Maurice, Leopold and Alexander of Battenberg, Princess Victoria Eugenie of Battenberg, and Princess Beatrice.

Fourth—Duchess of Albany and Argyll and Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Roumania.

Fifth—Princesses Louise and Augusta Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein and Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein.

Sixth—Princesses Victoria Patricia and Margaret of Connaught, Duchess of Connaught and Grand Duke of Hesse.

Seventh—Duke and Duchess of Sparta and Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia.

Eighth—Crown Prince and Crown Princess Charles of Denmark, Princess Victoria and Duchess of Fife.

After the foregoing came the Prince of Wales procession, which started from York house at 10:45. The advance guard consisted of a detachment of the Royal horse guards, followed by two carriages containing official members of the Prince and Princess of Wales' household, the First troop of the Royal horse guards, the carriage of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the Second troop of the Royal horse guards.

The king's procession left Buckingham palace at 11 o'clock, escorted by the Royal horse guards, the king's bargemaster and 12 watermen. These carriages then followed:

First—Sir Ackland Hood, Sidney R. Greville and Mary Dyke and Sylvia Edwardes, maids of honor to the queen.

Second—Lord Knollys, the king's secretary; Sir D. M. Probyn, keeper of the king's privy purse, and Victor C. Cavendish, treasurer of his majesty's household.

Third—Lord Colville of Culross, lord chamberlain to the queen; Field Marshal Lord Wolseley; Vice Admiral Culme-Seymour, and Charlotte Knollys, lady of the bedchamber to her majesty.

Fourth—Viscount Churchill, lord-in-waiting; the Earl of Pembroke, lord steward of his majesty's household; the Dowager Countess of Lytton, lady of the bedchamber to the queen, and the Duchess of Buccleuch, mistress of the robes.

These carriages were followed by the personal staff to the commander-in-chief, Lord Roberts, mounted; aides-de-camp to the king, consisting of 10 colonels of volunteer regiments, seven colonels of yeomanry regiments and nine colonels of militia regiments. Nearly all the above aides are members of the peerage.

Following them came the honorary Indian aides, then 17 colonels of regulars, 10 naval marine aides, General Gaselee, Admiral Seymour, General Kitchener, the headquarters staff of the army, Lord Roberts (commander-in-chief), 25 of the yeoman guard, six extra equerries to the king, seven equerries-in-ordinary, an escort of colonial cavalry, an escort of Indian cavalry and an escort of the Royal horse guards.

Then came the state coach conveying their majesties, attended by the Duke of Connaught and Prince Arthur of Connaught, followed by the royal standard and an escort.

After them came the Duke of Buccleuch, captain general of the royal company of archers; Earl Waldegrave, captain of the yeomen of the guard, and the Duke of Portland, master of the horse, followed by the equerries-in-waiting and the royal grooms.

The rear division consisted of an escort of the Royal horse guards and the reserve squadron of the Second life guards.

Abbey Before the Ceremony

Upon reaching the abbey, as the royal party approached the middle of the church and the fanfare of the heralds' trumpets died away into silence, the organ pealed, and the choir of the sweetest boy voices in England began the anthem "I was glad when they said unto me, We will go into the house of the Lord."

The old abbey, with its shadowy arches and dim lights, had been much changed for the ceremony, yet its essential features remained. All the ordinary seats had been removed, and the tombs and monuments, which ordinarily are the most striking feature of the abbey, were hidden by stands and galleries.

In the very centre of the church was a raised dais for the king with five ascending steps and a smaller one for the queen with three steps. On either side of the dais were the peers and peeresses. The peers occupied the north transept in a wide ascending tier of seats. They were all in crimson robes with ermine capes and bareheaded. The effect of 500 men thus robed and seated together in regular order was remarkably fine.

Opposite the north transept in a similar tier of seats were the peeresses, rather more numerous than the peers, because they included the dowagers. They were all dressed in low cut gowns of the richest fabrics and displayed jewels of sparkling beauty and fabulous value.

Behind the dais was the altar place, the floor of which, like that of the dais, was covered with blue Worcester carpet. The altar itself was covered with rich ecclesiastical hangings, and behind the altar were crimson velvet curtains, behind whose folds was the chapel of King Henry VII.

Placed in front of the altar proper was a heavy old oaken chair; beneath it the famous Stone of Scone. This stone, according to an old legend, was the one on which Jacob laid his head when he dreamed the vision of the golden stairs. At any rate, the Scottish kings and later the English kings have been crowned upon it for a thousand years, and today England's seventh Edward was to take his seat over it at the formal beginning of his reign. At its left was a smaller chair for the crowning of the queen.

Though today not visible to the eye, the historical associations of the abbey were ever present to the imagination and gave to some of the quaint features of the ceremony a reason and reality they could not otherwise have possessed. Just behind the altar was the tomb of Edward the Confessor; at the left was an ancient painting of Richard II.; in the passageways on either side lay the bodies of Queen Elizabeth, Mary, queen of Scots, and others who had reigned well or ill during bygone centuries. The time-worn stone pillars suggested how fleeting was this ceremony, and the beams of light which came through the old rose window gave an air of age to even the newest hangings and the brightest robe.

The Coronation Ceremony

The last words of the anthem were being sung as the king and queen, now accompanied by only their immediate attendants, ascended the steps of the dais and, passing by their thrones and kneeling for a moment in silent prayer, sat down in chairs which had been provided before and below their thrones.

The archbishop of Canterbury, preceded by the garter king of arms and accompanied by the lord great chamberlain, the lord chancellor, the lord high constable and the earl marshal, stepped to the front of the dais and a clear voice said:

"Sirs, I here present unto you King Edward, the undoubted king of this realm. Wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage, are you willing to do the same?"

Immediately everybody in the abbey shouted: "God Save King Edward! God Save the King!" repeating this many times until the voices merged into a general shout of acclamation. As it died down the heralds lifted their trumpets and blared a salute.

The archbishop repeated his question twice more, and twice more the shouts were repeated and the trumpets sounded.

The king and queen then left their place on the dais and, walking to the altar, accompanied by their attendants, took seats there. At the same time those who had been carrying the regalia in the procession advanced and gave it to the sub-dean of Westminster, who placed it on the altar.

Then every one kneeled and began the well known litany of the Church of England, "O God, the Father of Heaven, have mercy upon us, miserable sinners," the bishops intoning the litany and the choir singing responses. This occupied about 15 minutes. The king, queen, royal family, the clergy, the nobility, the magistrates and, last of all, the people were prayed for.

After this the archbishop began the communion service with the Lord's Prayer. The epistle was read from the second chapter of the first epistle of St. Peter, while all remained seated, and then as every one, including the king and queen, rose to his feet, the gospel was read from the 12th chapter of St. Matthew, wherein Christ tells the Pharisees to "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's." After this the Nicene Creed was recited, the king and queen and all the people standing as before.

The creed ended, the bishop of London ascended the pulpit and preached a sermon lasting 15 minutes.

The Oath and Anointing

The next ceremony, the taking of the oath, was according to the coronation ritual. The king swore to govern the people of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the dominions thereto belonging according to the statutes in parliament agreed on and the respective laws and customs of the same. The king then kissed the Bible and signed the oath.

Then the king and queen returned to their chairs and fell upon their knees, and the choir sang "Veni, Creator Spiritus." Then the archbishop prayed God to bless and sanctify his chosen servant King Edward.

Again the organ pealed, and the choir burst into the anthem, "Zadok the Priest and Nathan the Prophet Anointed Solomon King."

During the singing of the anthem the king was divested of his crimson robe, which he had worn up to this part of the ceremony, and took off his red cap. He was then escorted from the dais to the altar and sat down in the old King Edward's chair. As soon as he was seated four Knights of the Garter came forward and held over his head a rich canopy of cloth of gold. When this was in place, the sub-dean of Westminster went to the altar and took from it a dish of oil, the dish shaped like a loving cup, with two handles, and called an ampula. With it he took a spoon, which he presented to the archbishop, and the archbishop, dipping the spoon in the oil, poured some of it on the king's head, saying: "Be thy head anointed with holy oil as kings, priests and prophets were anointed."

After filling the spoon the archbishop found a hole which has been cut in the king's shirt for the purpose and poured it through upon his breast, saying: "Be thy breast anointed with holy oil." After this oil was put in the palms of the king's hands, and the anointing was complete. Edward was now king by divine right and grace of God.

After the archbishop had said a blessing the knights took away the canopy, and the sub-dean of Westminster put over the king's shoulders his great robe of pure cloth of gold, heavily embroidered.

Preceding the Crowning

Climax is always close to anti-climax, and the descent is sharp from the sublime to the ridiculous. The sub-dean went to the altar and took from it the two spurs. These he gave to the lord great chamberlain, who seized the trinkets gingerly and, getting on his knees, advanced them in the direction of his majesty's heels. After he touched them to the king's heels he gave them back to the dean, who placed them on the altar.

The presentation of a sword in a scabbard of purple velvet seemed more in keeping with the dignity of the ceremony. It was first placed upon the altar and blessed by the archbishop, then placed in the king's hand and finally girt about the king's waist. Then after an admonition to "with this sword do justice" the king himself took it off again and himself carried it up and placed it on the altar.

The king was then given the imperial robe and orb with the injunction that "when you see this orb set under the cross, remember that the whole is subject to the empire of Christ." A ring was placed on the fourth finger of the king's right hand, after which a rich glove was put on the hand and the scepter and cross placed in it. With the scepter the king was enjoined to be "so merciful that you be not too remiss, so execute justice that you forget not mercy. Punish the wicked, protect and cherish the just and lead your people in the way wherein they should go."

King Is Crowned

The ceremony now approached its culmination. The archbishop took the crown in his hands and prayed God to crown the king with all princely virtues. The king, who had knelt during this prayer, seated himself again in the chair, and the archbishop advanced to where the king sat and very slowly placed the crown on the king's head. There was absolute silence, and then the moment the crown touched the king's brow every one shouted loudly and well together: "God Save the King." The heralds blew their trumpets, and outside guns fired a salute. At the same moment the peers and the kings at arms put on their own coronets.

The tumult of shouts lasted some moments. When it had subsided, the archbishop prayed, and the choir sang the following strains: "Be strong and play the man. Keep the commandments of the Lord thy God and walk in his ways."

Then, when the king has been presented with a Bible and blessed by the archbishop, the choir sang the "Te Deum," while the king returned to the chair on the dais near the throne.

Homage to New King

The archbishop and bishops and various peers in their robes then surrounded the king, and as the "Te Deum" ended they escorted him to the throne on the dais, a fine golden seat, and lifted him into it. Then then arrayed themselves on either side of it, and the archbishop read an exhortation.

Next came the picturesque ceremony of doing homage. Formerly every bishop and noble did individual homage, but today for brevity one did it for his whole order.

First the archbishop knelt before the king, and as the bishops knelt in their places the archbishop promised to be faithful and true to his sovereign lord and acknowledge service for the lands held of the king in right of the church. Then the archbishop kissed the king on the left cheek.

After the archbishop the Prince of Wales advanced in the same manner and knelt before the king. As he did so the other princes of royal blood knelt and repeated after the Prince of Wales this quaint Saxon oath: "I do become your liege man of life and limb and of earthly worship and faith and truth I will bear unto you to live and die against all manner of folks. So help me God." Then the prince and the other princes after him advanced and kissed the king's cheek.

Then the peers by dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts and barons made the same oath, and the head of each order, advancing, touched the king's crown with his hand in token to support the royal power and kissed the king's cheek. While homage was being presented the choir sang an anthem, which, ended, the trumpets sounded, drums beat and everybody shouted in chorus: "God Save King Edward!" "Long Live King Edward!" "May the King Live Forever!"

Crowning of the Queen

The archbishop of York then crowned the queen in much the same manner in which the king had been crowned, but with a less elaborate ritual. As the crown was placed on her head all the peeresses put on their coronets. In passing to her throne, which she took without further ceremony, the queen bowed low before the king.

When this part of the ceremony was ended, the king and queen delivered their scepters to the noblemen who had previously borne them and went to the steps of the altar and, kneeling there, took off their crowns. The king then offered bread and wine to be used in the communion service and also as gifts an altar cloth and an ingot of pure gold of a pound weight, which were received by the bishops and placed on the altar. The queen also presented an altar cloth and a smaller piece of gold, which was also accepted and placed on the altar.

The communion service then proceeded in the usual form, the archbishops and clergy first partaking of the sacrament and then the king and queen, who knelt at the altar steps. No one else received it. Then after prayers and thanksgivings the ceremony ended. Then the king, with four swords being carried before him and wearing his crown and carrying his scepter, passed through a door on the south side of the altar and passed into St. Edward's chapel, the queen also entering the chapel by the north door. Their majesties were then divested of the robes in which they were crowned and arrayed in robes of purple velvet.

The king and queen then returned to the main body of the church and, proceeding to the main entrance in the same order in which they came, entered the royal coach and were driven back to Buckingham palace. During this part of the proceedings the king wore his crown and held the scepter in his right hand and the orb in his left. The queen also wore her crown and held a scepter in one hand and an ivory rod in the other. The crowds outside, seeing the crowns and other emblems, were frantic with delight.

One of the most curious incidents of the coronation was the appearance of the uniform of the Salvation Army in Westminster Abbey. King Edward directed that a representative of the Salvation army should be invited to the coronation and Bramwell Booth was appointed to attend the ceremony. A difficulty arose about the uniform he should wear, and the earl marshal intimated he was not authorized to recognize the uniform of the Salvation Army. Mr. Booth thereupon wrote King Edward requesting permission to wear the uniform of the army, which he readily granted.

Bryan Corrects a Report

Muscatine, Ia., Aug. 9.—William J. Bryan settled for all time the rumors that he will be a candidate for president in 1904 in an interview yesterday. When shown reports that he might again be a candidate he expressed himself in no uncertain manner. The Mason City interview, he said, was unreliable. "I will not be a candidate for president in 1904," said Mr. Bryan. "While I would not promise never to be a candidate again under any circumstances, I have no plans looking to the future nomination for any office."

Hope For Vermont Democrats

Barre, Vt., Aug. 9.—An interesting political situation is likely to develop here next week. The McCullough men have called representative caucuses for next Thursday, and the Clement men have done the same for Friday night. Should nominations be made by both the Democrats think they will have a chance to win.

Cleaned Out Postoffice Safe

Ashland, N. H., Aug. 9.—Burglars wrecked the safe of Postmaster Hutchins before daylight yesterday, and took stamps worth $500 and about $100 in cash. Tools and horse blankets from a convenient smithy were used in the work.

Fainting Spells

always indicate a weak heart. They are usually preceeded or followed by palpitation or fluttering, and there may be pain in left side, a smothering sensation and shortness of breath. Such a heart should be treated at once, before the disease develops beyond control. Heart disease is as easily cured as other troubles if taken in time.

"I was subject to fainting spells, and many times I have fallen on the street. I was often compelled to sit down while walking to avoid falling. When physicians failed to help me, I took Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and was completely cured."

Yacht Capsized.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Emerson, Carl and Louise Emerson were guests of C. O. Miller on his naptha launch Enid, unday. After cruising around through the harbor during the day they started homeward. When in the vicinity of Pig rocks, Mrs. Emerson noticed a yacht capsized between there and Peddocks and immediately attracted the attention of the rest of the party.

The launch was at once brought and started for the rescue. None too soon however as two of the occupants of the yacht were unable to swim. They were taken on board and landed at the float of the Quincy Yacht club where they expressed their gratitude by many thanks. The yacht was owned by parties at City Point and later was towed ashore by two row boats.

Provincetown Sea Trips.

No vacation is really complete without indulging in those interesting, inspiring and exhilarating sea trips on the Bay Line to the tip of the Cape. The excursion itself on the stanch, well appointed steamer Cape Cod to Provincetown is a veritable tonic, the best possible restorative for brain and body. Then, too, the sojourn on shore, amid the old Pilgrim landmarks at the tip of the Cape, offers a pleasing change and is an object lesson which once learned is never forgotten. The Cape Cod is one of the swiftest, stanchest and most commodious excursion steamers in the harbor. She is handsomely and luxuriously furnished in every way. There are ample stateroom accommodations, and delightful music is furnished by the Bay Line band. The boat leaves 400 Atlantic avenue every week day at 9.30 and Sundays at 10 o'clock.

Excursion to Newport.

On Wednesday, August 13., there will be an excursion to Newport, Rhode Island, by special train from Quincy, Braintree, Brockton and intermediate stations to Middleboro inclusive, for which round trip tickets will be sold at exceedingly low rates, via the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. The season at the "Queen of Watering Places" is now at its hight, and the many attractions of the place have never appeared to better advantage. Ample time will be afforded for visitation of the many points of interest, all of which are readily accessible, transportation by barges, carriages and electric cars being always at hand, and at reasonable rates, for those who may desire to take advantage of such provision. As the number of tickets for this outing is limited, it is desirable that they be secured in advance.

Only a Mask.

Many are not being benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little if any stronger than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, "builds up the whole system.

OLD HOME WEEK SERMON.

The Old and the New Source of a Town's Strength.

A sermon preached in the First Congregational church of Braintree on Thursday evening, July 31, 1902, by Rev. George A. Thayer of Cincinnati.

By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed to go into a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out not knowing whither he went; for he looked for the city which hath foundations whose maker and builder is God. Hebrews XI: 10.

The distinction to which I am called tonight of addressing the single service of Braintree Home Week which is specifically set apart for religious meditation, comes to me becouse I am of that ancient class in which the Father of the Hebrew race was a pioneer and road breaker; the emigrants.

That great impulse of our race which has been at work from the first glimpses we have of human activity, to seek new homes afar from the father land, has made of our country a series of colonies, whose individual members moved from the familiar places of their birth with fond and tender reluctance, to cast one long, last, lingering look behind; and who, wherever they have gone, have considered themselves as still having rights in the old household from whose walls they may be separated by thousands of miles.

An English scholar has written of the various groups of nations, upon nearly every continent of the globe, who speak the English language, as the Greater England.

In the United States there is a larger New England, a greater Massachusetts, which holds its citizens by other ties than of voting rights or obligations to pay taxes; by sentiment, by memory of ancestors, by pride in the history of struggle for great principle, and achievements of world wide value which have written this state in large letters upon the pages of the world's annals.

Some of us may have our local habitation and our children may be born in Ohio, or Montana, or California but we claim a share in the fame of our birth state by the sea.

It is not the spirit of a foolish patriotism which ascribes to the Massachusetts influence wherever upon our continent it is felt, a distinguished force in the shaping of the ideals which make for the best republicanism and the most elevated morality of our land, but a recognition of the fact that this state from its beginning, discovered the indispensable secret of producing weighty minds by the twofold discipline, in the school house and in the church, of the intellect and the conscience; and has scattered the results of that training all over our continent; and I have found, in my corner of the nation, that the men who, from the first, were most conspicuous in a large public spirit, pioneers in the popular education, leaders in philanthropy and supporters of all good works, were apt to trace descent from this commonwealth.

Of these two institutions for making men, respect for the school is stronger than ever, but the question is often raised in fear and trembling whether religion has not lost much of its commanding authority among us, and whether therefore, something of that sturdy fibre principle and assurance that the man was one with an ternal righteousness, which has carried our people through hardships and dangers, is not getting relaxed and destroyed. To some thought upon that question it seems to me worth while to devote a few moments.

The prosperity and the waning of religious reverance are apt to be measured by the degree of regard for the services of the church, and as compared with the universal attention to these which used to be given in this state, there can be no doubt that all our communities are less devout outwardly, than were the former generations.

The truth is that much of church reverance in the olden time was under compulsion; people were in the meeting house on Sunday becanse they were under pains and penalties for not being uhere; not alone public opinion dragged the veriest vagabond to the house of worship, but the constable and the police magistrate made it most intolerable for the lounger who could not give full justification for not knowing what the sermon of the previous Sunday had been about and who were there to hear it. Moreover where the people were habitual church goers from good will and love the social motive, the desire to see the neighbors, was clearly as potent a magnet as the yearning for spiritual uplifting.

Consider the conditions of population in Braintree at the time when this congregation in whose house we are gathered was first set apart from the Northermost church in what we now term Quincy; not to go back to the more primitive times of the 17th century.

In 1708 and for a long time thereafter this meeting house was the sole centre of common friendly intercourse between the farmer folks whose homes were scattered over thirty odd square miles of partially broken wilderness. The men rarely saw one another, during the week; the women still less often; and that human interest without whose nourishment people grow mad, that desire to talk and to know what is happening beyond one's own beaten track, had no opportunity for gratification save at the Sunday gathering.

For over twenty years after this so called middle precinct of old Braintree had been established, with its own centre of worship there was no post-office within its limits, nor probably a single newspaper taken in any part of the commnnity. And new books or books of any interest which had not been learned by heart were equally inaccessible.

The Sunday service afforded a blessed safety valve for gossip, discussion and sympathy, and and the between-service gatherings, the noon hours when under the shelter of the church or the horse sheds, or in bitter cold around the firesides of neighbors who freely opened their doors to those who lived far from the meeting house, or perhaps in the tavern across the way, the town folk, had an opportunity to let loose their tongues and to hear something from the larger outside world of Boston or across the sea.

Absence from church, then, meant the wilful choice of a still lower deep of stagnation of intellect and human feeling than a rational son of intelligent England could bear; and the weeks life was so monotonous and dreary, that to walk 6 or 10 miles and back, or to ride, two upon a horse, over rocky and muddy trails, was an easy price to pay for the privilege of getting a few touches of human brotherhood.

The vital point for determing the effect of diminished church attendance. so far as it has diminished, upon the religious spirit of the community, is whether or not there may be a more genuine personal interest in the thing for which the church essentially stands, whether now that the tithing man, as a motive of presence in the pews, has gone, and the hunger for news has been fed from other sources, and worship is absolutely voluntary, those who do remain are not more sincere, more honestly believing in the principals for whose strengthening the church services exist, and better exemplars of all good works, than were the larger throngs of earlier generations.

A little company of men and women eagerly seeking truth, pledging themselves to the pratice of holy living, and to the spread of love and good will, are a far more persuasive evidence of the divinity of any institution, than throngs of reluctant and formal followers; and the palmy days of Christianity are not been when emperors meekly held the stirup of the vice-regent of Christ, and when the wealth and fashion and offices of the world were at the command of the religion established by law, but when little fellowships of disciples, here and there in the midst of gross and passionate multitudes, illustrated by the sweet simplicity of daily life the possession of a grace loving and heroic, such as only communion with the deep and high realities of the Spirit could beget.

The distinguished minister of this Church, Richard Salter Storrs, in a semi-centennial sermon preached nearly fifty years ago bore witness to what he had found widely prevalent in the beginning of this ministry, of drunkenness brawling and shameless license; and the causes were evidently in large measure the idle brain which, for the want of a better outlet gives itself to a wantonness of appetite, which the fuller mind will scorn.

The public schools are upon a more generous scale than either the poverty of the olden time or its conceptions of what was practicable and to be desired for the average child, could have grasped; more munificent indeed than the rank and file of voters are ready to grant and for which, in its advance stages, such as Thayer Academy offers, quite equal to the instruction to be found at Harvard College a hundred years ago, private benefactors, of our own flesh and blood, have laid elaborate and costly foundations. And the enlightened intelligence is again, the natural ally of high principle, as ignorance is the mother of vice.

The evidence seems to me conclusive that notwithstanding the disturbance to the established order of what we are fondly disposed to think of as the golden age of the colonies, notwithstanding the tremendous influx of the immigrants who have brought to us strange customs and modes of faith which our forefathers looked upon as alien and pagan, and notwithstanding the Sunday, transformed from its placid quiet wherein not even a strange wagon intruded with its rattle, into the day set apart distinctively for trolley and bicycle rides and seaside excursion, the moral tone of the average New England community is better than in the old days.

And this for the simple reason that the masses of our people, especially the growing generation, have more safe and rational occupations for their mind, more wholesome recreations, and in addition are better fed and in superior conditions of health.

The sound mind in the sound body is an important foundation of right behavior, and to this sanity the striking advances of the century just behind us, in instruction, in means of amusement, in acquaintance with the laws of health, in improved warmth for our houses and more nourishing and varied diet, and in a multitude of similar ways, have contributed in large degree.

I therefore remind you that organized religion, in the ministrations of the church, has been reinforced by a host of allies; so that its battles are being fought by people who do not always pretend or suppose that they are helpers. Yet in our time as in the colonial times their is another element of moral strength necessary, that is high minded leadership.

I spoke at the outset, of the superior weight which characterized the Massachusetts emigrant wherever in our land he made his habitation. This power is due largely to the fact that the original stock of immigrants to Massachusetts colony was for the most part composed of the picked men and women of old England; many of them of university education, some of noble rank, and therefore as sometimes happens with titled nobility, of generations of refinement; and all of them moved by a deep passion for religion.

There were twenty-one thousand such on these shores up to the time when this town of Braintree was incorporated in 1640, and while after that time conditions more favorable to religious liberty at home stayed the tide of departure, and so subsequent immigration was apt to be of the fortune seeking class, such as has swollen our population immensely since those days, an industrious and sturdy class capable of great things in later times, but not accustomed to lead, the stamp of strong intelligence was ineffaceably given to our settlement, by these first comers.

I do not think that anywhere in the history of migration has a company of men of such intellectual and moral distinction settled a land, certainly none of the other colonies could compare in the quality of mind and conscience of this Massachusetts company.

If this state has in any respect maintained this prestige conferred upon it by its founders it has been because it has continued to produce leaders of men, thoughtful, of large vision, of austere principle, and if to-day there are as the impartial observer often notes, marked differences in the character or towns, some ill kept and backward, some thrifty and public spirited, the secret of the contrast will be found to lie in the possession, or the want of a group of high toned, broadly intelligent citizens, who quietly command while the rest obey.

In all communities it is the privelege and the duty of a few to set the standards for the many. In politics we all know that the few, not always by virtue but often by force of will mated with lack of scruple, choose the officers and direct the administration of affairs, we have all heard to our mortification of the political machine. But in more creditable directions the multitudes need to be led, and they ought to be guided by the soberest and most steady intelligence among them.

I have already alluded to this and other states by a comparative handful of zealots. They were the anti-slavery uprising the temperance reform. The abolition of slavery in the Union was not brought about by the so called Abolitionists, but they enlightened and stimulated the moral sense of the community and were the school masters of the people who eventually twice selected Abraham Lincoln to be President, and their sons were found in the foremost ranks of the soldiers who won the nation's battles.

I recall at least one man from Braintree already, at the time of his enlistment, in mid life, who carried his long cherished anti-slavery convictions to his death upon one of the great battle grounds of the civil war, [his name was Thomas Crowell and he fell at Fredericksburg] and the impressive and beautiful sculpture upon Boston Common to Robert Gould Shaw is raised to the memory of a son of one most constant of the Abolitionist advocates.

But these men and women, many of them of high social standing and among the most finely educated persons of their several communities, sounded the note of alarm for years, under bitter persecution and malign slander, until slowly they converted a large part of the North to the conviction that they were at least half right and that sooner or later the slave power must go.

They illustrate what a little group of determined people dedicated to a disinterested service of truth and justice may accomplish in moulding the beliefs and lives of their reluctant and resisting neighbors.

As to the temperance discussion I just spoke of Dr. Storrs' record of the disordered morality of this neighborhood when he entered upon that service of the town's spiritual needs which was so long honorable and efficient.

Drunkeness everywhere, at funerals, at weddings, at house raisings, at church dedications, at town meetings, and one of the most boisterous of the drinking places under the shadow of this church, or its ancient predecessor.

President John Adams has told the same melancholy tale of his community and he saw that the vitality of the town was being sapped by this widespread reckless passion for fiery alcoholic drinks.

Here again the awakening of a sluggish moral sense was devolved upon a few far seeing souls, who for a long time preached to deaf and hostile ear, but who gradually made their impression, who stirred the pulpits to their duty in this direction, a duty which I regret to say was not promptly recognized, who aroused the General Court to its responsibilities, and so brought it to pass that miscellaneous public drinking has gone from every country place of New England, and it is now as rare to see a man of Anglo Saxon stock [or indeed of any other stock,] reeling upon the street or incoherent over his meals, as it once was common.

That which has been achieved in these specific directions but exemplifies the power of intense conviction of righteousness and a high ideal of patriotism in the fashioning of social standards, everywhere and always the believers in some high principle conquer their fellows, slowly and painfully it may be but eventually surely. To keep in existence that saving salt of society, that company of the elect leaders, the two influences which from the first have had, the post of honor among Massachusetts institutions must still be called upon to do their work, the school and the church.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the leading novelties of the summer season in vaudeville has been the acrobatic dancing act of a quartet of English girls, calling themselves the Four Madcaps. For Three months past they have been creating a furor on the roof gardens of New York, and there has been great competition among the various vaudoville managers to secure their services. They are announced to appear at Keith's the week commencing August 11, and other entertainers who will be in the same bill are: Trovollo, the noted ventriloquil comedian, and his mechanical figures; Bicknell, the artistic clay modeler; Dooley and Fowley, blackface funmakers, singers and dancers; Billy Clifford, monologue comedian and parody singer, and the Exposition Four, vocalists and comedians. The Fadettes continue their petit concerts of popular music, and several new subjects will be added to the brilliant production of tableaux vivants.

Not Over-Wise

A LITTLE SARCASM FOR THEATRICAL MANAGERS.

Plans of Several Prominent Amusement Caterers—Dippel Leaves Opera For Concert.

Charles Frohman, who has returned from his annual visit to Europe, has, of course, also made his annual announcement of "plans for the coming season." These are sufficiently ambitious and farreaching to suit any one, and the wonder is, if they are all carried out, how any man, aside from Mr. Frohman, will be able to make a living in the theatrical business next year.

Mr. Frohman's most interesting statements concern the projected and much advertised "Romeo and Juliet" performance with Mme. Bernhardt and Maude Adams in the title roles and the locating of a company of French players in this city. Of course it will come as a great "surprise" that Mr. Frohman will do neither of these sensational things for awhile at least. But bear in mind both "deals" are still "on." Bernhardt and Adams will positively appear together in "Romeo and Juliet," and Mr. Frohman will positively locate a company of French players in New York. But don't be unreasonable. Don't expect these things to happen in a few days. Mr. Frohman is young yet, and we have his word for it that he will make good his promises about Bernhardt, Adams and the French players—some day.

"Shakespeare by machinery."

Is that what we're coming to? The latest theatrical announcement of importance is to the effect that Klaw & Erlanger will shortly make an elaborate production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and the indefinite hints as to the possibilities of electric lighting and modern machinery inevitably conjure up visions of Titania going up on a moon of real silver operated by a fussy little electric motor. Puck might get in a line about the fulfillment of his boast of centuries ago anent an earth-circling girdle, the while he operates a wireless telegraph instrument, and we might even expect Bottom, with the aid of mirrors, to lose his donkey's head "off stage" in such a manner as to delude the auditor into the belief that the man-donkey is before him in propria persona. The specially interesting feature of the announcement of the production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is Nat Goodwin's connection with the enterprise. As at present arranged, he is to play Bottom, and while the result cannot well enhance the reputation either of the role or of Mr. Goodwin his name adds dignity to an enterprise which ordinarily would not attract an amount of attention commensurate with the contemplated outlay of time and money.

Andreas Dippel, the famous German tenor, will desert opera next season for a concert tour of several months' duration in this country. Herr Dippel has proved himself one of the most versatile, reliable and popular stars of the Maurice Grau company. He has made a notable record since his debut in Bremen in 1887. Besides five years with the court opera in Vienna, four seasons with the royal opera at Covent Garden, London; with the imperial opera at St. Petersburg, at the Baireuth festivals and four seasons with the Maurice Grau company in this country, Herr Dippel has sung in hundreds of concerts abroad.

His concert repertory includes selections from his operatic roles, which number ninety-seven in seventy-six different operas, over a hundred songs in French, English, Italian and German and the tenor parts in fifty-eight oratorios, cantatas and choral works.

"Invincible" is the word best fitted to describe James J. Jeffries, who by again defeating Bob Fitzsimmons has proved himself the greatest heavyweight pugilist America has ever seen. There is practically no fighter left having even a reasonable chance to defeat the boiler maker, and the coming fight between Jeff and Corbett is sure to result as did their first engagement.

Jeff is in the peculiar position of a champion without a rival. Who is the heroic "unknown" that will now put himself forward to wrest the title from the champion? Come on with your "dark horses," all ye pugilistic impresarios—Tom O'Rourke, Billy Madden, Barney Reich and the rest. Out with the new prize ring wonder, for Jeff is tired of waiting.

New Haven Trolley Strike Is Declared Off

TRAFFIC AT ONCE RESUMED

Company Recognizes Union and Promises to Hear Grievances—Twenty-One Men Recently Discharged Reinstated Unconditionally

New Haven, Aug. 11.—Five hundred striking employes of the Fair Haven and Westville Street Railway company returned to work after having conducted one of the most unique strikes in the history of labor troubles in Connecticut. All the demands of the men were granted by the company, and at 6:45 Saturday night the first car was run out of the car barn, manned with a crew of union men officially recognized by the company.

The men, as they passed through the principal thoroughfares of the city, were vociferously cheered by the immense throng which had been anxiously awaiting, since 9 o'clock in the morning, a speedy termination of the strike which has been the cause of so much inconvenience to the public in general and great financial loss to the merchants of the city.

Saturday was looked upon by the public as the crisis in the strike situation. For four days the tie-up of the road had been complete. With the exception of a few hours Wednesday morning, not a passenger had been carried on the lines of the railway company in four days. Even the mail cars were suspended and the company was compelled to send mails to the suburban villages by teams because, so general was the strike, that not a single motorman or conductor remained in the employ of the road.

Two remarkable features characterized the strike, viz: The absence of any sign of violence on the part of the strikers and the manner in which the public and press of the city showed their sympathy with and loyalty to the strikers. A committee representing the business interests of the city were ceaseless in their efforts to bring about an amicable settlement of the differences between the railway company and their employes and it was through their efforts that the strike terminated so quickly. Since Wednesday they toiled incessantly with both parties to the controversy and the public showed their appreciation by repeatedly cheering the members of the committee.

Several cars were first sent out by the company to clear off the sand which had accumulated on the tracks and shortly afterward the regular cars were dispatched to take up the schedule where it was broken off early Wednesday morning.

The scene in the centre of the city Saturday night was remarkable. Thousands of people paraded Chapel street and the appearance of a car was made the occasion of loud cheers and shouts of encouragement to the men.

The agreement under which the strike was settled was signed for the company by President Parmelee and was sent to the men shortly before 5:30. They quickly ratified it, as it met their demands fully. The agreement follows:

"Your communication of this date is received. The Fairhaven and Westville Railroad company will receive at all reasonable times a committee consisting of employes of the company only, to receive and consider any grievances that may arise, and will use all reasonable effort to redress them fairly. Membership in the Amalgamated association of street railroad employes is not now, and will not be in the future, just cause for discharge from employment of said company.

"If desired copies of all assurances made to the business men's committee will be given, addressed to the motormen and conductors of the company, signed by the president, and, as stated to the committee of the business men, if the strike be terminated speedily the 21 men recently discharged will be reinstated unconditionally."

FOR MISSIONARY WORK

Dr Simpson Secures Contributions and Pledges Amounting to $45,335

Old Orchard, Me., Aug. 11.—Rev. Dr. A. B. Simpson, president of the Christian and Missionary alliance, has again demonstrated his ability as a solicitor of contributions for foreign missions. In two sessions of the alliance convention here yesterday he secured contributions and pledges aggregating $45,335. The greater part of this amount was in pledges. Dr. Simpson explained before the collection was taken that the subscribers would never be dunned, but that the matter would be left between them and God.

Dr. Simpson made a stirring appeal for self-sacrifice in spreading the gospel in heathen lands, to hasten the second coming of Christ. He related instances of personal sacrifice on the part of his alliance members and laid stress on the happiness of giving.

The largest pledge was for $5000. Five persons and organizations pledged $1000 each. There were 19 pledges of $300 each and 14 of $100 each.

Rock Punched Hole In Steamer

Cottage City, Mass., Aug. 11.—Steamer Rhode Island, bringing a party of 600 excursionists from Providence, struck a rock when within about three times her own length of the Highland landing here yesterday, causing her to leak so badly that her pumps could not keep the vessel free from water. The steamer was able to make the landing, however, and discharged her passengers without the least semblance of a panic.

Keeping an Eye on Anarchists

Barre, Vt., Aug. 11.—A United States secret service officer has been here, shadowing anarchists and making investigations into the probability of an attack upon President Roosevelt when he visits Montpelier. The anarchists are aware that they have been watched, and it is not likely that they will make any attempt to harm the president. There are about 50 avowed anarchists in this city and Montpelier.

Mother's Dream Fulfilled

Leominster, Mass., Aug. 11.—Leland Kingston of this town, 18 years old, was drowned in Lake Waushacum, Sterling, yesterday, by the upsetting of his canoe. He went to the lake to spend Sunday at the camp of a friend, and had been warned to be especially careful by his mother, who had dreamed that her son was drowned.

Ex-Governor In Critical Condition

Winsted, Conn., Aug. 11.—Former Governor Lorrin A. Cook yesterday underwent an operation for the purpose of curing, if possible, an infection of the bladder. ALL ANXIETY RELIEVED

King Edward's Health In Every Way Satisfactory

A SERVICE OF GRATITUDE

Held In St Paul's Cathedral, Which Was Crowded to the Doors—Coronation Gift to the People of Osborn House, One of Victoria's Residence

London, Aug. 11.—The festivities in London were continued yesterday. There were considerable crowds almost all day long in the vicinity of Buckingham palace and along the route of Saturday's procession, viewing the decorations and watching the flow of notable personages to and from the various thanksgiving services. In the evening the Canadian arch, which, as an exceptional real novelty for Sunday, was brilliantly illuminated, was a great centre of attraction and served to bring an immense concourse of people into its neighborhood.

In spite of the welcome announcement made that King Edward had borne the fatigues of Coronation day well, yesterday's bulletin concerning his health was awaited with a certain degree of anxiety. Perhaps this is the reason that his majesty's physicians issued the bulletin at the rather unusual hour of 9:30 o'clock. Because of the early hour very few people were about when it was posted at the gates of the palace. The bulletin was as follows:

"His majesty bore the strain of the coronation ceremony perfectly well and experienced but little fatigue. The king had a good night and his condition is in every way satisfactory. No further bulletins will be issued."

The most interesting of all the services was that held at St. Paul's cathedral. This was essentially a people's service in gratitude and thankfulness that the sovereign had been restored to health, and it presented a striking contrast to the sad service of supplication held there in June on the day the coronation should have taken place. Yesterday the public was freely admitted to the cathedral and the great edifice was crowded with people in every corner.

The lord mayor of London and the corporation of the city attended in state, and in the choir were seated Princess Henry of Battenberg, the Duchess of Fife and the Duchess of Albany, with the royal children, a large number of diplomats, including Joseph H. Choate, as well as the Earl of Dudley, Lord Rosebery, the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, a number of prominent colonial visitors and others.

The very elaborate and prolonged service included several of the musical numbers which were performed at Westminster Abbey Saturday and the celebration of Holy Communion. The sermon was preached by the bishop of London, and the officiating clergy wore capes of cloth of gold, which, with the robes and insignia of the members of the corporation of the city and the brilliant dresses of the ladies in the congregation, made a striking picture. The scene was especially impressive when, at the close of the service, the vast gathering joined in singing the national anthem.

King Edward has signalled his coronation in a memorable manner by the munificent gift to the nation of Osborne house, one of the favorite residences of the late Queen Victoria. The gift is made in the following message to his people, addressed to Prime Minister Balfour. For reasons apparent in the document itself, his majesty makes his intention public:

"Under the will of the king's much beloved mother, the Osborne house estate is, as Mr. Balfour is aware, the private estate of the sovereign. Having to spend a considerable part of the year in the capital of this kingdom and in its neighborhood at Windsor, and having also strong home ties in the county of Norfolk, which have existed now for nearly 40 years, the king feels he will be unable to make adequate use of Osborne house as a royal residence, and he, accordingly, has determined to offer the property in the Isle of Wight as a gift to the nation.

"As Osborne house is sacred to the memory of the late queen, it is the king's wish that, with the exception of those apartments which were in the personal occupation of her majesty, his people shall always have access to the house, which must ever be associated with her beloved name. As regards the rest of the building the king hopes it may be devoted to national purposes and be converted into a convalescent home for officers of the navy and army whose health has been impaired in rendering service to their country.

"If, in order to give full legal effect to the king's wishes, it is found that application to parliament is necessary, the king trusts that Mr. Balfour will see that the necessary steps are in due course taken."

Queen's Heart Is Weak

Spa, Belgium, Aug. 11.—Serious rumors are in circulation that the attack of heart trouble from which Marie Henriette, Queen of the Belgians, is suffering, is dangerous, but at a late hour last night her majesty's physicians reported that the queen had revived.

Bank Teller Under Arrest

Denver, Aug. 11.—Leonard M. Dingle, former teller of the First National bank of Aspen, has been arrested in this city, charged with embezzling $40,000 from the bank.

Feet Roasted by Robbers

Dayton, O., Aug. 11.—Jacob Mumma, an aged farmer who lives alone, was tortured by masked robbers who broke into his house last night. The robbers poured coal oil on his feet and started a blaze to compel him to reveal the hiding place of money he was supposed to have, but they secured only a small sum.

Venezuelan Rebels Win a Battle

Port of Spain, B. W. I., Aug. 11.—News has reached here from Venezuela that after three days very severe fighting in the streets of Barcelona, revolutionists under command of General Penaloza captured the town from the government forces. The government lost 60 men and General Bravo.

Stands Aside For Chamberlain

Hartford, Aug. 11.—Ex-Speaker John H. Perry of Fairfield published a card in which he announces that he is unwilling to be considered a candidate for governor against Comptroller Chamberlain, and favors the candidacy of that gentleman.

Not Over-Wise.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Brookline lays the blame for the second crop of elm-leaf beetles which are doing damage in that town to the indifference of property owners who neglected to take advantage of the town's offer in the spring to spray the elm trees on private grounds. It looks as though another spring might see Brookline issuing a compulsory elm spraying order: for what Brookline intends to accomplish it usually does.—New Bedford Standard.

☞The law has made education compulsory in Cuba, but it has not said where the money to provide schools for the children is to be obtained. The estimates for the coming year call for nearly four million dollars for the public instruction account, which is considered the biggest sum the financial condition of the island will warrant; but this will provide schools for only half the children of school age. Private schools will care for about forty-nine thousand more, leaving about one hundred and twenty thousand children who the law says must go to school when there are no schools for them. But places nearer home than Cuba, New York and Brooklyn for instance, send home thousands of children every September to wait their chance to get some schooling; so Cuba's short supply of school facilities need create no excitement thus early in its new career. The law was a good one to make and the spirit to obey it is strong.—New Bedford Standard.

☞There is no advantage in mining coal which cannot be shipped; but notwithstanding this it is stated that a number of collieries are at work under ground, breaking down coal and getting it ready to send to the empty market when Mr. Baer and his associates in the control of the coal roads are graciously pleased to permit. It is time this farce came to an end. It may be there is no way of reaching the coal presidents and impressing them with a sense of their public duty; but the obligation devolves upon all independent newspapers to denounce their policy as an outrage upon the rights of the coal consuming public. If the state of Pennsylvania does not see to it that such a crime against the public welfare is not again committed it will be derelict in its duty to its own people and to the sisterhood of states.—New York Times.

☞The senseless fad of putting straw hats on horses is not as prevalent as last year, and we think another year will see it disappear entirely, unless it remains with a few who desire notoriety rather than fame. We do not see them on the horses of the principal teaming companies, that have to work hard, and we doubt if one has been tried on a fast trotter at the race tracks. The straw hat for horses and the stiff silk hat for men ought to go into retirement together, or be left to those who have no work to do and no brain to be hurt and oppressed by them. Those who advocate them should also put corsets on their horses to be consistent.—Boston Budget.

—Charming as some readers may consider a four-column photograph of a fat woman wading at Nantasket Beach, the subject hardly strikes every observer as being of universal interest.—Boston Budget.

A Rush to the Beaches.

Yesterday was a most beautiful day and there were immense gatherings at the beaches. The recent rains had laid the dust and the cool salt breezes from the ocean made it a pleasant day for traveling; and the Old Colony Street Railway Company had all the passengers that they could possibly attend to and they did the work quite well considering their limited supply of cars.

It is estimated that seventy-five thousand people visited Nantasket beach, yesterday, many of course went by water; each steamer went loaded, and so did the street cars. There has got to be, in years to come, better accommodations for carrying the throngs that will want to visit this quiet and attractive resort.

Nantasket beach is the most healthful resort there is in the state for large crowds. There are thousands of seats under cover where visitors can sit, free of charge, and enjoy the music or the ocean's waves. And this is to mothers and children, as well as to the aged, a great advantage over Revere beach, where only a few hundred can find a chance to sit down. There are not so many amusements as at the latter beach but they are not needed for those who wish to enjoy a day of rest.

Captured.

A beautiful large mink, one foot and ten inches in length was brought in our office today by Mr. Bartholomew W. Reardon, No. 54 Common street, who succeeded in capturing him this morning in his hen house. The mink had killed during the night seventy-one chickens and three hens, and on a former visit seventy-six chickens and three hens. The poultry were of a fancy breed, very large and valuable, and Mr. Reardon estimates his loss at $125.

There are no fewer than 801 trains in and out of the South station, Boston, every week day, beginning as early as 4.40 A. M., and continuing up to midnight, a period of about nineteen hours. This is a very large number, in the estimation of the railroad men, and they state that it is exceeded by probably only two other stations in the world. These are in London, England, and they send out and receive about a thousand trains daily.—Boston Post.

One would think with all these outgoing trains, more than one, or possibly two local ticket windows, would be necessary to accommodate the people. Complaints are heard, especially from ladies, that there are no windows open in the waiting room where tickets may be purchased. As it is now, ladies have to stand in line among men of all classes and patiently await their turn. Many prefer to pay on the train and get a rebate at a suburban station. Accommodations at the North Union station are much better.

—Green Harbor river in Marshfield, which was dredged about three years ago by the goverment at a cost of $80,000, has so filled with sand as to be unnavigable at low tide. A fifty foot channuel, with eight feet of water at ebb tide, was dug, together with an anchorage basin. The channel has filled up, while the basin is about half its original depth. This, with previous expenditures in building a dyke across the river in 1870, makes a waste of $130,000 in attempted improvements here. The fishermen hope for the taking away of the dyke by the government. It is believed this will scour out the sand in the river and restore the excellent harbor of the olden days.—Rockland Free Press.

—Clinton is another town with a big tax rate, $19.20 per $1000. The assessors announce the valuation of the town as $7,873,519, an increase over last year of $192,528; personal property $1,845,445, increase $100,943; real estate $6,028,074, increase $91,585. Appropriations by the town this year amount to $182,675, and with state and county taxes the total to be raised by taxation is $195,160.

Henry H. Faxon has circulated a petition and secured the names of some forty or more prominent citizens, which he intends tomorrow to present to the Board of Health, requesting them to permit him to empty and keep in sanitary condition the vaults and cesspools belonging to property over which he has control.

Well authenticated report is in circulation the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre coal company will start up one or two of its mines this week.

—A minister in the west preached a brief but beautiful sermon the other day. Here it is: "A word to you all. Post mortem praises and love are in the air. People kiss their dead that never stop to kiss their living; they hover over open caskets in hysteric sobs, but fail to throw their arms around their loved ones who are fighting the stern battles of life. A word of cheer to a struggling soul in life is worth more than the roses of Christendom piling high on a casket cover. The dead can't smell the flowers, but the living can scatter them broadly in their pathway, therefore, and pluck out the thorns before it is too late."

LIVELY CHASE.

Patrol Wagon Went to Neponset after a Crowd of Disturbers.

The Quincy police had quite a lively chase Sunday night after five Italians who were disturbing the peace. The men were in a team and came from the direction of Braintree. As they came down through City Square they made a nuisance of themselves by singing, etc.

Officer Goodhue attempted to hold them up but they whipped up their horse and with a shout disappeared toward Neponset. Word was sent to the police station at Harrison Square to overhaul them. The patrol wagon was also sent down after them.

The Boston police held up the party but through a misunderstanding did not arrest all of them. When the patrol wagon reached Neponset, it was sent after the men who had been permitted to go on. They were overtaken on Neponset avenue and brought to Quincy.

BEATEN TO DEATH

Assailants of Man Found In a Cambridge Field Are Unknown

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 11.—James H. Fermoyle, a master painter of Arlington, was beaten to death in a field in East Cambridge Saturday night, but his assailants are unknown. The police have ascertained that he visited a Boston saloon Saturday afternoon, and had an argument with some men, apparently over money matters. He left the saloon at 6:15, and from that time until he was found in a field in a frightfully battered condition his movements are not traced.

Fermoyle apparently was pounded over the head and body and then knocked down and kicked. At the time he was found he was dying, and although hurried to a hospital surgical aid was of no use. Fermoyle was 45 years old, prominent in politics in Arlington and leaves a widow and one young son.

An Over-Sensitive Soldier

Paris, Aug. 11.—The prefect of the department of Morbihan asked that a detachment of cavalry be sent to assist the authorities in their efforts to close the unauthorized congregationist schools at Ploermel. Lieutenant Colonel St. Remy was ordered to go to Ploermel with a part of his regiment. He refused to obey this order, declaring his religious sentiments forbade him to co-operate in closing congregationist establishments. War Minister Andre has ordered St. Remy to be confined and to be court martialled for insubordination.

Seven Killed In Hotel Fire

San Angelo, Tex., Aug. 11.—Fire yesterday destroyed the Landon hotel, burning seven people to a crisp and doing property damage of $75,000. When the clerk discovered the flames at 2 o'clock in the morning the interior of the dining room was a gulf of flame. There were 75 people in the house. Seven women and children got out on a small gallery and were requested to jump into blankets which were being held for them, but they feared to do so and delayed until the gallery fell back into the flames.

Can't Check Flow of Oil

Mason City, Mich., Aug. 11.—While digging for water on his homestead near here, John Pearson uncovered a vein of oil which gushed out in large volumes. Already the petroleum has covered several acres several inches deep and a lake is being rapidly formed, no apparatus being at hand to stop the flow. The oil is of excellent quality and appears to be inexhaustible in quantity.

Holdup of Short Duration

Willemstad, Aug. 11.—Steamer Caracas, from LaGuaira, Venezuela, brings the news that Captain Nickels of the United States training ship Topeka, now at LaGuaira, was held up by revolutionists when returning by train from Caracas. The men who stopped the train which carried Captain Nickels showed him great courtesy, and the train was permitted to proceed immediately.

Tracy's Body Disposed Of

Salem, Ore., Aug. 11.—The body of Harry Tracy was received at the penitentiary just two months after his sensational escape. The corpse was identified by prison officials and convicts. Vitriol was placed on the face to destroy it in order to prevent any attempt at stealing the body and placing it on exhibition. The box was then conveyed to the prison cemetery and buried.

Bad Half-Hour Storm

Kansas City, Aug. 11.—A wind storm that raged for half an hour here yesterday, accompanied by lightning and rain, is said to have been the severest in 15 years. The fire department estimates the damage at $100,000. A peculiar feature of the storm was the drowning of thousands of sparrows. The rain came so suddenly that they were unable to find places of shelter.

Ochs Consolidates Newspapers

The retail price will be 1 cent daily, and 2 cents Sunday. The two papers are owned by Adolph S. Ochs.

Trial by Jury Denied

Manila, Aug. 11.—Judge Ambler has denied the motion of the defendants in The Freedom sedition case for trial by jury. In making this denial the court said: "The Philippines are entitled to the bill of rights excepting the right to trial by jury. The constitution of the United States follows us here only so far as congress enacts that it shall."

South Quincy, 11; Dedeam, 10.

South Quincys won one of the most exciting games of the season at the Ward Three playground on Saturday, when they defeated the strong Dedham A. A. team by a score of 11 to 10.

With the score 8 to 6 against them in the sixth, the home team got two men on the bases and scored on a well placed hit by McCarthy, tieing the score. The visitors got two runs in the eighth and the home team one. The ninth found the visitors one run to the good and with two out it looked as though South Quincys were all in. Oswald was given a pass to first, and scored on a drive to right by McCarthy. McCarthy reached third and scored on a bunt of Dunn's, thus bringing in the winning run. The features was the playing of Faircloth, McDenitt and McCarthy, the stick work of the latter practically winning the game, and the playing of Connors, J. Kelly and Hartnett. The score:

West Quincy vs. Roslindale.

West Quincy and Roslindale battled on the American league grounds Saturday afternoon, and the former won quite easily. The fielding of Roslindale was very ragged. The West Quincy boys gave Sawyer good support, and the only charged to the team were those of the battery. Kussmaul was in the points for Roslindale, and pitched a winning game for four innings, but became discouraged with the support given, and allowed West Quincy to hit the ball. The latter team gave a nice exhibition of daring base running, and had Roslindale boys throwing the ball over the lot to catch between bases, while the Roselindale men were extremely slow on bases.

QUINCY Y. C. RACE.

Eclipse, Betty B, Clover and Mildred, Carry off the Honors.

The club race, under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club, sailed Saturday off the club house at Houghs Neck proved to be one of the most interesting club events of the season.

Twelve yachts participated in the three classes aside from the race for launches.

In the first class the Eclipse made a wonderful showing in the light air and led the other boats in the class over the course, thereby adding another victory to her long list.

The special design class had four entries. The Edith S, finished first but judges awarded the race to the Betsy B, as she had turned one of the buoys the wrong way under instructions from the skipper of the Edith S.

In the third class there were but two boats. They however, funished an interesting race.

John Wood handled the stick of the Clover, which made her first appearance, and G. H. Gardner the Mabel G.

The Clover led on the leg to Jackknife ledge buoy. On the second leg to Sheep Island buoy the Mabel G pulled into first position. After rounding this buoy the Clover took advantage of the tide and regained her lead finishing with a lead of over a minute.

The motor launches furnished an interesting race as there is considerable rivalry between the Mildred owned by Mayor Bryant and the Aleppo owned by W. S. Tilley. The latter broke down however before the finish and withdrew. This left the Marjorie to fight it out with the Mildred, and the race was won by the Mildred.

The judges were Commodore E. W. Sheppard and Joseph L. Whiton, Jr.

THE GIANT'S CAUSEWAY.

Formation and Appearance of This Odd Freak of Nature.

The Giant's causeway is situated at the northern extremity of County Antrim, a short distance from Port Rush, Ireland. It consists of countless hosts of basaltic pillars, varying in shape from a pentagon to an octagon, the average length of each column or pillar being about eighty feet, the whole stacked so closely together that a knife blade could hardly be inserted between them. But the formation of these pillars is not the least wonderful part about them, for, although they may be counted by thousands and tens of thousands, each column is fashioned with a symmetry that suggests a mason's handiwork. Their composition is a perfect fusion of one-half flinty earth, one-quarter lime and clay, one-quarter almost pure iron, each pillar being divided into regular lengths or joints which come together as a perfect, natural ball and socket union.

Although to be found in small detachments (imbedded in the cliffs, sands, etc.) for some distance along the shore, the principal aggregations forming the causeway proper consist of three projections or tongues known as little, middle and grand causeways. These singular columns are of different lengths and present an astonishing appearance as they stand, an army of at least 40,000 strong marshaled on the shores of Erin as if ever ready to do battle with the rising tide.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

Next to the various shades of green, red and pink have taken very many of the foremost seats in fashion's court this season.

The genuine French woven grass cloth or linen batiste in the pale ecru and tan shades has this year been made up into very pretty gowns for midsummer wear.

The French tea gowns of the season are formed of beautiful silk batistes of light grounds strewn with flowers and foliage; also of tamboured organdie, pompadour foulard, figured crepe de chine, voile and mercerized india mull.

Some of the smartest of the imported linen costumes now worn at fashionable summer resorts are woven in tiny basket squares much like hopsacking, and these are considered worthy of lace decorations and silk blouse vests.

Silky looking mercerized cotton gowns are exceedingly popular this year. They are not only used for shirt waist suits for morning wear, but, finished with linen strappings or swiss embroidery, they make smart costumes for general afternoon uses.—New York Post.

A Frenchman was teaching in a large school where he had a reputation for making some queer mistakes. One day he was taking a class which was rather disorderly. What with the heat and troublesome boys he was very snappish. Having punished several boys and sent one to the bottom of the class, he at last shouted out in a passion, "Ze whole class go to ze bottom!"

Relatively Speaking.

"He must be put out of the way," said the feudal king. "But, your majesty," protested the lord high executioner, "he is your first cousin." "I know; but I prefer to have him my 'cousin once removed.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Good Advice.

"Help! Help!" came the cry of distress through the midnight stillness.

The policeman in the neighboring doorway stirred uneasily. "Advertise in the want column," he muttered and resumed his nap.—Philadelphia Press.

A celebrated physician declares that the increase in height and weight of Britons and Americans during the last half century is chiefly due to the increased consumption of sugar.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

DEATH OF M'MILLAN

Senator Was In Usual Health Up to Saturday

OVERCOME AT GOLF GAME

Had Apparently Recovered but Was Stricken With Another Attack of Heart Failure at Midnight and Soon Passed Away

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 11.—Senator James McMillan of Michigan died yesterday at his summer home "Eagle Head." He was in his usual health Saturday evening on retiring, but was taken ill during the night with congestion of the lungs, which a weak heart, from which he had suffered many years, was unable to throw.

Senator McMillan was at Essex County club Saturday afternoon, and while playing golf was obliged to pass over a small hill, which so affected his breath that he was obliged to stop, and, being overcome by slight faintness, he sent for a stimulant, which revived him, and the attack soon passed away. He felt much better towards night, but went home without finishing the game and at dinner-time had recovered entirely from the afternoon's indisposition. He remained up quite late in the evening, but at midnight suffered a severe ill turn, being pressed for breath and experiencing considerable pain. Dr. Washburn was called and he administered the usual heart tonics, which had the desired effect, and the patient rested comfortably until 3 o'clock, when another attack came on, more severe than the first. Dr. Washburn applied the most powerful heart stimulants known to medical science, but the drug had no effect and the patient continued to sink until he lost consciousness 10 minutes before his death. Dr. Morrill was sent for, after the second attack, but did not arrive until just after the senator had passed away at 4 o'clock. There were around the death-bed Mrs. McMillan, their daughter Amy, and a granddaughter, Miss Jarvis.

Senator McMillan had been a summer resident of Manchester for seven years, he having purchased the old Towne estate at Eagle Head, which he had improved and beautified in many ways, until it is now one of the finest estates on the north shore.

Senator McMillan was a native of Ontario, having been born in Hamilton May 12, 1838, but in early life removed to Michigan and for many years has been prominently identified with the business interests and political life of that state, having for a number of terms been chairman of the Republican state committee. He has been a member of the United States senate since March 4, 1889. He was chairman of the committee of the District of Columbia in that body and was also a member of the committees on appropriations, commerce, naval affairs, relations with Cuba, coast and insular survey and corporations organized in the District of Columbia. As chairman of the district committee, Senator McMillan was identified with district affairs and became very well known to the citizens of Washington, by whom he was highly regarded. He took a lively interest in the welfare of the district and was one of the foremost advocates in the efforts that are being made for the improvement of the city.

Senator McMillan's family was prominent in social circles in Washington and the senator himself was a member of the Metropolitan and Chevy Chase clubs.

Senator McMillan became interested in the lake carrying trade and invested large sums in lake transportation, both freight and passenger. He also was heavily interested in the shipbuilding business on the great lakes.

Senator McMillan became one of the most prominent men in the business life of Detroit. He was a director in three banks of that city and was also a stockholder in a number of other financial institutions and local corporations.

Senator McMillan was a large contributor to charities of various kinds and made a number of notable gifts to educational institutions.

The McMillan family have suffered sore affliction and severe loss by death in the past year. Senator McMillan's son, James H. McMillan, and his grandson, James H. McMillan, Jr., died in Colorado within a few months of each other last winter. In addition to the senator's sudden death yesterday, his brother, William McMillan, and his nephew, Maurice McMillan, have recently died.

If the family desires it a congressional committee from both houses of congress will be appointed to accompany the remains to their last resting place. The designations will be made by Senator Frye, the president pro-tem of the senate, who now is in Maine, and by Speaker Henderson, who also is absent from Washington.

Charged With Killing Husband

Springfield, Ills., Aug. 11.—As a result of the finding of the coroner's jury in the case of W. H. Riley, commissioner of the Big Lake drainage district, who was murdered in his bed by being shot Thursday night, his wife is held, charged with the murder of her husband.

No Change For the Better

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 11.—There is no apparent improvement in the condition of Madame Janauschek, the actress, who is suffering from paralysis.

THE MINERS' STRIKE

Belief That Operators Will Start a Few Mines This Week

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 11.—The 14th week of the anthracite miners' strike begun today. President Mitchell is authority for the statement that the strikers are in good shape. Contributions to the relief fund are coming in from many quarters now and the dissatisfaction which was first evinced over the distribution has now disappeared and the strikers have settled down to what they believe is going to be a much longer siege than was first anticipated.

While the strike leaders are inclined to throw cold water on all reports that an attempt may be made to resume mining at an early day in the Wyoming region, it would not be at all surprising should one or two of the mines in this section be started up this week. The same story has been told for weeks past, but there is a well authenticated report in circulation that the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal company may start at its Wanamie colliery some day this week.

A general review of the whole strike region shows that unless the operators can break the ranks of the strikers by starting up a colliery here and there the men will be inclined to remain out for some time yet. The amount of relief to be distributed will not satisfy all, but the miners seem to be willing to make some sacrifices in that direction in the hope that eventually they will win.

Filipino Catholics Split

Manila, Aug. 11.—Isabelle de Los Reyes, the labor leader, Pascual Poblets, formerly a member of the Katipunan secret society, and the Workmen's Democratic union have organized a Philippine Catholic church in defection from the Roman Catholic church. Father Aglipay, a native, who was recently excommunicated by the Catholic church, has been made bishop of the Philippine islands. Fourteen junior bishops and a large lay council have been named. Opinion here as to the growth and effect of this movement is divided. In some quarters it is ridiculed, while in others it is considered serious.

Won't Support Strikers

New York, Aug. 11.—Patrick McMahon, president of the Eccentric and Standard Engineers' union, to which belong the men who work in the Manhattan Elevated company's power houses, says the men of that organization will not support the engine drivers and motormen should they decide to quit work. He says: "The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, to which the Manhattan Elevated men belong, never helped any strike, but, on the contrary, spoiled many a one."

Bathed In Murdered Man's Blood

New York, Aug. 11.—Pietro Guardina, a Neapolitan, was murdered by a Sicilian, Antonio Zirotoli, in Mulberry Bend yesterday. Zirotoli is 32 years of age, but he wielded a knife with deadly precision. The Neapolitan's wife and two children and several other relations were with him when he was murdered, and in a frenzy of grief they bathed their faces with the blood that flowed from the wound. The stabbing was the outcome of a street altercation.

Volcano Threatens a Town

Managua, Aug. 11.—The Santiago cone of the Masaya volcano, in Nicaragua, has been emitting vapors, accompanied by groaning sounds, for the last 20 days. Officials report that, in their opinion, there is danger of an eruption occurring shortly. The town of San Ferando de Masaya is situated at the foot of the volcano, and has a population of 22,000 people.

Old Actress Passes On

New York, Aug. 11.—Mrs. Eliza Young, the oldest actress of the American stage, died yesterday at the Actor's Fund home, West New Brighton, S. I. She fell two weeks ago and had one of her hip bones broken. Mrs. Young was nearly 92 years old. She was born in London. She was with many of America's prominent actors until her last appearance in 1889.

Passengers Badly Scared

Thousand Island Park, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Steamer New York went on the rocks just below Thousand Island Park with 850 passengers on board. There was panic for a few moments, but the crew reassured the passengers. Boats were lowered and the people were landed at Fine View. The boat appears to be damaged considerably.

Missing Man's Body Found

Bath, Me., Aug. 11.—The body of John Oliver, a molder, who had been missing from his home in this city for several days, was found floating in the Kennebec river yesterday. It is believed he was accidentally drowned. Oliver is survived by a widow and several children.

Despondency, Murder and Suicide

Utica, Mich., Aug. 11.—S. B. Sower, farmer, last night killed his wife with an axe as she lay in bed and then hung himself in his barn. Despondency over the fear that he was becoming insane and grief over the death of his only daughter impelled him to commit the crimes.

Downpour of Rain at Trenton

Trenton, Aug. 11.—About a score of buildings were unroofed and otherwise damaged by a terrific storm that visited Trenton last evening. The properties injured were in the centre of the city. The damage is about $50,000. Over four inches of water fell in two hours.

Strike Threatened at Chicago

Chicago, Aug. 11.—The Chicago City Railway company is threatened with a strike in all of its lines within a week, unless it yields to the demands of its barn and shopmen for an increase in wages, and corrects several grievances of employes in other departments.

HE TOOK THE CAKE.

A Story of William Black, the Novelist, and Mary Anderson.

One time when Mary Anderson was playing in "The Winter's Tale" in Dublin William Black, the novelist, who was very intimate with Miss Anderson and her family, insisted upon assuming the part of one of the supers, who was dressed as a very old man with a venerable beard and locks that fell upon his shoulders. When Black went upon the stage in this disguise, he walked about among his fellow supers with unceasing restlessness and, judging by the wild motions of his arms, seemed to be addressing to each in turn an impassioned harangue. The audience began to wonder who the new actor was and what on earth he was doing in a play in which neither Shakespeare nor the stage managers ever intended him to appear.

Presently came the time when it was the business of Perdita to distribute flowers among the peasants, among whom Black had his place. Miss Anderson, carrying on the practical jokes of the family circle, had prepared a surprise for this moment, and, having distributed flowers among the less favored supers, she handed to Black a large cake crowned with a wreath of laurel, saying as she did so, "You take it," in allusion to his triumphs in the contests of wits at the supper table.

To her consternation, Black showed that he was quite prepared to carry out the jest, for, taking the cake from the hands of Perdita, he immediately distributed it in substantial portions to his hungry fellow supers, who, finding it to be of excellent quality, began to munch it greedily under the eyes of the house.—Exchange.

A Kicking Horse.

A writer in the National Stockman gives this method of treating a kicking horse: Put on him a strong surcingle and crupper. Have one ring where the check hook comes and one eight inches lower on the right side. Now run a strap from the lower ring to the crupper about where the hip strap passes through. Now take a five-eighths inch rope fifteen feet long, fasten it to the ring at the check and then hook through the ring in the halter and back through the lower ring in the surcingle. Strap up his left fore foot. This should be done in a straw yard. Now you have him ready. Take your rope and go ahead of him a few feet, a little to the right, and begin to pull. Hold him steady and let him fight this hard, but keep drawing his head to his side and he will go down to the ground. Now you have him where you want him. Show him you can do as you please with him. Keep him there until he gives up, if it takes all day. Show him you can handle him.

The Butcher Bird's Larder.

It is possible that the butcher bird's "curious and cruel habit" of impaling various creatures upon hedge thorn is his way of supporting his wife during her period of seclusion. Of many species the female is fed by the male on the nest, but the butcher bird's prey consists often of creatures which are too large to be eaten at a mouthful. Even if the male could always drag these carcasses to the nest it is obvious that the female could not eat them there; so the "larder" may have been hit upon as a happy device to get over the difficulty, the female flitting thither to help herself whenever she is hungry.—Country Life.

Easy Sailing.

Visitor—I would like to get you to teach me to sail a boat.

Boatman—Sail a boat? Why, it's easy as swimmin'. Jest grasp the main sheet with one hand an' the tiller with the other, an' if a flaw strikes ease up or bring 'er to an' loose the halyards, but look out fer the gaff an' boom or the hull thing'll be in the water an' yo'll be upset; but if the wind is steady y'r all right, onless y'r too slow in luffin', 'cause then ye'll be upset sure. Jump right in an' try it; but, remember, whatever ye do, don't jibe!"

Bees and Ants.

Bees will place their honeycombs in any place regularly or irregularly shaped, and when they come to corners and angles they seem to stop and consider. Then they vary the shape of the cell, so that the space is exactly filled. It could not be done more satisfactorily if the whole thing had been worked out on paper beforehand. Ants make hard and smooth roads and drive tunnels compared to which man's efforts in making such things are insignificant. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Trifles.

There is no such thing in life as a trifle; every event and action, however unimportant seemingly, has a root below and a branch above which twist and turn into some other root and branch, making part of the great substance on and in which we live. Its presence and absence both affect the entire mass of which it forms a part.—Exchange.

He Was Not.

"Gentlemen, you wouldn't take me to be a member of a millionaire's family, would you?" inquired the young man.

"Frankly, we would not."

"Neither would the millionaire. I asked him last night."

Revenge.

The Bride—There's only one thing needed to complete our happiness.

The Groom—What is that, dearest?

The Bride—I do wish my first husband and your first wife would meet and get married.—Detroit Free Press.

There is so much competition in the world that the man who makes a good living should be a hero with his women folks.—Atchison Globe.

Insurgents Establish Blockade at Cape Haytien

PETIT GOAVE IN ASHES

Firmin's Troops Set Fire to the Town In Retreating From It—Minister Powell Reports That Four Provinces Are Now In Rebellion

Port au Prince, Hayti, Aug. 12.—The gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot, which is in the Firminite service, gave notice Sunday of the blockade of Cape Haytien. The foreign consuls here and Commander McCrea of the United States gunboat Machias protested against this action. Soldiers have again gone out from here and a battle in a few days is believed to be inevitable. The bad feeling against foreigners has increased.

Petit Goave, to the west of here, has been destroyed, there being nothing left but a pile of ruins. About 4000 persons are homeless, and are greatly in need of assistance. The greater number of them have sought shelter in the Simmonds factories near the town. The French cruiser D'Assas arrived at Petit Goave Sunday with provisions for the sufferers, and returned to Port au Prince with 200 women and children and 15 wounded men. The authorities refused to permit the Firminists to leave, fearing they would go to other points to take up arms again.

Each party accuses the other of having set fire to Petit Goave, but the general belief is that General Chicoye, the Firminist commander, resolved to destroy the town when he saw that he could not hold it against the Fouchardists.

The News at Washington

Washington, Aug. 12.—Commander McCrea of the gunboat Machias has cabled the navy department that a defacto blockade had been established by the insurgents at Cape Haytien. The Machias is at her anchorage.

Minister Powell has cabled the state department from Cape Haytien that the provisional (Vasquez) government of Hayti has notified the United States legation that Gonaives, Port de Paix, Petit Goave and St. Maro provinces are in rebellion. The government troops captured Petit Goave after strong resistance, in which many lives were lost. Firmin's troops, in retreating from the place, set fire to and destroyed the town.

A Bold Kidnapping

Three Rivers, Que., Aug. 12.—H. Galardeau of Manchester, N. H., arrived here a few days ago with his two children, a boy 10 years old and a girl of 7, on a visit to his brother. While the children were playing near the house yesterday two men and a woman drove up, hustled the children into a wagon and drove off. The alarm was given and a party started in pursuit. The wagon was traced to Champlain, 15 miles from here, but so far the kidnapped children have not been found.

Murder Remains a Mystery

Boston, Aug. 12.—The police of Boston and Cambridge have learned very little about the murder of James H. Fermoyle. The autopsy on the body showed that the man was literally beaten to death, probably with an iron bar. The robbery theory is the one worked on, although it is known that Fermoyle had no money with him at the time.

Forgery on a Big Scale

London, Aug. 12.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg reports the discovery at Warsaw of a wholesale manufactory of forged bank notes and postage stamps which had been flourishing for the past four years. The national banks, according to the correspondent, have cashed $2,000,000 worth of forged paper. The leaders of the forgers have been arrested.

Lightning Struck Crowded Church

Leslie, Ga., Aug. 12.—The Baptist church here was struck by lightning while services were going on. The building was crowded. Richard Dodson was instantly killed. Forty persons were seriously injured, though it is not thought any will die. The building was baly torn and set on fire, but heavy rain prevented burning.

Portsmouth, O., Aug. 12.—General Jacob H. Smith was given a royal reception at his home last night, fully 5000 people being at the depot to meet him, accompanied by a band and drum corps. The mother of General Smith was among those at the station. A crowd escorted the general to his residence.

M'DONALD'S TROUBLES

Augmented by Imposition of Fines on Two Charges

Wareham, Mass., Aug. 12.—James McDonald, who was tarred and feathered and ridden on a rail last week by the men of Marion, appeared before Judge Washburn in the district court yesterday on the charge of assault on Charles H. Potter, at whose house he lived. Besides this charge he also had to answer one of keeping liquor in Marion, with intent to make illegal sales. On the liquor complaint he pleaded nolo, but the judge refused to accept that plea, and he changed it to one of guilty. A fine of $75 was imposed.

In the assault case Potter testified to having a quarrel with his wife, during which the latter called for "Mack," and McDonald came in and used up the witness badly, finally throwing him bodily out of the room. Mrs. Potter also testified to McDonald's interference in the quarrel and of his attack on her husband. McDonald, in his own defense, said he heard the quarrel between husband and wife and Mrs. Potter's call of "Mack." He denied going into the room and doing anything to Potter. The court imposed a $20 fine, in default of which McDonald was sent to the jail at Plymouth.

Fatal Collision of Trolley Cars

Rockland, Me., Aug. 12.—There was a collision between a passenger and a construction car on the electric road at Rockport yesterday, the cars coming together head-on with a fearful crash. Raymond Moran, motorman of the passenger car, died from his injuries about two hours later. Ralph Tibbetts received painful, but not serious, bruises, and Everett Condon, who was running the construction car, escaped with slight injuries. No one seems to know why the construction car was on the main track.

A Coronation Celebration

Boston, Aug. 12.—In honor of the coronation of King Edward VII a festival participated in by the British societies of the state was held last night in Tremont Temple. The speakers included G. W. Allen of Fredericton, N. B.; Dr. William Everett of Quincy, and Rev. A. W. Jones of Roslindale. The British and American flags were intermingled in the decorations of the hall, and the music of the occasion included the national airs of both nations.

Two Bad Accidents

Malden, Mass., Aug. 12.—Martin Crowe, aged 60, and Paulo Gavistyze, a laborer, are at a hospital in a critical condition from injuries received yesterday. Crowe, caretaker of an estate here, climbed a tree to reach some gypsy moth nests, and losing his hold fell upon a piazza rail, breaking his back. The Italian was employed by a contractor, and was going towards a blast just as it was discharged. A fragment of rock fractured his skull. Both men are expected to die.

Boys Fooled With Gasolene

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 12.—While some boys were playing about an unfinished house on Pleasant street yesterday one of them touched a lighted match to a five-gallon can of gasolene that had been left in the house by mistake. A terrific explosion resulted and all the boys were quickly enveloped in flames. All but one of the lads escaped serious injury. Frederick Pioles, 12 years old, was terribly burned, and it is feared his injuries will prove fatal.

Rainbow and Elmina Winners

Marblehead, Mass., Aug. 12.—The regatta with which the Eastern Yacht club entertained the New York Yacht club yesterday was one of the largest yachting events ever held in Massachusetts bay. Thirty-three yachts from the New York and Eastern clubs started, and 24 finished. The Rainbow won in the 70-footers by the short margin of 21 seconds. In the schooner class the Elmina won over the Muriel.

Fort Rodman May Be Attacked

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 12.—It is believed that Fort Rodman will be one of the points attacked in the army and navy maneuvers, from the fact that for three days last week a torpedo boat destroyer was engaged in making soundings in the bay. In addition, large quantities of ammunition have been received, and four rapid-fire guns have been mounted and a range-finder installed in the old fort.

Cold Storage Combination

Boston, Aug. 12.—Plans are under consideration for a general reorganization of the cold storage business of the city of Bston. This business is now controlled by the Quincy Market Cold Storage company and the Eastern Cold Storage company. The project involves about $3,000,000 of capital, and it is understood that the New Haven, Boston and Maine, and Boston and Albany roads are interested.

Coe Pleads Not Guilty

Boston, Aug. 12.—In the superior criminal court yesterday Henry F. Coe appeared and answered to the indictment returned against him by the grand jury, charging him with embezzlement of funds of the Bowker Fertilizer company, of which corporation he was treasurer. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $10,000 bail for trial.

Refusal to Reduce Bail

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 12.—The case of Munroe Rogers, who is wanted for an attempt to burn a building at Durham, N. C., again came up in court yesterday. His counsel asked that the bail of $3000 be reduced to $300. Judge Read refused to reduce the bail and continued the case again to Aug. 20.

JUSTICE GRAY RESIGNS

Ill Health Compels Retirement From Supreme Bench

HIS SUCCESSOR IS NAMED

Chief Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of Massachusetts Supreme Court Will Accept Honor Conferred Upon Him—Sketch of His Life

Oyster, Bay, L. I., Aug. 12.—President Roosevelt late yesterday afternoon announced that he had appointed Oliver Wendell Holmes, chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts, to be an associate justice of the United States supreme court, vice Justice Gray, resigned.

Holmes Hears the News

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 12.—Chief Justice Holmes was informed of his appointment to the United States supreme bench by The Associated Press at his summer home in Beverly Farms last night. He will accept the honor. He was at dinner at the time, but left the table at once to receive the message. He said: "I do not like to be interviewed, and I have nothing to say except that The Associated Press is the first to inform me of my appointment."

He was asked if he would accept the honor and he replied: "Oh yes; I shall no doubt accept it."

He said that probably his new duties will not compel him to relinquish his summer home at Beverly Farms, but further than that he did not care to talk. He did add, however, that he was greatly pleased that the appointment should come to him.

Judge Holmes was born in Boston March 8, 1841, and received his preparatory education in E. S. Dixwell's private Latin school, graduating from Harvard university in 1861. He served in the Twentieth Massachusetts regiment in the Civil war, rising to the rank of lieutenant colonel. Later he served as aide to Brigadier General Wright, commanding the First division, Sixth corps. In December, 1865, he became a law student in the office of R. M. Morse, and graduated from Harvard law school in 1866. He was admitted to the Suffolk bar in 1867 and afterward began active practice of law with his only brother, Edward J. Holmes. In 1876 he became a member of the law firm of Shattuck, Holmes & Monroe. On Dec. 8, 1882, Governor Long appointed him an associate justice of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts. On July 28, 1899, the late Governor Wolcott appointed him chief justice of the Massachusetts supreme court.

Judge Holmes, in addition to his eminence in law matters, has achieved prominence as a writer and lecturer on legal subjects, upon which in many instances he is a recognized authority. At Harvard university he taught constitutional law in 1870 and 1871, and was university lecturer on jurisprudence in 1871 and 1872. He received the degree of LL. D. from Yale in 1866 and from Harvard in 1895. On June 17, 1872, Chief Justice Holmes married Miss Fanny Dixwell, daughter of Epes S. Dixwell of Cambridge, Mass.

Resignation Not Unexpected

Washington, Aug. 12.—Justice Gray's resignation was not altogether unexpected. It was recognized that he would be unable to resume his duties on the bench and the general impression was that he would resign at or before the beginning of the next term of court in October. His successor, it is said, will not take his place on the bench until after his confirmation by the senate. This is the unwritten practice in the case of appointments to the supreme court. Justice Gray has been at Nahant, Mass., his summer home, for some time. He was always an ardent Republican. Like his successor in office, he was chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts before his appointment to the United States supreme court.

The resignation of Justice Gray was due to ill health. Several months ago he suffered a stroke of apoplexy which, some time later, was followed by another. He has not appeared on the bench since he was stricken the first time. His advanced age—74 years—told against his recovery with serious force. Realizing that he probably never would be able again to assume the place which he so long had filled with ability and honor, he decided a short time ago to tender his resignation to the president. With the exception of Justice Harlan, he served on the bench of the United States supreme court longer than any of his present colleagues. He was appointed an associate justice by President Arthur on Dec. 19, 1881.

Cleveland, Aug. 12.—The United Garment Workers' Union of America began its 11th annual convention here yesterday. Delegates representing 31,000 workmen are in attendance. At yesterday's session $1000 was donated to the striking anthracite miners.

Burned Money and Killed Himself

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

In talking recently with a man who holds a very important position at the Fore River Ship and Engine Company works he predicted that Washington street would be the business street of the city before many years. He said the water front was bound to develop and already the Electric Light Co., Street Car Power house, Hanleys and the Fore River works were factors to be considered. He thought it would be a mistake to locate the Federal building out of the centre and thought the corner of Washington and Temple streets ideal. Washington street he said would suit the Fore River company better than the Hancock street site.

We do not like to pose as advocating longer hours for any business, private or public, especially at this season of the year, but it has been repeatedly brought to our notice that the public library is not accommodating the public as to hours. We have hesitated to comment on the matter for personal reasons, knowing the librarian and assistants work as many hours as they should, as there is much work to be done outside of the time the library is open to the public. We think the fault is not with them and possibly not with the trustees. More help is needed and more money and the trustees should ask and insist on having it instead of allowing the appropriation to be cut down as the Council committee try to do each year. There are places to economize but the library is not one of them.

We have a building to be proud of (a gift to the city); a large collection of books, and the distribution should be a matter of accommodation to every class of citizens and not alone the people of leisure, or of short business hours. As the hours are now, one to six, any one working until six o'clock cannot have the use of the library except on Saturday evenings when it is crowded and almost impossible to get the book desired. Many have given up taking books in summer.

If the hours during the warm weather were three to eight it would give better service and the hours of the assistants could be so arranged they would not all have to work every night.

The first of September the library should keep open from one to eight or nine o'clock during the winter as is done in other towns and cities the size of Quincy.

Another reason why our library is not of as much use as many is the lack of reading accommodations. Other libraries have large, quiet, reading rooms with tables well supplied with the latest magazines and reference books handy. Some day this will doubtless be remedied but in the meantime let us keep abreast of the times and give the public as good service as to hours and new books as possible and consistent with the means at hand.

—Santos Dumont's airship was injured at Brighton Beach, New York, Sunday afternoon by the collapse of a wooden platform erected to prevent people from viewing the airship without paying admission. The platform crashed into the propellers doing considerable damage.

—The Woman's Relief Corps of Washington are making an effort to have "rag-time" music omitted during the parade of the Grand Army at the coming encampment in Washington.

THE ICE TRUST.

One of Quincy's Firms Sells Out to the Monopoly.

Among the transfers reported in the Banker and Tradesman this week is one that sets at rest the rumor that has been prevalent for some time, that some of the Quincy ice dealers had sold out to the Ice Trust. The transfers referred to are:

Carrie S. Rogers to E. John Kauffmann.
E. John Kauffman to Wallace O. Sprague.
Wallace O. Sprague to N. E. Cone. Ice Cos.

This property is what is known as the Crystal Spring Ice Co. and is propably the first step of the ice trust to get control of the ice business in Quincy, after which the price of ice will probably go up with a jump.

There has also been a rumor that the proposition to lease the old reservoir to W. T. Shea was another move on the part of the ice trust to control the ice business in Quincy.

Mr. Shea, in his communication to the City Council, stated that he was willing to give a bond not to sell or lease his privilege. While this is undoubtedly true there is nothing, says dame rumor, to prevent his selling the entire product of the pond to one individual or party, and that party might be a representative of the ice trust.

That the ice trust desires to control the ice business in Quincy is evident from the fact that every ice dealer has been approached by an agent of the trust, but the Crystal Spring is the first to fall into their control. In the event of failure to secure control of the other companies it might be possible with the aid of the Board of Health, to have the other ponds condemned and Quincy people would be forced to buy of the ice trust at a price way beyond what the local companies are now charging.

The matter of leasing the ice privaleges of the reservoir will probably come up before the City Council next Monday evening and if granted the council should see to it that there is a clause in the lease which will prevent the selling of the entire prudoct of the pond to any one person or firm. The longer the ice trust is kept out of Quincy the better for the ice consumer.

Annual Outing.

The Quincy branch of the Irish National League held its annual outing Sunday at Quincy woods. There were a large number present and the day one of pleasure to all. One of the features of the day was an old-fashioned clambake.

In the evening the league held a rousing meeting at Cahill's hall in support of the John Redmond movement. The Quincy branch is the only one of the old leagues established in Parnell's time twenty years ago.

John Cavanagh who was the first president of the league and is the present president, presided and addressed the meeting briefly and introduced John O'Callaghan National Secretary of the United Irish League of America, who made a stirring address.

Other remarks were made by M. M. Crehan, George D. Cahill, Patrick Fay, M. J. Hickey, Edward Lawton, Michael Burns, J. J. Byran, Peter McConarty, Enos Costa and William O'Grady.

Drift of Opinion.

☞A clergyman at Weymouth who preached a sermon Sunday tracing the ancestry of King Edward to King David and also to a cousin of the Virgin Mary ought to get at least an autograph letter of thanks from His delighted Majesty.—Boston Globe.

☞A secret society organized for the purpose of getting government jobs for its members is inimical to the spirit of the constitution of the United States, and as a lawyer should be the last man to break a law, so the veterans of the Civil war should be the last to join such a society. The newly organized Soldiers' Political League, which has for its avowed object the exertion of an influence for the aggrandizement of its members, is destined to defeat. It is another of those movements which have risen suddenly, like the Granger movement in the west, but which defeated themselves in the end. Based upon selfishness, it cannot, in the long run, prosper. There are plenty of veterans who look upon the new society with suspicion, and will have none of it. It has no more reason for existence than would an organization of government clerks, formed for the purpose of getting their salaries increased.—Boston Transcript.

☞Any law which gives to those who make things an unfair advantage over those who have to buy those things cannot escape protest, when that quality in it is found out. The American people are just, grave, intelligent and upright. Their sense of injustice is aroused, when they discover that manufacturers here sell their products to people abroad at lower prices than they charge to home buyers. Their courage rises in resentment at that fact. Their ability to change it is challenged. Their conviction is that the reform of such conditions presents to them a righteous cause. —Brooklyn Eagle.

MINERS STARTED FIGHT

Lively Exchange of Bullets With Deputies Under Cover of Darkness

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 12.—A lively battle occurred last night between deputies and strikers at Throop, an isolated mining village, six miles north of here. Scores of shots were exchanged, but as far as is known no one was hit. The one colliery in the village is operated by the Pancoast Coal company. Last Tuesday the washery was started under the protection of armed deputies. Yesterday the four deputies guarding the colliery, located on the river bank, were driven to cover by a volley of shots from the opposite shore. They returned the fire and silenced the attack. Last night the attack on the pumphouse was renewed. For an hour bullets flew thick and fast. The attacking party seemed to concentrate its fire on the pumphouse, for it was fairly riddled with bullets. The deputies shot into the bushes on the opposite shore, only 100 feet away, making a target of the spot where the flashes of the assailants' guns were seen. The strikers evidently quit because of their ammunition being exhausted and this put an end to hostilities.

In Honor of McMillan

Washington, Aug. 12.—Senator Frye, president protem of the senate, has appointed a committee of 17 senators to attend the funeral of the late Senator McMillan. At a meeting of the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia yesterday a formal announcement was made testifying to the great interest and pride which Senator McMillan always manifested in the welfare of the city of Washington and directing that the municipal offices be closed on the day of the funeral and the flags on all the buildings of the district government be displayed at half-mast for 30 days.

A Determined Incendiary

Peoria, Ills., Aug. 12.—The police and fire departments were kept busy yesterday by the operations of an incendiary. The torch was applied to five buildings during the day, and though the actual fire loss will not exceed $25,000, the flames at one time threatened to sweep a large section of the city. The police arrested Edward Flanagan, 20, and charged him with being the incendiary. Mutterings of the crowd made it necessary to remove the prisoner to the county jail for safe-keeping.

Thieves Got $7000 Worth

Valparaiso, Ind., Aug. 12.—Three men entered the home of Dr. A. A. Stoneburned while the servant was alone in the house yesterday, and, after binding and gagging the girl, they placed her in the bathtub. They then leisurely robbed the house and escaped with money, jewels and negotiable papers worth $7000, leaving no clue.

Seawanhaka Cup Goes to Trident

Montreal, Aug. 12.—Trident won the Seawanhaka cup yesterday by defeating Tecumseh by 5 minutes, 27 seconds. The Oshkosh club has already sent a challenge for next year's races. Others are expected from the White Bear club, Minnesota, and Manchester, Mass., club, and other places.

Quincy Man a Prize Winner.

Mr. A. F. Schenkelberger of Goffe street was one of the prize winners at the flower show on Saturday of the Massachusetts Horticultural society at Horticultural hall, Boston. The Boston Transcript says: "A noteworthy exhibit was the ten named varieties of gladiolus. These stately and aristocratic looking plants were from the garden of A. F. Schenkelberger of Quincy. The bulbs were of French origin of the lemoine type."

His Jaw Fractured.

Joseph Erickson of Quincy was arraigned in court this morning for assault on Joseph McMannus, a playmate.

The assault is alleged to have taken place off Common street about three weeks ago. There was a crowd of boys present, and a game was in progress during which there was a misunderstanding during which Erickson struck McMannus in the jaw with his fist, the force of the blow being sufficent to fracture his jaw. McMannus was taken to the City Hospital where he has been since then. The court fined Erickson $10 which he paid.

Parents should be careful what their children do with banana and orange skins. They should teach the youngsters to step to the gutters and drop them, if there are no waste barrels about. Only this morning a youngster stood on the steps of a store and threw four strips of banana peel on as many different places on a brick side walk with the result that pedestrians commenced to slide on them and one barely escaped a fall.

Heavy Thunder Storm.

There was a very heavy storm last evening and much thunder and lightning, but the most of it was north of this city. In Boston numerous places were struck, and considerable damage done.

Several places in Malden were struck, including the Maplewood Methodist church.

In Keene, N. H., Herbert Conant, a blacksmith, was killed.

At Marblehead it was a grand illumination in honor of the New York Yacht club, and when the storm broke, about 9 o'clock, there was a sorry looking crowd that surged and swayed through the streets toward the railroad station and the electric cars. At least 20,000 dripping people must have rushed for that little station, and there they stood in the rain for more than half an hour.

Addie R. Kellar Sues Betts.

From the Boston Herald.

There was an interesting hearing in Judge Colt's lobby yesterday morning in the Federal building in the matter of Addie R. Kellar against Frederick E. Betts and several others who were partners in and connected with the celebrated firm of J. M. Fisher & Co. and the Cobb-Everett Investment Company.

Mrs. Keller, who claims to be a widow, alleges that she put $2400 into the hands of Betts and the others and that the money was misappropriated. She seeks, therefore, to have a receiver appointed and an injunction issued from the United States circuit court, and proposes to make a vigorous search for the funds which with others aggregating, in all, it is said, over $300,000, have been disposed of in a manner known only to Betts and his confreres.

Boardman Hall appeared for the plaintiff, and associated with him are Judge John F. Libby and Robert A. Belcher. The defendents were also represented by counsel at the hearing. The papers in the case, including the bill of complaint, a financial statement and some 16 or 17 affidavits, were filed in the office of the clerk of the circuit court yesterday morning, and were later taken by Judge Colt, who will consider them and give his decision at 11 o'clock today.

The scheme, it would appear from the affidavits, originated in the brain of Luther H. Bailey, who is said to have come over from New York under a fictitious name, for reasons supposed to be excellent but known only to himself, and became associated with Frederick E. Betts. His scheme for getting rich, it is said, was given in great detail to Betts, and under his skilful manipulations soon grew to such colossal proportions that Bailey was unable to recognize in it any semblance to the brain, child which he had confided to Bett's care.

From the financial statement, which has been prepared by an expert, it appears that the Cobb-Everett Investment Company received between $105,000 and $107,000, and in 47 days the Federal Trust Company, whose financial statement is not complete, received some $67,000. In all, it is claimed, it is known that Betts and Bailey received through the different concerns in the names of which they did business in the neighborhood of $300,000 which is absolutely unaccounted for, and which it is now proposed to discover, if that is within the bounds of possibility.

The Marion Outrage.

A new development in the Marion tarring and feathering case came to light today. Mrs. Potter says that three of the masked men remained at Potter's house while McDonald was undergoing his ordeal.

They forced her out of doors, she says, upbraided her, stripped her clothing from her, and threatened her with the same treatment accorded McDonald. She screamed and one of the men slapped her face, but she was released and finally returned to the house clad only in an undershirt, shoes and stockings. Meanwhile a masked man stayed in the house with the child.

Dist. Atty. French has instigated the investigation and means to clear the matter up.

Wants Appointment.

The Board of Health will hold a meeting tonight and Henry H. Faxon has been told he can be present if he desires. The board say that they have no matter in which Mr. Faxon is interested pending before them.

While this is probably true it is quite certain that they will have one of his matters before them when they meet, as he intends to present them with a petition signed by a number of citizens, that he be licensed as a scavenger. Whether the board will act on the petition tonight is a question.

—Some Glasgow landlords have hit upon a scheme for improving their slum property, keeping it in good condition and stimulating prompt payment of rents. They offer prizes to tenants who behave themselves properly upon their premises and regularly pay their rents when due. In this manner they have obtained splendid results, and now over 60 per cent of their tenants regularly claim the reward, which is the privilege of two weeks' rent free per annum, and in some cases a vacation excursion for their families.—Boston Courier.

—The Somerville Journal says that "the young woman who announces with decision that she never means to marry would be surprised and pained sometimes, if she could know that it would be really so.

COAL STRIKE SCENES.

Aspects and Contrasts In the Anthracite Fields.

FINE VILLAS OF THE OPERATORS

How the Rich and the Poor Live. Happy Holidays For the Mine Mules—Running Mines and Managing Miners—An Irish Groom's Devotion to His Employer—Bad Temper of Reckless Strikers.

Movement is halted; there is a sense as of something tremendous always impending, writes the New York Evening Post's special correspondent at Shenandoah, Pa. You pass miles and miles of empty coal cars on the sidings; freight yards are choked with cold and idle locomotives, close packed, not a man near them. In the valleys the grimy, black breakers, angular, lopsided structures, high and huge, having indeed a look of inanimate malignancy, squat in exasperating patience on great dismal hills of their own dust and waste. They desolate the landscape; nothing grows upon them, and around them everything is wild. Excepting these culm piles and the tall, stark breakers there is no sign of the method by which the people in the tawdry villages gain a livelihood. The rest is underground.

Many railroads cut along the hillsides and send switches down to the mouths of the pits which the breakers cover. The other morning, from the car window, three different roads (built in days of competition), with their spurs, were visible from the car windows as we ran along a mountain slope, and not a car moving on any of them. In huckleberry pastures you saw blue forms, muscular men in unsoiled jeans stooping over the small bushes with pails and baskets; at stations there were numbers of them, silent, but not stolid, and you could see they were not, even after three months, used to loafing. A few had changed their "shift" or working clothes for mufti, and with odd black trunks bearing Hungarian or Italian railway labels were going to other fields or home to the old countries.

Twice outside Scranton and Mahanoy City strikers were seen on the huge culm piles trying to pick good coal out of the refuse to carry home to sell. Nearly all companies have forbidden this, and those special guards for mining regions, the coal and iron police, recruited largely in the tough places of cities, patrol the properties and camp within the stockades.

In the midst of these torn valleys somewhere there is often a villa, where the superintendent of the mines or the operator or the owner dwells. When you pass through the exquisite grill gate, you are in grounds like those over by Wheatley hills, and around them is a high fence, shutting out all sight of the raw brown gashes and the drear, gloomy hills of slate colored dross and leaving only a view of the tops of the green mountains and the sky. The fence itself is hidden by trimmed hedges; the lawns are smooth shaven, with numerous sorts of stunted and outlandish trees, poplars brought by the owner as souvenirs of a tour through Lombardy, pines from Fontainebleau, and a formal garden suggested by one in England where he was entertained. The edges of the walks are as precisely straight as the edges of a T square; the walks are pebbled with small white conglomerate from the mountains.

The house is covered to the eaves with ivy and honeysuckle and morning glory, and Dutch pipes spread their wide leaves over the veranda trellis with the regularity of shingles. There is a small pine grove carpeted with brown needles, rustic seats and places for hammocks. The stable is, though small, as beautiful within as George Gould's, at Lakewood—bit steels shining in glass wall cases, silver mounted harnesses gleaming in others and half a dozen Brewster carriages and carts and runabouts and omnibuses keeping fresh and glossy under white sheets. There are only four horses—the operator is an automobilist—but their stalls are a delight. They are the last word in stallmaking. Through a screen door, which lets in pure air while keeping out flies, there is the cow stable, immaculate, its straw sweeter than hotel beds in many of the Caribbees.

And outside are the cows, Jerseys, pure in breed, wholesome to look at, pretty as those painted by Van Marcke, grazing on a velvet lawn. A gate opens into the golf course, smoothly rolled, closely cropped, with tees for wet weather and other tees for dry. Oaks and elms are the hazards, except for one artificial bunker, which has not been permitted to put any difficulty in the way of the links being a picture. They are pretty stiff hazards. The name of the links is Guess Where. Out of it you open a gate in the hedge to the mule yard.

It is cut up as though with the frolics of a thousand hoofs. You are surprised to learn that it was really cut up by 3,000, and the mules are in three or four long, temporary structures put up hurriedly last May when the strike was declared, to be torn down when the strike is ended. The mules are eating their supper. Each day they eat a quart of corn and a quart of oats and seven pounds of hay per head, and are sleek and fat. Some of them had not been up out of the underground tunnels where they work for twelve years. None had been up for five or six unless it was to go to the well appointed mule hospital. When they were brought up, they were stunned by the sunlight. They were turned out to grass and did not know what to do. They smelled the air and looked off great distances and put their noses to the field, and then, after awhile, they laid themselves down and in sudden access of joy rolled and kicked and nipped one another on the neck. It must have been lovely.

Outside all this, beyond the palings and the hedgerows, are the culm piles, higher than the St. Paul building (New York), some of them like volcanoes in form and not unlike Pelee in utter barrenness, and near them, perhaps on a green slope, are the mining settlements.

We light the automobile and start. Opportunity for contrasts, you think—the operator's villa and the miner's cabin; a hothouse of perfect flowers here and a bunch of paper roses on the mantel there; everything comfortable to one's desire within and the harshness of the lot of the common worker without. But the contrast strikes you only as the contrast of life everywhere. There are those above us and below us in fortune in whatever sphere we dwell, and the test—isn't it?—is whether we treat them as we ought, decent respect without obsequiousness for those above, nothing but kind generosity for those below. I know operators and owners in these valleys—unfortunately I am withheld from being specific—who have all their lives accepted "the tax of befriending poverty and weakness" and have been helpful and considerate with their dependents. Their wives have sewed strong garments and built hospitals and mechanics' institutes for them, and when there was a deficiency in the township school fund, as there is usually each year, the husbands have paid it up. Many of the families which own the mines now lease them to railroads, but they retain a little concern and interest, not perhaps as much as before, in the workers. Some of the original owners were themselves miners or plain farmers and by industry, thrift and special cleverness were enabled to buy land at $10 an acre, underneath which, later, coal was found, and their descendants thus came by their present ability to live in villas merely by taking royalty on each ton their property yields to the lessees.

There is a band of strikers on the bridge as we cross in the automobile. The operator greets them; all of them answer but one. "That dark young fellow who would not speak to me," the operator says, "is one of those who started the difficulty here. Strikes come in cycles, big ones about once in ten years. When we've adjusted things with one set of workers, the mule boys and the breaker boys grow up, and then they get to discussing themselves, and the older ones are influenced, as one is always, by his environment and companions. Did you ever notice that strike leaders are always young men?"

The miners' houses were roomy and neat and above the average and better than many thousands of workmen in New York city have to live in even after the Tenement House association has prosecuted the landlords. But in other places, at Hickory Ridge, outside Shamokin, and at a place between Shenandoah and Girardville, and at Ashley, south of Wilkesbarre, there are, indeed, some pitiably inadequate habitations, in what city people would call the slum quarters. But I am speaking of scarcely a dozen buildings altogether of this bad sort in the eighteen mining villages I have seen.

One of the unhappy phases of this strike is that the very persons whom superintendents, owners and operators helped the most are now the most rabid and inciting and most eager to do them injury. There may have been something wrong with the method of caring for them. Frequently we make our relief to the poor either so painful or so ungracious that they rather die than take it. But I have heard of a pleasant appreciation, too, how in the Schuylkill region on the night of the Shenandoah riot an Irish groom paced all night long, up and down on guard, before the gate of the house of his employer (a mine operator) with a revolver in his hand and never let him know about it. A rich man who has the sort of character to enlist secret devotion like that cannot be altogether a hard master.

In the anthracite cities there is almost the Sunday appearance that there is in the valleys. Hotels are empty, callboys and waiters lag about, and the halls have echoes; street corners are full of men saying little; other men in shirt sleeves sit on their porches reading newspapers and smoking with an air of feeling themselves out of their element with nothing to do. When you enter a store, you find yourself the only one there. Street cars run only at long intervals, and conductors and motormen are on half time. Practically no business is being done. Many saloons have had to quit. Here in Shenandoah state soldiers in khaki, galloping orderlies and cavalrymen and a provost guard holding up every one at the lines at night who has no passport make the city seem like invaded territory. On account of restraint forcefully imposed there are sullenness and desperate thoughts and even desperate action among the reckless element, as when in the dark the other morning they shot at and stoned the camping soldiers from behind laurel bushes.

A Two Thousand Dollar Bathroom.

Farmer's Novel Amusement.

Boy Reveals Murder Secret

St. John, Aug. 12.—In a crowded court room last night, where Coroner Berryman resumed the inquest into the death of Willie Doherty, 17 years old, Fred Goodspeed, aged 14, swore that on Aug. 1 he saw Frank Higgins, aged 16, kill Doherty, firing four shots at him and then pounding him on the head with the revolver butt. Goodspeed and Higgins were under arrest on suspicion of being implicated in the crime.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Danger of an immediate strike of street car men of the city has been averted. It was decided to postpone action until later in the week.

LIGHT ON A FAMOUS SUIT

Counsel For Plaintiff In Action Against Directors of Canadian Pacific Road Tells Why Identity of Principals Was Concealed

New York, Aug. 12.—At the hearing yesterday in the suit of Peter Power against the directors of the Northern Pacific railroad to prevent them from turning over the stock of the company to the Northern Securities company, George A. Lamb, counsel for Power, admitted that his client was living at Montreal under the name of "P. Blake." Mrs. Kate Carey, the proprietor of a hotel at West Hurley, N. Y., the place where Power was last seen, had testified to the presence of Power and his wife at her place and to their departure, accompanied by a man who she identified as Attorney Lamb. Witness then told of driving Mr. and Mrs. Power and Lamb to the Rhinebeck ferry.

After Camille Weidenfeld, the broker, had been excused until today, W. D. Guthrie, of counsel for the defense, asked that Lamb take the stand. Lamb asked the privilege of making a statement. Mr. Guthrie said he would permit the explanation providing he would explain his trip to West Hurley and Power's escape to Canada. "Mr. Power," said Guthrie, "is living in the Queen's Hotel, Montreal, under the fictitious name of P. Blake."

"That is true," admitted Lamb, and then he entered into a long statement. He told of finding Power at West Hurley in a highly nervous condition and desirous of going to Montreal, to which he (Lamb) objected. Power, he said, promised to come to this city at once should Judge Lacomb decide that he was in contempt. Lamb declared that he had tried by means of telegrams to Montreal to induce Power to return and had sent funds for that purpose.

Lamb then told of being counsel for the firm (now dissolved) of Lawson, Weidenfeld & Co., and of conducting much litigation for Weidenfeld personally. He had heard discussed on every side the subject of the Northern Securities company and its legality. He had many talks with Weidenfeld concerning this.

"I told Weidenfeld," said Mr. Lamb, "that no one in Wall street dare start an action. Any banker or broker who dared to commence a suit to combat the enormous accumulation of capital would have his business practically ruined by the interested parties. Weidenfeld then suggested that some responsible man be found who could protect the real principals and conceal their identity entirely. If such a man could be found, Weidenfeld told me, he would agree to purchase stock for him and commence a suit in his name.

"I suggested Peter Power as a young man who was responsible and also had inherited some money as a proper man. In the meantime I was constantly being importuned by my clients to take some action against these people. Later I found that the state of Minnesota, through its governor and attorney general, proposed to take some action. I visited St. Paul and there met the governor and attorney general. They heartily welcomed any action upon my part. In fact the governor told me he at one time thought it would be a good idea for the state of Minnesota to buy some Northern Pacific stock and bring a suit as a stockholder. So the Power suit was commenced, as well as by other clients of mine holding large blocks of the stock.

"I have always been willing to produce Power at the proper time and neither Power nor myself has at any time desired to do anything that could be construed as tending to show this court disrespect or to hold it in contempt."

Guthrie endeavored to find out from Lamb whether there had been a certificate of stock of the Northern Pacific railway in the name of Peter Power. Lamb said there had always been a certificate of stock. Guthrie next asked who drew the complaint in the present action and Lamb said it was the joint work of himself, a Mr. Buckley and Judge Lancaster of St. Paul.

Guthrie tried to induce Lamb to tell more concerning the certificate of stock which he alleged was owned by Power and upon which the latter's right to bring suit was based, but Lamb refused to do so on the ground that he could not do so without consulting his clients. The lawyer for the defense declared that the action of a lawyer in getting a man to act as plaintiff, behind whom the true plaintiff could conceal their identity, might prove to be a conspiracy.

Guthrie then insisted on knowing how much money Lamb had paid Power on July 31 last and for what purpose, but the witness replied that that was confidential. Finally, the examination was adjourned until today.

Serious Charge Against a Minister

Buffalo, Aug. 12.—Rev. R. M. Rabb, formerly pastor of a Baptist church in East Aurora, was arrested yesterday on the charge of compounding a felony. He is accused of accepting money to withhold evidence against John Kelley, proprietor of a saloon and hotel, and not appearing in police court against Kelley, whom he had arrested on the charge of violating the excise law in selling liquor on Sunday.

KRUGER FEELS SORE

Boer Generals Accepting Hospitality at the Hands of British

London, Aug. 12.—The arrival next Saturday from South Africa, whence they sailed July 30, of Generals Botha, De Wet and Delarey, promises to be the occasion of another struggle between Boer and Briton. The colonial office has made special arrangements for the reception of the visiting Boers at Southampton. The naval review will be in progress when the Boers arrive and after their reception by distinguished colonial office authorities, Lord Kitchener and other prominent persons, they will be conducted on board the steamer chartered for the use of the colonial premiers to witness the naval review. The Boer leaders will spend Saturday night on board this vessel and Sunday they will be received by King Edward on board the royal yacht and in the presence of a number of distinguished personages.

The arrival in England of the Boer generals will doubtless be the prelude to another round of lionizing like that experienced by the late General Meyer should the generals decide to stay in England, but, according to The Hague correspondent of The Daily Mail, ex-President Kruger of the Transvaal and his party are equally anxious to prevent the generals from landing in England. Members of the Kruger party have sent urgent letters and cablegrams to Madeira in an effort to dissuade the generals from accepting British hospitality. It is proposed to send a Dutch vessel to intercept them, according to the correspondent, and in any case Messrs. Wolmarans, Fisher and Wessels will go to Southampton with that intention.

Will Remain With Americans

Chicago, Aug. 12.—As a precaution against the National league magnates making too many tempting offers to present members of the Boston American league team, Henry Killilea came down from Milwaukee and remained here during the stay of the team to secure signatures for next season. As a result of the joint efforts with President Johnson the team will remain intact. The following players have signed contracts for next year: Young, Dineen, Criger, Warner, Stahl, Parent, Ferris, Dougherty, Lachance, Freeman and Gleason.

Blind Rythmic Wins Again

New York, Aug. 12.—The second seaside meeting of the New York Trotting association began yesterday at Brighton Beach. The big feature of the card was the $10,000 Bonner memorial purse for trotters of the 2:12 class. The blind horse Rythmic, who has won all his races down the line from Detroit, was the winner. The disappointment of the race was Dan T, who, with a record as fast as Rythmic's, was never formidable.

Dr. Pierce's GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY Restores LOST FLESH AND STRENGTH

"I was a total wreck—could not sleep or eat," writes Mr. J. C. Beers, of Berryman, Crawford Co., Mo. "For two years I tried medicine from doctors but received very little benefit. I lost flesh and strength, was not able to do a good day's work. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and when I had taken one bottle I could sleep and my appetite was wonderfully improved. I have taken five bottles and am still improving."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose. Therefore, accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

BEATING THE TELEGRAPH

[Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company.]

Lazily Linyard watched the blue coated figure toiling slowly up the hill from the station. Who, he wondered, had sent a town messenger out to Woodcrest? He was half tempted to rise and meet the lad, but the June day had an enervating breath, and, besides, the note might be for Clifford.

Clifford owned Woodcrest, and Linyard had only run down for the week end. Presently the boy's slow feet crunched upon the gravel walk. Clifford stepped out through the library window.

"Bet the cigars it's for you, Walt," he suggested, "or, better still, from Jane Burton."

Linyard flushed, though he tried to speak carelessly as he said, "I'll take you, for there's no such luck."

The boy was at the step now, and both men reached out their hands.

"For Mr. Walter Linyard," the youngster said as he reached out a square envelope addressed in a hand that caused Linyard's heart to beat fast.

Clifford chuckled. "I win," he declared. And Linyard, deep in perusal of his letter, could only nod assent. The eager face turned to blank astonishment, however, as he read. When he reached the familiar signature, he began and read it all over again and then burst out:

"This is quite beyond me!"

"Any way I can help, old man?"

Linyard thrust the letter in his hand, and this is what Clifford read:

Town, June 5.

My Dear Mr. Linyard—Forgive me for my refusal to answer you when you did me the honor a week ago of asking me to marry you. I will have to explain the peculiar position in which I am placed.

When I made my debut in society last fall, my aunt, who, as you know, has been both father and mother to me, made me promise that I would accept no proposal until the end of my first season, and now that the season is ended I find myself in a dilemma. There are seven men among whom I really cannot decide. You are one of the seven.

I have therefore decided to leave the decision in the hands of fate and the enterprise of those who seek my hand. I am leaving on the American liner today, and I will accept the first proposal to reach me from one of the seven.

Letters similar to this will be delivered half an hour after the steamer sails to the other six, so that you may all have an even chance. It rests with you. Faithfully yours, JEANNETTE BURTON.

Clifford handed back the letter, with a low whistle. "Can't say I blame her much, though," he remarked. "She was by far the prettiest debutante of the season, and the chaps of our set are so much alike it's hard to choose between them. Going in to win?"

Linyard nodded, then squared his shoulders reassuringly as he said, "I'm going to cable Queenstown to catch the steamer in the channel."

"That will be nice," returned Clifford comfortingly. "By that time she will have had time to write letters to four out of the other five, telling them the lucky man got his wireless telegram aboard at Nantucket."

Linyard gritted his teeth. Then he turned to his friend desperately. "See here; I've simply got to get my proposal in first. How can I do it?"

But Clifford sat there in a brown study. Suddenly his friend's face brightened. "Let's go bluefishing on the Ariel," he said quickly. And Clifford, with the light of sudden understanding on his face, nodded an assent.

Late that afternoon there was a commotion on the bridge of the New York. Not far ahead a schooner yacht acted as though bent on self destruction by persistently getting in the steamer's way. The first officer reached for the whistle cord.

As the hoarse notes boomed out across the water the yacht displayed the signal flags for "I want to speak to you," and a minute later, with engines stopped, the huge steamer lay to.

"New York, ahoy!" hailed the yachtsman through the megaphone. "Is Miss Burton on board?"

There was a wild scramble among the passengers lining the rail. Presently a slender girlish figure mounted the bridge.

"This is Miss Burton," shouted the first officer, indicating her with his trumpet.

Clear and sharp came back the reply: "This is Mr. Linyard. I want to know if she will marry me?"

A cheer went up from the crowded deck. Then the answer rang back as clearly, "She says she will."

"Tell her I leave on Saturday's steamer. Thanks and goodby."

A very much disgusted officer reached for the indicator and pulled it viciously to "full speed ahead."

On deck the Ariel, Linyard turned joyfully to his friend. "Jim," he said fervently, "there are times when a schooner yacht beats even wireless telegraphy. Let's go below and offer up a libation to my engagement."

Master of the Situation.

"It seems to me," said the man from the east, "that you stand a great deal more from that man who just left you than you would from anybody else."

"Yes," answered Piute Pete. "We've got to. He's one of our usefulest citizens, and if he gets arrogant he knows he's in a place where we can't resent it, 'cause if anybody got the drop on him it would stump us for shore."

"Who is he?"

FOUGHT DAY AND NIGHT
Venezuelan Strongholds Fall Before Revolutionists

CITY OF BARCELONA SACKED
In Some Instances Inoffensive Women and Children Were Maltreated and Killed—Consuls Ask For Men-of-War to Protect Life and Property

Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad, Aug. 13.—Details of the fighting at Barcelona, Venezuela, received here by boat, show that a terrible battle started on Sunday, Aug. 3, and that on the following Wednesday the revolutionists entered the city. They kept up a continuous firing day and night, destroying houses one by one to reach the centre of the city. At midnight on Thursday two-thirds of the city was in the power of the revolutionists. On Friday the government strongholds were carried and the last survivors of the government officers tried to escape by the river to the sea, but failing in this they made one last stand, after which, on Friday at noon, they surrendered to the revolutionist commanders, Generals Francisco, Monagas and Platero.

Among those taken prisoners are Martin Marcano, president of the state of Barcelona and commander of the government troops, eight generals and 25 colonels. The dead on both sides numbered 167. All houses in the city were sacked and in some instances inoffensive women and children were maltreated and killed. All stores were pillaged, especially those belonging to foreigners, and the French cable office was robbed. The American, Italian and Dutch consulates were pillaged and the consuls have asked for men-of-war to protect life and property.

United States Minister Bowen at Caracas has cabled the United States cruiser Cincinnati to go to Barcelona without delay and to take provisions.

The Topeka is anchored at Porto Cabello, the Marietta is on the Orinoco, the German warship Falke is at Curacoa, and the Italian cruiser Giovanni Bausan and the British cruiser Pallas are at La Guaira.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Minister Bowen has cabled the state department from Caracas that our consul at Barcelona has informed him by wire that Barcelona has been taken by the revolutionists; that they are sacking the town and that in his judgment the protection of a vessel should be immediately afforded him. Mr. Bowen says he has cabled the Cincinnati to return without delay. He notes that the Topeka is at Porto Cabello and the Marietta up the Orinoco river.

After a conference between the state and navy department officials in regard to Minister Bowen's dispatch the following instructions were cabled to the commander of the Topeka at Porto Cabello:

'Vessel needed immediately at Barcelona. If you sail before the Cincinnati arrives from Curoacoa leave for her instructions cabled you yesterday."

Before the instructions were sent the Cincinnati reported her arrival at Porto Cabello, whereupon the instructions were modified so as to direct that one of the ships proceed immediately to Barcelona. This leaves it discretionary with Captain McLean of the Cincinnati, the senior officer present, to send the Topeka or go himself with the Cincinnati. The vessel which remains will be prepared to land bluejackets at Porto Cabello in case of necessity.

WATTERSON'S VERSION
Of Famous Conference During the Civil War

PAYMENT FOR SLAVES
Might Enter Into an Agreement For Union and Peace as an Offset to Unconditional Surrender of Confederates—Disapproved by His Cabinet

speech made some time ago by Senator Vest of Missouri, calling in question some statement made by Colonel Watterson, the following article by Colonel Watterson appeared in The Courier-Journal:

"Assuredly Mr. Lincoln indicated a willingness on his part to enter into some kind of obligation as the price of the restoration of the union. Two months later, when, by force of arms, General Lee was compelled to surrender to General Grant, the terms of this 'unconditional surrender, were made most generous. Is it stretching the argument to assume that, if Mr. Stephens and his colleagues had not been empowered to treat, Mr. Lincoln was not prepared to go even further and to be even more generous? In the general conversation had between Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Seward on the one hand and the Confederate commissioners on the other, Mr. Lincoln intimated that payment for the slaves might enter into an agreement for union and peace. We quote the following from Mr. Stephen's published statement:

"'He went on to say that he would be willing to be taxed to remunerate the southern people for their slaves. He believed the people of the north were as responsible for slavery as the people of the south; and if the war should then cease, with the voluntary abolition of slavery by the states, he should be in favor, individually, of the government paying a fair indemnity for the loss to the owners. He said he believed this feeling had an extensive existence at the north. He knew some who were in favor of an appropriation as high as $400,000,000 for this purpose. "I could mention persons," said he, "whose names would astonish you, who are willing to do this if the war shall now cease without further expense, and with the abolition of slavery, as stated." But on this subject, he said, he could give no assurance—enter into no stipulation. He barely expressed his own feelings and views, and what he believed to be the views of others upon the subject.'

"The point is whether Mr. Lincoln did or did not contemplate payment for the slaves. In the foregoing extract from Mr. Stephens it is plain that he did. But the evidence does not rest there. The day after this Fortress Monroe conference, when Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Seward and returned to Washington, a cabinet meeting was held. At this cabinet meeting Mr. Lincoln submitted in the form of a proposed message to congress the two documents above referred to. One was a joint resolution to be passed by the two houses of congress appropriating the $400,000,000. The other was a proclamation, to be issued by himself as president when the joint resolution had been passed by congress.

"These two documents stand today in Mr. Lincoln's own handwriting. They are living witnesses at least to the truth of his intention and the magnanimity of his character. That was all that was meant to be proved by those who originally gave them publicity. The cabinet was opposed to Mr. Lincoln's plan. 'How long will the war last?' he asked. 'A hundred days? We are pending $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 a day. There's the money, not counting the lives. But you are all against me and I will not send the message. Thereupon he put the documents away with the following superscription: 'February 5, 1865: Today these papers, which explain themselves, were drawn up and submitted to the cabinet, and unanimously disapproved by them.

"'A. Lincoln.'"

Took His Own Miserable Life

Rome, Aug. 13.— Steamer Citta di Milano, at Genoa from New York, reports that an anarchist named Sganza of New York committed suicide by jumping overboard while the vessel was off Gibraltar. It is alleged that Sganza had been commissioned to murder a European royal personage and that he was on his way to Europe for this purpose, but weakened at the last moment and killed himself. Two of his companions disappeared upon the arrival of the Citta di Milano at Genoa.

ELEMENTS OF ROMANCE
In Story of Recovery of the Anglesey Jewels

VALET ROBBED HIS MASTER
And Turned Plunder Over to "Mysterious Lady"—Pearl Valued at $60,000 and Nearly $100,000 Worth of Other Heirlooms Recovered

London, Aug. 13.—The Marquis of Anglesey has recovered nearly all his jewelry, stolen, through the connivance of a valet named Gault from a London hotel last autumn. Many precious heirlooms were among the missing property, including the great Paget pear-shaped pearl, worth $60,000.

The story of the recovery of the Anglesey jewels provides all the elements of a great romance. The valet who robbed his master, the mysterious lady who disappeared with the plunder, the innocent people in Paris who wanted to return it to its owner—on the basis of a cash payment—and the detective and his confederates who succeeded in "spoiling their game," might all have sprung from the imagination of a Conan Doyle.

With characteristic shrewdness Detective Drew kept back the full details of Gault's confession until the recovery of practically the whole of the jewels was assured. Had he published it as soon as it was made, the land in whose possession they were might have dropped them into the set. As it was, shortly after Gault's trial a man in Paris communicated with Lord Anglesey's representatives, saying he believed he had come across some of the jewels and would be willing to sell them back.

To encourage him, in his amiable disposition the detectives, acting as Lord Anglesey's friends, bought several of the jewels at nominal prices. The ruse was effectual. Presently the man in Paris spoke of the great pear-shaped pearl, valued at $60,000. For this $7000 was offered, but the negotiator was dissatisfied, and said he would like to see Lord Anglesey himself. Accordingly, one of his lordship's servants dressed for the part and went to Paris.

"Where did you get the jewels?" he asked. "We were searching the ashes at Martinique after the eruption of Mt. Pelee," was the reply, "and we found them there in a tin box with a letter saying what they were."

Eventually it was arranged that a representative of the marquis (who was in reality a detective) should accompany the man to a cafe, where his two friends who had the pearl should hand it over in exchange for the money. The man made a condition that the detective should remain in one part of the cafe while he went among the crowd in another part and obtained the pearl. This was agreed upon and he went away, fetched the pearl from his friends, and handed it over. The detective gave a signal and within two minutes the three men were apprehended. Women in the crowd had been acting as detectives, and had noticed the two men from whom the jewel was obtained.

Chief Inspector Drew arranged the coup. Three weeks ago he left London, giving it out that he was going to Switzerland on holiday in order to throw interested persons off the scene. It was from Switzerland that he organized the recovery of the jewels and the capture of the men. He has succeeded in getting back nearly $150,000 worth of the jewelry lost, the value of the whole of which was estimated at something over $200,000.

Under the French law the arrested man cannot be extradited. Gault's lady friend will be the next to engage the attention of the detective, and there is already a suspicion of her whereabouts.

Many of the local committees still have their lists open and it is expected that by the time all of them have been heard from the funds will have been swelled to $60,000.

No Use For the Vesuvius

Washington, Aug. 13.—The naval board of construction has decided to recommend that a board of survey be appointed to pass upon the ultimate disposition of the former dynamite cruiser Vesuvius. The Vesuvius attracted much attention at one time, as it was thought she might revolutionize naval warfare, but she proved a failure during the Spanish war. It costs about $5000 a year to take care of her when not in use.

Society Plans to Murder

Vienna, Aug. 13.—The Arbeiter Zeitung declares the recent assassination of officials in Russia to be the work of a vast secret revolutionary society, which embraces the whole of the empire and numbers 12,000 members, who are drawn from every class of society. The society has ample funds and is well organized and every member of it has sworn to give his life, if required, for the cause.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

We have often wondered why it is that people who go away for the summer and leave beautiful places do not make some arrangement to have the grounds cared for during their absence. It would not cost much money and would give pleasure to those less fortunate beings who have to stay at home.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ A Worcester hotel proprietor said:—"I have been in the hotel business for many years, and I cannot recall a time since the Civil War when it cost as much to run a good hotel as it does today.

"The man in the hotel business is placed in an entirely different position from the man in any other business. In some lines of trade an increase in the price of raw material can be met by an increase in the price of the finished product, or an increased cost can be offset by the practice of economy, but the hotel proprietor is unable to avail himself of either of these methods. —Boston Courier.

BUILDING SITES.

Three More Offered for Proposed Federal Building.

Tuesday was the day upon which Mr. Crane, the agent of the treasury department at Washington, was to make his report relative to the site for a government building at Quincy.

When Mr. Crane was in Quincy he announced that he would hold the matter in abeyance for two weeks during which time he would receive any other proposal.

This proposition has been taken advantage of and it is known that at least three more propositions have been made. These it is understood have come from George W. Morton, Lewis Bass, Jr., and Dexter E. Wadsworth.

Mr. Morton, it is understood, has offered the Brackett estate on Hancock street, although this does not meet the requirement of being on two streets.

Mr. Bass has offered the property on the corner of Washington street and Maple place, and Mr. Wadsworth has submitted another proposition on the Packard lot on the corner of Hancock street and Cottage avenue.

It is understood that in this proposition the corner that it was intended to throw into Cottage avenue, when the proposition to widen the street was before the City Council, and which was to be given the city is included.

This will give the 15,000 square feet. It is also understood that the price has been reduced so as to come within the amount. This means that the price was probably $11,900.

The friends of the Packard lot seem determined that that site shall be selected if possible, but the acceptance of the present proposition would prevent the widening of Cottage avenue.

—A long vista of marriage fetes, homecoming grandchildren and other family festivals now opens out before the Michigan couple who recently adopted an entire orphan asylum. To be sure, there were only twenty-two children in the asylum, but that is enough to constitute a very good old fashioned family.—Boston Budget.

MR. FAXON'S LICENSE

Board of Health Petitioned to Appoint Him a Scavenger.

The meeting of the Board of Health announced for Tuesday evening, did not materialize. Chairman Gay stated on Tuesday morning that the board would meet that evening and notified Mr. Faxon to that effect. Later in the day it was learned that W. E. Badger, a member of the board was sick and therefore could not be present. The meeting was then called off. Mr. Faxon was then notified that there would be no meeting. He felt sorry as he had his gun loaded to the muzzle with questions he proposed to propound. As there was no meeting he had to content himself with presenting the board with a petition praying that he be granted a license as a scavenger.

Mr. Faxon seemed to think that the story that one of the board was sick was only a pretext to avoid giving him a hearing on his petition and he says that when Mayor Bryant retires from the arena of politics he should present the Board of Health with a diploma for incompetency.

The petition and signatures were as follows:

To Board of Health, City of Quincy:

Gentlemen:

We the undersigned taxpayers and citizens of Quincy do hereby petition your honorable Board to grant to Henry H. Faxon, subject to the rules and regulations of your Board, a permit to empty and keep in sanitary condition, the vaults and cesspools belonging to property over which he has control. The dump to be used for such purpose being on land of said Faxon and located off Valley street in said Quincy.

Military Titles in Old Braintree.

We are apt to think that love of pomp, pride and circumstances of war among us, is a wholly modern sentiment, encouraged by the civil war, and the Cuban and Philippine expectations.

But Charles Francis Adams in his account of Braintree in the days before the Revolution said recently that on one occasion a committee, chosen at town meeting to confer with the ministers upon a disputed salary, consisted of a lieutenant colonel, two captains, one cornet, two sergeants, besides Lieutenant Deacon Savil (who evidently belonged to the church militant,) and but one plain civilian, John Ruggles.

Not Over-Wise

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

JUSTIFIED IN SHOOTING

Judge Commends a Man Who Ended the Career of a Burglar

Boston, Aug. 13.—Superintendent George Smith of the Sailors' home at 8 North Bennett street, who shot and killed a burglar in that institution on the night of Aug. 6 last, and who has been out under $500 bail since, was given a hearing on the charge of manslaughter in Judge Ely's court yesterday. At the conclusion of the government testimony his honor found that the shooting was justifiable, inasmuch as the intruder was caught in the act of committing the burglary, and Smith was discharged.

His honor took occasion to commend Smith for the way he defended his own person and the property over which he was in charge against the burglar. Smith offered no defense. His statement at the time of his arrest, which the police believed, showed that the burglar was in a crouching attitude when Smith discovered him. Fearing that the intruder was about to draw a revolver, Smith shot the man.

Strike a Failure

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 13.—A conference was held yesterday between the Fish Skinners' union's committee and a committee from the packers, at which the state board of arbitration was present. The packers said that they would absolutely refuse to make any concession. The union's committee voted to recommend to a mass meeting of strikers that the strike be ended, on the ground that there seemed to be no prospect of the packers changing their attitude. The strikers will probably adopt the committee's recommendation.

Wandered Around Naked

Clinton, Mass., Aug. 13.—Thomas Carr, about 30 years old, was arrested about two miles from the centre of the town yesterday. He had been on a debauch, had removed all his clothing, and in that condition had been in that vicinity nearly 24 hours. His body was badly bitten by insects and bruised by contact with stones and roots. He was wrapped in blankets and brought to Clinton, where he improved under medical treatment, and was sent to Marlboro last night, where he belongs.

Trio Charged With Manslaughter

Medway, Mass., Aug. 13.—Charles A. Mawn, Frank Valucia and Frank Cullen were yesterday held for the grand jury in the sum of $3000 each upon the charge of manslaughter in causing the death of Patrick Duffy. The government introduced the dying affidavit of Duffy, in which he claimed that Cullen and Valucia kicked and beat him, while Mawn was an onlooker.

Badly Hurt by a Jump

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Margaret Bennett, 32, is suffering from a broken hip and internal injuries received in attempting to escape from an officer who called at her home to eject her during a family row. On the approach of the officer she ran upstairs to the third floor, where she broke through a window on to the fire escape, ran down one of the iron ladders and then jumped 20 feet to the ground.

Rewards For Faithful Service

Providence, Aug. 13.—As a reward for faithful service the 103 employes of the Rhode Island company, formerly the Union Traction company, who did not participate in the recent strike, will receive an increase in their per diem wages of 12½ cents this week, and in addition the sum of $7.87, representing the increase in wages on their back pay for nine weeks covering the length of the strike.

Burns Proved Fatal

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 13.—Frederick Pickles, who, with four other boys, figured in a gasolene explosion Monday, died yesterday from shock following his burns. About the same time Sidney Pickles, a brother, John and Angus O'Brien and John B. McDonald were taken to the hospital for treatment, as their burns are very severe.

Children Killed at the Hub

Boston, Aug. 13.—Among the accidents in Boston yesterday were two to children which resulted fatally, in both instances the children being run over by a vehicle. William Beard, aged 6, was struck by a health department wagon. William E. Russell, aged 9, fell from a wagon seat, and the wheels crushed out his life.

New England's Checker Champion

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 13.—The checker championship of New England was won by J. W. Sheffield of Providence from Thomas Dumont of Fall River last night. The score stood, Sheffield 2, Dumont 1, drawn 17.

Gentleman Burglar Jailed

Chester, Vt., Aug. 13.—Clarence Adams, once this town's most distinguished resident, and now called the "gentleman burglar," has been jailed at Woodstock. It is expected that Adams will have a hearing this week.

Leagues Won't Consolidate

Boston, Aug. 13.—A. H. Soden, president of the Boston Baseball club, when asked about the proposed consolidation of the American and National leagues, said that there was absolutely no truth in the report.

To Interpret Rhodes' Intentions

London, Aug. 13.—The trustees of the will of Cecil Rhodes have appointed George R. Parkin, principal of Upper Canada college, Toronto, to prepare a plan for the allottment of the scholarships provided for in the will. The Times referring editorially to the appointment of Mr. Parkin, says the trustees of the will are to be warmly congratulated upon this important step and that they could hardly have found an interpreter of Mr. Rhodes' intentions better qualified than is Mr. Parkin to put them into practical shape.

The Betts Case.

Judge Colt, in the United States circuit court, in Boston, yesterday, denied the petition of Addie R. Kellar for a temporary injunction against Frederick E. Betts and others, and for the appointment of a receiver for the funds which the latter is supposed to have in his possession and which he is alleged to have secured from Mrs. Kellier and others through a system of fraud.

Judge Colt said: "While I am satisfied, from a consideration of these affidavits, that there has been fraud of the grossest kind, you are asking in a court of equity for relief by way of temporary injunction, but it does not appear from this bill just why the relief should be granted."

Judge Colt said the court could take no action, inasmuch as the bill was faulty and showed no reason why an injunction should issue and a receiver be appointed.

Atty. Bordman Hall, who appeared for the plaintiff, acknowledged that the bill had been drawn hurriedly by a young man in his office, and offered to prepare a new bill.

The court said he would issue an order to show cause why an injunction should be granted, returnable a week from today, after which the defendants would be given a week to prepare counter-affidavits.

The hearing will be three weeks from today.

Atty. Anderson was present in court, and informed Judge Colt that his senior, Charles W. Bartlett, was away on a vacation, and asked the indulgence of the court on that account. Mr. Bartlett is senior counsel for Betts, whom the judge is anxious to have represented before action is taken.

HARVARD COLLEGE.

A Chance for Poor Young Men at Harvard.

Those persons who are under the impression that Harvard University is a place for the rich and luxurious alone should, some day, look into the Randall dining hall, which happens to be still open for the entertainment of the six or seven hundred men and women who are in attendance upon the instruction of the University Summer School.

Randall hall is the gift of a brother and sister who died some years ago in Boston, leaving a large property to be applied by their executors for purposes of "productive benevolence."

From this bequest sprang a dining hall for the Harvard students at which well cooked food in excellent variety can be ordered, by the card, at the lowest possible prices.

By actual experience we have found that twenty-five cents buys a dinner thoroughly sufficient; and nine cents obtains a breakfast ample enough for the average brain worker. Besides these low prices which aim to meet the scanty incomes of youth who are working their way through college the positions of waiters are filled by students who do not lose cast by assuming such labors, but who are quite likely to be among the most popular members of their respective classes.

For popularity at Harvard is not measured by money or social rank or complexion but by character and scholarship.

Laid at Rest.

The funeral of Mr. Llewellyn Cunningham of Austin, Pa., was held Tuesday afternoon from the residence of Thomas L. Miller on Franklin street.

Rev. A. A. Ellsworth conducted the services which were very largely attended, including delegations from Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows of Quincy, Tremont lodge of Boston, and Ellison encampment of Boston. The bearers were: Frank L. Carlton, Frank W. Flowers, Elisha Hobart, Newman A. Savage, John R. Walters and Oscar Barron.

The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery where Mt. Wollaston lodge rendered its burial service.

Much Beloved.

Miss Frances E. Roberts, who ha been employed in the Manufacturing office of the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company of Wollaston for the past six years, will resign her position Aug. 30th, for reasons best known to herself and Mr. A. H. Clark of Brockton.

Very few employes of the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co. have been shown the friendship that has been earned by Miss Roberts, and which was displayed by their tokens of respect to her when it was known she was to leave the office.

A well filled purse was handed to Miss Roberts with which to purchase one of Morris, Burch & Butler's best brass bedsteads.

Miss Clara M. Watson will accept the the office position made vacant by Miss Roberts.

Inspecting the Fore River Works.

The members of the Mechanical and Electrical engineering departments of the Harvard University Scientific school, spent today (Wednesday, the 13th,) in a thorough inspection of the Fore River Ship Building works at Quincy Point.

These young gentlemen remain at Cambridge for two months of the summer in the Rindge machine shops, acquiring a practical acquaintance with the use of iron and wood-making tools, and the visit to the famous works at the Point is one of many similar inspections of the large machine shops in and around Boston.

The Bostonian who has been in the habit of complaining because he cannot get a pottle of wine or a glass of beer after the theatre's close, although he can eat all he pleases, is surprised to find that he cannot even get anything to eat after twelve o'clock in London, the greatest city in the world.—Boston Courier.

—It is a common fact, but not generally remembered, that a cock will not crow unless he can throw back his head. If a cock is shut over night in a low coop where he cannot stretch back his neck, there will be no crowing in the morning until the bird is released.

IN THE REALM OF BASEBALL.

McGraw's Disclosures Concerning the American League—Varied Career of Tom Loftus.

John ("Mugsy") McGraw's sarcastic expose of alleged inside affairs of the American league and his statements that the new league is a financial loser will not be taken seriously by impartial observers, who are bound to consider motives and conditions. McGraw's talk is so plainly that of a disgruntled person that it leaves him open to the suspicion of distorting or coloring matters, and by just so much he loses effect. But, assuming that McGraw spoke without malice, yet he was in no position to state positive truths.

It is safe to say that of all the clubs McGraw mentions as losers not any is such except Baltimore, and for that McGraw himself appears largely to blame. It may be that the published attendance at some points is padded; but, granting that, the average all along the line is high enough to warrant the assertion that six of the eight clubs will reap a profit on the season.

Tom Loftus' Career.

Thomas J. Loftus, one of the owners of the Washington American league team, has been a conspicuous figure in baseball circles for many years. He was born Nov. 15, 1856, at St. Louis and began to play ball with the Christian Brothers' team of his native city. He first came into prominence as a member of the then noted St. Louis Red Sox, in 1876, which made a great reputation for itself that year. In 1877 he signed with the then crack Memphis team.

One of the most noteworthy contests he took part in that season was played at Allegheny, Pa., June 2, when Memphis defeated the locals by 3 to 2 in the nineteenth inning. In 1878 Loftus joined the Peoria team and played second base. Previous to this he had played in the outfield. He went to Dubuque, Ia., in 1879 and settled down there, playing with the local team that year and the next one. He was connected with the local team in one way or another for several years; then in 1883 he joined the famous St. Louis Browns, but participated in only six championship contests owing to illness.

In the spring of 1887 he accepted the management of the Cleveland team and remained there until 1890, when he was engaged to manage the Cincinnatis. He continued there until the fall of 1891, when he returned to his home in Dubuque and remained out of baseball until 1894, when he assumed control of the Columbus club of the Western league.

Loftus remained with that organization until the fall of 1899, when he disposed of his interests there to accept the management of the Chicago National league team. He had charge of the Chicagos two seasons—1900 and 1901—and then he was given an opportunity to become interested financially in the Washington club of the American league, and he accepted it.

standing his youthfulness, however, he maintained a cool head throughout the entire contest. James is the son of Frederick James, one of the leading members of the Glen View club.

House With Pleasing Exterior and Interior—Cost $2,200.

Houses built on colonial lines are always in demand and for several reasons, apart from their pleasing appearance. They can be erected at a comparatively small cost, and they can

The foundation is built of stone. The cellar contains a hot air furnace, coal bins, etc.

Sanitary Floor Varnish.

An excellent floor varnish may easily be prepared by dissolving a pound of spirit copal gum, a pound of gum sandarach and one-quarter pound of shellac in methylated spirits, a gallon, afterward well stirring into the varnish one-quarter ounce of carbolic acid. It may be prepared in a variety of shades by adding any of the aniline dyes soluble in spirits or may be colored as follows: For mahogany add to the above five ounces bismarck brown; for light oak, dark oak and walnut add dry vandyke brown in variable proportions. Before applying the varnish, says the Decorators and Painters' Magazine, the floors should be given a coat of glue size, which must be allowed to thoroughly dry; then apply the varnish quickly and evenly with a fine brush. These varnishes dry hard and sharp, with an excellent gloss, and are quite durable when submitted to heavy usage. They are also useful as disinfectants, as they destroy all living matter that may exist in the dust which so often accumulates on floors.

Value of Ventilation.

There is nothing more essential to health than fresh air and sunshine, not only in outdoor exercise, but in the home. Especially must the living and sleeping rooms have sunlight and ventilation, says a writer in the New York Press. Many cases of inactive skin and scalp troubles and poor complexions are due to sleeping in badly ventilated rooms. It should be understood generally that one of the missions of the sun is to deodorize and purify. There is vitality in sunlight. The sun is the great enemy of disease germs. Let the sun have a chance to do its work in the sleeping rooms.

The Word "Joss."

"It's a mistake to suppose that 'joss' is a Chinese word," says a retired ship's carpenter. "I've traveled a good bit in the orient in my time, and among the odds and ends of interesting information I picked up was a knockout of the genuineness of 'joss' as a Chinese word. Chinamen only know 'joss' when they come in contract with Europeans. A Chinese priest that I became chummy with in Hankow told me that there was no such word in Chinese. He explained that the word was a corruption of the Spanish word 'Dios' and had come into use through the missionaries. Many early missionaries, he said, were Spanish priests, and their pronunciation of 'Dios' was speedily corrupted into 'joss' by native tongues and applied to the Chinese deities. It's only on the Chinese seaboard that the word is understood by Chinamen. In the interior, the priest told me, the Celestials had no knowledge of it."—Philadelphia Record.

Street Etiquette.

In meeting a lady in a public thoroughfare in America a gentleman always waits for her bow of recognition before lifting his hat or addressing her. In Europe, however, the contrary is the established rule, it being the gentleman's place to bow first, when, if the lady desires not to recognize him, she ignores his salutations, thus giving the cut direct. It is not good form in any place for a lady to stop a gentleman in the street for the purpose of chatting with him, though she may with perfect propriety pause to speak if he take the initiative. Prolonged talks in the street are not, however, considered good form, even between persons of the same sex, the better plan being to walk on slowly until the conversation is concluded.—Detroit Free Press.

Why Coughing Is Weakening.

The amount of energy expended in coughing is very considerable. Indeed one of the patient statisticians for which Germany is renowned has calculated that a patient who coughs once every quarter of an hour for ten hours expends energy equivalent to 250 units of heat, which may be translated as equivalent to the nourishment contained in three eggs or two glasses of milk. In normal respiration the air is expelled from the chest at the rate of four feet per second, whereas in violent coughing it may attain a velocity of 300 feet.

DOUBLE COMMITTEES

Struggle For Supremacy at Barre, Vermont

STATE COMMITTEE'S CALL

For Support of Regular Republican Nominee For Governor—Charge That Bolting Condidate Seeks to Defame the Party

Barre, Vt., Aug. 13.—Barre seems to be the centre of the political agitation in one state between the Clement and McCullough factions. There are two Republican city committees here, each claiming to be the legal one. One was elected last June at a regular caucus, and when elected was supposed to be divided in choice between the three candidates for governor, McCullough, Proctor and Clement. About two weeks afterward it was found that five of the seven members favored Clement, and they called another caucus and resigned. On Aug. 2 the McCullough people got together and elected a committee of seven, which was called the regular Republican city committee.

The Republican state committee and the county committee met the city and town committees of this county in Montpelier and refused to recognize the one chosen on Aug. 8 as the regular Republican city committee of Barre. When this latter committee was elected two of its members belonged to the other committee, and both have been filled and the committee now has seven members, all favorable to McCullough. New headquarters have been opened here by both the McCullough and Clement men and each faction will make a hot fight to carry the county.

The Republican state committee yesterday issued the following from Montpelier:

At the Republican State Convention held at Montpelier June 19th there were three men supported for its first honor, each by a constituency of respectable proportions. They submitted their grounds of preferment to the determination of the Convention; one only could win; two must suffer defeat, and when defeated there was for them but one honorable alternative which was to accept defeat like men and give their hearty support to the Convention's choice.

That the Convention finally selected the man who on the first ballot led by a large plurality gave no ground of offence to the unsuccessful candidates and their friends. Indeed, one of these, with his supporters by their magnanimous action, made possible the result.

Then it was that the Clement bolt began.

It was without other cause than his defeat.

Through his delegates Mr. Clement had participated in the Convention and if he had been its nominee he would have given it his loyal adherence and would have confidently relied upon the loyal support of his party.

Since the Convention nothing has arisen, no fact has been discovered which can justify any Republican in attempting to defeat its chosen candidates or to change the results of its deliberations.

Mr. Clement alleges that he doubts the sincerity of the Republican party in Vermont in its plank concerning the submission of the license local option law to the vote of the people and seeks thus to justify his secession. But when was the Republican party of Vermont or of the nation untrue to its pledges? From its inception to the present hour has the party of liberty under Freemont, of the Constitution and Union under Lincoln and Grant, of sound money and protection to American industries under Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Harrison and McKinley, crowned by its honorable and philanthropic position towards Cuba and the Philippines—when and wherein has it in either state or nation betrayed its trust or wandered from the paths of honor, justice and rectitude? In the light of its history then, he who would impugn the honor and good faith of the Republican party impeaches his own.

The Convention favored the submission to the people of the question of license and local option or state prohibition because it was deemed a wise and proper concession to a growing and insistent demand for such a reference which came alike from the friends and the foes of the prohibitory law.

Those who opposed prohibition asserted that a local-option law would best control and would best restrict the sale of intoxicating liquor, and that a reference to the people would show a majority favorable to such a law. Friends of State prohibition claimed that such a reference would show that the people were not in favor of a license local-option law, and that the wide and thorough discussion and agitation which would precede the vote would result in the rejection of such a law and in the better enforcement of the prohibitory law and its establishment as the settled and unquestioned policy of the state.

Mr. Clement attempts to excuse his secession from the Republican party and to justify his action in bolting the convention when he was a candidate for high preferment by making a claim of bribery on the part of both of his opponents and to such an extent as to vitiate the action of that convention.

To those who know General McCullough this suggestion of corruption needs no denial. To those who do not we are pleased to assure them that from the beginning to the end of his canvass he did and countenanced nothing corrupt, dishonorable or unseemly.

YACHTSMEN'S FEELINGS.

Considered by Police Who Held Back Report of a Steward's Suicide

Boston, Aug. 13.—Gilbert Tallandier, steward of the Anita of New York, which was at Marblehead Saturday, killed himself that afternoon by shooting, at the Atlantic House there, in a room he had engaged for a few hours. The reason for his act was not known. He had been sent ashore to buy supplies for the yacht, and went to the hotel, weher he engaged a room, saying he wished to lie down for three hours, requesting that he be called at the end of that time. A hotel attendant found the body. The report of a pistol had not been heard. The police were notified, and the medical examiner certified to the death as that of suicide, but no public announcement of it was made, for the reason, the police say, that nothing might interrupt the festivities among yachtsmen. The police say that there was no suspicion of foul play. The body by direction of persons on the yacht, was prepared for shipment to New York. The Anita has sailed on a cruise.

BLOCKADE INEFFECTIVE

Gunboat Machias Will Protect Neutral Commerce at Cape Haytien

Washington, Aug. 13.—The navy department yesterday received two cablegrams from Commander McCrea of the gunboat Machias, dated Cape Haytien, Aug. 12, in which he reports that the attempted blockade of the port by the revolutionists is ineffective. In his dispatch he said: "Have decided blockade spasmodic, therefore ineffective. Have notified consuls. Will protect innocent, neutral commerce."

In the second dispatch, which came later, he said: "Consider blockade abandoned. American schooner reporting blockade absent."

New York, Aug. 13.—In the Peter Power hearing yesterday the cross-examination of Mr. Weidenfeld was conducted by Mr. Lamb. He had never suggested to Lamb, he said, that the latter procure another plaintiff in these suits so that his (Weidenfeld's) identity might be concealed.

The business was brought here from Beloit in 1886 and has been built up to an output of 40,000 machines last year.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 13.—The Russian press censor warned the press not to describe the German emperor's departure from Reval, where he visited the czar last week, to view the Russian naval maneuvers. SPICY CHAT WITH BOTHA Boer General Amused at British Tactics In Late War.

PLANNING AN OFFICIAL HISTORY

Famous Fighter Hopes to Arrange a Book on South African Conflict From the Burghers' Side, Written by Well Known Leaders—Will Visit America For Relief Funds.

Since General Louis Botha intends visiting the United States soon a rather amusing interview which the London Chronicle correspondent had with him at Maritzburg is worth reading, as it gives a Boer view of the not very redoubtable British prowess in the field, says the London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

The correspondent describes Botha as follows: Louis Botha is a big man, full six feet high and stoutly built. His shoulders in particular are immense, and his huge brick red hands are carried clumsily swinging. He wears a drooping brown mustache; small, pointed beard, that does not conceal a firm, round chin, and short hair. His face is full and pleasant; light blue eyes twinkle below heavy brows. The small, beautifully carved nose that often accompanies Huguenot descent is his best feature. He was magnificently bronzed and looked like a very fit south of England farmer rather than a fighting general. With him were Jan De Wet, younger brother of Christian of that ilk, and his own brother, Commandant Christian Botha, whom all South Africa knows as Chris.

Jan De Wet would insist on interpreting, for Louis Botha has but little English and, I suspect, is apt to tell the truth without discrimination to all who approach him in the Taal, whereas the urbane Jan is a barrister of the inner temple and has even dipped into journalism. So I had to speak English, but my notes were of Louis Botha's answers and not of Jan's renderings.

"There is every prospect of a lasting peace," said the general, "if people will sink their individual feelings and work together for the good of the country. It's time South Africa had a chance."

"Now, about the war. How did the Boers look upon blockhouses?"

Jan De Wet laughed as he put the question, and Louis Botha smiled broadly.

"I think," said the latter, chuckling, "they were useful in finding employment for men who were not to be trusted with horses."

This was a facer, and I showed my astonishment plainly.

"The blockhouse lines never stopped me from going where I wanted to go," added the general, "and they never stopped De Wet."

"De Wet broke the fences with cattle, did he not?" I asked.

Jan De Wet replied this time. "He says he never did so," he said, "and I can't see how it would be possible. Cattle won't run in a mass unless there are men leading them. You can't drive them like horses." He translated this to Louis Botha, who nodded in agreement.

"Did your experience lead you to regard any particular arm of the British service as specially efficient and disagreeable?" was my next question.

"That is too wide a question," replied the general. "I got on pretty well with all of them."

"The colonials, too?" I queried.

"I did not see much difference," he answered.

"And what about our intelligence department?"

Again the general was much amused. "It's all right," he said. "I have intercepted a good many dispatches and quite often found them reliable."

"Tell me something about your own arrangements," I suggested. "We heard a great deal about the magnificent organization of your intelligence department. Had you such a thing?"

"Yes," he answered; "we had the best system possible. Every one of my burghers is an intelligence officer born, and I had no need to single out any one of them to do the work they all did."

"Do you intend to visit England?"

"Yes," replied the general; "I am going to England with De Wet and Delarey about the end of the month. I'm going to the continent, too, and to America."

"What is the object of the tour?"

"We want to get funds for the relief of burghers ruined by the war, and especially for widows and orphans and cripples."

"Are you going to lecture?" I inquired.

He laughed. "I can't," he replied. "But I don't know what we shall do yet."

"Is there to be a book?"

"I hope," he replied, "to arrange for an official history of the war from the Boer side. De Wet will write his share, Delarey his, I mine, and so on. I think there ought to be such a book."

"It would be very interesting," I agreed. "I suppose Paul Kruger won't assist?"

"He is too old," answered the general seriously.

Railway Train of the Future.

A distinguished German engineer maintains that the time is rapidly approaching when the appearance of an ordinary railway train will be altered beyond recognition in order to diminish the atmospheric resistance, says the Berlin correspondent of the New York World. Fast trains, he predicts, will resemble a long steel serpent with a sharp point like a ship's prow. Steel armor will cover the cars and reach to within six inches of the rails. He calculates that this will reduce the atmospheric pressure nearly half.

FIGHTING CONTINUES

Another City Attacked by Venezuelan Revolutionists

INTEND TO STORM CUMANA

Government Troops Under President Castro Expected to Meet the Enemy Near Caracas—United States Vessels Finding Plenty to Do

Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad, Aug. 14.—The Venezuelan revolutionists are attacking Cumana and intend to storm the city within 24 hours. The government cannot raise more than 350 men to oppose the 1100 revolutionists composing the attacking party.

Cumana is a town of about 10,000 inhabitants, situated in the state of Bermudez, on the Gulf of Cariaco.

San Juan, P. R., Aug. 14.—News has reached here by steamer Caracas that the Venezuelan revolutionary forces under General Matos and the government troops under President Castro are expected soon to meet on the plains outside of Caracas in a decisive battle. The Venezuelan revolutionists are said to have received a large shipment of Mauser rifles and ammunition and some cannon from Germany. Plots against the life of President Castro are said to have been discovered.

No Communication With Barcelona

Washington, Aug. 14.—The navy department has received word that the Cincinnati sailed Tuesday from Puerto Cabello for Barcelona under the instructions cabled to Commander McLean directing either the Cincinnati or Topeka to proceed immediately to that point. Commander McLean, who is the senior officer, evidently decided to go himself and use the Topeka to protect American interests at Puerto Cabello. It is probable that the Cincinnati already has arrived at Barcelona, but that fact may not be known officially here for several days, as Minister Bowen cabled the state department from Caracas yesterday that the cable from Caracas to Barcelona again had been cut by the revolutionists.

Barcelona is the capital of the state of Bermudez, and one of the most important coast towns of the country. It is 160 miles east of Caracas, and is situated on a spacious plain, as is the case with Caracas, on the Neveri river, only three miles distant from the coast of the Caribbean sea. Its port, Guanta, however, is 12 miles distant, and is connected with it by a railway. Barcelona, originally called New Barcelona, was founded in 1637 by Juan Urpin at the foot of the Cerro Santo, whence it was transferred to its present site in 1671 by Sancho Fernando de Agula.

Until within a recent period the town was a wretched place, the houses being mostly built of mud, ill-constructed and poorly furnished, while the streets were unpaved, being extremely filthy in rainy weather and intolerably dusty in dry weather. The town is now a more presentable place, being better built and possessing some good educational institutions and important public buildings.

At the beginning of the 19th century it had a population of 16,000, but 25 years ago this had fallen to about 6000, the place having been nearly ruined by war and revolution. Its population at present is about 13,000. It possesses no important manufactures, but exports considerable quantities of coffee, sugar, chocolate beans, timber, dye woods and cereals. The surrounding country is very fertile, and 12 miles distant are important coal deposits.

Watching America's Course

Berlin, Aug. 14.—The newspapers here display news from Venezuela prominently and print everything available from New York on the probable landing of marines by the United States or Germany, or both. Unusual interest is taken in current events in Central America, especially in the comments of American newspapers respecting possible necessity for intervention.

Nixon Leaves Cresent Company

Elizabeth, N. J., Aug. 14.—Lewis Nixon resigned yesterday as president of the Crescent Shipbuilding company and Mason F. Chase was elected in his place. Nixon's resignation is incident to the recent organization of the United States Shipbuilding company, to which his attention is to be devoted. The Crescent company is a constituent member of the new concern.

Safe For Gage

San Francisco, Aug. 14.—Complete returns from the primaries show that the regular Republican organization will have a large majority in the state convention. While none of the gubernatorial candidates has a clear majority, it is conceded that Governor Gage has 400 votes pledged to him for renomination. Four hundred and fifteen are necessary to elect.

STRONG RESISTANCE

To Closing of Congregationist Schools by French Authorities

Brest, Aug. 14.—Thirteen schools belonging to White Sisters remain unclosed in Finistere. The expulsion of the sisters at Concarneau was undertaken yesterday. Scouts on automobiles reached the town at 2 o'clock in the morning from Quimper and reported that troops were on the way. The tocsin was rung, bugles were blown and boys ran through the streets ringing hand-bells. Large crowds gathered around the railroad station and around the school.

Several bodies of gendarmes and two companies of infantry arrived by a special train. The commissary ordered the school evacuated, at which the crowd shouted "Long Live the Sisters." The gendarmes advanced toward the school, but they were repulsed and a general scrimmage followed. Later the troops reached the building and the police tried to break down the doors with axes, but the resistance of the people continued.

The commissary finally forced an entrance to the school. When this had been accomplished the sisters, amid the vehement protests of the crowd, left the building.

Entrance to the school in the village of Bensoe was also forced. Here the sisters, when they emerged from the school building, were conducted to the church by the mayor and a procession of people headed by the national flag draped in crepe.

Called a "Social" Affair

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 14.—The general superintendents of the largest coal companies in the anthracite field held a secret meeting here yesterday. All efforts to obtain any information beyond the statement that the gathering was merely a social one was futile. In reply to a query regarding a settlement of the strike it was said that the termination of the suspension rests entirely with the men.

A Victory For Strikers

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—The general strike of the structural iron workers throughout the country has been declared off, the American Bridge company having granted the demands of its employes in the Philadelphia district for an 8-hour working day at 50 cents an hour. The general sympathetic strike was ordered last Saturday by the executive board of the union.

Indictments Against Lynchers

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 14.—The grand jury of Loudon county, which has been investigating the lynching of Charles Craven, colored, about two weeks ago, yesterday returned indictments against three men. Craven was lynched on suspicion of having murdered a white man. The remaining five men who were implicated by the coroner's jury in the lynching were discharged.

Gloucester Fisherman Wrecked

Liverpool, N. S., Aug. 14.—The Gloucester fishing schooner Virginia, bound home with a full fare, struck on rocks off Hope island during a thick fog Tuesday and will probably become a total loss. The crew remained on the island during the night and yesterday they rowed here, which is 12 miles distant from the island.

Not a Candidate For Governor

Louisville, Aug. 14.—Henry Watterson, who returned home yesterday, stated emphatically that he is not a candidate for governor of Kentucky, notwithstanding the numerous reports to that effect which had reached him while traveling in the north and west.

Baldwin's Next Start

Tromsoe, Aug. 14.—Evelyn B. Baldwin is considering the possibility of leaving Tromsoe in the autumn on the first stage of his polar advance.

WON'T BE EXTRADITED

Gaynor and Greene Liberated by Quebec Judge

STORY OF A FAMOUS CASE

The Two Men Were Wanted In Connection With Alleged Frauds In Harbor Work For Federal Government Involving Millions of Dollars

Quebec, Aug. 14.—John F. Gaynor and Benjamin D. Greene, accused of conspiracy to defraud the American government, are free. Judge Caron, in court here yesterday, gave judgment to that effect. He quashed the warrant on which they were arrested on the ground that the charge of conspiracy to defraud does not come under the extradition act, and that the offense is not of sufficiently recent date. The United States government attorneys made no further application, so the prisoners were released, and are receiving congratulations by the score.

John F. Gaynor and Benjamin D. Greene are the principal contractors in the Savannah river and harbor improvements, for participation in frauds on which, aggregating millions, Oberlin M. Carter, the army engineer in charge, is now doing time at the Leavenworth military prison. Gaynor and Greene were indicted in 1899 by the Georgia courts, it being charged that they profited by the frauds to double the extent Carter did, and he received over $700,000. From New York city Gaynor and Greene fought removal to Georgia by every expedient money could command and ingenuity contrive. When their legal resources were exhausted, early this year, and trial in the Georgia courts stared them in the face, Gaynor and Greene fled to Quebec, their bonds of $40,000 each being forfeited last March by an order declaring them fugitives from justice. In Quebec they engaged eminent counsel and lived openly, defying arrest.

Desiring to avoid extradition proceedings in the city of Quebec, the fugitives were arrested May 15 in that city, and hurried to Montreal for hearing before Extradition Commissioner Lafontaine. This precipitated a legal battle between the authorities of Montreal and Quebec, with writs of habeas corpus as ammunition, and eventually the agents of the United States government had to proceed in the Quebec courts. Here extradition has been fought by the best legal talent of Quebec, and every possible device has been resorted to to delay the proceedings.

Marion Erwin, the American agent, last month made a report to the Washington department of justice complaining of irregularity in procedure, showing that the fugitives' attorneys were closely connected by ties of business and blood with the Canadian authorities who have to do with extradition, and virtually charging that the case was prejudiced by these facts.

Whether this was so or not, the publication of this report raised a storm in Quebec, where it was seized upon by counsel for Gaynor and Greene and dragged into the court proceedings with much display of virtuous indignation that the integrity of the Canadian courts had been impeached. It was also charged that Erwin had attempted to settle the case for $500,000, a statement which he vigorously denied.

It may be fairly said that Judge Caron has not shown himself unfriendly to the fugitives since he forced their trial before him rather than at Montreal, and the result has not altogether been unexpected. What further action the Washington authorities will take remains to be seen.

Since judgment was rendered the accused have enjoyed their liberty and last night could be seen among the promenaders on the terrace. According to the judgment the accused are perfectly free to travel in any part of the British empire.

The action of Justice Caron in discharging the prisoners from custody and the grounds stated for his conclusions, in the judgment rendered, came as a surprise to the counsel for the United States.

Knox Has Nothing to Say

Boston, Aug. 14.—Attorney General Knox was informed by The Associated Press last night of the release of Greene and Gaynor at Quebec and also was shown Judge Caron's decision. He said: "I have nothing to say in regard to Judge Caron's decision. It would be highly improper and extremely indelicate for me to make any comment on any decision of a foreign court in which the United States government is involved, especially when the case goes against the government."

After a reception the society was called to order by President Hale. Following the address of General Hale, routine business was taken up. A reception was held at Lake Manawa last night.

Governor Arrested In Libel Suit

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 14.—Governor Henry T. Gage was arrested yesterday by a detective of San Francisco, who served on him a warrant charging him with criminal libel, the warrant having been sworn to by the proprietor of the San Francisco Call. The governor was immediately afterward released on a writ of habeas corpus.

A New Bike Record

Good Afternoon.

Notwithstanding many do not find the summer hours convenient at the public library we understand from reliable sources that the circulation of books for the month of July increased ten per cent. or about 500 over last year and also there was a small increase in books consulted. In spite of but little increase in appropriation or hours the library is open, the circulation seems to be growing each year.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Advices from Australia tell of terrible draught in New South Wales and Queensland, which has devastated the sheep ranches of that section of the southern colony. Millions of sheep have died and men formerly considered wealthy have been compelled to seek employment. Samuel McCaughey, the sheep king of Australia, lost over a million sheep of his herd of 1,250,000, and other large herders have been equally unfortunate. — Boston Transcript.

☞ Don't attempt to cure your boy of slang; as Professor Hall of Clark University would tell you, the important thing is for early youth to express itself somehow on all proper occasions, and the vocabulary of youth is not yet equal,—up to, as it were,—the niceties of precise expression. Parents may therefore devote themselves with a more single purpose to teaching their children to differentiate between the proper and improper occasions for conversation. — Boston Budget.

Among the Four Hundred.

Some good times are in order this month at Newport. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is to give an entertainment at Beaulieu, Aug. 25, when the Knickerbocker theatre, New York, will be closed and the company tranported to Beaulieu where the play "Wild Rose" will be presented with the full cast. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish is to give a colonial ball at Crossways which promises to be the most expensive as well is unique entertainment ever given at this seaside city. The men will look like Washington, Jay, Hamilton and other men of Revolutionary fame. The colored servants, forty in number, with powdered hair, will wear blue and gold lace coats and buff vests. The gentlemen in the minuet, sixty or more, and their women companions will be dressed in true Colonial style. The men will wear black satin breeches and and dress coats with different colored silks in the facing.

Cold on Mt. Washington.

Visitors to the top of Mt. Washington, N. H. are experiencing some cold weather this week. The cold wave brought freezing atmosphere Wednesday morning, thermometer registering 28 degrees at three o'clock. The summit presented a bleak appearance, thickly coated as it was with sleet and ice, while on the long wooden walk about the hotel, the ice formation was such that it had to be shovelled away early in the morning. A high west wind combining itself with the cold made the conditions outside the hotel somewhat uncomfortable. Fires and winter clothing were necessary to comfort.

CONSPIRACY.

New Charge Against Betts and Fisher.

They are Held in Bonds of $10,000.

Alleged they Used the United States Mail to Commit fraud Upon the Public.

Frederick E. Betts of the brokerage concern know as J. M. Fisher & Co. of Boston, was arrested shortly before 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon on a charge of conspiracy.

Some nine months ago Betts and Fisher, who had palatial banking offices on State street, were arrested on various charges in which it was alleged that they had swindled the public. Fisher and Betts operated as one in the concern known as J. M. Fisher & Co. At the same time "Fisher & Co." were the head and front of another concern known as the Cobb-Everett investment company.

At the time of their arrest they were held in heavy bail.

In the warrant on which Betts was arrested on Wednesday, it is alleged that he and Fisher conspired and entered into an agreement to commit fraud upon the public, and that in the commission of such fraud they used the United States mails.

The warrant was issued by United States Commissioner Fisk at the request of United States Dist. Atty. John H. Casey. The complainant in the case was Inspector McMillian of Inspector Evans' secret division. The warrant was placed in the hands of Deputy Marshal Waters, who made the arrest of Betts in short order.

Betts appeared somewhat surprised upon being taken into custody, yet nevertheless seemed to view the conditions like a philosopher. He was immaculately dressed in the hight of fashion and had every appearance of prosperity, notwithstanding that the firms or concerns in which he was interested were said to have "gone to the wall" soon after his previous arrest.

Betts was taken before United States Commissioner Fiske. He waived the reading of the complaint and pleaded not guilty. However, he was apparently much disappointed when Mr. Casey, who appeared for the government, asked that he be held in $10,000 bail. Betts demurred at what he thought to be excessive bail, whereupon Mr. Casey said that the conditions warranted that the sureties be placed at a large amount in order to assure the presence of the prisoner when wanted in court.

In support of his request Mr. Casey presented an important document as bearing upon the amount of money which Fisher and Betts are alleged to have secured from the public while operating under the guise of brokers. Mr. Casey read a statement made by an expert accountant for the government who had gone over the accounts of Fisher and Betts, at the Federal trust company and also at the Mercantile trust company.

During a period of time in 1901 it was shown that to the account of J. M. Fisher & Co. at the Federal trust company there were forty-seven items representing an aggregate of $67,461.46. At the same trust company at the same time was deposited in the name of William A. Betts, trustee, over $83,000. William A. Betts is a brother of Frederick, who was arrested yesterday. The total of the deposit to the credit of "J. M. Fisher & Co." and William A. Betts, trustee, footed up to $151,372.

The expert accountant also found to the crdit of the "Cobb-Everett Investment Co." at the Mercantile trust company, deposits amounting to over $67,000. The total amount of money of the brokers on deposit at the two trust companies mentioned, was about $220,000.

Of the $220,000 deposited with the trust companies, not a dollar was left on deposit by those to whom it was credited.

A large amount of it was withdrawn a day or two before Fisher and Betts were arrested last fall. There are hundreds of unfortunate victims who just now would like to find out where this money has gone. The government officials especially would like to locate it, as there are several victims who have been reduced to dire want and distress by their losses.

John M. Fisher, the supposed head of the concerns, turned up suddenly at the Federal building at about 3 in the afternoon. He got two friends who were willing to go bail for him, in case he was put under arrest. Before he reached the Federal building, however, he ran into Deputy U. S. Marshal Waters on State street, and was placed under arrest.

Shortly afterward Fisher was arraigned before the United States commissioner for the alleged conspiracy, the same charge on which Betts was arraigned, and was held in bonds of $10,000. Bondsmen in the persons of Franklin E. Hall of Wollaston and George F. Kehew of Cambridge duly qualified, and Fisher once again was at liberty.

Shortly after 4 P. M. Betts also gave $10,000 bonds, a friend from Quincy going his surety.

They will be given a hearing at 10 o'clock today.

Seeing Boston.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:—

I wish to tell your readers about my experience at seeing Boston the other day by trolley.

The idea of observation cars originated out west where they have been very successful. I have often enjoyed them in Denver and other cities but it is only recently that Boston has introduced the idea, only here they are not observation cars but the ordinary open car labeled "observation car."

Although supposed to know the hub very well, always having lived within the spokes, we thought we would take the trip and see it as others see it. So one fine morning we started out. We were not the only ones of the same mind for we found a large gathering, which filled four cars. They were mostly tourists in the city for a few days who wished to see as much of the city as possible in a short time.

Each car was accompanied by a guide with a megaphone to announce the points of interest. At the start he announced that the people in the car were expected to keep quiet and listen carefully to his announcements or they might miss much of value. We thought the announcement rather unnecessary but light soon dawned on us and we discovered he wished to do all the talking himself.

He talked so much, mixing stale jokes and puns with facts, that he spoiled the trip for us. We noticed others in the car did not smile broadly or act as though impressed by the great wit and brilliancy. In fact he talked so continually that when he did announce a fact of interest it was lost sight of. We were told that Massachusetts avenue extended to Concord, N. H., and other equally startling things to a Bostonian.

To our mind if he had called out each point of interest briefly and with dignity, allowing the tourists to think about and enjoy their surroundings, they would have finished the ride knowing more about Boston. We hope outsiders will not judge the city as represented by our guide for it is not a flippant city.

The last mile or two was used up by the guide in advertising the Boston Elevated road.

Now we have given you the unfavorable side of the trip it is only fair to give a few points in its favor. To begin with there are two trips a day, morning and afternoon, each two hours long and for reasonable fare. The cars are not overcrowded, four on a seat being the comfortable average. The ride is very pretty especially the last part through Cambridge, Brookline and Back Bay, and gives one a very good idea of Harvard college, Boston's park system, etc. As for the guide possibly ours felt a little funnier than some of the others. It must be exceedingly monotonous for him to learn his story and repeat it every day and possibly twice a day, day after day.

MILLIKEN HELD.

Wollaston Man Charged with Careless Automobile Driving.

The complaints against Edward A. Milliken of Wollaston, for the violation of the automobile law and criminal neglect, were heard at Cottage City, Wednesday. He was discharged on the first complaint and held in $2,000 on the second.

The State claims that Milliken drives his automobile rapidly and carelessly, that it frightened a horse driven by Ariel B. Scott, who was thrown out and received injuries from which he died the following day.

Dr. C. F. Lane, who attended Scott, gave it as his opinion that he did not come to his death because of injuries received at the time of the accident, but from excessive administration of morphine, after chloroform, brandy and atropine had been given him.

Dr. Fairchild, Scott's physician, gave as his opinion, that he came to his death as a result of injuries sustained at the time of the accident.

Stole a Boat.

Officer Lyons arrested Frank Cox, aged 16 years, at Wollaston, Wednesday night, for the larceny of a boat owned by William H. Perkins. The boat was stolen from its moorings at Wollaston, Aug. 2, and was later found on an island off Boston light, where she had been abandoned. In court this morning Cox pleaded guilty and was held in $300 until Saturday.

—Straw mattings which we have always associated with China and considered one of her leading exports, is to be made in this country, a large company having been formed for the purpose. The fibre will be imported from China and made up by machinery and it is hoped to turn out a better and cheaper article than the Chinese mattings which are made by hand. Grasses from the salt marshes of New Jersey and the western prairies will also be used.

—We hear more talk about raising prices in the restaurants. To be sure New York has already set the example. Pretty soon it will be easier to raise the figures of the price of a dinner, than it will be to raise the price itself—that is for the patron. But what can boniface do? The butcher and the baker make ten spots look small nowadays.—Boston Courier.

GRANITE SHIPMENTS.

Over 6,000 Tons Forwarded by Rail During July.

The shipments of granite from Quincy, by rail, during the month of July amounted to 12,161,885 pounds. This was an increase of 912,130 pounds over the previous month. These figures however do not begin to give the amount of granite shipped during July, although they may be said to represent the amount of finished product.

If it were possible to obtain the mount of rough and finished granite that was sent out by teams last month the figures would be amazing. For a month or more every team possible has been in use carting rough stock that is being used on the sewer breakwater at Houghs Neck, and the amount of granite carted by them alone would be a number of million pounds.

The shipments by rail terminals for July were; West Quincy 5,537,520 pouds; Quincy Adams, 4,853,745 pounds; Quarry railroad 1,770,620 pounds.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. TOO NARROW.

Horse and Team Attempted to go over the Bridge at Wollaston and got Stuck.

It is not often that the residents of Old Colony avenue see a circus in their neighborhood, but they did Wednesday evening when a man with a horse and open buggy, in which there was a bale of hay, attempted to drive over Warren avenue bridge. This bridge was constructed solely for foot passengers yet it is wide enough to admit of a carriage.

The man drove in from the Old Colony avenue end, and although the incline is rather steep he had no difficulty in climbing it all right. It was not until the Newport avenue end of the bridge was reached that he discovered that he could not get off that end. The bridge was too narrow for the team to turn around and it became necessary to back off.

That was where the circus came in. The horse objected to backing down the steep incline and yards of paint were taken off the iron work of the bridge by the wheels of the carriage in getting it to the ground. Finally with a man at the horse's head and two or three more at the rear of the carriage, it was got off.

A sign should be placed on the Warren avenue end of the bridge to prevent a repetition of Wednesday night's circus.

—There is something of a revival this season of college student waiters and other menials at summer hotels, says the Hotel Reporter, and a table of statistics of Columbia, Yale and other 'versity men doing this kind of service in order to complete their education has been published. I never was in sympathy with this sacrifice of dignity and self respect to increase one's mentality, or, rather intellectuality, and when these men get their education it will be akin to an elephant on their hands—they can't utilize it. Besides not to continue an argument, they crowd out the professional waiter who is content with the knowledge he has for his vocation.—Boston Courier.

A TYPICAL HOBO

Captured After He Had Assaulted and Robbed a Boston Woman

Boston, Aug. 14.—Mrs. Josephine Doherty of Humboldt Park was alone in her house yesterday afternoon when Peter Casey, a tramp, called and asked for food. Mrs. Doherty let him into the house and while she was preparing a lunch the man grabbed her by the throat and demanded money. Mrs. Doherty replied that if he would release her she would get it, and upon his doing so she ran downstairs and gave the alarm. Casey snatched the woman's pocketbook and hurriedly left the house, but was finally run down by two young men and turned over to an officer. At the police station he said that his name was Peter Casey, 35 years old, and belonged in Calais, Me. He wore overalls and was a perfect type of the stage hobo. Seven slips of paper with addresses in various cities were found on him, also the money stolen from Mrs. Doherty. He will be arraigned on the charge of robbery.

GOING THROUGH A CASTLE

[Original.]

"I am going to visit the castle if I have to go alone," said the American girl in England. "These old baronial seats are splendid."

"But you won't be admitted. The castle is not open to visitors."

"I can try."

She left the party over their luncheon at the King's Arms and with the independence of a true American girl walked a short distance to the entrance of the castle. It was one of the oldest in England and was protected by a moat, a drawbridge and a portcullis. She stood near the end of the drawbridge peering wistfully in through the great arched gateway. A man in riding boots, corduroy trousers, spurs, a whip in his hand, a short box coat of a dun color and a derby hat came out, crossed the drawbridge and was about to pass her, a dozen feet away.

"Is the castle open to visitors?" she asked.

The man stopped and raised his hand to his hat deferentially. He lifted it slightly, which surprised her, as servants usually salute by a touch.

"Not at present," he said, replying to her question.

"Oh, dear, I am so disappointed! I have come all the way from America to see it."

"This particular castle?"

"All of them. These English castles are more interesting to me than anything in Europe."

The man pulled a watch from his vest pocket, glanced at its face, returned it and said:

"If you will come with me, I will show you over the place."

"You? Have you authority to take in visitors when the public are not admitted?"

"I have."

"And his grace the duke will not be offended?"

"Anything I do goes with the duke. He is very good natured."

The man turned, and she walked with him.

"You are in his service?"

"No."

They passed over the drawbridge and under the archway.

"This masonry is Norman," said the man, "and was put up nine centuries ago by Hugh"—

"Nine hundred years old! Just think of it! Is all the castle as old as that?"

"The square tower over there is. It was built at the same time. The other parts were erected from time to time, the last feudal building having been erected in 1525. That part of the wall across the quadrangle was breached by Roundwe[illegible] [illegible] the idiots repaired it with a different stone."

"The idiots! Do you think his grace would like to hear you speak so disrespectfully of his ancestors?"

"Oh, the duke is very much dissatisfied with many things his ancestors have done, just as I am."

"Is he so much wiser than they? Doesn't their blood flow in his veins?"

"The next time he makes a guy of himself I'll put it to him that way."

"You must be on singularly confidential terms with your master."

"My master! Why, the man can't even control himself."

"What are his especial vices?"

"If you wish me to employ the limited time at our disposal in cataloguing his vices, I will do so, but I would rather show you his castle."

"You are right. Go on."

"This building, in the very center of the inclosure, was erected during the reign of Elizabeth. It is a useless edifice, very much in the way, and should be torn down.

"That would be a pity, but if it is in the way why doesn't the present duke tear it down?"

"Indecision is one of his vices."

"The place doesn't seem well kept up. Many of the buildings have a tumbledown appearance."

"That's because the money has all gone out of the family. There is but one way for the owners of these rundown estates to repair and keep them up. That is to marry a fortune. The duke has no points to recommend him to the fair sex. Such a match would be impossible for him."

"Is he young?"

"About my age."

"And good looking?"

"No better looking than I am."

By this time they had reached the postern. She took out her purse.

"We're not allowed to take money for showing the old trap," said the man.

"The old trap! Well, tell the duke he had better go to America for a wife to help him restore his castle. I don't know but I would take the contract myself."

"Have you the means?"

"Yes, and plenty to spare."

"You stop"—

"At the King's Arms."

"I'll inform his grace of the opportunity."

"If you do, I'll deny ever having said such a thing."

"He has the same confidence in me as in his own ears."

She walked back to the King's Arms and told the rest of her party how she had been shown over the castle. She was somewhat startled during the morning to receive a note from the duke containing a proposition of marriage. His grace followed up the proposal with a call and proved to be the man who had been her guide. This did not prevent her accepting him, and social England was astonished at the announcement that the Duke of —— would marry a multimillionairess from the Pacific coast. The union proved to be a love match.

JUDGE HOLMES' VIEWS

In Accord With Administration Regarding Philippines

ACCEPTS VALIDITY OF TITLE

To the Islands as Well as the Right of United States to Hold Colonies—Contrary Opinions Can Only Be Due to His Conversion in the Future.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Some of the newspapers have discovered a mare's nest in connection with the appointment of Judge Holmes to the supreme bench and are suggesting that he may prove to be an anti-imperialist and a radical on questions of Federal taxation and the like, and by his votes overturn all that a divided supreme court has done with respect to the new national questions of the last few years, thereby damaging trade and playing havoc generally.

All who know the circumstances of Mr. Holmes' selection for this important office are aware that his general views on public issues were among the matters most carefully ascertained before the invitation was extended to him. It is possible that he may be an anti-imperialist in the sense that he does not think it wise for the United States to continue the Philippines as a colony after the Filipinos shall have been educated to govern themselves and the tutelary obligation of the United States seems no longer morally binding; but it is perfectly safe to say that he believes in the validity of the title of the United States to the archipelago, in the right of the United States to hold the islands in the colonial relation now existing, and in the right and duty of this government to continue in charge till the Filipino republic can safely be launched. In other words, he will be found to hold substantially the same views as the president himself on this and cognate subjects. If he renders opinions in defiance of these views it will be due to his conversion after ascending to the bench.

It may be laid down as a broad proposition of which the Holmes case is simply an illustrative instance, that President Roosevelt idea of the proprieties hedging about the choice of a federal judge is that, whereas, the executive should never stoop to "pack" a court for any purpose, it is eminently fitting that when vacancies occur he should choose men for them who, other things being equal, are known to be in of the government and not liable to be led into revolutionary rulings.

Incidentally a very interesting story is now told for the first time, indicating that in the decision on the income tax it was Judge Gray, and not Justice Shiras, who changed his vote. The conclusion is drawn from this that the new justice can determine the continuation or termination of the colonial policy.

Justice Shiras was accused of changing his vote on the final decision declaring the income tax unconstitutional. He has been denounced in congress and on the stump as unworthy of membership in the highest judicial tribunal in the land.

Some officials familiar with the practices of the supreme court, hold however, that Mr. Holmes could not with propriety violate the established precedent of the court that when a principle has been once decided that decision shall govern succeeding cases involving the same principle.

Sylvia Became Unmanageable

Washington, Aug. 14.—The Sylvia, one of the navy's converted gunboats, which was turned over to the naval militia of Maryland by the navy department, while going out of Hampton Roads became unmanageable and collided with the marine hospital ship Jamestown. Boat May Have Gone Down

Boston, Aug. 14.—Captain McNeil of the fisherman Lucinda I. Lowe reports that he believed a craft went down about seven miles off Cape Ann Tuesday night. He says that he saw signal lights of distress and on altering his course to bring the schooner in that vicinity he passed a white painted mast projecting from the water. The wind was so strong at the time that the schooner was under lower sails only. The lights displayed were two green, two red, one blue and then a red light,

A STRANGE MARRIAGE

[Original.]

In a little log church in the colony of Massachusetts one Sunday morning during the sixteenth century a congregation of Puritans was assembled for divine worship. The minister, Obediah Armstrong, a young man of twenty-eight, had been a captain in Cromwell's army and had led his men to battle to the music of a psalm rather than the drum, the fife or the bugle.

Suddenly the door opened, and a young girl rushed in among the worshipers with every appearance of dread excitement.

"How now, Mistress Aseneth?" said the pastor. "Why do you thus disturb our worship with your unholy interruption?"

"The Indians!" gasped the girl. "They are coming!"

The men of the congregation were about to rush for their weapons, which stood against the log walls of the church, when the pastor stopped them.

"Let there be no unseemly haste in the temple of the Lord," he said. "If what Aseneth Gwynne says is true, we may soon appear before the heavenly throne. It is not meet that we should go there after showing a cowardly haste to save our lives. Rather should we be diligent in saving our souls. Let us sing the One Hundredth Psalm."

The psalm was sung, the men setting their jaws and bellowing what was really a defiance to the savages, the women singing in trembling voices. The eye of the parson lighted as it had lighted on the eve of Marston Moor, and while he sang he looked upon the comely face and figure of the damsel who had brought the warning. When the last stanza had been sung, there was a movement in the congregation, but the pastor raised his hand.

"The doxology," he said.

At the moment there was a blood-curdling whoop without, but the holy man did not heed it, nor did his congregation flinch. The doxology gave vent to a final defiance to the red men whose arrows were now pattering against the walls of the church like the first drops of a thunder shower. When the last word had been sung, the pastor said:

"It is now meet, brethren, that I should command you in battle as I have commanded some of you who are now here. We will smite the heathen savages with their oily skins and scalplocks as we once smote the cavaliers with their essences and unholy, sensual curls. To your guns!"

Seizing the great sword which he had wielded so well in England and had brought with him to the wilds of America, he went about among his men, each at his loophole, firing every one with his own zeal, embodied in some text from Holy Writ.

The matchlocks of the Puritans withstood the inferior weapons of the savages, but the latter, seeing that they could not carry the little church by assault, made preparations for burning the building. The rear stood against a low bank, between which and the edifice was a well. The savages made a rush, getting sufficiently near to throw burning brush against the latter. It was then that the pastor ceased to exhort and, seizing a bucket, was about to open a rear door and go out for water when Aseneth Gwynne stopped him.

"That is certain death," she said. "If you die, this congregation will be butchered if it is not burned. Give me the bucket."

"I, a captain in that war which sent a king to the block, give place to a woman! Stand aside!"

There was a savage yell without, and the parson turned away. The Indians were coming to rush the building, doubtless to so engage the English that they would not be able to put out the fire. The parson threw open the door and, seizing a gun, led his men, firing as he went. Meanwhile Aseneth opened the rear door, drew a bucket of water and, going through a shower of arrows to the front, dashed it upon the burning brush that was igniting the woodwork of the church. She had no sooner done so than she fell, pierced by an arrow, but she had saved the building from the flames. The parson, having exhausted his ammunition, took his piece by the muzzle and swung it about him, braining an Indian with every blow. He was a powerful man, standing 6 feet 2 inches, and loved to strike down an enemy as he loved to preach damnation to sinners. His body bristled with arrows, none of which pierced a vital part, and at last the Indians, seized with a fear that he was a god, turned and fled. Then Obadiah Armstrong staggered back to the church and, seeing Aseneth Gwynne lying with an arrow in her breast, gently withdrew it and, raising her head, rested it upon his knees. The men, except the wounded, had gone in pursuit of the Indians, but the women poured out of the church.

"This damsel," said Obediah to those who stood about, "has saved you all from an earthly burning. Her spirit has departed and has left me desolate." His voice, which was as soft as it had been harsh, trembled. "Mayhap there may be a spark of life left, and before it leaves the body I, a man of God, authorized to join men and women in holy wedlock, answering for myself and her to the responses in the marriage ceremony, pronounce we twain man and wife. He pressed a kiss upon her brow. Aseneth opened her eyes and greeted him with a smile.

Such was the marriage of Obadiah Armstrong and Aseneth Gwynne, whose progeny are at this day numerous in the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

DEPUTIES FIRED VOLLEY

When Strikers Attempted to Climb Over Barricade

STARTING OF A WASHERY

Was a Signal For Stone Throwing and Work Had to Be Abandoned—Two Men Are Wounded and Many Arrests Are Made

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 15.—A riot occurred at the Warke washery at Duryea yesterday afternoon. Before 7 o'clock in the morning 500 men and boys collected about the place and threatened to interfere with those who wanted to go to work. The works were started up, but remained in operation only a short time. The crowd on the outside threw stones over the stockade at the deputies who were on guard inside. Several times the deputies were tempted to fire. Rather than have any trouble work was suspended for the time being.

The deputy sheriffs returned to Wilkesbarre early yesterday afternoon, reporting all quiet at the washery when they left. They had hardly reached Wilkesbarre, however, when the deputies on guard were attacked. Several men in the mob also attempted to climb over the barricade.

The deputies warned them to go back and when they did not a volley was fired, but the most of the bullets went high in the air. Harry Collins was shot through the right leg. A Lithuanian received a flesh wound and another foreigner had a narrow escape, a bullet passing through his coat.

Warrants were sworn out before the burgess charging the deputies with rioting and felonious wounding. The constables placed 25 men under arrest. They were held in $3000 bail each.

The United Mine Workers say the shooting was uncalled for and that the deputies alone are to blame.

Aid From Far Away

Cardiff, Wales, Aug. 15.—The South Wales Miners' Federation has adopted a recommendation that the federation districts contribute $50,000 to assist the striking miners in the United States on the ground that they are contending for principles of international importance.

Railway Men's Wages Advanced

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Conductors and motormen employed by the South Chicago City Railway company secured increases in wages last night and are no longer in danger of becoming involved in the prospective general street car strike. An agreement has been reached which is perfectly satisfactory to both parties.

Gold Beaters to Return

Philadelphia, Aug. 15.—The Gold Beaters' union, whose members are on strike throughout the country for an increase in wages, has decided to permit the men to return to work on Monday next in all shops that have agreed to the strikers' demands.

Warrant Out For Governor Kimball

New York, Aug. 15.—At the instance of Andrew F. Power, treasurer of the New England Manufacturers' association, a bench warrant for the arrest of Governor Kimball of Rhode Island was issued yesterday by Judge Steckler of the supreme court, alleging malicious prosecution, and $150,000 damages is claimed. Governor Kimball is at his home in Rhode Island. The action brought by Power is based upon his recent arrest on complaint of Kimball upon the charge of obtaining money on false representations.

Talked State Politics

Oyster Bay, L. I., Aug. 15.—Governor Odell was the president's guest at luncheon yesterday at Sagamore hill. In reply to a request for a statement as to his visit he replied: "I have no statement to make further than to say that I had a most pleasant talk with the president, during which we discussed a number of questions affecting the political situation in the state." He said that the candidate for lieutenant governor had not been decided upon.

Liquid Fuel on Warships

Washington, Aug. 15.—The navy department is awaiting with great interest the report of Lieutenant Winchell, who accompanied the steamer Mariposa, which has been fitted recently with appliances for burning oil fuel, on her voyage of over 7000 miles to Tahiti and return. The length of the voyage, it is thought, will furnish opportunity for a pretty thorough test of the appliances.

Cape Race Claims Another Victim

St. Johns, Aug. 15.—British steamer Delano, Captain Gray, Rotterdam for Baltimore, with iron and general freight, went ashore in a dense fog yesterday at Seal Cove, near Cape Race. The crew escaped with great difficulty. The vessel is pounding to pieces. There is no hope of having her hull.

ADAMS SENTENCED

Vermont's Long Respected Burglar Gets Nine Years In Prison

Windsor, Vt., Aug. 15.—The so-called gentleman burglar of Chester, former Representative Clarence Adams, who for upwards of 20 years had plundered mills, stores and residences in his home village undetected, was brought to the state prison here yesterday to serve a sentence of not less than nine years nor more than 10 years. On all the counts of the indictment against him the combined sentence would have been nearly 100 years. Adams was arraigned on eight counts. To the entire indictment he entered a plea of guilty.

Adams was a prominent and well-to-do citizen of Chester who had been honored on different occasions by the electors. He had been selectman and had held other town offices. The electors sent him to Montpelier to represent them in the legislature several years ago. No one suspected him of being responsible for the long series of burglaries and thefts which had time and again alarmed the citizens. A miller who had been robbed frequently finally set a spring gun in his grist mill. One night the weapon was discharged, the contents entering the body of a burglar. Adams was found to have been shot. His arrest followed, and a search of his premises revealed a vast quantity of plunder, the result of burglaries extending over a long period.

Congressmen Came to Blows

Gaffney, S. C., Aug. 15.—Two candidates for the United States senatorship came to blows at the senatorial and congressional candidates' meeting held here yesterday. Congressman Latimer made a statement which Congressman Hemphill said was not true. Latimer thereupon drew back and hit Hemphill a severe, stunning blow on the cheek. Several men jumped in between them and the driving blow sent by Hemphill at his antagonist fell short of its mark. Hemphill tried to hit Latimer over the heads of the intervening men with an umbrella, but he could not reach him. Several men then grabbed both antagonists and separated them.

Guarding Against Kidnapping

Quebec, Aug. 15.—There are no new developments in the Gaynor-Greene case, although the general impression in this city is that the United States government will soon take some other proceedings in the matter. In the meantime both Gaynor and Greene are enjoying their liberty. While on their daily walks or drives they are closely followed by a Quebec detective, who always keeps them in view so that another attempt at kidnapping would probably fail.

Caron's Decision Denounced

Montreal, Aug. 15.—Donald McMaster, lawyer for the United States government in the Gaynor-Greene case, and who engineered the kidnapping party from Quebec, severely denounces the judgment of Judge Caron and says that it is evident that the claims of the United States government were given little, if any, consideration.

Mortgage For $16,000,000 Filed

Elizabeth, N. J., Aug. 15.—There was a mortgage for $16,000,000 placed on record here yesterday. It is given by the United States Shipbuilding company, recently formed by Lewis Nixon, to the Mercantile Trust company of New York. The mortgage is to run for 30 years.

Crowds Sympathize With Schools

Brest, Aug. 15.—It took the gendarmes an hour and a half to force the barricades erected in front of the school at Plougonvelin yesterday. Numerous detachments of gendarmes are arriving at Brest to assist the commissaries in their work of closing the unauthorized schools.

REVOLUTIONISTS GAIN

Succeed In Capturing Another Venezuelan Port

PRESIDENT IS IN DANGER

Hemmed In From Three Sides at Caracas—Civil Officers at Barcelona Imprisoned by Victorious Forces, Who Are In Full Possession

Washington, Aug. 15.—Just before the navy department closed yesterday a dispatch was received from Commander Nickols of the Topeka at Porto Cabello, stating that the revolutionists were in control and that there was no danger of an attempt to retake the town by the government forces. Commander Nickols acknowledged the receipt of instructions directing him to land a force in case of necessity, but stated that the necessity for such a step had not arisen.

PRESIDENT CASTRO OF VENEZUELA.

The place called Angostora, mentioned in Commander Rodgers' dispatch from Port of Spain as in the hands of the revolutionists, is about 250 miles up the Orinoco river, and the more modern name for it is Ciudad Bolivar. General Matos, who is practically at the head of the revolution against Castro, took this town some time ago and left one of his lieutenants in charge.

According to information now in possession of the officials here, Castro is being hemmed in from three sides at Caracas. General Matos advanced from Bolivar to the northwest to a place called Orituco, about 60 miles south of Caracas. Ten days ago Castro was reported as having left the capital with a force to meet the revolutionary general, but subsequently he changed his mind and returned. More recent advices indicated that a battle was imminent on the plains immediately south of Caracas.

Early this week the revolutionists took Barcelona, to the eastward of Caracas, and now, according to this last dispatch from Commander Nickols, they have obtained control of Porto Cabello to the westward. The fact that the government had seized three of the steamers of the Orinoco company at San Felix is not a cause of concern here, as it is understood that these ships fly the Venezuelan flag and the right to impress ships for government use is well settled.

No further steps have been taken toward sending additional ships to Venezuela and no fresh instructions have been sent to the commanders of the American warships there, as the reports received from them are considered satisfactory.

At the navy department a cablegram has been received from Commander McLean reporting the arrival of the Cincinnati at Barcelona. The Marietta is at Port of Spain, Trinidad, and is subject to the orders of Commander McLean. Commander McLean's dispatch to the department was in part as follows:

Barcelona occupied by revolutionists. They have imprisoned all civil officials, and military officers are in possession of entire district. Some pillaging done, but everything now quiet. Twenty-nine business houses sacked, mostly foreign; also 15 private dwellings.

Voyaged Over 3000 Miles In Launch

Falmouth, Eng., Aug. 15.—Captain Newman and his son arrived here last night in the 38-foot kerosene launch, Abiel Abbott Low, in which they sailed from New York July 9. Captain Newman said the launch has proved herself a noble boat, but they experienced awful times since they left New York. They voyaged 3103 miles.

Colombian Revolutionary Situation

Colon, Aug. 15.—The government cruiser General Pinzon is under orders to go to Savanilla to bring reinforcements from there to the isthmus, but her sailing has been delayed owing to the fact that the cruiser's machinery is undergoing repairs. No information can be obtained concerning the situation at Agua Dulce, as there is no communication with that point. There is no explanation of the non-return of the government gunboat Boyaca, which left Panama July 29 with about 300 men on board. Nothing has been heard of the vessel since her departure.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, hut in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ If the coal strick should indirectly succeed in turning more general attention than has yet been turned on the fact that the Hub is gradually getting smokier and smokier, the cloud might even turn out to have a silver lining for our own especial benefit. The smoked herring probably gets used to the smoke, and Boaton of late years has been having something of the herring's opportunity. —Boston Budget.

☞ The Globe, like the rest of the Boston papers, fails to see much progress on the part of the police toward the capture of the mysterious assailant of young women about the Hub, but philosophically remarks that "there is some comfort in the thought that if he keeps up his foul work he will be captured sometime." Not very comforting, and likewise not very complimentary to the Boston police force, to realize that his capture depends upon his continuance of the murderous work. Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Sergeant O'Brien, who has been arrested for perjury in his testimony before the senate committee on the Philippines, is personally in an uncomfortable position. But the way for him and for the country is to welcome this trial as one of the best possible means of establishing the exact truth about the matters of which he testified. The trial, it is to be presumed, will be conducted in a manner to bring out the facts, so that if O'Brien has lied he will be punished, as he should be in such case; and if he told the truth, the fact will be made so plain that there will be no disputing it. We have no fear of the effect on the army. If this trial smirches a few officers or men, the army as a whole will not be discredited. It would be a good deal more discreditable to cover up the truth.—New Bedford Standard.

A Shaking Up.

A party from the Stacy Adams shop Brockton held an outing Thursday evening at Hough's Neck. The party left for home in a special car shortly after 11 o'clock. The car was in charge of a Brockton motorman unfamiliar with the switches in City Square and after getting his car on the main line supposed he had a clear track.

The switch at the corner of Hancock and Temple streets, however, was set for East Weymouth line and when he reached it his car went around the curve with a lurch giving the party a shaking up.

The only person thrown out was Richard Harding, who had his right knee wrenched. On the front seat was Mrs. J. E. Packer who was thrown to the platform and her husband fell against her. Her injuries consisted of a wrenching of her right shoulder. The two injured people were attended by Dr. C. W. Garey and then removed to their homes.

—Before long the American belles will be boasting of possessing diamonds from the crown worn by Queen Alexandra last Saturday at the coronation. It has been decided to sell the gems as the crown will not be used again and is too valuable to keep, the diamonds being worth several hundred thousand pounds. The stones have been given to the jewelers to sell, each with a guarantee it was used in the queen's crown.

The Fore River Works.

The keel for the second of the car floats being built at Fore River for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has been laid and the first frames are already up. The other float is now well under way. Two gravity railroad tracks have been laid from the ship tool shop to the floats for carrying construction material.

It is expected that the seven master, Thomas W. Lawson will leave the Fore River fitting out basin, ready for sea about September 1. The first coat of white paint has been laid over the gray that covered her hull when she was launched, and the steel lower-masts have been painted a light buff color. The bending of her twenty-five big sails will be the last work done on her before she is turned over to her owner.

The constantly increasing volume of work at Fore River has put such heavy demands on the ship tool shop that more room is required and the company is about to build a separate angle-smith's shop, which will take some of the blacksmith work out of the present structure.

A number of boilers to be put into the battleship Rhode Island and New Jersey, which are building at Fore River, has been cut in halves by increasing their size. Instead of twenty-four boilers 17 x 14 x 12, each of the big vessels will have twelve boilers 19 x 14 x 12. The first tier of the battleship's floor beams are being raised now and the speed of the work has been increaed by moving a cutting, punching and rolling machine for the ship tool shop to the head of the ship house where material can be handled practically at the workmen's elbow. The twenty ton stem casting for the Rhode Island is being finished just under where the ship's bow will rest.

A section of track has already been laid on the concrete dock of the Fore River fitting out basin and before long the gantry crane will be installed. A large force of men is busy on the concrete work and the completion of the basin is in sight now.

Outwardly the cruiser Des Moines looks ready for launching as she rests on her stocks on the Fore River beach. Her interior is a busy place nowadays, however, for her six big boilers are to be set in place before she is put overboard. The work of installing them has begun, a derrick pole being used to raise and lower them. The yard officials are already making preparations for the construction of the launching ways.

Outing at Highland Park.

The Seventh grand outing of the Old Stoughton Musical Society will be held at Highland Park, Tuesday, Aug. 26th, beginning at 10.30 A. M., and continuing until the close of the gates at night. Members should remember that the outing in the morning is the time to see old friends and offer congratulations. At 12 noon dinner will be served at the cafe. At 1, the chorus will sing the old tunes, under the direction of Choristers Mannand Faunce, and President Jones will lead the orchestra. At 3 and 7.30 P.M., stage entertainments will be given.

This outing of the old society will be most enjoyable, if the weather is pleasant. Those in the past have been pleasant remembrances, and hundreds of people are waiting to go again.

—The demand for homeopathic physicians throughout the United States far exceeds the supply. Thousands of small cities, towns and villages are unable to secure the advantages afforded by the homeopathic system of medical practice. Demands for graduates of this school of medicine are constantly reaching the twenty homeopathic medical colleges.

Humors

They take possession of the body, and are Lords of Misrule.

They are attended by pimples, boils, the itching tetter, salt rheum, and other cutaneous eruptions; by feelings of weakness, languor, general debility and what not.

They cause more suffering than anything else.

Health, Strength, Peace and Pleasure require their expulsion, and this is positively effected, according to thousands of grateful testimonials, by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Which radically and permanently drives them out and builds up the whole system.

FUN AHEAD.

Two Prominent Business Men to Have a Running Race.

There is fun ahead for lovers of good sport, unless Charles H. Brooks or Robert Johnson back out. Both men weigh upwards of 200 and considerable rivalry exists between them as to who owns the fastest horse and who runs the fastest. It is said that just to make the matter interesting the winners will pocket $50 and all the gate receipts. The distance will probably be 100 yards and according to present plans the race will be run off next Tuesday at early candle light, and on a street not many miles distant from City Square. Report also has it that speculators have already secured options on property bordering on the course and that observation stands will be erected.

Both men have been in active training for several days and so much Witch Hazel has been used to rub the men down after training, that the price is to be advanced. Both men are in the hands of good trainers, Jack Foley is looking after Bob Johnson. Foley does not profess to know much about running races but he is well posted on horse flesh and that is enough.

Charlie Brooks is in the hands of Jimmie Magann another authority on horse flesh. He also does not know much about running races so they are quits. The referee and time keeper have not been selected as yet, but anybody can fill these positions. What is bothering them most is to who shall hold the stakes. There are numerous applicants for this office but the only thing that now stands in the way of selecting a well known turf man is that the principal are afraid that he can run faster than they can and some difficulty would be had in overtaking him after the race. The contemplated race has been under way for some time but it was not until this morning that the ground was shaken out of the underground telephone system and the particulars allowed to escape.

ELLA E. BAILEY.

Arrest of Alleged Treasurer of Betts Company.

Miss Ella E. Bailey who it is alleged was connected with Betts and Fisher as treasurer of the Cobb Investment Co. has been arrested. It is supposed that she was the agent through whose hands the money passed. Her bail has been fixed as $3000 but up to this morning that had not been obtained and she is languishing in Charles street jail. The hearing on the cases will be held Sept. 5.

Base Ball.

The Atlantics took a trip to New Downer Landing Thursday to attend picnic of the Sacred Heart church, and incidently run up against a team composed of the cream of South and West Quincy ball teams, and were defeated by the small margin of one run; the score being 12 to 11 in favor of the Quincy club.

The result was a surprise to the most sanguine followers of the Atlantics, as the Quincy team are all professional players, whereas the Atlantics are composed of young amatuers, averaging eighteen and nineteen years of age.

The features of the game was the work of Atlantics young pitcher, Doyle. He struck out ten of the heavy hitters of the Quincy team, including Tate of West Quincy and Mullane and Dunn of South Quincy. The batting of Edwards, Cunniff, Doyle and Kohler; the first base work of Cunniff; the catching of Kohler, the fifteen-year-old catcher of the Atlantic team. The features of Quincy's work was the batting of Duffy of the West Quincys

Question of Money.

The recovery of Wilbur Clark, who has been missing since June 17, and for whom an unsuccessful search has been made, is now said to be only a question of time and money. It is reported that letters have been coming to Mr. Clark, hinting that the payment of a certain amount of money would result in the return of the boy. The sum named is said to be $5,000.

—A curious clock is described as having been recently put into commission in a small Western town. The machinery, which is nothing but a face, hands and lever, is connected with a geyser, which shoots a column of hot water every thirty-eight seconds. This spouting never varies to the tenth of a second. Every time the water spouts up it strikes the lever and moves the hands forward thirty-eight seconds.

—Prince Henry of Prussia's fortieth birthday was observed Thursday night by the German residents of Boston, at Casino hall, Shawmut avenue.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Wright was fined $20 for breaking window glass at Weymouth.

The continued case of George W. Scott of Weymouth for larceny was called, and he was sent to the Massachusetts Reformatory.

The present summer has been a very good one for Quincy merchants, the cool weather bringing out many shoppers. The prospect is good for a brisk fall trade especially in useful commodities.

The big burdocks which edge the sidewalk on the Nightingal estate, Temple street, should be uprooted. They are a nuisance and will be more so when the burs get drier and stick to clothing and the like.

It is hoped every one in any way interested in Sloyd, and the work done by the boys during their summer vacation, will feel he or she has an invitation to the exhibit this evening, at the Adams school and be present.

The summer is fast going and already many are beginning to think of returning home. September is found to be a pleasant month but is not as popular with vacationists because of the short days, damp evenings and the early opening of the school.

Quincy Firm Successful.

The County Commissioners of St. Joseph County, Indiana have awarded the contract for the Soldiers' monument to be erected at South Bend, Ind., to McDonnell & Sons of this city and Barre, Vt. The firm's design secured the first prize of Five Hundred dollars several months ago, and although they were underbid on the general contract amounting to about twenty-five thousand dollars, they were successful in securing the same, the Commissioners having more confidence in their ability to fulfil their wishes.

The firm last month also secured the order for the pedestal for the large Pingree memorial at Detroit, Mich., which will cost twelve thousand dollars, and the Lautz mausoleum for Buffalo, N. Y., which will be an exact reproduction of the Nika Apertos at Athens, measuring thirty-one feet by seventeen feet on the ground.

At their local plant they have underway for various parts of the country some of the largest and finest monumental work cut in Quincy for some years, among which may be mentioned a twelve foot base all polished sarcophagus of extra dark Quincy; a nine foot square all polished base memorial which will be surmounted by a seven foot granite figure; an elaborate cottage monument with a canopy top, eight feet square and twenty-five feet high, besides several large sarcophagus monuments with bases from eight to ten feet in length and an all polished cross job, cross twelve feet in height and standing on two large bases.

The firm undobtedly have on their books as much monumental and mausoleum work, especially heavy memorials, as any monumental firm in the country.

Was Exhausted.

A horse, owned by William Bassett, attached to an open wagon, and driven by a young man, came down Elm street this noon and when near the corner of Wsshington street stumbled and fell. Directly behind this team was one of Richard & Sons grain wagons and before the driver of this team could stop his horse he ran into the first team pushing the fallen horse quite a distance.

Dr. Henderson who was near examined the animal and said that he must have fallen from exhaustion. He was old and his teeth were such that he could not eat his feed and that the animal should be killed.

Arrangements for the Annual Illumination.

A meeting of the several committees on the carnival and illumination next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, meet Thursday evening.

Gratifying reports were received, especially from the committee on collections, who reported that $300 had already been collected and fully $600 more had been pledged. The full program has not been decided upon as yet but will be at a meeting next Sunday.

It has been determined, however, that Wednesday shall be children's day, and Alex. E. Nash will furnish fifty gallons of ice cream for the children. There will also be a parade one day, sports of all kinds, and band concerts afternoon and evening.

The season at this popular resort is now at its best. A cottage can not be hired for love or money. Everything is let and occupied and will be until after the first of September, when residents, especially those who have children of school age, will begin moving back to their winter homes. With the excellent street car service and free transfers this year, there have been an unusual number of visitors and the result is that on pleasant days and Sundays the beach is lined with people.

What the residents want most just at the present time is an offal wagon to visit the beach and take away the multitude of tin cans and other rubbish that accumulates. Canned goods are used a great deal at the beach and consequently quite a crop of cans could be collected every week. As it is now, there is no public dump, and everybody has to find a dump of their own. Some take their collection and dump it on the shore, hoping for the tide to take it away, but it does not, and the smell at times is anything but pleasant.

Then there are others who wait until after dark, when they dump their load on some neighbors: lawn, and go off and leave it there. It is no uncommon thing to be aroused in the middle of the night by the rattle of cans. You hastily go to the window, but see nothing until morning, when you find a load of cans and rubbish on your lot.

There were two accidents Wednesday which furnished quite a little excitement. The first took place in the lunch wagon on Sea street. Joseph Lee was heating some water over an oil stove in a closed can. When the water made steam the pressure burst the can throwing the hot water and steam into Lee's face. His face, arms and hands were quite badly burned. He was taken to the City Hospital where his burns were dressed.

The second accident was later in the day and happened to James, the young son of William Hanrahan of the Manet market. The boy was riding on a team when he lost his balance and fell out breaking his arm.

James E. Cavanagh has been appointed wharfinger at the steamboat wharf.

Mrs. Rose Downey of Hyde Park and family are in the Mascot Cottage on Bay View avenue.

Large crowds visit the beach every day especially on Sunday.

A lawn party was held on Crosby street Wednesday evening the object being to raise funds for the coming carnival. There was a large crowd present and a pleasant time was enjoyed.

George H. Schaffner and family of Forest Hills are in the Little Hillstrom Cottage on Darrow street.

William Day and family of Charlestown are in the Bennie cottage on Winthrop street.

Martin Troy and family of Belmont are in the Hillstrom cottage.

Ralph M. Cole and family of West Roxbury are in the Atwood cottage on Parkhurst street.

Samuel A. Bell and family of South Boston are in the Park cottage on Centre road.

Winslow Nash, who has been in California for a year or more, has returned and is located at Garbarino's on Sea street.

—Vermont farmers have been visited by potatoe blight. In many cases whole fields have been effected causing a great loss to the farmers. Those who used the preventative recommended by the State Board of Agriculture report it to be successful and are congratulating themselves on their foresight.

—The decision that holy water be imported free of duty, was handed down Wednesday by the United States General Appraisers. A tax of twenty-four cents a gallon was imposed on a a consignment sent over last fall from Lourdes, France, which was protested by the importer. The board decided he must pay, but in the future holy water will not be subject to a tax.

TRUSTS THE CHIEF ISSUE

Gaston Announces Candidacy For Massachusetts Governorship

Boston, Aug. 15.—William A. Gaston, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of Massachusetts, issued a statement last night of his position on matters which may be of issue in the campaign. He desired to have it known, he said, that he is entirely free from any obligations to private interests of any nature.

Mr. Gaston conceives the greatest issue of the year to be that of the control of trusts, and he declares that an honest enforcement of the present laws against trusts is not possible by the Republican party. The duties on articles controlled by trusts, in his opinion, should be abolished.

He believes in a general reform of the tariff schedule, but the revision should provide for the free admission of raw materials. He is opposed to the policy of imperialism and militarism of the Republican administration as being contrary to the spirit of the constitution. He believes the state tax laws ought to be revised; that there should be closer trade relations with Canada and that we should have a wider measure of home rule for cities. He believes in the enactment of just and equitable laws for the benefit of labor.

The governor of Massachusetts, he thinks, should have the absolute power of removal of executive officers. He favors the abolition of the governor's council and of all unnecessary and useless commissions. He says that if he is nominated for governor he will do everything in his power to advance the interests of the Democratic party.

Bryan Again Says No

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 15.—W. J. Bryan has written a letter to the editor of the New Orleans Times-Democrat in answer to the question whether he will be candidate for president in the next campaign. Mr. Bryan says in part: "I shall not be a candidate for the presidency in the next campaign and. I may add I have no choice beyond the desire to see some one nominated who was loyal, not only to the ticket, but to the platform in 1896 and 1900, and who, if elected, could be trusted to stand by the people in the struggle against organized wealth. While no one can look very far ahead or foresee the contingencies that may arise I have no plans looking to a renomination at any future time."

Text Book "Out of Print"

Washington, Aug. 15.—The Republican campaign textbook is temporarily "out of print," according to the statements made at the Republican congressional headquarters in this city, to explain the fact that the book is not now procurable. The true reason for its withdrawal from circulation is said to be that the president considered that the attitude of the Republican party on Cuban reciprocity, as stated in the book, was entirely too negative and did not forcibly enough express the sentiment of the majority in the two houses of congress. He also found fault with the treatment of the tariff question. Accordingly the textbook has been withdrawn for revision.

Still Squabbling

Tromsoe, Aug. 15.—The American consul at Bergen, Mr. Nelson, has suggested that the British vice consul here endeavor to settle the differences between Evelyn Baldwin, the Arctic explorer, and Captain Johansson of the America. Johansson will not accept the assistance to this end from the British vice consul at Tromsoe, who is the owner of the Baldwin-Zeigler expedition ship Frithjof, and who, for this reason, he does not consider to be impartial. Johansson urges that the secretary of the American consulate at Bergen be sent here to examine witnesses in the dispute between himself and Baldwin.

New Chancellor of Pythians

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—Tracey B. Bangs of Grand Forks, N. D., for the past two years supreme vice chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, was exalted yesterday to the supreme chancellorship by the unanimous vote of the supreme lodge. The 26 years of service of John W. Thompson of Washington as outside guard was rewarded by re-election.

Suspected of Poisoning Husband

Woodstock, N. B., Aug. 15.—Mrs. George Marsten was arrested yesterday on the strength of verdict given by a coroner's jury. The jury inquired into the suspicious death of her husband and their finding was that death was due to strychnine administered by a member or members of his family. Mrs. Marsten was admitted to bail in $4000.

Street Fairs and Carnivals Tabooed

Salt Lake, Aug. 15.—Street fairs or carnivals held under the auspices of Elk lodges were absolutely prohibited by the grand lodge of the order yesterday. The new law will not go into effect until Jan. 1, as many lodges in different parts of the country have already made plans for the holding of such fairs before that date.

Lombardo Out of the Way

Rome, Aug. 15.—Lombardo, the most notorious Italian brigand after Mussolino, was surrounded by Italian troops on Mount Aspromonte, in the province of Reggio, and killed after a serious encounter.

A SACRED TRUST

[Original.]

"A man who will not respect a brother officer in his domestic relations," said Lieutenant Pickering of the United States artillery, "deserves to be cut."

"Pickering, when you are thrown exclusively into the society of your friend's wife, look out for your honor."

A bugle call sounded, and Lieutenants Pickering and Frogmore arose and started for the parade ground.

A year later, the two men having meanwhile served at different forts, Frogmore came out of a railroad car that was just about to leave when he met Pickering getting in.

"Hello, Pickering."

"Hello, Frogmore."

"Going east?"

"Yes."

"Any objection to taking care of—a lady?"

"Not the least. A relation of yours?"

"Yes. Get in, put down your traps, and I'll introduce you."

Pickering stowed away his belongings, then was introduced.

"Nancy, this is one of my best friends, Mr. Pickering of the artillery corps. Pick, old boy, this is my wife. I'm going to intrust her to your charge. Don't let her get away with you."

Pickering looked astonished, while the lady greeted him with a pair of merry eyes and a smile flanked by dimples.

"Why, Frog, I didn't know you were married."

"Secret. Old man ready to shoot me on sight. You're the only living being who knows it. Seriously, old fellow, I know you'll be good to her. Take care of yourself. Goodby, Nan." And, kissing the lady affectionately, he hurried from the car.

What passed between Pickering and Nancy Frogmore was a secret which Pickering at least kept secret. He certainly did not run away with his brother officer's wife. Nevertheless not long after this journey he was horrified to receive an order to report at Fort ——, his horror coming from the fact that Frogmore was on duty at the same fort. Pickering used every influence to secure a change of the order, but failed. He was obliged to go to Fort —— and meet his old friend Frogmore and, what was as embarrassing, Frogmore's wife. He was carrying a gripsack across the parade when whom should he meet but Frogmore himself.

"Old man," said the latter, grasping his hand warmly, "I'm glad to see you. Of course you're hungry. Don't go to the mess for dinner. Come to my quarters. Nan is there. She'll be delighted to see you."

"But I'm black with engine dust," said Pickering, with a scared look.

"Never mind that. I'll give you a place to fix up in. Come along. We dine in ten minutes."

The two went to Frogmore's quarters, where, after Pickering had removed the outer coating of dust, they went down to the dining room. Nancy Frogmore advanced cordially, offering Pickering her hand, which the latter took and, after shaking it nervously, dropped all of a sudden. Nancy blushed a little, but Pickering was surprised, after all that had occurred, that she showed no well defined qualms of conscience. The three sat down to dinner, and the Frogmores were so hospitable, so jolly, that Pickering would have forgotten his intentional though not consummated injury to the head of the house had not Frogmore's friendliness and trustfulness overpowered him with shame. However, he was getting on pretty well when suddenly Frogmore blurted:

"I say, Pick, have you kept your conscience clear with brother officers' wives?"

Pickering looked as though he had received a bullet in his heart.

"Now, Bob"— began the lady.

"Don't Bob me. I propose to have the thing out right here. Pick, confiding in your honor, I left Nancy in your charge for a journey. Before it was concluded you consented to run away with her."

"Bob, you promised me"—

"Now, I want you to understand that a breach of honor like this would draw down on you a cut from the whole army. Either you give me satisfaction or I let the secret out to this garrison."

"Don't mind what he says, Mr. Pickering," said Nancy Frogmore, blushing like the red stripes of the colors that could be seen from the window.

"It was—confound it, it was all a joke!" cried Pickering in desperation.

"Joke? Do you call it a joke to make an arrangement with a brother officer's wife to run away with her?"

"I did it all myself!" cried the lady.

"Not at all," said Pickering. "It was my fault."

"Never mind whose fault it was!" cried Frogmore. "Are you ready to give me satisfaction?"

"Yes, I am," said Pickering, goaded to desperation.

"All right. Parker, bring that thing in."

"Not here?" cried Pickering, aghast.

"Yes, here."

The servant hurried out and returned with a quart of champagne on ice. Pickering was by this time under the influence of so many conflicting emotions that he was only conscious of a trouble in which pistols were prominent when he was startled by a terrific pop, like a pistol, and a gurgling effervescent sound which he likened to flowing blood. Looking down beside him, his glass was frothing with wine.

"Forgive me, Pick," said Frogmore, raising his glass. "Nancy is not my wife. She's my sister. I put up a job on you, and Nan played her part admirably. Here's to you both."

"Then I'll run away with her after all," said Pickering.

At any rate, he married her.

Quick Justice at Ascot.

Not only the horses, but the powers of the law, says the London Chronicle, are swift at Ascot, for the course has a special tribunal for the punishment of evildoers. No sooner is the pickpocket, welsher or ticket snatcher arrested than he is standing in a little room in the royal stand, where the evidence is heard and the verdict and sentence pronounced before the offender fully realizes that he is caught. Nowhere else does punishment so swiftly follow crime as at this court, which is decreed by clause 31 of the indictable offenses act of 1848.

This race course tribunal arose curiously in the eighteenth century from an assault upon a royal personage. In his indignation at the impossibility of instant punishment of the assailant he ordered that in future a magistrate should always attend the royal race meeting. This has ever since been done, and by the above mentioned act the chief magistrate of Bow street was constituted ex officio a justice of the peace of the county of Berks in order to enable him to hold this court at Ascot.

Encourage the Happiness Habit.

The art of laughter should surely be cultivated—in fact, all and everything that leads to joy. The wish to be happy, the love of gladness and beauty, is, I am sure, a thing to be desired. Consequently it is worth a little cultivation. Play is as essential a factor in men's lives as work. Philosophers tell us that no man lives his own life until he plays. Work comes from the exigencies of life, from the "musts" of this world, which often push a man along very different paths from those he would choose to travel by from inclination or capacity. Play is, however, his recreation, and here at his leisure time comes out his whole soul, his power of and choice of play, his greater or lesser necessity for it, to recuperate mind and body from the strain of daily work.—Chaperone.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

FAIR AND WIFE KILLED

Were Speeding Automobile In a French Town

MACHINE STRUCK A TREE

Both Met Instant Death, While Their Chauffeur Was Badly Hurt—Young Millionaire Was an Enthusiast on Subject of Automobiles

Paris, Aug. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fair, Americans, who were related to Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., (Miss Virginia Fair), were killed yesterday at St. Aguilin. Mr. Fair himself himself was driving his automobile at a high rate of speed when one of the pneumatic tires burst. The machine swerved and collided with a tree with a terrible crash. Mr. and Mrs. Fair were killed outright and their chauffeur was badly injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Fair had been staying at Trouville during racing week. They had a very fast 45 horse-power automobile which attracted considerable attention, and with which they were highly pleased. Mr. Fair had been from Trouville to Paris and back again in one day on the machine.

The Fairs have been living lately in Paris at the Hotel Ritz, and kept their apartments there while they were staying at Trouville. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., who was Mr. Fair's sister, returned from Trouville Sunday and sailed for New York Wednesday.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—Charles Fair has been enthusiastic about automobiles ever since the machines came into use abroad. He was one of the first to bring automobiles to this coast and he owned three or four of them. He had what was perhaps the largest and swiftest automobile in California. It was a huge French racing machine and capable, it is said, of going at a speed of 70 miles an hour. It had a 40 horsepower engine. He imported it from France and with it imported a chauffeur. Fair was interested also in yachting and owned the steam yacht Lucero.

Charles Fair and his wife left San Francisco for Europe on May 30 last to stay two or three months.

Charles Fair was the third of the four children of the late Mr. and Mrs. James G. Fair. Teresa, who is now the wife of Hermann Oelrichs, is the eldest of the heirs. Then came James G. J., who died about 10 years ago. Charles was the third and the youngest was Virginia, the wife of W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

In the spring of 1894 Charles married Maude Nelson. The ceremony took place in Oakland and it was almost a secret one. Charles Fair was one of the three heirs to an immense estate, estimated in value at between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000.

When informed of the tragic end of his brother-in-law, and his wife, Hermann Oelrichs said: "I am terribly shocked, but not surprised. I said only a few days ago that if Charles persisted in carrying on his experiments along this line the result would be fatal sooner or later. I have warned him repeatedly but he always laughed and said there was no danger."

Charles Fair was born in Virginia City, Nev., on April 11, 1867. He brought the first automobile across the continent to this city. He was also greatly interested in photography and constructed one of the largest cameras ever built in the United States.

Mr. Fair's lawyer, Mr. Haggerty, says the death of Charles Fair will not upset the present arrangements for the management of the Fair estate. The property is now managed by Hermann Oelrichs. There is much speculation as to what will become of Charles Fair's share of the estate. On this point Mr. Haggerty says: "Under the law of California, when a couple are victims of a common calamity and both are between 16 and 70 years of age and there is no evidence as to which died first, the man is presumed to have lived the longer. In such a case all the property would go to Mr. Fair's relatives. On the other hand, if there is evidence to show that Mrs. Fair lived longer than her husband, her relatives in the east would inherit the property involved."

So little is known here of Mrs. Fair's relatives that Mr. Haggerty says he does not know where her heirs reside. It is supposed, however, that they live in New Jersey.

The request is made in the form of a petition signed by President Haines of the Biddeford Women's Christian Temperance Union and 15 members of that body. The petition states that in the city there are in open and defiant operation many barrooms fitted up as gorgeously as in any large license city in other states; that there are many saloons where men, women and children can be seen walking in and rolling out from early morning till late at night, and where the odor of ale and lager offends as much as in the shadow of a brewery. The petition further says that boys and girls drink over the bar themselves; that the city streets are filled with drunken men, women and children to such an extent that the name of the municipality has become a byword. Chairman Banks of the police commission returned the petition to Mrs. Haines without comment.

I stand amid the roar
Of a surf-tormented shore,
And I hold within my hand
Grains of the golden sand.
How few! yet how they creep
Through my fingers to the deep,
While I weep, while I weep!
O God! can I not grasp
Them with a greater clasp?
O God! can I not save
One from the pitiless wave?
Is all that we see or seem
But a dream within a dream?

$50,000 DAMAGES.

Henry H. Faxon Defendant in Suit for that Amount.

Plaintiff is C. L. Prescott, City Scavenger.

Slander and Libel are Alleged—Faxon Ready to Fight.

Henry H. Faxon is the defendant in a suit for $50,000 for slander and libel, and his property has been attached for that amount. The plaintiff in the suit is Charles L. Prescott the city scavenger.

Mr. Faxon has been hot after the Board of Health and City Scavenger ever since he was refused a license to act as scavenger of his own property. The refusal of the Board of Health to grant him the desired privilege compelled him to employ Prescott to do his work and he has maintained this has been a great hardship as Prescott was not attending to his business in a satisfactory manner and would not be able to do so.

Mr. Faxon has kept the Board of Health and Scavenger constantly before the public, in open letters to the press concerning the way the sewage matter was disposed of by the city scavenger, and many citizens have been given a ride in Mr. Faxon's buggy to the dumping grounds on South street.

Mr. Prescott in an interview denies having anything to do with the revoking of Mr. Faxon's license, as it was not in his province to do so, and that he should fight it out with the Board of Health and not with him. Mr. Prescott further said that he had stood Mr. Faxon's abuse long enough. He had made no replies to his attacks although his business had been injured thereby, but he thought the matter had gone far enough.

Mr. Prescott defines his position thusly:

"It may be a matter of interest to the citizens of Quincy, owing to the present coadition of affairs between Henry H. Faxon and myself, to know why I have found it necessary to bring suit against Mr. Faxon for slander and libel. I have been put to great trouble, inconvenience and annoyance for some months by his persistency in endeavoring to persuade the citizens of Quincy that my position in the scavenger department has not been what it should be.

"It has been of great damage to my business in more than one way, and also his remarks to different people in Quincy have injured me considerably in reputation and otherwise. I believe under the circumstances, that I am more than justified in bringing this suit against him, and I have brought suit and made an attachment of $50,000. I am doing this after consulting my attorney in the matter very carefully and he believes that I am completely justified in bringing this action.

"I am willing to leave this matter to the citizens of Quincy, who, in their good judgment, will see the justice of the suit, and I think they will uphold me in the action I have taken."

Mr. Faxon, when seen, said: "I have stood all kinds of abuse and vilipication from the present administration. Ever since it came into power I have been persecuted. Now if they want to continue they will find me ready to fight. I am ready for whatever may come and will make a good defence when the case comes to trial.

Sloyd Exhibit.

An exhibition of the work done by the boys of the summer Sloyd school of the Home Sciene Association, was held last evening at the Adams school building. The large number who availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect the work, not only served to encourage the boys, but showed that the public are interested in the work of the Home Science Association.

James M. Nowland is the instructor in this work, and this year he has had five classes of fifteen each, making seventy-five in all, and no pupil has had more than twenty-seven hours instruction, yet with that time they have been able to turn out some good work. The boys were all present last evening with the articles they had made, and some of them showed that the boys had made rapid advancement and had profited by their instructions. Some were not quite up to par, yet as a whole the work was well done.

Summer Kindergartens Closed.

The summer kindergarten schools under the auspices of the Quincy Home Science association, closed Friday afternoon after a term of six weeks. Successful exhibitions of the work done by the little children were held at the Adams, John Hancock and Gridley Bryant schools. There was a large attendance at each school of parents and friends.

The little ones went through their songs and exercises in a way to surprise the visitors. It hardly seemed possible they could be so well trained in six weeks and they certainly reflect great credit on the teachers and also on the parents who have been so interested in the work, sending the children regularly each day and themselves attending the mothers' meetings when practical talks have been given as aids to the work.

Following the exercises lemorade and crackers were served.

Granite Men's Outing.

The Granite Manufacturers associa- are holding its annual summer outing today at Crescent Park, R. I., and businees in the granite industry for today is practically suspended. The party left Quincy on one of the early trains for Boston, from which point they left at 9.10 for the Park. The program for the day's outing includes a shore dinner and the usual sports.

—Jerry Logan, an aged negro of Knoxville, Tenn., an ex-slave, born of slave parents, has recently sold himself for $1000. He agrees to serve and obey his master until his death. The sale was the result of debts which worried Logan because he had not the money to pay with. He will wipe out the debt by the sale of himself, and it is to be hoped will be contented the rest of his life.

JUDGMENT AND REASON

Both Bad In Deciding the Case of Greene and Gaynor

CRITICISM BY COUNSEL

Who Conducted the Case For the United States—Points Out Facts Underlying Administration of Justice Which Were Not Considered

Montreal, Aug. 16.—"In my opinion, the judgment is bad, and the reasons in support of it worse. Besides, the judgment is one made without an opportunity for counsel being heard upon the whole case," said Donald Macmaster, king's counsel, senior counsel in Canada for the United States government, commenting upon the decision of Justice Caron in the Gaynor-Greene extradition case. He continued:

"The only things before the judge were motions to quash. A proposal was made by the defence that the judge should take charge of the case as an extradition commissioner, but it was arranged, with the assent of the judge, that the motions should first be disposed of. There was no motion on behalf of the prisoners for their discharge, which is the usual proceeding in such cases. Had such a motion been made the counsel for the prosecution would have had a hearing on the merits of the case.

The reason given, that the warrant does not give the date of the crime, is a most extraordinary one. The warrant is in the words prescribed by the statute, and neither the statute nor the express provisions of the extradition act, section 8, demand that the date be included in the warrant. The complaint made by Marion Erwin, United States attorney, contained the date of the commission of the crime, and the complaint was before the judge. The words of a Canadian statute should be sufficient for a Canadian judge."

Mr. Macmaster went on to show that the date of the crime being some time not farther back than 1897 did not make the crime come less under the treaty, which in 1901 had brought false pretences under the extraditable offenses, because it is provided in the treaty of 1901 that section 11, referring to that crime, is made a portion of the original treaty in 1889. But even supposing that the date were required in the warrant of arrest, Mr. Macmaster states positively that once the prisoners are brought before a judge of justice, the date of the warrant is absolutely immaterial. In support of that view, he quotes several cases decided in the English courts and several decisions of the Canadian courts supporting his opinion. The other pretention of Justice Caron, that there was an absence of date in the demand or order made by Justice Lafontaine, Mr. Macmaster pronounces equally groundless, and quotes a mass of authorities in support of his position, all tending to prove that a commitment for safe custody may be in general terms.

"As to the offence charged being conspiracy, and not extraditable offense of participation in the crimes of embezzlement, fraud by an agent, and the obtaining of money by false pretences," continues Mr. Macmaster, "anyone who examines the information and complaint will see that the participation in taking the active part of the appropriation and division of the spoils, to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars, is clearly set forth, and these great crimes are none the less extradition crimes, because they were preceded by a criminal design to accomplish them. A Canadian judge would be bound to take cognizance that the like crimes committed in Canada would be in violation of Canadian laws.

"On the whole, I am unable to conceive how this judgment, under such circumstances, could be rendered. The authorities submitted on behalf of the United States government do not appear to have been considered. Neither does the judgment of Justice Andrews either ignored, or [illegible] aside. That judgment wa[illegible] Justice Caron was absolute[illegible] its terms upon every princip[illegible] ing the administration of ju[illegible] prisoners had a right to appeal from Justice Andrews' decision to the court of king's bench. They did not do so, but applied to a judge of co-ordinate jurisdiction, who reverses Justice Andrews' decision, and discharges the prisoners without any motion to that effect."

Senator Dandurand, who was associated with Mr. Macmaster in the case, made a written statement altogether as strong as that of his colleague. He qualifies the decision as "a regrettable failure of justice, due to the erroneous views of one judge—and one judge only—of the Canadian judiciary." He goes on to say that knowing the views expressed by Justice Caron in the John C. Eno case, he feared the result all along.

Spiritualist Leader Dead

Middletown, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Luther R. Marsh, widely noted as a spiritualist, died at his home here yesterday, aged 89. Mr. Marsh, up to a few weeks ago, was actively engaged in literary work and, just before his last illness, had filled several pulpits. It is believed the end was hastened by overwork.

Only Deck Gear Saved

St. Johns, Aug. 16.—The salvage steamers which went to the aid of the British steamer Delano, which ran ashore at Seal Cove, report the hull of the Delano to be under water and that practically nothing was saved from the vessel except her deck gear.

The Yoho Region.

The Yoho region in British Columbia is of a more majestic beauty even than California's Yosemite.

The Sapphire.

Hebrew tradition says that the tablets of Moses were of sapphire. In Hebrew the word "sappir" means the most beautiful. It symbolizes loyalty, justice, beauty and nobility.

Zululand Nights.

In Zululand, when the moon is at the full, objects are visible at a distance of seven miles. By starlight one can read with ease.

Bay Rum.

Nine-tenths of the stuff used as bay rum in New York and other places is not bay rum at all, but a mixture of the essential oil of bay with common rum or alcohol.

Tasmania.

Tasmania is said to be the soberest of the Australian colonies.

The Broad Arrow.

In England the broad arrow is the recognized symbol with which the government property, including army wagons, mules, provision bags and the garments of convicts, is regularly stamped.

Total Loss by Fire.

There is a "total loss" of a building by fire, holds the court of appeals of Kentucky, when the building as such has been so injured as to destroy its identity as a building, though much or any quantity of the material originally composing it is not consumed.

Raised by Earthquakes.

The bed of the Black sea and that of the Caspian have been raised by repeated earthquakes, and channels which were formerly navigable are no longer so.

The Era of Constantinople.

The "era of Constantinople," extensively adopted in the Greek empire, like several others, began with the foundation of the world, which it fixed at the year B. C. 5508. This era was generally followed by the adherents of the Greek church and prevailed in Russia until the reign of Peter the Great.

The Table Knife.

The knife, though very old, had not come into common use as a table utensil in the tenth century.

Bombast.

Bombast once signified the cotton that was employed to stuff garments, particularly the enormous trunk hose worn in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

The Ancient Roman Way.

Among the ancient Romans all articles of food were cut into small pieces before being carried to the table. For cutting meat persons of rank kept a carver, designated the scissors or carptor, who had the only knife placed on the table.

Baby Giraffes.

A newly born giraffe stands high immediately after birth. He then measures six feet from his hoof to the top of his head.

Jack Robinson.

"Before you can say Jack Robinson" arose from the behavior of one John Robinson. He was a fool. He was in such a hurry when he called on his friends that he would be off before he had well knocked at the door.

Frog's Skin.

A piece of frog's skin not larger in diameter than the rubber tip on your lead pencil has more pores in it than there are meshes in the mosquito netting on your screen door.

The Word "Titter."

In its original use the word "titter" meant courtship.

Oranges.

The first orange tree known to grow in Europe was in a monastery garden at Rome. The fruit was called the Madian apple. The trees first grew in China, and the bright fruit was called China apples. The orange as we now see it is a very modern fruit.

Great Britain's Temperature.

[illegible] average temperature of Great [illegible]ain has risen nearly 1 1-3 degrees [illegible] the last half century. January is now nearly 3 degrees warmer than it was.

To Purify Water.

To prevent a bad smell from water which has been left to stand in tanks a few scraps of hoop iron should be placed in the water. As the sulphur compound evolved from the water combines with the iron it will leave the water quite sweet.

Chinese Art.

The Chinese never represent the nude either in sculpture or painting.

An Abbreviation Explained.

The origin of the symbol "cwt." for hundredweight is as follows: C is the initial letter of the Latin word "centum," meaning a hundred, and wt are the first and last letters of the word "weight" and are used as a contraction for it.

News.

"News" is a queer word—the initials of north, east, west, south—which appeared on the earliest journals as a sign that information was to be had here from the four quarters of the world. The sign was N E W S and gave us our word "news."

Torn Umbrellas.

A good idea for mending a hole in an umbrella is to stick on very firmly black courtplaster inside the cover. This is not so much seen as a darn.

A PROBLEM IN ARMY DISCIPLINE

[Original.]

"Corporal," said the colonel, "I see Private Stokes strutting around the post as if he were the prime favorite of the secretary of war. It's not ten minutes since he was tied up by the thumbs. What does it mean?"

"Private Clarkson cut him down, sir."

"Cut him down!" exclaimed the colonel, aghast at such defiance of military authority. "Why, this is mutiny."

The corporal stood straight as a ramrod and said nothing.

"Arrest Stokes and tie him up again. Send Clarkson under guard to me."

In a few minutes Private Clarkson came marching between two soldiers to the colonel's quarters. He was a rosy cheeked boy of eighteen, with flaxen hair, cut close, and blue eyes, in which was a defiant look.

"Are you aware, my man," asked the colonel, "that you have committed an act of mutiny?"

"Yes, colonel."

"And that mutiny is an offense punishable with death?"

No answer.

"Corporal, what was Private Stokes tied up for?"

"Fightin', sir."

"Whom did he fight?"

"Private Clarkson."

"What—this boy?"

"Yes, sir."

"He deserved to be tied up. What did you cut him down for, Private Clarkson?"

"He wasn't fightin' me. I was fightin' him. I hit him on the head with a scabbard."

"How long have you been in the service?"

"I enlisted last week."

"H'm—a recruit. You haven't had much time to learn discipline, but if you have no more idea of it than to interfere with a man under punishment you're not likely to make much of a soldier. Considering you're green, I'll let you off this time, but I warn you that if ever you mutiny again while under my command I'll have you shot."

The corporal marched the two guards away, and Private Stokes turned and walked across the parade ground. The colonel watched him and saw him draw his sleeve across his eyes.

"Not much more than a kid," muttered the stern commander. "These innocent boys, ignorant of army discipline, are harder to break in than jailbirds. They don't know what they are doing."

Half an hour later as the colonel was leaving his headquarters he met the corporal of the guard at the door.

"Well, what is it, corporal?" he asked uneasily.

"Private Stokes has been cut down again, sir."

"What?"

"Cut down again."

"Who did it this time?"

"Private Clarkson, sir."

The colonel was nonplused. How to handle such a case seemed to him an insoluble problem. He thought the matter over while the corporal was standing like a graven image and determined to give this beardless boy who was defying him a scare that would teach him the nature of army discipline.

"Corporal," said the colonel, "tell the sergeant of the guard to bring Private Clarkson here with eight men."

When Clarkson and the men arrived, the colonel ordered the sergeant to have the muskets loaded with blank cartridges without Clarkson's knowledge. This was done, the men were drawn up in line, and the colonel himself took Clarkson, placing him thirty paces from and in front of the firing party.

"Now, my man," said the officer, "I'm going to show you what it means to defy my authority. I'm going to have you shot."

Private Clarkson turned pale, but said nothing. The colonel spent some time adjusting him before the line of soldiers in order to give him time to collapse. Clarkson stood silent, with a sullen pout on his lips.

"Ready!" said the colonel. ("By Jove, he's the biggest fool I ever knew. I believe I'll have to pretend to shoot him.) Aim!"

Clarkson not only failed to wilt, but cast a scornful look at the colonel. This was more than the commander had bargained for.

"Are you aware," he said to the prisoner, "that when I give the next order you will be a dead man?"

There was a twitching of the muscles of the private's face, but he said nothing.

"If I let you off once more, do you think you will have sense enough not to cut Private Stokes down again?"

"No!"

The colonel stood grim for a moment, then gave the order:

"Fire!"

Eight muskets exploded. Clarkson fell.

The colonel, frightened lest some of the pieces had been loaded by mistake or the prisoner had died of shock, rushed to him, raised him, fanned him with his hat and tore open his coat at the neck that he might breathe more freely.

"Great heavens! It's a woman!"

Clarkson opened her eyes, saw the colonel bending over her in terror and —laughed.

"Who are you?" exclaimed the colonel.

"Private Stokes' wife."

The colonel gave a low whistle, then went to his quarters and countermanded an order excluding soldiers' wives from the post. It was plain to him that he could not keep them out.

How It Is Overworked by Three Big Daily Meals.

It requires about five hours for the stomach to work on an ordinary meal and pass it out of itself, when it falls into a state of repose; hence if a man eats three times a day his stomach must work fifteen hours out of twenty-four. After a night's sleep we wake up with a certain amount of bodily vigor which is faithfully portioned out to every muscle of the system and every set of muscles, each its rightful share, the stomach among others.

When the external body gets weary after a long day's work, the stomach bears its share of the fatigue, but if when the body is weary with the day's toil we put it to bed, giving the stomach meanwhile a five-hours' task which must be performed, we impose upon the very best friend we have—the one that gives us one of the largest amounts of earthly enjoyment—and if this overtaxing is continued it must as certainly wear out prematurely as the body itself will if it is overworked every day.

And if persons eat between meals then the stomach has no rest from breakfast in the morning until 1, 2, 3 or 4 o'clock next day; hence it is that so many persons have dyspepsia. The stomach is worked so much and so constantly that it becomes too weak to work at all.

Municipal Bridegrooms.

An amusing story is told of the crowning of a rose queen of a country district near Paris. The selected queen, as one of the formalities of awarding their dower, was asked by the mayor for the name of her fiance. "I have none," she replied. Notified that a sweetheart was indispensable, the young lady added timidly, "I thought the municipality provided everything necessary." Straightway a young swain presented himself as an aspirant, and, being as promptly accepted, all things became regular and in order.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

The National Tennis Championships
Larned, Whitman, AT NEWPORT Clothier, Wright

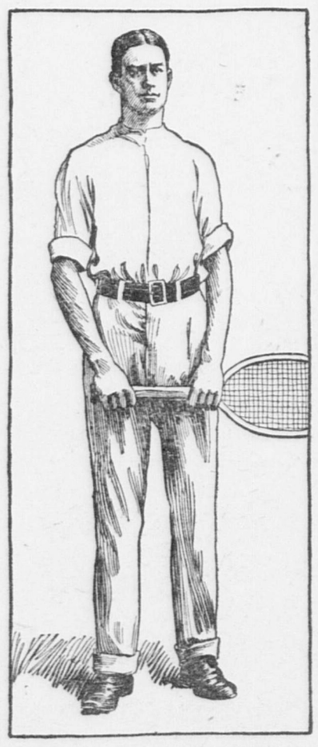

THE national tennis championships at Newport, R. I., beginning Aug. 19, are sure to be the most interesting of recent years. Aside from the increased public following of the great old English game, which has unmistakably added to its prestige, there is another good cause for the foregoing prediction. It is the fact that players of top notch caliber have noticeably increased of late and that their technique evidences more and more an approach to perfect form. Never before in the history of lawn tennis has America possessed so many men capable of displaying almost faultless tennis.

Instead of any one man in the singles or any one team in the doubles being conceded in advance the sure corralling of the championship titles, as has been the case for the last two or three years, we now find several singles players and several teams in doubles having strong chances to win out in their respective specialties. Yes, the coming matches will be exciting from start to finish, and those that attend can go away certain that they have seen tennis such as is played only by men that have given years to the study and practice of racket wielding.

In the singles are no less than five men having more than a reasonable chance to land the premier's trophy. They are William A. Larned of Summit, N. J., the present champion of America; Malcolm D. Whitman of Boston, the former Harvard champion who last year defaulted his title of American champion to Larned; Beals C. Wright, the famous Harvard player and present champion of Canada, who is placed second in the official rating of the United States National Lawn Tennis association; Leo E. Ware of Boston, the veteran campaigner, ranking fourth in the official rating, and William J. Clothier of Philadelphia, the redoubtable champion of Pennsylvania. Whitman and Larned on form are the leaders of this quintet, with the balance of power probably on the side of the Bostonian, but any of the remaining three can capture the national title without causing much of a sensation, so high in quality have been their recent performances.

Whitman, who is generally considered to be the greatest tennis expert ever produced on this side of the Atlantic, will enter the all comers tourney in an endeavor to work his way through the field to obtain the coveted opportunity to meet Larned in the challenge contest. Should he get through the all comers victoriously the challenge match will be a battle of giants, and no mistake. It is the ardent desire of every enthusiast that this result be brought about.

In the doubles Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis and Holcombe Ward of Orange, N. J., the present national champions, are to have spirited opposition from many quarters. Their principal rivals are the Wrenn brothers, Bob and George L. junior, who have played sensational tennis during the season. Then there are the Princeton champions, Little and Alexander, old time opponents of Ward and Davis, and also Whitman and Ware, who have dabbled in doubles considerably this season. Should either of these teams qualify to meet Ward and Davis in the challenge match the scalps of the famous players will come dangerously close to meeting an untimely fate.

W. A. Larned, the present champion, is a model of good form in all of his plays, but few players have been able to copy his style. He is a natural, easy, graceful player, to whom every stroke seems to come easy. He seldom seems to make any effort, yet the ball travels fast from his racket and with unerring precision in the direction that he wills it. He hits the ball with a long, graceful sweep that directs it accurately, and his placing strokes are little short of marvelous.

Ex-Champion Whitman is an expert of another type. He is a crafty, cautious player of the opposite style from the dashing Larned and a much safer player to copy, for his style is one that wins the greater number of matches, besides the fact that it is cultivated, while that of the champion is born in one. Whitman crouches a good deal in making his strokes, particularly on the backhand side, and he slices under the ball more than most American players do. He is particularly free in all his strokes, however, and has a more certain command of the ball than even Larned.

Davis is a thundering hard hitter who takes wonderful risks, often unnecessary ones. Where one player might succeed at this style of play a hundred would fail—yes, a thousand. Less strength in the stroke, a little less speed in smashing and fewer risks taken in placing ground strokes into the farthermost corners of the court are likely to earn quite as many successes.

Ex-Champion Bob Wrenn is perhaps the highest ideal of a winning player, and if a young player wants some style to copy his is the best. He has all the defensive genius of Whitman, with a stronger attack and a much better net game. Wrenn uses his weight in the stroke better than does Whitman and manages to make the ball travel faster without materially greater risk of error. He was a master of defense at his best, and also a master of attack, and, best of all, a general in tactics. One could not do better than to copy his style.

BEALS C. WRIGHT OF BOSTON.
[Recent winner of the Canadian championship.]

The English experts, like Mahony, for instance, have a different style of playing their backhand strokes from that most used in America, and it is much safer, although perhaps not so brilliant for passing strokes. They carry the wrist very low in backhand play, and the head of the racket passes under the ball after making the stroke instead of following it so long as do the American rackets. This style has the merit of being much more certain of return than ours, but the ball is not so easily turned off one way or another.

FISTIANA

Manager Hermann of the International Athletic club of Fort Erie has received word from Tommy Ryan of Kansas City accepting terms for a twenty round boxing bout Sept. 15 with Kid Carter of Brooklyn. Manager Macias, for Carter, had already agreed to the match. The bout will be for the middleweight championship and a purse of $5,000, of which 75 per cent goes to the winner and 25 per cent to the loser.

Catcher Tommy Leahy tells a good story on Tom Sharkey, the pugilist. When Sharkey was fitting up his saloon in New York Leahy advised him to get a handsome chandelier. "What good will that do me?" queried Sharkey. "They ain't a soul around here that plays a note."

Sharkey "Got It Good."

"Talking about hard punches," said Tom Sharkey, in speaking of the late Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight, "I don't believe any one ever got such a rap as Ruhlin gave me in the throat in the second round of our bout in London. It not only took the wind from me, but I thought I was choking until the finish."

THE NEW ARMY UNIFORM

Novelties Provided For by the Latest Regulations.

IDEAS OF THREE NATIONS COPIED

For Service Wear the Garb Will Be Olive Drab—Four Kinds of Uniform Now Required—Sabers Take the Place of Swords—Special Full Dress For Officers.

Right on top of an order announcing a change in the bill of dress for the Massachusetts volunteer militia comes the bill of dress making radical changes in the uniform of the United States army, says the Boston Herald. The army order covers all matters relative to the outward appearance of every officer and man in the army.

Four kinds of uniform are now required. These are: Full dress, an improvement over the present dress uniform; dress, an adaptation of the present undress uniform; white uniform, and the service uniform. The new full dress is a frock coat with shoulder knots of the flat Russian pattern, abolishing the present shoulder knots. It adds gold striped trousers or breeches if the wearer is a staff officer, but does not change the trousers worn by line officers of artillery or cavalry, and gives a new cap. The dress uniform is practically the same as the existing undress or fatigue uniform, consisting of a blouse, cap and trousers. Then come the white uniform and finally the new service uniform. The last consists of service coat, trousers, cap, all in olive drab color. The service coat is to fit tightly at the waist, so that the saber belt may be worn outside, and to be at least five inches in excess of the chest measurement at the chest.

There are to be outside pockets on this coat, and the description shows that we have copied the uniform of the British India service, which our officers highly recommended after they had seen it in China. Enlisted men will have dress, white, service and fatigue uniforms. The overcoat to be worn will be a double breasted ulster of olive drab cloth, the front to have buttons by which the corners may be buttoned back out of the way when marching. This is a touch copied from the overcoats of the Russian army.

Details of the uniform: The general and lieutenant general may choose the decorations for the collars of their own full dress coats. Other general officers will have gold oak leaves around their collars and the officers of lower rank plain gold braid, with the color of the arm or corps below the stripes. The same privileged officers may design their own cuff decorations. All other officers must wear cuff ornaments similar to the color decorations.

General officers only wear the chapeau and only when dismounted. All others will wear the cap except when on service. The cap is like an automobile cap, flat, with overhanging top and drooping visor. According as the cap is full dress or merely dress, it will be ornamented with gold leaves or braid or plain. The white cap will be plain. The white helmet is retained, but the service helmet is new. It is to be of cork, covered with olive drab material, with a puggaree. Besides this, the service or campaign hat is part of the uniform.

The shoulder knots will not serve to indicate the different ranks hereafter; they will show merely that their wearer is an officer. His rank will be shown by the sleeve ornaments, as in the French and Japanese armies. Above the cuffs, which are to be ornamented, will be one star, two or more stars, according as the officer is a brigadier general or higher, while rows of braid will indicate the grades below those of general.

Sabers take the place of swords, and russet leather belts are to be used instead of black ones. Officers of the signal corps will wear shoulder belts in full dress, dress and service uniforms.

The facings of the departments and arms of the service are changed to some extent. Those for general and staff officers will be dark blue; officers of engineers serving with engineer troops will have red facings, piped with white; signal officers, orange, piped with white; ordnance officers, black, piped with scarlet, following the British rule, and medical officers, instead of green, will have maroon facings. Quartermasters' facings will be buff.

Yellow will remain the cavalry color, scarlet that of artillery, and light blue instead of white will be the infantry color. Medical officers will give up the Geneva cross as their device and wear a caduceus. Aids-de-camp will not wear the corps devices of the arms to which they belong, but instead will wear an American shield, surmounted by an eagle. On the blue field of the shield they will display stars, according to the rank of the general on whose staff they are serving.

Chaplains will wear Latin crosses instead of shepherds' crooks. Officers of coast artillery will show a projectile on the oval of the present device of two crossed cannon, and those of field artillery will show a wheel. Instead of the letters "U. S." all officers will wear on all uniforms, except the full dress, a special device of the arms of the United States. All chevrons are to be worn properly hereafter, points upward.

A special full dress uniform is authorized for officers, practically the same as is worn in the navy, a civilian dress coat with brass buttons, the sleeves ornamented like those of the full dress uniform. With this a white or blue dress waistcoat, with brass buttons, and full dress uniform trousers will be worn. Epaulets and shoulder knots go with this coat.

A SCHOOLMA'MS ROW

Which Interested the Entire Population of Stewartstown, N H

Colebrook, N. H., Aug. 16.—Perley Knapp, selectman and a member of the school board of the town of Stewartstown, who recently was shot during a dispute with Mrs. William Brown, another school board member, at a schoolhouse in the Holden district, was discharged in court at Stewartstown yesterday on the charge of assault on Mrs. Brown. The facts brought out were that Knapp, on the morning of Aug. 6, by prior arrangement, went to the schoolhouse to see Mrs. Brown and the teacher, Miss Fannie Mahurin, in relation to the necessity of running a school in the Holden district, to attend which there would be only two small children. It was shown that Knapp was forbidden by Mrs. Brown to enter the schoolhouse, and upon his insisting on entrance he was shot in the shoulder by one of the two women, both of whom, it was claimed, carried loaded revolvers. It was further claimed at the hearing that both women tried their revolvers before leaving home that morning. Mrs. Brown returned home and reported that she had been bruised at the hands of Mr. Knapp. Six physicians were called into the case and Mr. Knapp later was arrested on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Brown. During the several sittings of the justice the courthouse was filled with men and women, all home affairs being neglected out of interest in the affair.

Caucus of Clement Men

Barre, Vt., Aug. 16.—The Clement supporters of the Republican party last night nominated City Attorney Wishart for representative. Resolutions were adopted reciting how a city committee had been chosen last June, a majority of whom later opposed McCullough; how these members called a caucus and presented their resignations, which were not accepted; how a few members of the committee called themselves a city committee and secured recognition from the state and county, and declaring that the committee chosen last June is the only city committee and endorsing its position.

Restraining Order Coming

Boston, Aug. 16.—Judge Richardson yesterday reserved his decision until next week in the matter of the suggested injunction to restrain the Brewery Workmen's union and the other labor bodies in connection with the brewery strike. He, however, intimated very strongly that he intends issuing some sort of a restraining order directed against the defendants, who had, he said, gone too far.

Will Appeal to the Governor

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 16.—The members of the Biddeford branch of the W. C. T. U. are indignant because they were denied the right of petition in their effort to close the saloons in the city. The women now propose to circulate another petition asking Governor Hill to remove Chairman Banks, who is the only member of the board of police commissioners appointed by the chief executive of the state.

Capture of Supposed Hugger

Hyde Park, Mass., Aug. 16.—This town for many months has been infested by a "Jack, the Hugger," and the police seemed unable to capture him. Last night Howard E. Smith, aged 21, a locomotive fireman, was arrested, charged with assault on a 10-year-old girl, and many women and children who have since seen him think he is the one who has molested them at different times.

Alleged Fugitive From Justice

Boston, Aug. 16.—Joseph C. Taylor, an alleged fugitive from justice from the Transvaal, South Africa, was arrested yesterday upon complaint of the British consul of this city. He was found at work as a team driver and was taken aback by his arrest. The complaint charged Taylor with having committed larceny and embezzlement at Johannesburg. Bail was placed at $500.

Granite Stat 's Old Home Week

Concord, N. H., Aug. 16.—New Hampshire, the state which originated the Old Home Week festival, begins its fourth annual observances today. This evening beacon fires will burn from Coos to the sea. Tomorrow Sunday union religious services will be held in more than 100 churches. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week will see most of the celebrations.

Inquest Deemed Necessary

Gardner, Mass., Aug. 16.—Floating in Knowlton's pond yesterday was found Joseph Goguen's body. He was last seen Sunday morning, when he left a house at which he had been boarding, giving word to one of the family to tell another boarder to meet him at the pond. The circumstances are such that an inquest will be held.

Real Estate Deal Involves $1,000,000

Boston, Aug. 16.—One of the largest exchanges of realty in the retail business section of Boston for a long time was made yesterday, when the holdings of three adjoining estates on Bedford and Avon streets was sold to the Jordan-Marsh company. The total assessed value of the property is $1,043,000.

Slipped Over the Border

Portland, Me., Aug. 16.—Five Chinamen were brought here yesterday by Deputy Marshal Hasty from Lowelltown. They are charged with violating the immigration laws. They were arraigned before United States Commissioner Bradley and the case continued to Aug. 18 for a hearing.

Forty-Five Tons of Maple Sugar

Barre, Vt., Aug. 16.—A shipment of 24 tons of maple sugar to a St. Paul man was made from here yesterday, and one of 21 tons the day before yesterday to the same man.

"I sleep well enough at night,
And the blamedest appetite
Ever mortal man possessed."

Riley's farmer is the very picture of a man advanced in years, yet in the enjoyment of perfect health. A good appetite, good digestion and sound sleep, are the chief factors in a vigorous old age. Life is sustained by food, when it is properly digested and assimilated. When digestion fails, there is a loss of nutrition which soon shows itself in physical weakness, nervousness, sleeplessness, etc.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It strengthens the body in the only way possible,—by enabling the assimilation of the nutrition extracted from food.

"I used ten bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and several vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' a year ago this spring, and have had no trouble with indigestion since," writes Mr. W. T. Thompson, of Townsend, Broadwater Co., Montana. "Words fail to tell how thankful I am for the relief, as I had suffered so much and it seemed that the doctors could do me no good. I got down in weight to 125 pounds, and was not able to work at all. Now I weigh nearly 160 and can do a day's work on the farm. I have recommended your medicine to several, and shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

To the Citizens of Quincy.

It gives us pleasure to announce to the public that we have secured the services of Mr. A. B. Sparrow to assist in our outside work. He is well known to many of our citizens, having in former times assisted for a number of years in collecting the advertisements for the Quincy Directory, published by Sampson & Co. of Boston.

Mr. Sparrow is a gentleman who needs no recommendation, and our citizens will find what he promises will be carefully looked after.

He will call on our patrons, write their advertisements when desired, and aid them in bringing their goods and wares to the attention of the public.

The growth of our business has kept us so closely in our office that we were unable to call on our merchants as often as we wished. But we believe Mr. Sparrow, who has had many years of experience in writing and arranging advertisements, will be able to fill the gap, and our patrons will find him to be of great assistance to them.

Californians report that there is less demand for their peaches because competition in the other states is keener. South Missouri is sending to market as fine peaches as ever were grown, and the area of peach orchards in that section of the state is rapidly increasing.

Fast driving of automobiles will soon be stopped if accidents and arrests continue at the present rate, A few days ago a man was arrested on Beacon street, Boston for exceeding ten miles an hour. The accident in France this week resulting in the death of two well known American society people is a warning to be heeded for in this cae the killing was of the participants rather than pedestrians.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Thursday night at Oyster Bay, President Roosevelt pressed a button which signaled the opening of the first negro exposition ever held in this country. The exposition is held in Chicago until September 14th, and over twenty states and territories are represented. Such a thing could not have seemed possible forty years ago, and is an era in the life of the negro, showing as it does the remarkable progress of the race since the war.

☞They have unique doings at Gloucester, and it was only the other day they lost the outward mail wagon and horse. Kilby S. Marchant while under the influence of liquor saw the wagon standing on the street and jumped in. He drove home, put the horse in the barn and went to bed, not realizing he had committed a crime against the government. Meantime a diligent search was being made for the mail wagon by the postal authorities, who were able to locate it about midnight. It was then too late to catch any of the night trains and the mail matter was not dispatched until next morning. Marchant's arrest is regretted by the officials as he comes of a good family, and it is thought that he was of the opinion that the horse and carriage belonged to him.

ALMOST ISOLATED.

Nearly All Main Streets Leading from Quincy Closed.

Quincy Point bridge is to be closed to travel Monday to all except foot passengers and electric cars and it will probably be three months before teams will again be permitted to cross Weymouth Fore river by this street.

The closing of this bridge will mean quite a hardship for the many teams that daily come from towns south of Quincy, for Quincy avenue is also in an impassable condition. On the Quincy end of the street a state road is being built and on the Weymouth end it is also torn up for repairs. This means that teams coming from Weymouth and the South Shore will have to go around through East Braintree and use Shaw street, thence through Howard and South streets to Washington street.

It is not often that so many main thoroughfares leading to Quincy are closed to team travel as now, and it is unfortunate that it is so, although it cannot very well be helped.

In addition to the Quincy Point bridge and Quincy avenue, Adams street, another Main artery, is also closed on the Milton end, and Sea street, leading to Houghs Neck, is also closed between the Willows and the corner of Manet avenue.

This leaves only Hancock street on the north and Independence avenue on the south, of the main streets open for team travel.

Alfred Furnald.

Mr. Furnald, who resided in Quincy for a score or more years, moved from this place to Nottingham, N. H. Being an active business man while residing here, he was well known by our citizens.

We copy the following complimentary notice from the Boston Globe of Wednesday last, of this aged gentleman, who is eighty-five years old:

We have in Nottingham a gentleman, Alfred Furnald, who was born May 20, 1817, who cares for his farm, has a cow, horse and hens; who works regularly every day, plowing, sowing, hoeing and mowing. Although the mowing is done by a machine, he follows with a scythe, cutting the edges, etc. In making and loading hay he follows with a loafer rake, and after his day's work, gets his cow and milks her and does all the small work to be done about the house and barn.

He saws and cuts all his firewood, burning wood the year round. He attends church regularly, takes the Daily Globe and keeps in touch with the world.

He is a strictly temperate man, never using liquor in any form, and left off using tobacco after he was sixty years of age.

He is a Republican and never fails to attend town meeting.

He intends this month to lay down a piece of his field to grass. That means plowing, hauling, dressing, harrowing and sowing seed.

Funeral of Mrs. England.

The funeral of Mrs. Sallie England was held Friday afternoon from her late residence on Chestnut street. Rev. Edward Norton conducted the services. The remains were taken to Forest Hills.

—The people of the Philippine Islands are beginning to understand the great advantages of a settled government under the supervision of the United States, and to realize how they have been mislead as to the purposes of the United States in seeking the pacification of the island. Returns from the customs revenue of the archipelago show that for the first four months of the present year the receipts reached nearly $3,000,000, in gold; more than twice as much as they were for corresponding months of 1899; and a considerable increase over 1901.

—Much talk is indulged in as to the possibilities and probabilities of Senator Mark Hanna being a presidential candidate in 1904, but Hon. P. C. Edwards, of Ohio, announces, with apparent authority, that Senator Hanna will not be a candidate, and that Presdient Roosevelt will.

Tuberculosis.

The great frequency of pulmonary tuberculosis among the poor of our community inspired a number of gentlemen to furnish the funds to distribute in Boston advice to guide patients with tuberculosis towards recovery and to keep them from becoming a source of danger to others. A resume of the most important and universally applicable rules has been prepared by Dr. A. K. Stone, and has been revised by Drs. Bowditch, Minot, and Otis. The rules have received the cordial endorsement of Dr. Walcott, of the State Board of Health and Dr. Durgin of the Boston Board of Health.

Although you may have trouble in your lungs and be suffering from the disease called Tuberculosis, you may get well, as thousands of others have done, by strict adherence to the following rules:

Be out in the fresh air as much as possible.

If you cannot have work out of doors, go to the house door or to an open window and take twelve full breaths. Do this six times each day.

Do not work in a dusty place.

Get in the sunshine as often as you can.

Sleep in a clean well aired room with windows open, and go to bed early.

Avoid crowded rooms where the air is close and where there is much smoking.

Eat plain, simple food (eggs, meat, bread, oatmeal, maccaroni, rice, vegetables, milk, cream, and butter.)

If possible have some liquid food before you get up in the morning and at bedtime.

Spend your money for good food rather than for medicines.

Do not drink whiskey, rum, gin, brandy, or beer.

Keep clean.

Take a sponge bath each morning. Rub the skin well with a coarse towel.

Do not swallow what you cough up.

Protect your friends and neighbors from taking this disease from you by burning what you cough up or by throwing it down the water closet. What you cough up contains the germs of the disease, and if it dries it soon becomes dust and flies about in the air, and your friends, breathing this dust, are liable to catch your disease.

Never spit upon the floor or in the street.

Do not spit in your handkerchief, but use a spit cup, or have small pieces of cloth or soft paper to spit into. Do not put them into your pocket, but collect them in a paper bag, and burn bag and all when you get a chance.

Try not to cough.

When you must cough, hold a piece of cloth in front of your mouth, so that particles shall not fly out into the room.

Do not sleep with another person.

Have your knives, forks, and spoons washed with boiling water. Handkerchiefs should be boiled for half an hour before washing.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. James Magann of Baxter street, a little daughter arriving this morning to brighten their home.

Eoster street is badly cut and will probably remain so until the teams get through carrying granite to Brackett's wharf for the sewer. It would be useless to repair it now.

If pleasant tonight, come to Remick's pavilion and hear the graphaphone sing the latest songs of the day. Come everybody and have a good laugh, it will make you forget the high price of coal and meat.

Mr. George L. York, who has recently opened a new drug store on Hancock street, Wollaston, has an entire new stock of goods and is doing a good business. He has had seventeen years of experienco as a registered pharmacist.

Nowhere in the centre can be found better kept grounds than those of Mr. Zenas Arnold of Coddington boulevard. Mr. Arnold and his sons spend considerable time in the care of their place, watering and trimming the lawn until it looks like a green velvet carpet.

N. B. Furnald, of the S. P. C. D. A. society is an energetic officer and recently investigated thirty-five cases of cruelty to horses. He has put three out of misery this week, the last being the horse of William Bassett, which fell from exhaustion and old age, on Washington street, Friday noon.

Beautiful flowers are sent each Friday morning to the Unitarian chapel for the Boston Flower mission. The cause is non-sectarian and all the churches contribute filling large hampers and boxes with fragrant blossoms which go to brighten the life of the less fortunate. Committees receive the flowers at the basement door on Temple street and arrange them for shipment.

Mr. Sewall Nye, formerly of South Braintree late of Orange, died of heart failure Monday August 4, in Hardwick, Mass. In company with Mrs. Nye he drove Sunday from Orange to Hardwick to attend the funeral of Mrs. Marshall Nye, wife of his recently departed brother. The next morning while sitting in a chair in the open air he died suddenly of heart failure. Burial in family lot in Hardwick.

"Some men are born poor," said the man who tries to be different; "some achieve poverty, and others buy furniture on the instalment plan. Again, one man is born rich and manages to hold his own, another man achieves riches and the ability to hold other people's own as well as his own, and still another promotes an elongated and arid oil well in Texax, and then goes away and leaves the stockholders in the hole."—Life.

FORE RIVER NOTES.

Business is Very Brisk at Quincy Shipyard.

Some idea of the tremendous size and power of the engines to be put into the battleships New Jersey and Rhode Island, building at the Fore River, is conveyed by the fact that each section of the double-throw crankshafts will be worked from a 40-ton ingot of steel. The plating of the big vessels is well under way and their hulls are beginning to assume shape.

The Fore River Ship & Engine Company has made an interesting tender to the American Line to renew a section of the intermediate shaft of the steamship Belgenland in four days, which would be the quickest piece of work ever done in this country. The Belgenland sailed from Philadelphia on July 5 and was towed into Halifax, disabled, a fortnight later. The Fore River Company's offer is to forge and finish the shaft so that it shall be complete, except for coupling bolt holes, in the specified time.

The Fore River yard is particularly busy just now with outside work more of which comes to it every month on account of its remarkable forge facilities. Shipments of the gun forgings for the United States government are made regularly and this week a lot of big engine forgings for the New York Shipbuilding Company have been sent away. One of the most interesting single "jobs" ever done at Fore River, and a particularly creditable one, is the stem forging for the steamship Powhatan, made for the J. N. Robins Company of Erie Basin, Brooklyn, and shipped on Tuesday. It is in one length of 59 feet and measures 10 and a half by two and three quarters feet at the middle, tapering for 20 feet into a spoon scraph at the keel, and is rabbetted for 20 feet from the end, with the forward edge rounded. It weighs 5370 pounds. From the start in the forge to the completion of the machine work just five days were required. This is undoubtedly record time.

Not Over-Wise

ODD PHILIPPINE TRIBE

Scout Tells of a White Race In Mindoro Island.

ALL FAIR HAIRED AND BLUE EYED

Seclusive Nation, Which Lieutenant De Clairmont Says Is of Marked Beauty of Form and Great Strength. Poisoned Arrow Greets Any Intruder Who Ventures Near Their Hamlets.

Lieutenant De Clairmont of the Philippine scouts, who recently returned to the United States, tells in the New York Herald of a white race found in the island of Mindoro. His story in part follows:

Hidden in the heart of Mindoro, reached only by secret and difficult trails, guarded by fierce men strongly armed, live a race of people as white as you and I. There seems only one plausible theory of the origin of such a race. Centuries ago the Philippine Islands formed a continuous chain reaching to the mainland before volcanic disturbances caused the connecting links in the chain to disappear and the group to be parted from the countries of the world, and it may have been before that parting that this white people or their forefathers found their way to the island of Mindoro. An upheaval cut them off, we will suppose, from the land that they had left, and there they settled, making the best of the situation. They shut themselves in, safe from intrusion in their mountain fastnesses. They taught their children to resent intrusion; they taught their children's children. It is a part of their creed to be sufficient to themselves. And yet, without communication with the big, enterprising world, they have maintained a certain degree of civilization. They are intelligent, quick to catch new ideas, peaceful when not attacked, virtuous, industrious and domestic.

The knowledge of this strange people came to me through a Filipino native whose word is good. He has seen these people; he has been one of the few to know them and have frequent communication with them. What he told me was upheld by the priest and the presidente of his province. Manuel Castro's story is a wonderful one.

"Do you know," said Castro, "that the island of Mindoro has a white race of its own? The people are as white as you. Dress them in your garments, and they would pass for Americans."

Then he told me of the strange whites, for he goes to their outlying hamlets to trade with them and has done so for a long time. He is one of the few outsiders allowed within their guarded boundaries.

"Unless I had gone with friendly feeling and made them know it I would never have got inside or else I should never have come away again," said Castro. "The Spanish have tried to reach them several times, but they have gone armed. Therefore they have always met with disaster. Their guard system is perfect. The center of their colony is the main town, of something like 20,000 population. This is surrounded by a circle of hamlets of 200 or 300 inhabitants each. They are built with only ten or fifteen miles between each.

"When alarm of an approach is received in one of these hamlets, runners are sent out to all the rest, making a complete chain. The news is carried fast. All the circle of villages is up in arms. Men with strange, ancient weapons are ready. If the intruder tries to force an entrance, a swift, well aimed arrow greets him, its point made deadly with poison. If he should escape this, he comes upon an array of spears and knives. The latter are curved like scimiters and are wielded by these people with deadly skill. If you approach with hostility, you will fancy them to be the most terrible savages, but go in peace and you will find them a people of much advancement, far above the Filipinos."

Castro spoke of them with great pride. He boasted of their beauty, strength and courage. Their women are wonderfully beautiful, he says. They are tall, as a Filipino reckons height, being over five feet. They are athletic and graceful. They wear a loose robe, falling from their shoulders and belted with a cord of banana fiber. Their hair is worn sometimes flowing, sometimes coiled on the top of the head as gracefully as a European woman would coil hers. The men, he says, are splendid specimens of manhood, being much over five feet in height. They wear a short pair of breeches and are naked above the waist. Many of them have curling hair. All are fair haired and blue eyed.

The coloring of the people, their remarkable intelligence, their skill in certain simple arts, their grace and strength and beauty, their love of sports—all these things were characteristic of the Greeks of ancient civilization. Why should not these people be an offshot of ancient Athens?

They are a pleasure loving people. Castro has been present at many of their festivals, which occur frequently. He says that there is nothing barbarous about their gayeties. They have all sorts of athletic contests—races and jumping tests and what they call "hop games," a sort of leapfrog. They have wonderfully graceful dancing by the men and women. They also have music, their instruments being mostly made of bamboo. They are adorned on these occasions with all kinds of curious ornaments—bits of colored stone, claws of birds, gay feathers and flowers. The women are passionately fond of flowers, and they raise them in little gardens near their homes.

They are thoroughly domestic. and they keep their houses as neat as any model housekeeper of our own country. They are clean in every way, although their homes are simple bamboo houses like those of the brown natives. Their dialect is strange to Castro. He is an educated man for a Filipino, speaks Spanish and is more or less familiar with all the dialects of the islands and says that this bears no resemblance to any one of them.

I have made a report of Castro's statement to the bureau of non-Christian tribes. The officers of this bureau have told me that they have heard rumors concerning this tribe, but I do not know that they will make any investigation. What I want to do is to head an expedition myself and penetrate to their hidden towns. I should prefer to take Filipinos with me. Castro is willing to assist me. I keep in communication with him, and I am waiting for the opportunity to set off on my exploration. I speak Spanish—that is why I was chosen for duty with the Philippine scouts—and I can talk with these people. I want to settle among them and remain for a number of years until I know them so thoroughly that I can give a thorough account of their customs.

AUTOS IN THE DESERT.

Sir Rudolf Slatin Tells of Their Value In Developing the Sudan.

Sir Rudolf Slatin, on his way from Cairo to London recently, passed through Vienna and was there interviewed on the prospects in Sudan, says the New York Times. What he said is commented on at length by the semiofficial Austrian organ, particularly the part of the interview dealing with the introduction of motor cars, and Austrian manufacturers are urged to send agents to Cairo. Sir Rudolf said in part:

"Excepting for occasional trifling internal disturbances, which are in no sense directed against the government, the Sudan is in a perfectly peaceful condition, with nothing to hinder its agricultural and commercial development. The two most pressing necessities are an extension of the means of communication and a system of irrigation.

"Vast tracts of fertile country and mineral lands are now comparatively valueless because no facilities exist for bringing the products to a market. I believe that the introduction of automobiles would prove highly beneficial. Many parts of the country are already perfectly adapted to such traffic, and where it is necessary roads could be made without great expense.

"Automobiles strongly built and capable of carrying goods in fairly large quantities would afford an excellent substitute for railways at a fraction of cost of the latter. Machines with a high rate of speed would not be required, strength and capacity being the chief essentials.

"With regard to irrigation, several engineers are now studying the situation. Apparently there is plenty of water available, hence irrigation works might easily be constructed extensively and successfully. Personally I strongly favor the development of the country on agricultural lines rather than in the direction of mining.

"The soil of the Sudan is exceedingly rich and capable of producing almost anything. Cotton of an excellent medium grade is now being grown, and there is no reason why the Sudan should not furnish large quantities for the foreign markets. Wheat and barley of the highest quality grow freely in addition to such products as indigo and rubber."

COATS OFF IN CHURCH.

Pastor's Plan to Induce Men to Attend Services In Hot Weather.

In the Presbyterian church in Hartford township, near Sharon, Pa., the other day all the men in the congregation removed their coats at the suggestion of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Bailey, says the Philadelphia Press. The minister then said, "Now, brethren, you look cool, and I feel that you will more fully appreciate the sermon."

Rev. Mr. Bailey says the plan will have a tendency to bring more men to church.

The Wesley Bicentenary.

Worldwide Methodism is beginning to interest itself in the bicentenary of the birth of John Wesley, which event will occur in June of next year, says the London Telegraph. On the other side of the Atlantic, where Methodism is remarkably strong, extensive arrangements are being made for its due observance. No definite steps have yet been taken by the parent body in this country (England), but it is likely to come before the conference, which meets soon in Manchester. It will be interesting to many to learn that the journals and letters of John Wesley are to be brought out in a new, enlarged and specially edited form, under the direction of the Wesleyan bookroom, in the near future. They will be a suitable memorial to the famous evangelist who nearly 200 years ago first saw the light at Epworth rectory.

Women Wanted In South Africa.

The lack of British women in South Africa is one of the most serious facts with which the statesman has to grapple, says the London Mail. It is vital that a carefully directed emigration of women from England should be organized by the state. A writer in the Quarterly Review reckons that 3,000 British women are needed a year to meet the emergency, and this is a total which it should not be difficult to find in England, where we have a very large excess of women.

The TOUCH of MIDAS

By Willis Emery

Copyright, 1901, by
Frederick R. Toombs

BUDS were bursting upon all the trees in the little park, and the grass had grown so much since yesterday that the romping children cried out to one another in praise of it. The thrill of wakening life was in the air.

Last night's rain had filled a hollow in a stone. Within reach of it was young Dr. Denning on a bench, and he dipped the end of his cane into the water and wrote with it upon a light gray flagstone in front of him. He wrote a prescription containing several deadly poisons in doses suitable to an elephant.

"What is it?" asked the pretty girl who sat beside him.

"It is some medicine that I need," he replied grimly, and then, suddenly

"IT IS SOME MEDICINE THAT I NEED," HE REPLIED GRIMLY.

looking up at her: "Brenda, isn't it an outrage that we two should feel like this on such a day and for such a cause? Look at the innuite sky!" And he raised his face toward it as he spoke. "Think of the immeasurable superfluity of the sunlight, of which a million rays hit nothing at all for every one that warms the world! A dollar a ray would be how much money? How many hundred dollar bills would it take to paper the blue ceiling of heaven? And for one of them today I'd sell the sun, moon and sky"—

"I don't believe he'll really turn you out," said Brenda. "You're only three months behind with the rent, and I've been as much as two months with mine sometimes."

Denning looked across the park toward the brownstone house wherein were his office and Brenda's studio. All their pretty romance had been under that roof. Till chance had taken him there he had not known that Brenda existed.

"Confound the place!" he cried. "I love and hate it. I've suffered agonies there in this last month, little girl. It's hard to succeed and be beaten at the same time. On the books I'm making more than a living now, but I can't dun these patients. They're rich, blast them! They aren't used to it. If I dun 'em, I lose 'em, and if I don't dun 'em they lose me, for I'll have to move out of this neighborhood. I tell you, Brenda, it's ruin."

At that moment a tall, elderly man, elegant in dress and manner, who had been sitting on a bench nearly opposite, arose and advanced toward them. Denning had seen him enter the park some minutes before and had noted his abstracted and nervous manner, the classic regularity of his face and its peculiar pallor. The stranger raised his hat and bowed with a dignity befitting his appearance.

"Pardon me if I observe," said he, "that you are in some sort of trouble. In the hope that I may be of service may I ask you what it is? There are reasons why at this moment I may be allowed a freedom that would be denied to others."

"In that case, sir," said Denning, "we may be in a position to exchange confidences."

"I take your meaning perfectly," replied the other, "and you are quite right. It is for me to state the reasons by which I justify this liberty."

"I have not the least desire to intrude upon you," said Denning hastily. "As for my trouble, it is a mere matter of money. I see my whole life, both past and future—all that I have learned with great labor and all I have hoped to accomplish with that knowledge—in danger of utter wreck and ruin for the lack of a hundred dollars."

"It is a small sum," rejoined the stranger. "I fear that you understate your need. It is an error that nullifies all the help that is rendered by one man to another in this world. If I had but a penny to give, I would find the man whose need is a penny. To give it to him who needs two is to waste the coin and leave the sum of want in the world precisely where it was before."

"Upon my soul," exclaimed Denning, "that is the wisest saying on the subject that ever I heard!"

"Such being your courteous view of my humble philosophy," said the stranger, "tell me frankly what you wish."

"I owe $105 rent," replied the doctor, "and I would like to pay it."

"You can have no real desire to pay rent," said the stranger, smiling, "except as every honest man would like to pay a debt. I fancy you did not take the rooms for the purpose of paying rent for them."

"Hardly," rejoined Denning, with a laugh. "My idea was to become a famous physician and make a lot of money."

"Precisely," was the reply. "And now tell me this: Do you wish to be a great physician in order that you may become rich?"

Denning leaned forward with his head in his hand, and there was silence while the great clock in the stone tower of the church struck 10.

"For some strange reason," said the young man, "I find it very hard to lie to you. The fact is that I am not wholly mercenary. I have a serious and strong interest in my profession. There is every chance that I shall succeed and do some good in the world, for I have temperament, patience, the love of study and no end of physical stamina. But, if you speak of wishing, I do most confoundedly wish to be rich. The marrow of my bones cries out for wealth. Besides, I am in love with the most charming woman in the world, and she is very fond of diamonds."

"It is sufficient," said the stranger, hat in hand, to Brenda, whose description he could not fail to recognize. "I perceive that a hundred dollars is not what you want."

"By heavens, it is!" exclaimed Denning in a sort of disappointment, as if there had been some chance of his getting it. "I need it worse than a starving man needs food."

"There is really very little use in feeding the average starving man," replied the stranger. "What he needs is not a meal, but a guarantee of daily manna from on high. Not being able to give this, I often pass such a man without heeding his plea."

"I perceive the application," said Denning, not without bitterness.

"Pardon me, my young friend," said the stranger kindly; "you do not. My intention is to give you the hundred dollars which you fancy that you desire and also that which lies beyond it—the real wish of your heart."

"You trifle with me, sir," replied Denning stiffly. "Our philosophical discussion, like all other philosophy since the world began, has led us away from common sense. I can accept no aid of you."

"I think you cannot help it," was the answer, "though indeed you may refuse my hundred dollars. Let me be explicit. I am a very rich man and quite alone in the world except for my enemies, who, I do assure you, are numerous and inveterate. For many years my property has been devised by will for charitable uses. I had set my mind upon a hospital to perpetuate my name upon a new plan, but I will not weary you by description. And today, when the project is so near realization that I can almost hear the wagons rumbling along with the stone to build the walls, my wish has changed."

He turned more directly toward his hearers, and there was a hint of color in his pale cheeks as he continued:

"Was any human creature ever made completely happy by means of a hospital unless, indeed, they killed him there and sent his soul to heaven? The patients are the poor mostly, and, being half cured, they go out to meet again

"IT IS SUFFICIENT," SAID THE STRANGER, HAT IN HAND.

the same evil conditions that sent them there at first. No, my friends, I was in danger of violating the principles of my own philosophy by trying to do a partial good. There is no such thing. Instead of this foolish attempt I resolved as I sat on the bench yonder to make one person really happy. In this case it will be two"—he smiled at Brenda—"yet they will be one before long, I am sure."

Denning pushed back the hat from his damp forehead as he turned toward Brenda.

"We must have fallen asleep here in the sun," said she.

"No dream, I assure you," said the stranger. "Why should I not leave my wealth to my pleasant friends of an hour? In forty-seven years that I have been on earth you are, I truly believe, the only friends who have not betrayed me. But that is not the point. I have fortunately found the very man I would have wished to find and the very woman. Unless my faculty for reading the hearts of my fellow beings has deserted me, you are two who will be made completely happy by wealth. It is all I ask. You shall have mine and welcome."

"But to—to turn aside one moment from the main absurdity," stammered Denning, "why do you speak of your bequest as if it would be paid tomorrow? You are neither old nor ill."

"You disagree with your distinguished colleague, Dr. Stendhall," said the stranger, waving his hand toward the northwest corner of the square, where many carriages were waiting

"I AM KING MIDAS, AND MY TOUCH TURNS EVERYTHING INTO GOLD."

near the famous doctor's door. "I have just come from him, and he has told me that if there is any good I wish to do in the world I must make haste, for the night cometh—a week hence, perhaps tomorrow. But that is of no consequence. It is a beautiful world this morning, and I would like to see some one really happy in it."

"Stendhall," said Dr. Denning, "is an old"—he was about to say fakir, but professional courtesy checked him in time—"an old and eminent practitioner, yet it is possible you may be unnecessarily alarmed."

"I am not alarmed at all," replied the stranger cheerfully as he rose from his seat. "I am less disturbed than you were for a hundred dollars. Come, young people, let us go and make my will. I am King Midas, and my touch turns everything to gold."

He tapped Denning upon the region of the breast pocket, where the outline of a wallet (empty) was discernible. As he crossed to the other bench where he had left his cane he staggered slightly as if from weakness. The physician watched him narrowly.

"Those last words of his," he began, "sounded a little— Why, Brenda, what's the matter?"

The girl was frantically turning the pages of a newspaper.

"Here, here!" she whispered. "Isn't that the man?"

There was a two column picture, a halftone from a photograph. Denning stared at it open mouthed.

"Ah!" said the stranger, returning with so soft a step that he was looking over Denning's shoulder before the doctor perceived him. "My portrait, and quite good, is it not? But the account is, of course, wholly imaginary. I have read it. An irresponsible press, sir. A lunatic escapes from an asylum; his cousin, the wealthy Mr. Lawrence Allston, offers a reward of $2,500 for his capture. And this paper prints it, with my picture—mine! King Midas! Let us pay no more attention to such rubbish."

"I think, sir," said Denning, "that we should demand some satisfaction of Mr. Allston. We should go to his house at once. It is possible," he added, looking keenly into the other's face, "that he may invite us to breakfast."

The stranger leaned suddenly upon Denning's shoulder.

"True, true," said he. "And I am famished, now that you mention it; imagination, of course, for I dined and breakfasted at my palace as usual. Let us go and eat with Cousin Lawrence. The food there may not turn to gold. The young lady will await us here? How gracious of her! Au revoir, then." And he bowed with the finest courtesy to Brenda as Deming led him away.

It was an hour before the doctor returned.

"Here," he said, tapping upon his breast—"here, where King Midas touched me, I have turned to gold. Twenty-five hundred dollars, Brenda! Old Allston insisted. Upon my word, you should have seen our friend eat!"

"I pity him," said Brenda, with tears in her eyes. "Will he die soon?"

"That's a delusion," answered Denning. "There is nothing the matter with his heart, and he has not seen Stendhall. He's a hypochondriac with a special mania for making wills; hopeless, I'm afraid, and yet not wholly to be pitied. In his own mind he is a king, and surely he has had his royal wish this day. Through him there is one man in the world who is perfectly happy."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 17—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—The life of faith.—Gen. xii, 1-5; Heb. xi, 1-6.

One of the severest criticisms of the world upon the church is the emphasis that the church places upon the subject of faith. From many sides we hear the cry and demand that the church should preach more about the practical things of life and should not so often dwell upon the realm of faith. This criticism, however, is most unjust and unwarranted. The importance of faith to life cannot be estimated. Men live as they believe. What they are and what they do are above everything else determined by what they believe. The Puritans believed firmly in God, in God's control of the affairs of this life and in the teachings of the Scripture that there would be punishment for sin here in the life to come. The effect of this belief was clearly seen in their lives. At a certain period in the history of the people of France they practically discarded all belief in God and sacred things. The result of this unbelief was most apparent in their lives. They gave themselves up almost entirely to the things of this life that make for destruction rather than for development, and history has never seen worse effects of unbelief than were manifested in France at this time. Faith inspires life; its fruits are works, and therefore too much importance cannot be attached to the subject of faith and its relation to life.

1. The life of faith is necessary. Paul says, "We walk by faith and not by sight." There are many people in the world who try to walk by sight, but it is absolutely impossible. Our almost every act of life requires some faith. We eat because we believe that the food which we eat will support our lives. This is an exercise of faith. We believe in past history, in places that we have never seen and people that we have never known, and thus we constantly exercise faith in all relations of our lives. This being true, it is absurd folly that the exercise of religious faith should be so often discountenanced. If we must live by faith, why should it be incredible that we should exercise religious faith? If we can believe in men whom we have not seen, why can we not believe in God although we have not seen Him? If we can believe in distant countries which we have never visited, why can we not believe in a land beyond this life and look forward to habitation in it?

2. The life of faith is possible. To some people it seems impossible to believe in the great religious truths, in God, in the inspiration of the Scriptures and in the future life, but this is not impossible. That a life of faith is not impossible is proved by the multitude of those who have lived a life of faith, whose entire lives have been controlled and directed by their supreme faith in God and eternal things. The life of Abraham was purely a life of faith. God called him to go forth to a country that he had never seen. He went forth not knowing whither he went, but trusting the results of the future entirely to God. In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews we have a long array of patriarchs whose lives were based upon their faith in God and eternal truths. They endured hardships, they suffered many afflictions and persecutions because of their supreme faith in God. What is possible to them is also possible to us. If Abraham could live a life of faith in God, so can we. Such a life is possible, and it should be the aim of every one to base his life entirely upon his faith in God and God's control of this life and also of the future.

3. The life of faith is profitable. Without faith it is impossible to please God, but a life of faith is well pleasing in His sight, and God has promised great blessings to those who please Him in their lives. When Abraham was called to leave Ur of Chaldees, God made rich promises to him upon the condition of his obedience. These promises were all fulfilled. A life of faith and of service based upon faith is the most profitable life that we can live in this world.

Looking to Christ.

If we could only look away from ourselves, our miseries and sins, to the sinless Man of Sorrows! We scrutinize the sores in our own bosoms instead of laying them bare to the gaze of the great Physician. We contemplate our wickedness instead of the blood of the Lamb. We look down in the grave instead of up into heaven. If we could only cease from self entirely! The cravings of the old nature shrink rebuked when we catch a glimpse of the lonely Christ tempted in the wilderness, the patient Christ reviled by the vilest, the suffering Christ weeping tears of blood in Gethsemane, the agonized Christ on the cross. Look away to Him! Keep that one sublime figure before thine eyes alike in life and death!—Philadelphia Ledger.

Christian Unity.

Christian unity can never be brought about by hard hitting theologically, but only by Christians learning to love one another; then they can defy the devil to keep them apart. "Our unhappy divisions" keep him master of the field. A united church would soon dispossess him of his strongholds.—Bishop Johnston of Western Texas.

Communion.

Wherever the self is forgotten
And mine is transmitted to thine,
Though lips may grow ashen and falter,
There, on the Lord's holy altar,
Wait ever the bread and the wine.

For love is the bread that is broken,
The chalice upfilled to the brim,
And forgetting the self for another,
The tenderness shown to a brother,
Are done in remembrance of Him.

CONFESSION OF MURDER

Implicating the Wife of the Unsuspecting Victim

DELIBERATELY PLANNED

Woman Offered Five Hundred Dollars to Put Husband Out of the Way —Bound With Rope, Chloroformed and Thrown Into a River

Bennington, Vt., Aug. 16.—At the inquest held yesterday before Justice Shurtleff into the death of Marcus Rogers, whose body was found in the Walloomsac river here on Thursday, Levi Perham, aged 19, confessed that the man had been murdered, and implicated himself and the wife of the dead man as the participants in the crime. Levi Perham, his brother, Boyd, 24 years old, Mrs. Rogers and Miss Stella Bates were all placed under arrest as the result of the confession, the Bates woman, it is alleged, having obtained the chloroform with which the victim was first rendered unconscious.

Rogers separated from his wife several months ago and went to work for his brother at Hoosic Corners, his wife, it is alleged, having since been living here with another man. Rogers had his life insured for $500 for his wife's benefit, and this fact had a most important bearing upon the husband's death.

Rogers left Hoosic Falls last Tuesday morning for Bennington and was seen at different times during the day up to 8 p. m., after which hour he was not again seen until his body was discovered in the river Thursday morning, lying on its face, about two feet from the shore. The body was brought to the bank of the river and the face was found to be covered with scratches, while there was a severe bruise over the right eye. The left ear was badly torn and the nose badly contused. Rogers was known to have had $23 or $24 in money with him when he left Hoosic Falls, but when his pockets were examined after being taken from the river they contained but little over $2, besides his insurance papers and a silver watch.

The fact that the lungs were full of air led to the general belief that the man had been foully dealt with and because of the unfriendly relations existing between the dead man and his wife and the further fact that she was the only person who would be financially benefited by his death. Mrs. Rogers was placed under surveillance, and an inquest was ordered. A hat was found near the river, pinned to which was a note purporting to have been written by Rogers, in which the writer said that he had ended his own life, as there was nothing further to live for.

At the inquest yesterday witnesses gave testimony as to the relations between Rogers and his wife, but the climax was reached when Levi and Boyd Perham were placed on the stand. Boyd was first examined, and directly charged his brother and Mrs. Rogers with the crime of murder.

Boyd said that the deed had been under consideration for several weeks. He said Mrs. Rogers approached him a few days ago and offered to give him the amount of the insurance on her husband ($500) if he would go to Hoosic Corners and do away with him. He refused to have anything to do with such an undertaking. Failing to enlist him in her service, Boyd said that Mrs. Rogers approached his younger brother, Levi, and exerted such an influence over him that the latter consented to lure Rogers to Bennington, where a trap had been set for him.

Rogers, he said, was enticed to Morgan's grove, where on the evening of Tuesday he met his wife and Levi Perham. The meeting was apparently a friendly one, and, under the impression that his companions were showing him a trick with ropes, Rogers allowed them to bind him hand and foot. When in this helpless condition, they chloroformed him and threw him into the river. To create the impression that the man had committed suicide they wrote a note to that effect, signed Rogers' name to it and pinned it to his hat, which was hung upon a tree near the place where it was found by the parties who discovered the body Tuesday morning.

Perham's story created a tremendous sensation and the excitement was in no wise modified when Levi Perham took the stand at the conclusion of his brother's recital and confessed that all that had been revealed against himself was true.

There was no need for further witnesses, and the inquest was closed, and the arrests followed immediately.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Banks Anxious as to Ability to Meet Heavy Demand For Currency

New York, Aug. 16.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Money market conditions are of especial importance just now. Heavy crops will call for much currency and there is evidence of anxiety regarding the ability of banks to meet the demand without producing severe stringency.

Earnings of the railways during the first week of August exceeded last year's returns by 2.8 percent and those of 1900 by 17.8 percent. Speculation has been no heavier than it was a year ago, so that the expansion in bank exchanges represents legitimate trade.

Shoe manufacturers at the east have received practically all the fall orders that will be placed, and new business is now restricted to sample orders in spring lines. On the whole it has been a good season for New England producers in respect to the amount of business placed, but the question of prices is becoming serious owing to the upward tendency of materials. Buyers are still numerous in the Boston market and reports from the west are favorable. A heavy spring trade is anticipated.

Despite the very favorable reports from dry goods jobbers regarding the volume of business transacted, and the bright outlook for fall trade, conditions in the primary market and at the mills are now devoid of incident. Some lines of fine worsteds have not yet been opened, but no changes in prices are anticipated.

Considering the official report of cereal crop conditions the firmness of quotations during the past week has been somewhat surprising. With even less than average favorable weather during the remainder of the season there is prospect of much the heaviest yield on record for the aggregate grain production.

Typos Are Not Socialistic

Cincinnati, Aug. 16.—The spirit of the International Typographical union, which has been in session here all the week, was most emphatically shown in the adoption of a resolution against socialism. Max Hayes had been elected as a delegate of the union to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor and delegates claim that they did not know he was a socialist until after he was elected, and for this reason a strong resolution of instructions was adopted.

Parade of Strikers

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 16.—The strike of the fish skinners, cutters and handlers shows practically no change in the situation since the first hour of the trouble. There have been no breaks in the ranks of the strikers. The strikers last night paraded the streets, 400 men and women being in line, headed by a band, and were received with much enthusiasm.

Chief Executive Assailed

Havana, Aug. 16.—During the last few days several Havana newspapers have been making violent onslaughts upon President Palma, accusing him of incompetency, ignorance and weakness in not having yet done anything useful for the country. The Lucha claims that President Palma's promise to treat the various elements in Cuba alike have not been kept.

SAN FRANCISCO A LOSER

Fair Intended to Invest Millions In the City

DISPOSITION OF ESTATES

Of Dead Millionaire and His Wife Will Have a Bearing on Immense Holdings of the Late Senator—A Large Crop of Claimants

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—The sudden death of Charles Fair and his wife by the collapse of their automobile in France means a great loss to San Francisco. Just before his departure for Europe in May last, Fair had practically completed plans for $5,000,000 worth of improvements to the Fair property in this city and it was his intention on his return from his sojourn in Europe to sign contracts for the work in contemplation.

The matter of the disposition of the estates of the dead millionaire and his wife has given rise to some little speculation as to what will become of Charles Fair's portion of his deceased father's immense holdings. It is known that a very short time ago both Mr. and Mrs. Fair made wills disposing of their separate holdings and community property, but just what the documents provide for Messrs. Knight and Haggerty, the attorneys of Fair, do not feel at liberty to make public at this time.

Mrs. Fair was possessed of property to the value of $350,000, and it is thought her will bequeaths her holdings to relatives in New Jersey, but in the event of evidence being adduced that Mr. Fair succumbed to his injuries first, Mrs. Fair's interest in the community property will naturally revert to her heirs, and it is this point on which the disposition of the millionaire's estate largely depends.

It has become known that the public administrator has applied for letters of administration in the estate of Charles Fair and his wife. Judge Cook has not as yet granted the application of the public administrator, preferring to delay matters until proof of death has been received in this city. This delay will give the Fair attorneys an opportunity to prepare papers countering the plea for public administration.

There being some division of opinion among the friends and relatives of Charles Fair as to whether the will of Fair, now in the hands of his attorneys, was the last made by him, Judge Cook yesterday issued an order granting the attorneys permission to search the several safe deposit boxes used by Fair, so that if there is a will of more recent date, it will be brought to light. Herman Oelrichs, brother-in-law of the deceased millionaire, is emphatic in his assertion that Charles Fair made a will very shortly before leaving this city for Europe.

Claimants For Share of Estate

New York, Aug. 16.—The World says that Mrs. Anna E. Nelson, mother of the late Mrs. Charles Fair, accompanied by her son, A. G. Nelson, a half-brother of the late Mrs. Fair, will leave their home at Newmarket, N. J., for San Francisco, where they will employ lawyers to represent them in the distribution of the Fair estate. The paper also quotes Edward S. Lefler, a real estate dealer of this city, as saying that he and his family would take steps to protect their interests as heirs. Mr. Lefler's mother was a sister of Mrs. Charles Fair. Besides her mother, others of Mrs. Fair's heirs who live in the east are said to be Mrs. Elizabeth Bunnell of Union, N. J., Mrs. Laura Leonard of Caldwell, N. J., William B. Smith of Newmarket, N. J., and a number of members of the Lefler family.

Fair Had "Speed Madness"

Paris, Aug. 16.—The fatal accident to Mr. and Mrs. Fair is the sensation of the city. The manager of the firm which sold Fair the automobile in which he met his death declared yesterday that he had more than once warned Fair that he was too imprudent. He said Fair had the "speed madness." At the point where the accident occurred there is a steep and treacherous incline down which Mr. Fair must have gone at full speed, and his automobile probably attained a speed of from 87 to 93 miles an hour. Fair was not a skillful driver.

Manager Ellis of the Hotel Ritz, who has been at the Chateau Buisson du Mai in accordance with cabled instructions from Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Mr. Fair's sister, to arrange for the removal of the bodies and Mr. and Mrs. Fair's belongings to New York, says he saw Dr. Perriquet, who was summoned after the accident. Dr. Perriquet told Ellis that when he reached the scene of the disaster both Mr. and Mrs. Fair were dead. They had apparently been killed outright. The gatekeeper and other persons connected with the Chateau Buisson du Mai also thought that both the Fairs were dead when picked up.

TROOPS CALLED UPON

Speedily Checked Demonstration by Strikers at Shenandoah

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 16.—There was an outbreak last night under the nose of the troops in camp and for a time it looked as though serious trouble would occur. The disorder was the result of a mob chasing an alleged unfair workman. There were 50 or 60 men in the mob. As they chased the man up the railroad, throwing stones at him, the night watchman of the washery tried to rescue the man. The watchman was promptly thrown into the creek.

The crowd kept after the workman and he ran to the Reading railroad station, where a company of infantry was on provost duty. The company was immediately called into formation and attempted to hold the crowd back. The captain of the company prevented any serious trouble.

Word was sent to camp for reinforcements and in nine minutes the entire Twelfth regiment and a battalion of the Eighth were on the scene. The crowd quickly scattered and three men, who are alleged to have been participants in the assault on the watchman and the workman, were arrested and held for trial.

Early Settlement Predicted

Pittsburg, Aug. 16.—Indications point to the settlement of the anthracite coal strike on or before Sept. 1. Major Biddle, engineer commissioner, District of Columbia, is authority for this statement. In passing through here yesterday Major Biddle said an agent of the anthracite operators in Washington quietly told dealers there to prepare for shipments of anthracite coal after Sept. 1, adding that the mines will be in operation. The understanding is that the operators will make concessions and the miners also will make a sacrifice.

Tidal Wave Engulfs Towns

Culiacan, Mex., Aug. 16.—The lower portion of the city of Altata, on the Pacific coast, just west of here, has been completely destroyed by a tidal wave and no fewer than 30 people are known to have been drowned. The loss of life may be several times that number. The property loss is heavy. It is reported that several smaller coast towns situated above Altata were completely washed away by the same tidal wave and that the loss of life in these smaller places is very heavy.

Boer Refugees' Complaint

The Hague, Aug. 16.—The arrival here next week of the Boer generals, Botha, De Wet and Delarey, is expected to put a check to the recently renewed anti-British propaganda. Many of the Boer refugees here are awaiting the arrival of the generals to urge them to mediate with the British government in their behalf, but the greater number have complaints to make of the treatment they have received at the hands of those surrounding Mr. Kruger.

Hill Adjudged Insane

Boston, Aug. 16.—In the superior criminal court yesterday Drs. Fernald and Baldwin reported that they had found Herbert E. Hill a victim of homicidal mania, and Hill was sentenced by Judge Wait to confinement in the Worcester insane asylum. Hill is 21 years old, and on July 8 shot and killed his sister, Mrs. Alice C. Riley, and also shot his mother. Since his confinement in jail he has attempted suicide.

Concord, N. H., Aug. 16.—The citizens in mass meeting last night were asked by Mayor Sargent to appoint a committee of 12 to take general charge of the reception to President Roosevelt on Aug. 28, when he spends the afternoon in this city. Passaic, N. J., Aug. 16.—William Malcolm, for 20 years secretary of the Mutual Loan and Building association, has admitted, it is said, that the shortage in his accounts discovered some time ago may amount to about $100,000. It was at first thought that the total would not be more than $60,000.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Between the extraordinary favorable weather and the great shows that have been given, the business record at Keith's this summer is going to outstrip anything known at that popular place of amusement since it has been opened, and to judge by the announcement for the week of August 18, the management seems determined to keep its end up, even if the weather clerk fails in his. The Fadettes, with increased numbers, continue, making up their program from the most popular selections that have been rendered during the past 13 weeks, and this will be the last week but one for their delightful concerts. Some of the noted entertainers scheduled to appear are: Caroline Shepard, the noted oratoric and church singer, this being her debut in this line of work; Walter Ardelle and Richy Craig, the well known musical comedians, in their latest success, "I've Got Another Job Now;" the Lavines, an eccentric comedian and clever dancing girl; Whistling Tom Brown, who became famous when with "A Trip to Chinatown;" Crawford's Newsboy quintet, remarkably good dancers and vocalists; and Delbosy brothers, acrobats. The biograph pictures, it is worth noting, are growing more interesting than ever since the company began making special subjects. Underlined for the week of Aug. 25, is the well known actress, Valerie Bereger, and company, in a new comedy, 'Billie's First Love."

A LOW PRICED HOME.

House For a Narrow Lot—Cost Not Over $1,200.

[Copyright, 1902, by Dennis & Gastmeyer, 280 Broadway, New York.]

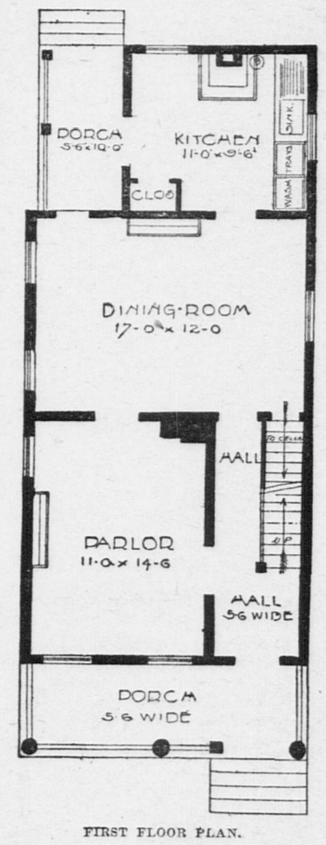

The elevation and floor plans of the house herewith described show a low priced, attractive looking dwelling, intended to be built on a narrow lot in a city suburb or a country town.

FRONT ELEVATION.

The first floor contains a hall, parlor, dining room and kitchen, while the second floor contains three bedrooms and a bathroom. There are cabinet mantels in the dining room and parlor.

The underpinning is built of brick. The superstructure is of frame, and the house has a gable in the front and rear, with plenty of attic room.

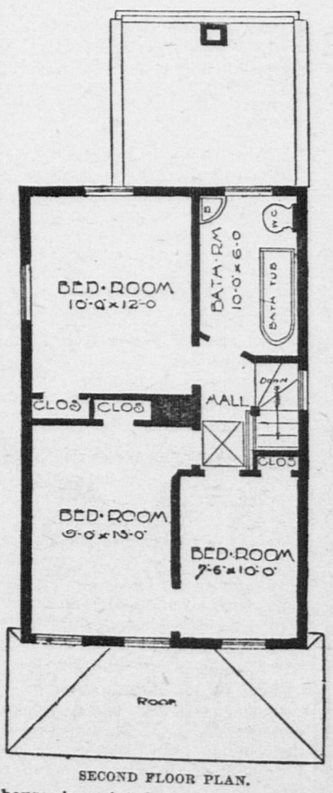

FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

The bedrooms are all of a good size and have plenty of closet room.

The bath is fitted up with sanitary plumbing fixtures, as is also the kitchen.

The exterior is covered with white pine bevel siding. The body of the house is painted white, with green blinds, and the roof is stained a dark green.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The house can be built in most places for $1,200.

Varnish For Bric-a-brac Work.

This varnish may be prepared by placing two pounds of white lac in a gallon of water over the fire and boiling until the lac melts; then add one-half pound of borax and stir thoroughly, which prevents the lac from precipitating. It may be colored with any aniline dye soluble in water. It may also be used with advantage on many kinds of work. It is quite waterproof and dries hard and sharp, with a good gloss. Recently it has been used extensively to replace the more expensive spirit varnishes.

INDIAN AND BUFFALO.

How the Latter Turned Hunter and Chased the Red Man.

A retired officer of the Northwest mounted police who took part in a Missouri buffalo run forty years ago describes the impression at the time as of an earthquake. The galloping horses, the rocking mass of fleeing buffalo, the rumbling and quaking of the ground under the thunderous pounding, were all like a violent earthquake. The same gentleman tells how he once saw a wounded buffalo turn on an Indian hunter. The man's horse took fright. Instead of darting sideways to give him a chance to send a last finishing shot home the horse became wildly unmanageable and fled. The buffalo pursued. Off they rushed, rider and buffalo, the Indian craning over his horse's neck, the horse blown and fagged and unable to gain one pace ahead of the buffalo, the great angry beast covered with foam, with eyes like fire, pounding and pounding, closer and closer to the horse till rider and buffalo disappeared over the horizon. "To this day I have wondered what became of that Indian," said the officer, "for the horse was losing and the buffalo gaining when they went behind the bluff." This incident illustrates a trait seldom found in wild animals, a persistent vindictiveness.—A. C. Laut in Outing.

The Wild Strawberry.

The wild strawberry is very widely diffused over the surface of the earth, being found in the chill regions of the north as well as in the sunny climes of the south. It is not a tropical plant, however, and except on mountain sides is not found south of latitude 38 degrees north. On the European continent it grows extensively from Lapland and the Shetland isles to Italy and Greece. It is also found throughout western Asia, but is unknown in China and Japan. It has grown abundantly on the bleak hills of Iceland for centuries. It is found in America from Labrador and British Columbia to the pine woods of the southern states and on the high lands of Mexico and the Andes. The hardy plant, with its tiny scarlet berry, may be said to girdle the earth on the line of the polar circle and several hundred miles southward, except that it is not found in the basin of the river Amur, in Siberia.

Brougham and Mulled Port.

Lord Brougham, who as a member of the house of commons was a most abstemious man, upon his promotion to the peerage acquired less commendable habits. During his long and impassioned appeal to the lords to refrain from rejecting the reform bill of 1832 "five tumblers of mulled port, with a dash of brandy, were brought to him at intervals." When he came to his last sentence ("I warn you, I implore you—yea, on my bended knee I supplicate you—reject not this bill") he knelt on the woolsack, whence he slipped to the floor. It is recorded in the "Lives of the Lord Chancellors" that "he remained some time as if in prayer, but his friends, alarmed lest he should be suffering from the effects of mulled port, picked him up and placed him safely on the woolsack."

Attar of Roses.

In trade the rose is very valuable, as the attars of India and Persia sell at a very high price, and there are large districts of rose gardens in which men and women are employed, the harvest months being March and April. In Turkey also rose farming is largely carried on, and a very fine attar is got from the rose grown in Kashmir. Even rosewater is a luxury which is by no means to be despised as to price, but the attar of roses is immensely costly, and it takes an enormous number of flowers to distil even a few drops.

The attar is said to have been first discovered by the favorite wife of Jehan Jeer, through whose garden ran a canal of rosewater, on the surface of which the begum found a few drops of the precious attar or oil floating.

It Was Up.

There was a newly wedded pair whose honeymoon trip took them across the Atlantic. The bride had been something of a yachtswoman and was not affected by the swell, but her mate was a bad sailor and took to the rail late on the first day out. She did what she could to comfort him, but he was difficult. She thought a touch of the romantic might get him out of his mood, so she tried this:

"The moon is up; isn't it, darling?"

"Yes," he said languidly—"that is, if I swallowed it."—Philadelphia Times.

—The Somerville Journal says that "the young woman who announces with decision that she never means to marry would be surprised and pained sometimes, if she could know that it would be really so.

IMMUNE COTTONSEED.

Experiments by the Department of Agriculture to Prevent "Wilt."

A special to the Boston Transcript from Valdosta, Ga., where the United States department of agriculture has been making experiments to see if "wilt" or "black heart" could not be prevented in cotton, says that the result is that seed have been obtained that are totally immune to this disease.

The process has been on the line of "breeding," the seed being carried up to the highest quality of healthfulness by careful cultivation. Professor Orton says that the experiments show that the only hope of the farmers in getting rid of the disease where it has once got a foothold is by the use of immune seed. The disease is said to be of fungus origin and remains in the soil to make its appearance after seven years, the land having been planted with other crops in the meantime.

Professor Orton regards "black heart" as the deadliest enemy of cotton and one with which farmers cannot afford to trifle. If allowed to go unchecked, he thinks it will in a few years ravish the sea island cotton fields as it has the upland fields in some sections of Alabama and other cotton growing states.

Professor Orton also had an experiment in planting Egyptian cotton, which was tried in this section this year, but the result leads to the conclusion that the Egyptian staple is not adapted to the soil and climate of this section. There appears to be too much moisture, producing a large, woody plant with little fruit upon it. The tests that have been made in Texas and along the Mexican border are said to have been much more satisfactory.

RAILWAY AMBULANCE CARS.

Seventy-seven Stations In Germany to Be Equipped With Them.

To insure immediate aid to persons injured in train wrecks the state railway administration in Germany has decided to maintain ambulance cars at seventy-seven of the principal stations throughout the country, says a Berlin dispatch to the New York Times. The cars will contain a full hospital equipment, including operating tables and beds, calculated particularly to render everything necessary in the direction of first relief.

Each car is to be in charge of a medical officer, while all railway employees will be required to be trained in the performance of first aid duties. The cars will be so located that none will be more than an hour and a half away from a hospital, thus rendering quick transportation for victims who require serious attention.

Within the past year there have been an unusual number of railway fatalities in Germany due to the inaccessibility of medical facilities.

NEW LIFE PRESERVER.

Food, a Lamp, a Trumpet and Weapons Can Be Carried In It.

A new life preserver has recently been tested on Lake Geneva, writes the Paris correspondent of the New York World. It is composed of a costume of india rubber, opened at the waist, which can be very rapidly donned. It is waterproof, with several airtight compartments. These can be used as pockets for a lamp, provisions, a trumpet to call for aid and even a weapon for repulsing the attack of dangerous fishes.

Half of the body remains at the surface of the water. The inventor in his life preserver has remained in the water five hours. But that is a mere bagatelle. He intends to pass fifteen days in the sea at Havre.

The Next Great Alpine Tunnel.

Continental tourists will be interested in a project now believed to be very near realization for the construction of a tunnel through the Jura near the Col de la Faucille, says the Westminster Gazette. The practical result of the execution of the plan will be that the route from Paris to Geneva will be direct instead of roundabout and that Geneva, instead of Lausanne, will be the natural point at which to enter Switzerland for the Rhone valley resorts and proceed by the Simplon to Milan. The actual distance from Paris to Milan will, indeed, only be one kilometer less by the new route than by the old, but time will none the less be saved. Owing to the steep gradients trains can only creep from Pontarlier to Lausanne. By the new route they will be able to run at express speed all the way from Dijon to Geneva.

Monument to British at Delhi.

The secretary for India has commissioned a London firm to execute a granite monument to be erected at Raipur cemetery, Delhi, says the London Standard. Portraits of the king and queen and of the late Queen Victoria will be carved on the sides of the monument, together with the following inscription: "Sacred to the memory of the officers and men of the British army buried here who fell before Delhi from June to September, 1857, gallantly upholding their country's cause."

Pills For Mosquitoes.

Quinine having proved inadequate to forestall malaria carried by mosquitoes, Professor Grassi of Rome is experimenting with a pill that, besides quinine, contains iron, citron, arsenic and "bitter extract," says the New York Journal. Grown persons take six, children half as many, pills, and no mosquito goes near them.

Farming by Electricity.

A professor in Finland is trying a method of using electricity in agriculture. A seedfield is covered by a network of wire, and a strong current is turned on nights and chilly days.

SENSATION IN CHURCH

When the Minister's Right to Preach Was Questioned

THE DISTURBER IS EJECTED

After Attempt by Deacons to Remove Him, Which Resulted In a General Mixup—Had a Loaded Revolver and Was "Prepared to Die"

Boston, Aug. 18.—St. Paul's Baptist church (colored), corner of Tremont and Camden streets, which has been the centre of a number of bitter church rows during the past few months, and from which the former pastor, Rev. Simon P. W. Drew, was forcibly ejected on Sunday recently, was yesterday the scene of another disturbance, which came near being attended by serious results.

Rev. Herbert S. Hill, who had been delegated to preach by the Boston city mission, had arisen to begin his sermon at the morning service, when William Dennis, who occupied a front pew, arose and excitedly demanded to knew by whose authority Mr. Hill occupied the pulpit. The deacons tried to quiet him, but, failing to do so, called upon the police, who had been detailed to the church, to eject him.

As they hesitated to interfere under the circumstances, the deacons attempted to take Dennis out and a general mix-up ensued between the factions. Dennis made a movement toward his hip pocket, but he was pinioned, and was finally taken from the church, and later placed under arrest on charge of disturbing a religious meeting.

When searched at the police station, a fully loaded 32-calibre revolver was found in his pocket, together with several loose cartridges. He was released under $100 bail.

The police state that Dennis told them that he went to the meeting "prepared to die," and they believe that some one would surely have been injured if he had not been so quickly overpowered.

The services proceeded after quiet had been restored.

Significant Declarations

Shanghai, Aug. 18.—The viceroys of Nan-Kin and Hankow and governor of Pe-Chi-Li, in separate conferences with Mr. Barrett, commissioner for the St. Louis exposition, have declared that the critical time has arrived when China must make a supreme effort for the promotion of commerce and friendly intercourse with America and Europe and that as an evidence of her good faith in this intention and her appreciation of the generous policy of the United States toward her, China will make an unprecedented exhibit at the St. Louis exposition.

Fatal Burning Accidents

Somerville, Mass., Aug. 18.—There were two fatal burning accidents in this city yesterday, the victims being William Lyons, 3 years old, and Della O'Keefe, 24 years old, employed as a domestic. The Lyons child arose before his parents, and finding some matches on a table lighted one. He was clad only in his nightdress, and this caught fire, and the little fellow was terribly burned. Just how the O'Keefe woman met her death is not known, the family by whom she was employed being at church.

Colonial Troops at Abbey

London, Aug. 18.—At the invitation of Rev. Mr. Bradley, dean of Westminster, the colonial troops still in England attended a farewell service yesterday at Westminster Abbey at which Canon Weldon officiated. The privilege of attending service at Westminster Abbey has been greatly desired by the colonial troops, as the building is still in its coronation dress and closed for public services.

A Shortage of $618,000

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—By a vote of 117 to 12 the supreme lodge of Knights of Pythias passed a resolution suspending John A. Hinsey, former president of the board of control, from the supreme lodge, pending the decision of the cases against him in the courts of Illinois. Hinsey, it is alleged, mismanaged the funds of the endowment rank in such manner that there is a shortage of $618,000.

'MUST AND WILL WIN"

Anthracite Coal Strikers Declared to Be as Firm as Ever

Indianapolis, Aug. 18.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America arrived here yesterday on his way to Spring Valley, Ills., to visit his family. "The situation in the strike field remains the same," said Mitchell. "There has been no change and I do not anticipate any until the trouble is finally adjusted. The men are just as determined as ever to win and will stick it out as long as necessary, so that it all depends on the action of the operators when the strike will terminate.

"The financial end of the strike is being kept up in a very satisfactory manner and we have been able to relieve every case of distress. There is no doubt that we will be able to continue to do this.

"It is true that some of the miners have left the field. When the strike first broke out quite a number of the non-English speaking young men returned to their native countries and other miners have gone to the bituminous field and secured employment. There has been very little emigration of miners of late, however. I expect that, all told, about 18,000 men have left the anthracite field since the strike began. Except for these, the number of strikers is as large as ever.

"There have been some shipments of soft coal into the eastern market, but I cannot say how many tons have been sent there. There have been no shipments of anthracite coal since the strike began and the supply of that article is now practically exhausted."

Mr. Mitchell insists the men must and will win the strike.

Preparing a Grand Welcome

Manila, Aug. 18.—Governor Taft is expected to reach here next Thursday. He left Singapore, Straits Settlement, last Friday on board the United States gunboat General Alava. The plans for the reception to be given Governor Taft are most elaborate. The shipping in the harbor will be decorated when he arrives and a procession of small craft is to accompany the General Alava up the bay. A series of arches are being erected along the line of Governor Taft's march from where he will disembark from a launch, to Malacanan palace, where a reception will be given him.

Pope Overruled Physician

Rome, Aug. 18.—The pope is in such good health that it was not thought necessary to suspend the Saturday audiences as has hitherto been the custom. In order to give the pontiff strength for a fatiguing ceremony such as the great name day reception of yesterday. The pope's physician insisted upon limiting the number of guests to 200, instead of the usual 500. The efforts to obtain invitation to the name day reception was so persistent that the pontiff overruled his physician's advice and had an additional hundred guests included.

NEW HAMPSHIRE OLD HOME WEEK.

The Fourth Annual Ushered in with Huge Bon Fires—Gala Plans.

Concord, N. H., Aug. 18.—New Hampshire's fourth annual Old Home Week continues to be favored with beautiful autumn weather brought forward into the middle of August. Yesterday was Old Home Sunday and more than 100 of the ancient meeting-houses of the state were thronged with worshippers to hear new sermons by old preachers and old hymns by new choruses.

The 425,000 people resident in New Hampshire, and the 10,000 more who have come back to the Granite state for the Old Home Week, for the most part gazed heavenward Saturday night and watched the flames that rose from welcoming bonfires on hundreds of hills. The custom of opening the week with an illumination and bonfires has grown more popular each year, until Saturday night almost every one of the more than a hundred towns celebrating the festival kindled from one to 20 beacon lights.

In this part of the state the light that could be seen at the greatest distance and that which attracted the most attention was from a monster fire on the summit of Mount Kearsarge. This city was surrounded, however, by a circle of lesser lights on hill tops in several towns. News comes of great pyrotechnic displays in other sections of the state, in the mountains, by the lake shore, and on the sea beaches.

The Brewery Strike

Boston, Aug. 18.—It is deemed probable that a settlement of the brewery strike will take place at an early date. The Retail Liquor Dealers' association tendered its good offices to bring about a settlement of the controversies. The strike has now lasted nearly 20 weeks and the loss in wages to the workers is not less than $300,000 up to date, while they have received about $90,000 in strike benefits, the funds being disbursed at the rate of $5000 to $6000 weekly. The loss of the master brewers must be very heavy as the boycott of Boston beer has been very severe.

Three Will Be Disappointed

Barre, Vt., Aug. 18.—With the action of the Democratic and Prohibition caucuses Saturday night there are four candidates for representative in this district to be voted for at the state election on Sept. 2. The Democrats nominated G. H. Pape and tabled a resolution instructing him, if elected, to vote for a high license local option bill with a referendum, which would have made him virtually a Clement man. The Prohibitionists nominated Rev. E. M. Fuller, pastor of the local Baptist church.

She was seen in the city at about the time that the lad disappeared.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

To the Citizens of Quincy.

It gives us pleasure to announce to the public that we have secured the services of Mr. A. B. Sparrow to assist in our outside work. He is well known to many of our citizens, having in former times assisted for a number of years in collecting the advertisements for the Quincy Directory, published by Sampson & Co. of Boston.

Mr. Sparrow is a gentleman who needs no recommendation, and our citizens will find what he promises will be carefully looked after.

He will call on our patrons, write their advertisements when desired, and aid them in bringing their goods and wares to the attention of the public.

The growth of our business has kept us so closely in our office that we were unable to call on our merchants as often as we wished. But we believe Mr. Sparrow, who has had many years of experience in writing and arranging advertisements, will be able to fill the gap, and our patrons will find him to be of great assistance to them.

THE PUBLISHERS.

Good Afternoon.

The interest which local pastors take in their work is really surprising. With twenty-five or more religious societies in the city, and all notified that announcements of services will be inserted free in the local papers, only four responded on Saturday. Only two or three of the churches are closed for the month. If the pastors are away, arrangements should be made to forward the notices. Probably there is more need of religious work during the summer months than during the winter.

Work on Quincy avenue should be forthwith suspended while the Quincy Point bridge is closed to travel, and the avenue immediately put in a passable condition. It is an outrageous condition of affairs to have both these streets closed to travel at the same time. The Commissioner of Public Works should have had several weeks notice when it was proposed to close the Quincy Point bridge, and he should have given public notice thereof in the newspapers and by cloth posters. If the contractors or County Commissioners were direlect in notifying Quincy officials, said officials should have ascertained for themselves. It is a serious matter for the teaming between the South Shore towns and Boston, and greatly to the disadvantage of Quincy. The city should not be caught napping that way.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Coronation of Edward VII is an event of the past, for, despite his fears that it would never be done, he has been crowned King of Great Britain with appropriate and solemn ceremony. It was robbed of much of spectacular value by the postponement which the illness of the King made necessary, but the event was not lacking in brilliancy, and the English people have their King duly crowned and seated on the throne so long and so greatly honored by his sainted mother. The experience he has been through in his late sickness has wrought somewhat of a change in King Edward, as his recent address to his people affords ample proof.—Lynn Item.

A GOOD DINNER

And Lots of Sports at Crescent Park, R. I.

The Quincy Granite Manufacturers.

On Their Annual Outing—Those in the Party.

The Granite Manufacturers of this city held their annual outing at Crescent Park, R. I., on Saturday. The day was most delightful and there was a very large attendance.

The members gathered at the South station, Boston, and took a special train at 9.10 for the Park. Before leaving Boston each member was presented with a buttonhole bouquet by Mr. George Elcock, which he had gathered from his attractive grounds at West Quincy.

There were 162 on the train as it pulled out of Boston, and among the number was our aged and highly respected citizen, Charles L. Badger, who was 82 years old yesterday, but as young and smart as many of the party.

It was a little cloudy in the morning and some of the party thought it might be a wet day; and a few drops of rain fell when the members reached the park, but not enough to require an umbrella or any uneasiness, for in a few minutes the sun was out and a more delightful day could not have been wished for.

The run from Boston to the park, 50 miles, took one hour and 10 minutes. No longer than it takes the street cars from Quincy to Nantasket beach.

On the cars the committee of arrangements presented each member with a beautiful white ribbon badge bearing the following words:

Granite Manufacturers' Asso., Quincy,
Crescent Park, Aug. 16, 1902.

On arriving at the park the members separated until the noon hour which was at one o'clock. The grounds are very extensive covering many acres, and there were amusements of all kinds. It was the first time the writer has ever visited this noted place, and he was surprised to find such a large variety of amusements and all first class.

No one sport attracted more attention of the members than the base ball games by the granite men between the married and single men in the morning, and the old men and younger ones after the banquet. The following is the score:

MARRIED MEN.	Runs.	SINGLE MEN.	Runs.
R. Prout,	3	J. McDonnell,	2
M. McIntosh,	1	T. Milne,	2
H. Nichols,	2	W. Spargo,	2

In the morning the young men were full of life and vigor and they used up the married men quite badly, as will be noticed by the score; and after the fifth inning the game was called off so to give the married men a chance to recuperate at the dinner table; and they took advantage of the opportunity and whipped the boys unmercifully in the afternoon as will be seen by the following score:

Thomas W. Smith, scorer. A. M. Hunt, umpire.

At one o'clock the twenty-third annual dinner was served in excellent good taste in a large building, where several hundred could be easily accommodated. The members and guests were called to order by the President, Harry S. Nicoll. He said it was not the intention to have speaking therefore he would not detain the members but a few moments; he wished to make one or two announcements: that those who preferred temperance drinks could exchange the beer in front of them for anything they desired. Then all were invited to partake, which they did most heartily, as there was an abundance of good things, both to eat and to drink, as will be noticed by the following

After they had eaten all any decent gentleman would attempt to, except a granite man, President Nicoll called the assembly to order, and said that they had one familiar face present. The oldest member of the association, not in years, but in membership. He was present at the first annual dinner twenty-three years ago, and could always be found at their gatherings. He called upon Henry McGrath for a few words. As McGrath rose he received a hearty applause from the members. He said he was not prepared to make a speech, as it was understood there were to be no speeches, but he was pleased to greet the large gathering of granite men, and hoped they would all enjoy this occasion.

Ellsworth Morgan manager of the Granite Quarries Company, James Elcock, A. M. Hunt of the Granite Publication of Boston, offered a few words by request of the president. Then there was a call for the next mayor, Fred L. Jones.

As he rose he was greeted with applause. He said he had nothing to say politically but he had something he would like to speak about in the granite business, but he did not think it was the time or place then to make a speech upon the subject. He believed it was the duty of the granite manufacturers to own quarries. Only 12 of the 130 members now had quarries of their own, and the time was coming when the members would get left. There were times now when it was very difficult to get granite from the quarries; which made it very difficult to fill orders. And he believed it would grow worse instead of better, unless the granite manufacturers looked more carefully about this branch of their business. He was opposed to trusts, but he did not blame Mr. Morgan for what he did. He would do the same thing if he was manager of the Quincy Granite Quarries Company.

Much credit is due the committee of arrangements, Harry S. Nicoll, William T. Spargo and Thomas F. Burke, for the able and successful manner the excursion was carried out.

In the Suit of C. L. Prescott.

To Recover $50,000 Because of Slander.

Henry H. Faxon received his official notice this morning that Charles L. Prescott, the City Scavenger, had commenced suit against him for $50,000. The notice came in the form of a summons issued by the supreme court, commanding him to appear before said court on the first Monday of October next to answer unto Charles L. Prescott in an action of tort and that his goods and estate were attached to the value of $50,000.

Mr. Faxon is not the only one interested in this suit, as the summons also runs to the Globe Newspaper Co., a corporation having its usual place of business in Boston.

Mr. Faxton does not know which newspaper article it is that he is being sued upon, but it is probably one which the Globe has published and they are thus made a party in the suit.

Capt. Dan McQueen of the yacht Eudora took a party of eight couple on a fishing trip yesterday. Dan knows just where the fish loiter and secured a large supply of cod, haddock, etc.

Ernest Shay, the well known clerk at Boynton & Russell's grocery store, has gone on a two weeks' vacation to Hesboro, Maine, where he will join a yachting party and sail along the Canadian coast.

After a number of years faithful service with H. L. Kincaide & Co., Mrs. Mary Lane severed her connection with that firm on Saturday night. Her many friends and customers will miss her.

At the annual meeting of Joss Bros. & Co., granite manufacturers, held last week, these officers were elected: President, John Joss; clerk and treasurer, James Joss; directors, John Joss, James Joss, Alex Emslie, R. R. Smith, Jonathan Dinnie.

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Hall, Jr., who sailed early in the summer from New York to Naples, and have since been travelling through southern Europe, Germany, Switzerland, and France, are concluding their trip abroad with a tour of the college and cathedral towns and will sail for Boston on Saturday on the new steamship Hanoverian of the Leyland line.

Bicycle Club Outing.

The Clan McGregor bicycle club, with ladies, held its annual outing on Sunday at Hotel Shelton, Adams Shore, and enjoyed a pleasant outing. A shore dinner was served the party at the hotel to which all did ample justice. President Alex. McDonald occupied the seat of honor at the head of the table, and on either side of him was Vice President James Allen and Secretary Alex. Russell. The guests were Daniel McLennon of the Board of Registrars and ex-Tax Collector Albion I. Dixon. The committee of arrangements were James Craig, William Kingstree, Alex. Booth, George Robinson and John Kennedy.

Store closes at 1 Wednesdays, during July and August.

We keep open Monday, Friday and Saturday Evenings.

The West Quincy base ball team visited Lynn on Saturday, and every member made one or more safe hits, in fact the club led at the bat, but they lost 9 to 6 to the Lynn club.

The West Quincys earned 5 of their 6 runs, and but for a painful accident to Doran, their pitcher, and the fatal fifth innings would have won handsomely. Spiller at short and Logan at right did excellent work. Parks who was substituted for Doran in the sixth shut out the home team in the remaining innings.

Nine of the West Quincys struck out, and once they were doubled up by Gorman, McEarney and Donovan.

A Hot Time.

From the cases in the district court this morning there were warm times at Atlantic beach on Sunday. There were several parties at the beach. In one were William Ricker, Minnie Worcester and her husband and others, in another Mr. and Mrs. William Banner and two women. The trouble is supposed to have been started by Alfred George, who it is alleged was exposing himself. The affair ended in the arrest of George for indecent exposure, William Ricker for behaving in a disorderly manner, and of William Bonner for assault on Minnie Worcester.

It was a rather mixed up affair, but from the evidence it appears that Bonner made an assault on George who it was alleged had exposed himself to his wife. Mrs. Worcester objected to his taking the law into his own hands and assaulting the man, and she told him so. Mrs. Worcester alleges that after Bonner had called her a bad name he struck her. Then it was that Ricker appeared on the scene and there were more words.

In the meantime George had been arrested and Bonner had moved away from the scene leaving Mrs. Bonner and friends. Then Mrs. Bonner alleges that Ricker used indecent language and called her names and Ricker alleges that Mrs. Bonner called him names.

Bonner admitted that he struck the man who exposed himself but denied striking Mrs. Worcester.

The court fined Ricker and George $5 each and discharged Bonner.

TODAY'S COURT.

John J. Cunniff was fined $15 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

John P. McDonald was fined $3 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

John D. McDonald was arraigned for assault on his wife at Holbrook. Case continued until Thursday.

John Doe alias William Ricker was arraigned for violation of the City Ordinance at Quincy by behaving in a disorderly manner upon the public streets. He was fined $5.

William Bonner was arraigned for assault on Minnie Worcester at Quincy. He was found not guilty and was discharged.

For the Ledger.

A Great Surprise.

The stately structure on School street, known as the "Baxter mansion" is occupied by Mrs. Christina Nelson, an ambitious Swedish lady, who is conducting a first-class boarding house. About two years ago Mrs. N. succeeded in securing this grand old homestead for a boarding and lodging resort and when she pennyless beheld the numerous big parlors, empty, lofty and antique, the future did not scare her one bit, as it undoubtedly would any other lone, forsaken widow. Her great ambition and "go ahead," was her salvation upon which her brilliant success has been assured. The large rooms are now fitted with new modern furniture and the "ghost" has been driven out.

Mrs. Nelson has placed round her splendid table a good substantial crowd, of paying guests, and her ever ready wit and winning ways has gained to her credit a host of friends among her country people. She is very popular and "Christina" is a household word in every Swedish home, and her many friends and few enemies are agreed that "fru" Nelson is fully entitled to the honor which the loving society last Saturday night showed in her behalf.

Someone had learned that this day, Aug. 16, was Mrs. Nelson's forty-fourth birthday, and in possession of this secret a few Swedes undertook to work a surprise for the good woman. It was therefore mutually understood that all partaking should meet at the O. W. Jones' grocery store on Granite street from which place a team would take the eatables and supplies bought for the occasion; and that all, in a body, should suddenly burst in upon their friend.

The happy Swedes gathered per agreement, on fixed time and place, but their astonishment and dismay defies description when they, in this establishment, found Mrs. Nelson herself, right among them. It was now "diamond cut diamond," and while Mrs. Nelson's attention was devoted to her purchases, nimble hands transferred the refreshments from the store to the team. Her surprise when she reached home was probably not quite so genuine as it should have been.

The jolly company, upon reaching the big "white house" took immediate possession thereof. The Swedes have a free and easy way of making things "hum" and a great jubilee with games and dances, music, song and speeches concluded Mrs. Nelson's forty-fourth birthday surprise party.

Mrs. Nelson was, during the evening, presented with a large sum of good United States gold coin, a great birthday cake and a beautiful bouquet of flowers; and when the good Swedes at Quincy saw that the Sabbath day was approaching and that their mission was fulfilled, they bade farewell to the queen of the evening, whom we believe shall long and with sweet remembrance look back upon her forty-fourth birthday. H. J.

—The descendants of Jones and Lydia Prescott Fairbanks will have their annual gathering at Dedham on Wednesday.

BURGLAR THUMPED.

Discovered in House of Councilman Nichols

Escaped Without Arrest.

A Good Description of the Intruder Obtained.

Councilman Walter F. Nichols had a lively personal encounter with a burglar at his home on Newport avenue early Sunday morning. The unwelcome visitor departed in haste and probably with the opinion that Councilman Nichols is a good hitter.

COUNCILMAN NICHOLS.

It was about two o'clock when Mr. Nichols heard a noise that sounded like the opening of a door. For a time he paid no attention to it, thinking some of the family who had been away were returning home. Then he heard the noise again and arose to investigate.

He found the family all at home but found the back door leading to the back stairway open. At the same time he heard a noise of some one moving about but could see nothing. He then called to his son to get up and assist him in finding out what the trouble was.

Mr. Nichols then started down stairs and had nearly reached the lower floor when he heard his son cry out "What are you doing here."

It seems that the young man had discovered a man crouched in the corner of a room and sprang upon him and struck him three times and dragged the intruder down the stairs. When they reached the bottom floor Mr. Nichols struck the fellow a stinging blow on the head which forced him through the glass of the door, and he made his escape.

Patrolman Lyons was found and the two searched for the man, but were unable to locate him. Mr. Nichols describes the man as about 5 feet 8 inches tall, quite stout with a round chubby face. He wore a slouch hat and dark clothes.

GRAND LAWN PARTY.

Gold Watches Presented to Pupils of St. Marys.

The annual lawn party of St. Mary's church was held Saturday afternoon and evening on the grounds adjoining the parochial residence on Crescent street. A large tent was erected on the grounds and in this were several tables for the sale of useful and fancy articles, refreshments, etc., which were presided over by young ladies. The Working Boys' Home band furnished music and during the evening the attendance was so large that it was almost impossible to move about.

Rev. A. F. Roche, the pastor of St. Mary's, Rev. William J. Foley and Rev. John J. Powers the curates and several other priests were present.

Early in the year Fr. Roche had offered gold watches to the two most studious and best behaved pupils of the Sunday school, and these he publicly presented to Ambrose Shortle and Mary A. Geary. In presenting the watches, Fr. Roche took occasion to thank the people for the assistance given him in the erection of the new church, and expressed a hope that the edifice would soon be completed. He also spoke of the necessity of a sound moral and religious training as a foundation for civic virtues. He also referred to the work being done by St. Mary's parish.

The affair was a most successful one in every way.

An Apt Answer.

Smith—What do you mean by swearing before my wife?

Jones—Excuse me; I didn't know she wanted to swear.—Chicago American.

Tutelary Trees.

Ancient people had their tutelary trees just as they had their tutelary gods—the former being the altars and shrines of the latter. Among the Scandinavians the ash was held to be the most sacred tree. Serpents, according to their belief, dared not approach it. Hence the women left their children with entire confidence under its shade while they went on with their harvesting.—Gentleman's Magazine.

A Gentle Hint.

Lenders—Do you ever think of that "ten spot" you borrowed of me?

Borroughs—Don't worry. I still have it in mind.

Lenders—Don't you think it about time you relieved your mind?—Exchange.

Valedictory.

"The paper was here to stay," writes a Georgia editor, "but it accidentally made money enough to leave."—Atlanta Constitution.

There's no possibility of being witty without a little ill nature. The malice of a good thing is the barb that makes it stick.—Sheridan.

Mystery as Deep as Ever

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 18.—The Clark case is as deep in mystery as ever and the work of the entire state police has brought out nothing new, although it is still kept up with ceaseless vigor. The Clarks still continue to hope that their son is alive and that he will ultimately be returned.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, hut in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

LEON PERHAM'S STORY

Miss Bates Not Present at the Killing of Rogers

OFFICERS GATHER EVIDNCE

Tending to Show That Participants In Crime Had Uncomplimentary Characters—Perham Points Out Spot Where Murder Was Committed

Bennington, Vt., Aug. 18.—The details of the carefully planned murder of Marcus Rogers, which were brought out at the inquest when Leon Perham confessed that the crime was committed by himself and Mrs. Rogers, the wife of the victim, have been fruitful topics for discussion here.

In the earlier reports there was a confusion of names, by which it was made to appear that Levi Perham was the accomplice of Mrs. Rogers. It was Leon Perham, however, who confessed the murder after his brother Levi had testified against him at the inquest, and Leon Perham, Mrs. Rogers, and Stella Bates are now held without bail for the grand jury.

Leon Perham has supplemented his confession of Friday with the statement that he and Mrs. Rogers were the only ones concerned in Marcus Rogers' death, but that Stella Bates knew all the facts in the case.

Miss Bates also made a statement to the effect that she did not purchase the chloroform in Hoosic, as stated at the inquest, but that Leon Perham bought it in this village. The officers discredit her story, however,

Miss Bates has worked here as a domestic in various families, and has been very intimate with Mrs. Rogers.

Mrs. Rogers is but 27 years of age, Leon Perham is 24, and Miss Bates is about the same age.

In searching the home of the Perhams, the officers found a piece of rope similar to that used in binding Rogers' arms and legs before he was thrown into the water.

The townspeople are reserved in their reference to the character of the persons connected with the affair. Many speak in uncomplimentary terms of Mrs. Rogers and the Perhams, and aside from the fact that the wife of the victim was living with another man, a number of things have been brought to light which are not favorable to her or the others in the case.

The officers are carefully gathering evidence bearing upon the relations of Mrs. Rogers to her husband, and the friendship of Leon Perham and Stella Bates. Harry Cummings of this place has told the police that on Wednesday morning, about 1 o'clock, he saw three persons near the place where Leon Perham has said Rogers was chloroformed and thrown into the river. He is certain that Mrs. Rogers was one of the trio and he thinks Leon Perham and Stella Bates were the others.

Perham took the officers to the place yesterday and confirmed statements he had made by pointing out just where Rogers was chloroformed and bound and just the place where the body was rolled into the river. According to his additional description of the murder he sat on Rogers while Mrs. Rogers administered the chloroform. He says Miss Bates was not there at the time but she knew what was to be done. It was at this spot also that the note "I am tired of life and am going to drown myself" was written.

SHOT BY SOLDIER

I., Aug. 18.—Between 12 and 1 o'clock Sunday morning two Narragansett Pier police officers, Wright and Westlake, were shot at by a soldier named Tracey attached to the garrison at Fort Gabriel, and Westlake was mortally wounded. It seems that the soldiers had some trouble early Saturday evening with some civilians and when the officers were seen approaching the bridge near Carouchet the soldiers mistook them for their opponents of the early evening and Tracey opened fire upon them. Officer Wright, who was in advance, received a slight scalp wound, but Officer Westlake was shot through the abdomen. the ball penetrating the liver and lodging in the back near the spine.

Drs. Hitchcock and Keefe were summoned, and after dressing the wound ordered Westlake's removal to a hospital in Providence. His chances of recovery are considered very slight. After a smart chase Tracey and several companions were captured and locked up in Kingston jail.

THREE BOER GENERALS

Pay Visit to King Edward on Board His Yacht

THEIR GALLANTRY PRAISED

Plans of Chamberlain Upset by South Africans' Declination to Avail Themselves of Secretary's Invitation to Witness Naval Review and See King

London, Aug. 18.—The Boer generals, Botha, De Wet and Delarey, who reached here Saturday from South Africa, left London at 9:30 yesterday morning for Cowes, to see King Edward on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert.

The hour of the generals' departure from London was kept secret, consequently the streets were deserted when the three generals, accompanied by their secretaries, but by none of the ladies of their party, started for Cowes. They were stylishly attired in frock coats and silk hats. Upon arriving at Southampton the Boer generals were welcomed on board the commander-in-chief's yacht Wildfire, by Earl Roberts and Lord Kitchener. They immediately visited King Edward on board the Victoria and Albert and were then taken for a trip around the fleet in the Wildfire. They returned to London last evening, accompanied by Earl Roberts and Lord Kitchener, who took leave of the Boers at Waterloo station.

The reception by the king lasted a quarter of an hour. The king spoke of "the gallant and brave manner" in which the generals had fought through the long and arduous campaign, and of "the consideration and kindness," with which the generals had treated British wounded. He expressed his warm wishes for their futures. It was at the king's suggestion that the Boers took the trip around the fleet on board the Wildfire.

The refusal of the Boer generals to witness the review of the fleet at Spithead or see King Edward Saturday caused great exultation in the continental press and undoubtedly upset the plans of Secretary Chamberlain. Mr. Chamberlain had appeared extremely anxious that the generals should see no newspaper representatives before their visit to King Edward and he accordingly caused instructions to be issued that no reporters be allowed on board the Wildfire or Nigeria, while very unusual restrictions were placed on all reporters.

The general impression is that General Botha and his companions declined the invitation to witness the review and see King Edward because it came direct from Mr. Chamberlain; but, on receiving the king's personal invitation for Sunday, they readily accepted.

During the voyage from South Africa General De Wet did not mix much with his fellow passengers. He was engaged most of the time in writing his book on the South African war. In common with his colleagues snap-shot photographs were constantly being taken of him and he was worried with requests for his autograph until he had to protest against the nuisance.

General Botha, on the contrary, was extremely genial and indulged in all the sports on shipboard. He was constantly in the smoking room where he played cards. General Delarey, besides playing draughts, took keen pleasure in discussions with British army officers on board the steamer.

It is said that General Botha is greatly annoyed that his home at Vryheid has been annexed to Natal. The premier of Natal is reported to have offered General Botha a place in the Natal ministry, which the general has declined.

Wreaths For Meyer Funeral

Brussels, Aug. 18.—Generals De Wet, Delarey and Botha are expected to reach here tomorrow for the funeral of General Lucas Meyer. Enormous crowds viewed the embalmed body of General Meyer yesterday. The remains will be taken to South Africa. Among the many wreaths sent for the funeral of General Meyer were ones from former President Kruger of the Transvaal and Joseph Chamberlain. The wreath sent by Mr. Chamberlain was composed of splendid orchids.

DISAPPOINTED IN LOVE

Robert Remington, a Society Man, Takes His Own Life

WAS TO WED MISS VAN ALEN

Engagement Which Had Been the Topic For Months at Newport Was Broken a Few Weeks Ago—Though Not Rich, He Was Very Popular

Newport, R. I., Aug. 19.—Bitter disappointment over a broken matrimonial engagement is believed to have been the cause of the suicide at the Reading Room yesterday of Robert R. Remington of New York. Mr. Remington came over to the Reading Room from his rooms at the La Forge Cottage about 1 o'clock in the afternoon and shortly after 2 sought the seclusion of the committee room on the second floor of the clubhouse. About 2:30, two sharp but somewhat muffled reports were heard, but those in the building appear to have ascribed them to automobiles going by, and no attention was paid to them. About an hour afterward Remington's dead body was found.

Medical Examiner Stewart was called and found that three shots had been fired from the revolver and that all three had taken effect, although the first two had evidently not reached any vital spot, and the man had fired a third shot to kill himself. The first shot had apparently ploughed across the forehead, making only a deep gash. He then turned the revolver towards the front of his forehead, but the second bullet glanced up over the head, causing a deeper furrow on the top of the cranium, but still not entering the skull. The third shot was fired through the mouth and entered the brain, death probably resulting instantly. The revolver was a 38-calibre, self-cocking bulldog.

Mr. Remington was about 35 years old, and a member of the firm of Remington Bros., advertising agents, of New York. Although of no very large means, he was quite closely identified with the social colonies of this city and New York. He had a great many friends in both places, and had been a constant visitor to Newport for the past seven or eight years. He met Miss Van Alen some years ago, but it was only during the past year that their names had been coupled. About two months ago the engagement between the two was announced, but soon after the marriage of Miss Van Alen's sister Sarah to Robert J. Collier in this city July 26, it was stated that the engagement between Remington and Miss May Van Alen had been broken. It is said that Mr. Van Alen was greatly opposed to the engagement from the beginning.

His engagement to Miss May Van Alen, daughter of James J. Van Alen and granddaughter of Mrs. William Astor, has been the topic of discussion for some months. At first it was denied and then affirmed, and it is generally believed that there was a definite engagement between the young couple up to within the last three weeks, when it was broken. Since then Remington had been very gloomy and despondent, although when asked about the engagement he steadily affirmed that he was to be married in the fall.

He left the city about a week ago, breaking up his domestic arrangements here and sending away all his effects. Last Thursday, however, he suddenly returned to Newport. He has frequented the Reading Room, which is the leading club of Newport, and a general lounging place for the men of the summer colony, but had kept aloof from everyone and seemed to desire to be left alone.

Remington had always been known as a man of very quiet tastes. He was a somewhat expert automobilist, and seemed to enjoy this amusement. He was well liked, and had numerous friends. His death has caused a tremendous sensation here.

The news was broken to Miss May Van Alen last night, and she was greatly affected. A physician was called in and the entire family was greatly shocked. Mr. Van Alen positively refused to make any statement.

The order of the court permits the removal of the will only.

CLUB WOMEN SUED.

Boston Hotel Keeper Claims Large Damages Because of Accusations.

Boston, Aug. 19.—Eleven club women of Allston, Newton, Watertown and Waltham are involved in a $50,000 libel suit because they appealed to Governor Crane to instruct the Boston board of police not to grant a license to Timothy E. Buckley of the Albany House, Brighton. Buckley charges that they made false accusations against him personally and the character of his hotel. The defendants are sued for $40,000 for libellous statements that are alleged to have been made, which are said to have caused a financial loss to the business of Timothy F. Buckley & Co., proprietors of the Albany House. A second action, for $10,000, is based upon the injury to the feelings and reputation of Timothy F. Buckley by the libel which he charges the defendants with having circulated. Buckley declares that these statements led to the withdrawal of a license which had been issued by the police commission, the consequent ruin of his business and the loss of the money he had expended in expectation of the renewal of his old license. One man is also named in the suit, Charles F. Bates of Allston. Bates is treasurer of a large Boston corporation, and owns considerable property, which has been attached. Buckley, through his counsel, has also placed an attachment upon the property of four of the women.

Good Afternoon.

A reduction in the tax rate, although small, will undoubtedly be gratifying to the taxpayers if they find the Assessors have not "jumped up" their valuations. The increase in valuation year by year is very marked, and considerably in excess of new building. It is also larger than in many cities which have twice the population of Quincy. Two other factors contributed this year to the reduction of the rate, viz.: the smaller amount raised for "overlayings," and the increased "receipts." The amount raised for overlayings is but $4,168.65 against $9,402.70 last year, and the estimated receipts are placed at $62,737.55 this year, where last year they were only $46,788.34. These two items alone favor the present administration $21,283.24. Credit, however, should be given for the payment of park assessments for three years. An act of the Legislature of 1902 permitted the apportionment of the assessments of 1900 and 1901, namely $5,791 89 and $7,485.24, amounting to $13,277.13. The Assessors of 1901, however, provided for these assessments had they been demanded by the State.

The amount raised for current expenses this year was $253,932.45 against $242,324.27 last year.

While the increase in valuation in Quincy was $449,127.00, the increase in Lynn was $615,456; in Holyoke, $750,480; in Fitchburg, $147,000; in Marlboro, about $50,000, and in Newburyport a loss.

Probably the credit for the defeat of the petition of the Old Colony street railway for a double track on Saville street belongs to Councilman Thompson. He has exerted all his energies for several weeks in that direction, and while the members were at first indifferent, nearly every one came to his way of thinking, that the street is altogether too narrow for two tracks. If, as Councilman Newcomb asserted, the order reported was the outcome of a conference between the Mayor and the company, it was the most disastrous Waterloo of His Honor this year.

The Ledger would suggest the following plan to the company which would be better than a double track on Saville street, as it would be wholly under their control. That the company acquire a right of way for two or more tracks between the house of Dr. Garey and the Nancy Brackett house, extending from Hancock street to the property of the N. Y., N. H. & R. R. R., or curving round to Saville street. The Saville street location could then be abandoned or used as a loop.

The City Auditor's report for July 31, says $54,185.11 has been expended this year on account of 1901, but the City Treasurer's report places the amount at $84,185.11. Which is it?

A Cool Day

The temperature at noon today was 62 degrees, which is the coolest August day since Aug. 20, 1897, when the temperature was 61 degrees at noon. It is also the coolest day at noon since July 20, when it was 61 degrees.

Tomorrow is the opening day for the carnival and illumination. The general public however are unaware of what the program for the observance is.

STREET RAILWAY.

The special Committee on railroad accommodations reported that several conferences had been held with the railroad officials and that they were disposed and willing to give improved service as far as its facilities would permit. That a public hearing had been held but while well attended no general complaint had been made. As to franchises not built upon they were as follows: On Granite street, between Copeland and Hancock streets; Beale street, between Newport avenue and Hancock street; Robertson street, between Willard and Adams streets; Adams street between Robertson and Beale streets; Beale street, between Adams and Farrington streets. These they recommended be revoked. To Committee on Streets.

DOUBLE TRACKING.

The Committee on Streets presented a majority and minority reports on the change of locations of street railway tracks in City Square. The majority report gave them a double track on Hancock street from Saville street to near the Ledger office; on Washington street between Hancock and Temple streets and on Saville street, and revoked the location on Temple street.

The minority report gave all but a double track on Saville street, and left the track on Temple street.

COUNCILMAN, THOMPSON.

Upon motion of Councilman Elcock a recess of ten minutes was taken to examine the plans.

After recess Councilman Thompson moved adoption of minority report.

Councilman Newcomb opposed. The Mayor had a conference with the railroad to adjust tracks about the City Square. This order was the outcome. Altogether it was the best solution of the situation.

Councilman Whiton favored the minority report. At the hearing but few appeared in favor. Mr. Faxon was one of them for he knew the street would have to be widened. The main reason was to accommodate East Weymouth people. Saville street was not safe now. He believed people who use carriages have some rights. This street will have to be widened if a double track is put in. He did not think Council had a right to expend money for the railway. The railway should buy the land of Mr. Faxon for the widening.

Councilman Freeman favored minority report. He did not believe it expedient for double track on Saville street.

Councilman Nickerson favored minority report.

Councilman Thompson—It seemed wise to stop where we are. It would cost city a lot of money sometime to widen the street.

Councilman Newcomb—We are legislating for the multitude. There are not twenty who use carriages wher 200 use the cars. The street railway will expend $1500 in paving Saville street. There will be room enough for two teams to pass the cars.

Councilman Whiton—The few who use carriages pay more taxes than the 200 who use the cars.

Councilman Fallon favored the minority report. There are many teams that pass through Saville street which go for freight and it was almost impossible to pass the cars. Mr. Faxon knows he will be benefited as he owns the land on both sides of street.

Councilman Langelier. The time is coming when this street must be widened and at no time as cheap as now. We can make the railway an offer to widen it. If they do not accept we need not grant location. The multitude should be accommodated but not at the expense of those who use carriages. In regard to Temple street he thought the tracks there should remain.

The minority report was accepted by a decisive vote and it was moved that it be referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Thompson objected.

Councilman Freeman—It should go to that committee to be put in legal form.

Councilman Nichols said he did not think it in the province of the Council to amend this order. It was for the railroad to say if they would accept.

City Solicitor Blackmur in reply to a question said it was perfectly legal for the council to amend the order.

The order was then recommitted.

FIELD DRIVERS.

Councilman Elcock offered an order appointing the following field drivers: Joseph W. Hayden, David J. Barry, Timothy J. Golden, Daniel R. McKay and Alfred Goodhue. Adopted.

WAITING ROOM.

Councilman Nichols offered an order that the Mayor be requested to petition the railroad Commissioners to to compel the Old colony street railway to maintain waiting rooms in City Square and at the corner of Copeland and Cross streets with necessary sanitary accommodations. Adopted.

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman Rule 1, was suspended, and it was voted when the Council adjourn it be until Sept. 2.

ICE PRIVILEGES.

Councilman Bass offered a resolution that the Mayor be requested to insert a general notice in the newspapers inviting proposals for the privilege of cutting ice on the reservoir. To Committe on Public Buildings.

CALENDAR.

The order for $700 additional for advertising and stationery for the Tax Collector was passed under suspension of the rules.

CAUCUS PLACES.

Councilman Nichols offered an order providing places for holding caucuses of the Socialists and also the Democrats in each ward, which were adopted.

Mayor Bryant then addressed the Council, saying there was no money available for the expenses entailed by the orders, in fact that the annual appropriation order had made no appropriation for election expenses.

President Alden queried if the orders were not similar to orders in past years, and asked how money had been provided in the past.

The Mayor said, partly from the City Clerk's appropriation for printing, and partly from Miscellaneous City. In his annual estimate he had not included anything for elections in Miscellaneous City.

The main controversy has been over the Ward Six polling place. The order had been amended to read Music hall in place of Hose house, the claim being made that the later was unfit because it smelt "barny."

Commissioner Knowlton said the Hose house was clean, and as sweet as any Hose house in the city.

Councilman Faxon moved to reconsider order.

Councilman Langelier objected.

Councilman Whiton judging by the Ward Two Hose house favored reconsideration.

Councilman Fallon favored halls.

The order was reconsidered, and changed back to Ward Six Hose house.

Councilman Freeman offered an order appropriating $295 for expenses of caucus places as per order.

Councilman Whiton asked about the expenses.

Councilman Freeman explained.

Adjourned at 9.57 until Sept. 2.

Impaired Digestion

May not be all that is meant by dyspepsia now, but it will be if neglected.

The uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, sourness of the stomach, and disagreeable belching may not be very bad now, but they will be if the stomach is suffered to grow weaker.

Dyspepsia is such a miserable disease that the tendency to it should be given early attention. This is completely overcome by which strengthens the whole digestive system

He was sent to the police station where he was looked over by Councilman Nichols later in the evening. Mr. Nichols thought he was the party he knocked through the glass door but was not positive. Heart Disease retards the circulation, weakens the stomach, deranges digestion, pollutes the blood, destroys the nervous force and saps the vitality of the whole system. It causes pains in the side, palpitation, shortness of breath, smothering, dropsical swellings, sinking spells, and frequently ends all suffering in sudden death. Why tempt death when a cure is within easy reach?

"My head would get so hot it seemed to be burning up, while my feet were like ice. My limbs would swell and get numb. I had to sit in a chair day and night for months and my heart throbbed and pained me terribly. After using three bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure I could do a good days work."

80th ANNIVERSARY.

Mrs. Martha Hill of Sioux City Celebrates at Atlantic.

There was a very pleasant gathering at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund R. Wade of Prospect street, Atlantic, Friday afternoon, Aug. 15, the occasion being the eightieth birthday celebration of the mother of Mrs. Wade, Mrs. Martha Hill, of Sioux City, who has been visiting her daughter for the past six weeks, and who is to remain until the middle of September. The house was very tastefully decorated with flowers.

Age sits lightly upon Mrs. Hill, and she could easily pass for seventy years. She is a New England woman and was born at Blue Hill, Me. At eighteen years her father moved to Cincinnati.

Mrs. Hill was married in Cincinnati and after her fourth child was born moved with her husband to Muscatine, Iowa. This became her home for many years and the place where she reared her large family of eleven children. During the Civil war her husband entered the army as colonel, but was soon given charge of a brigade and was breveted brigadier general. He lost his life fighting for his country in the battle of Nashville, Tenn. She also lost a brave son in a skirmish in Louisiana at Yellow Bayon during the Rebellion.

To the task of bringing up and educating her large family Mrs. Hill applied herself with the vigor and courage born of her sturdy New England character, and with a success to warm and gladden her heart now eighty years young. Seven of her children are living and are occupying honored positions in the east and in the west; her youngest son practicing his profession in China.

Mrs. Hill received hearty congratulations and flowers and other souvenirs from her friends.

A very delicate and appetizing lunch was served reflecting great credit on Mrs. Wade's professional ability, after which the company joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne" and various other chorals, and terminated the festivities with an old fashioned Virginia reel.

A pleasing feature of the occasion was the presence of one of Mrs. Hill's daughters-in-law, an English lady, who is at present visiting Mrs. Wade.

CHILD DROWNED.

Fell Into Well and Was Dead When Rescued.

The alarm from Box 31 at 3.30 Monday afternoon was to call assistance in rescuing Thomas W., the 17-months old son of John Ford of 44 Phipps street, who had fallen into an unused well. The well was usually covered with boards, but they had become displaced and the child was looking at his reflection in the water when he lost his balance and fell in. Frantic efforts were made to recover the child, but there appeared to be nothing at hand to enter the well with and the alarm was sounded.

Some time had elapsed before the child was recovered and it was then dead. A physician worked over it but was unable to restore life.

YOUNG RAVENS.

Queer Story of the Changing Color of the Newborn Birds.

I have not learning enough to know whether in the earliest times ravens were accounted "unlucky." If so, why were they chosen from among all the birds of the air for the merciful errand of carrying bread to Elijah in the wilderness? Did they steal it? They are given to theft! Also in the written word we are assured that "God heareth the young ravens when they cry out unto him." And nothing of this is said of doves or of any other white or heavenly kind of bird. An explanation is given in the Egyptian commentary on St. Luke in the Coptic script by Epiphanius, A. D. 368-401. The passage is certainly very curious, and I am permitted to transcribe it here: "Why, then, did the evangelist mention no name among the birds except ravens only? Because the hen raven, having laid her eggs and hatched her young, is wont to fly away and leave them on account of the hue of their color, for when hatched they are red in appearance. Then the Nourisher of all creation sends to them a little swarm of insects, putting it by their nest, and thus the little ravens are fed until the color of their body is, as it were, dyed and becomes black. But after seven days the old ravens return, and, seeing that the bodies of their young have become perfectly like their own, henceforward they take to them and bring them food of their own accord."

It is for naturalists to ascertain whether or no this strange account of the young ravens holds good in our day.—Cornhill Magazine.

Not Over-Wise.

ATTACK ON DEPUTIES

Results In Almost Instant Killing of a Striker

ONLY ONE SHOT WAS FIRED

Officers Spirited Away Under Heavy Guard to Avoid Mob's Vengeance—General Gobin Asked to Send Troops to Panther Creek Valley

Nesquehoning, Pa., Aug. 19.—In a clash between strikers and deputies here last night, Patrick Sharp, a striker, was shot and killed almost instantly by a deputy. The shooting caused considerable excitement for a time, but order was soon restored without any other persons being injured and the town is now quiet. A deputy named Harry McElmoyle was arrested, charged with the killing of Sharp.

The shooting occurred shortly after 6 o'clock. Five deputies were on their way to shaft No. 1 of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, just outside of the town. In the centre of the town they were met by a number of strikers, who began persuading them not to go to the colliery. The officers did not stop. The strikers, it is said, then began to abuse the men and followed them nearly up to the colliery.

There are conflicting stories as to what actually brought on the clash, but just before the deputies entered the place a shot was heard and Sharp dropped to the ground. The bullet entered the body close to his heart and he died almost instantly. Witnesses say that the shooting was done by McElmoyle and that he stood only six or seven feet from Sharp when he fired his revolver. Only one shot was fired.

The deputies immediately withdrew to the colliery, and a large crowd gathered about the place. When it was learned that Sharp was dead there was great indignation among the strikers and other townspeople, and for a time it looked as though serious trouble would follow. Cooler heads among the mine workers, however, prevailed upon the crowd to disperse.

After the dead striker had been carried home, about half the mob started on a march over the mountain to Nesquehoning to wreak vengeance upon the deputies. Before they reached there the five officers were spirited away and taken to Mauch Chunk under a heavy guard.

Last night Baird Snyder, assistant superintendent of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, appealed to General Gobin, in command of the detachment of the National Guard now on duty at Shenandoah, to send troops to Lansford to preserve order. He said that the entire Panther creek valley, from Nesquehoning to Mauch Chunk, was in a riotous state and that serious trouble was feared. General Gobin said that he could not send troops until an appeal had been made by the sheriff. Up to a late hour the sheriff had taken no action in the matter.

Maltby Colliery May Start

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 19.—There is a rumor that coal is being mined at the Maltby colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal company and that in a day or two the coal will be run through the breaker under the protection of 100 coal and iron policemen now stationed inside the stockades surrounding the colliery. The presence of so many deputies is looked upon as a sure indication that the company proposes to make some move very soon.

Cracks In Maine's Turrets

New York, Aug. 19.—For the purpose of putting the vessel thoroughly into shape for her forthcoming official speed trial, the battleship Maine yesterday was warped into drydock No. 3 at the Brooklyn navy yard without mishap. Several small cracks were discovered in the turrets of the battleship. Some of the supposed cracks or imperfections on the rear turret are about an eighth of an inch.

Newspaper Men In Hot Water

Manila, Aug. 19.—Judge Ambler, who conducted the trial of Frederick Dorr, proprietor, and Edward O'Brien, editor of Freedom, who were charged with libelling Benito Legarda, a Filipino member of the civil commission, announced yesterday that he had found the defendants guilty. They were not sentenced. The trial of Dorr and O'Brien on a charge of sedition began yesterday.

Murderers Set Free

Leavenworth, Kas., Aug. 19.—Charles Farris and Fred Morris were released from the federal penitentiary yesterday as a result of the Deming decision of the supeme court. Both men were sentenced from Manila to serve life sentences for murder. They were volunteers and were tried by a court martial of regular army officers.

Two Railroad Men Killed

Boston, Aug. 19.—Joseph H. Morse and Harry A. Palmer, both employes of the Boston and Albany railroad, were struck and killed by a train at Cottage Farm last night. Both men had been in the employ of the road for many years, Palmer being assistant yard master and Morse assistant train dispatcher.

Root Knocked Out by Gardner

Salt Lake, Aug. 19.—George Gardner of Lowell, Mass., last night decisively defeated Jack Root of Chicago by knocking him out in the 17th round of a fight remarkable for speed and rameness under severe punishment shown by both men. The betting before the men entered the ring was 10 to 7 on Root.

ENGAGED.

Marriage is very largely an accident. In few cases do men or women set up a standard of manly or womanly excellence and choose by it. In most cases people become engaged as the result of propinquity rather than because of any deep rooted preference.

And so it often happens that the wife enters upon the obligations of maternity just as thoughtlessly as she entered on the marriage relation, because no one has warned her of the dangers she faces.

Thousands of women become invalids for lack of knowledge of themselves. It is to this large body of women that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes as a priceless boon, because it cures womanly ills.

"Favorite Prescription" establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

"After my first child was born," writes Mrs. Jordan Stout, of Fawcettgap, Frederick Co., Va., "my health was very poor for a long time, and last winter I was so bad with pain down in back I could hardly move without great suffering. My husband got me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and a vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets,' which I used as directed. In four days I was greatly relieved, and now, after using the medicine three months, I seem to be entirely well. I can't see why it is that there are so many suffering women when there is such an easy way to be cured. I know your medicines are the best in the world."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the favorite family laxative. One 'Pellet' a laxative, two 'Pellets' a cathartic dose.

PANAMA CANAL PLANS

Unlikely to Be Upset by Colombian Disturbances

NO OBSTACLE IN THE WAY

To Prevent an Agreement With Our Southern Neighbors, Since Conservatives and Insurgents Both Favor the Project—Safety Assured

Washington, Aug. 19.—While the internal disturbances of Colombia are naturally disquieting, there is no warrant for jumping to the conclusion that the Panama canal program is seriously endangered. There is no need of immediate action, since the necessity of investigating the French company's title at Paris comes first, and our senate will not be in session to receive the treaty, were one negotiated, for some months yet. No progress has been made in the negotiations since the statement given out on this subject by Secretary Hay just before his departure for Sunapee lake, but that is occasioning the friends of the Panama route no worry. The Colombian minister continues to give assurances that there need be no delay in securing an agreement which would allow the Colombian congress to convene in ample season, since both the conservatives and the insurgents want a canal.

It should also be noted that the responsibility for maintaining order and preserving neutrality along the route of the canal would fall upon the United States, by the terms of whatever treaty is negotiated, and so the condition of affairs there will really have nothing to do with the safety of our waterway once the treaty is agreed to. Similarly neither Colombian faction would be able to override the action of the other in dealing with the United States, since recognition by this powerful republic of a rightful government there would be final so far as our relations with it were concerned. Disturbances in those countries are of such frequent occurrence and usually so soon over that they occasion less alarm than would be the case with a civil war in some more peaceful state.

The greatest danger to the pending negotiations comes from possible mischief makers who might want to see the Panama proposal fail in the interest either of the Nicaraguan route or of no canal at all. Counteracting such influences, should they be discovered, would doubtless be the activities of the French company, which would not want to see its transaction fail at this stage through some perversity of the Colombian government. Political conditions in South America are such that an individual or the confidential representatives of a private company might employ methods more effective in producing results than the United States government.

No Sanitarium For Pythians

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—The supreme lodge, Knights of Pythias, yesterday defeated the proposition to erect a sanitarium at Hot Springs, Ark., for sick and disabled knights and the report of the special investigating committee adopted at the last session was completely disregarded. It was the voice of the supreme lodge that it had no rights under the constitution to tax the members of the order for such purposes. The sanitarium project has been before the supreme lodge for 12 years.

Joe Nelson's Great Record

Pittsburg, Aug. 19.—Joe Nelson broke the world's record for 20 miles here last night and beat Freeman and McFarland. Nelson's time for the 20 miles was 27:18, beating the world's record of 27:34 2-5. His fourth mile was the fastest, being made in 1:18½.

TROOPS ARE ON GUARD

In Region Where Striker Was Killed by Deputy

WAS LEADER OF THE UNION

His Friends Excited Over the Shooting and Military Protection Deemed Necessary—Prediction That Fall Demands For Coal Will Be Supplied

Tamaqua, Pa., Aug. 20.—General Gobin, who is in command of the battalion of the Twelfth regiment National Guard of Pennsylvania, opened temporary headquarters in the town last night.

The funeral of Patrick Sharp, the strike leader who was shot and killed at Nesquehoning by a deputy, will take place tomorrow. All the miners' local unions in the region are making arrangements to march to Lansford and attend the funeral, and General Gobin will probably station troops along the route to be taken by the funeral.

With all lights out, the train bearing General Gobin and his staff and the First battalion of the Twelfth regiment, under Major Gearhardt, from Shenandoah, steamed into Lansford about half an hour before daybreak yesterday. After a consultation between General Gobin and Superintendent Snyder of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company with regard to a suitable location for a camp, the battalion disembarked and in a few minutes were marching to the baseball park, situated on the western edge of the town. The strikers were worked up to such a high pitch of excitement over the shooting of Sharp, who was one of their leaders, that it was feared an outbreak would occur and it was thought better to have the soldiers near at hand. During the day the battalion was transferred to Manila park, about midway between Lansford and Tamaqua, and struck camp.

The people of Lansford were much surprised when they awoke and found a battalion of soldiers in their place. The troops came at the request of the sheriff of Carbon county. Contrary to expectations no attempt was made by the strikers to march to Nesquehoning, and no demonstration of any kind was made either at Lansford or at Nesquehoning. The killing of Sharp is discussed on every street corner and, while the strikers denounce it as an unprovoked and cold-blooded murder, the deputies and coal company officials declare the shooting was done in self-defense.

Will Be Coal For Fall Demand

New York, Aug. 20.—The presidents of the anthracite coal roads had their usual weekly conference here yesterday. Before going to the meeting President Truesdale of the Lackawanna Railroad company said: "There is no foundation in fact for the rumor that the anthracite coal operators will make concessions in order to end the strike. I think work will be resumed in time to produce plenty of coal for the fall demand. The operators are ready, as they always have been ready, to adjust with their men any grievances that they may have and they have never discriminated against any of their men because they have belonged to the union. What the operators will not do, is to discuss their business affairs with outsiders.

Non-Union Men Shot From Ambush

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 20.—Michael Connelly and Forrest Crossman, said to be non-union workmen employed about the Edgerton colliery, were shot from ambush yesterday, presumably by strikers. Crossman was so badly injured that it was necessary to amputate his right foot. Connelly's condition is regarded as serious. The men were working on a water course near the breaker when they were shot.

Strikers Prevented Work

Hazleton, Pa., Aug. 20.—Strikers gathered in force yesterday at the Klondike washery, near Parkview, which has been in operation for some weeks, and drove back the men who reported for work, causing a suspension of the plant.

Serious Trolley Wreck

New York, Aug. 20.—Five persons were seriously injured, two of them at least fatally injured and a dozen others severely so last night, when a heavy open street car left the tracks at Jerome Park avenue and turned completely over in a ditch. The conductor and motorman were arrested.

The Haytian Situation

Kingston, Ja., Aug. 20.—Advices concerning affairs in Hayti say the revolution has now extended to every part of the country and that the situation is daily growing worse. Business has been suspended in nearly all the towns of Hayti.

PLEA OF INSANITY

Will Not Be Accepted by Government In Case of Nina Danforth

Boston, Aug. 20.—The Journal says that Miss Nina Danforth, the young dwarf who shot and killed Andrew J. Emery at South Framingham on May 17, is no longer accounted insane by the state officers. By Attorney General Parker and District Attorney Sanderson her crime is regarded as a deliberate one, though possessing features entitled to the consideration of the authorities. It was said yesterday that if Miss Danforth would plead guilty to manslaughter the government will not insist on an extreme sentence.

It is the purpose of the government to exercise clemency in her case, principally from a humanitarian view of the dwarf's physical condition, coupled with a consideration of Emery's alleged treatment in deceiving the young woman into going through a mock marriage ceremony with him. It was learned that in view of what had been discovered, and after the examination of the girl by medical experts, that she would not escape the penalty of her act on the plea of insanity. Should such a defense be offered the government will be prepared to fight it to the end.

Death Not Result of Fall

Boston, Aug. 20.—Medical Examiner Draper reported yesterday the result of his autopsy on the body of Mrs. Alice Lipsky, who died Sunday night at the city hospital, finding that death resulted from pneumonia. Mrs. Lipsky had been at the hospital unconscious since June 29, on which date, it was alleged, she had been injured by being thrown from a window by her husband, Karl Lipsky. The medical examiner's report says that Mrs. Lipsky's death was not due to any injuries she may have received from her fall.

Cost $400,000, Sold For $55,000

Bethel, Vt., Aug. 20.—R. H. Sawyer, receiver of the White Valley railroad, running from Bethel to Rochester, a distance of 19 miles, sold the property at public auction yesterday, by order of the United States court, the purchasers being three Massachusetts men. The bidding started at $20,000, finally reaching $55,000, the purchasing price. The railroad has been built within three years and cost nearly $400,000.

Smallpox Victim In Doorway

Somerville, Mass., Aug. 20.—Before it was learned that a man who had fallen unconscious in a doorway here yesterday was ill of smallpox, a score of persons had come in contact with him. He was walking in Union square when he fell in the doorway and many kindhearted pedestrians assisted in making his position as comfortable as possible, until medical assistance arrived.

Depositors Clamoring For Savings

Boston, Aug. 20.—A mob of infuriated Italians raged about the banking house of Thomas Tranfaglia on Prince street, which closed its doors yesterday. The police were called to prevent property damage. It is said that Tranfaglia is not to be found. Between $15,000 and $18,000 is said to be tied up. The sum represents small savings of numerous Italians.

Bisbee Won't Be Frozen Out

Portland, Me., Aug. 20.—At a meeting of the Prohibition county committee yesterday the advisability of suggesting to Rev. Mr. Bisbee, the party nominee for sheriff in this county, that he resign in favor of Rev. E. S. J. McAllister was discussed. Mr. Bisbee, however, declined to consider the matter, declaring that he "is no quitter."

A Rainy Old Home Day

Concord, N. H., Aug. 20.—Unpleasant weather yesterday drove the thousands of Old Home celebrators out of the groves into town halls and churches but did not abate their enjoyment. While Wednesday and Thursday are the great days of the week, many towns observed yesterday as their Old Home Day with universal success.

Drowned His Four Children

Salina, Kas., Aug. 20.—Joseph Anderson, a farmer, in a fit of despondency yesterday, drowned his four children, three girls and a boy, in a cistern, and then shot himself. Anderson probably will die. Financial matters had affected his mind. The oldest child was 6 years old and the youngest a baby of 4 months.

Train Robbers In Custody

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 20.—Lee H. Smith, said to be the third robber of the Mexican Central train from which $53,000 was taken, has been captured in the mountains of western Chihuahua after a severe battle. Forty thousand dollars of the treasure, of which Smith had about $10,000, has been recovered.

HEAVY GUNS HEARD.

North Atlantic Squadron Making War Maneuvers off Massachusetts.

Rockport, Mass., Aug. 20.—There was considerable activity yesterday among Admiral Higginson and the commanders of the vessels of the north Atlantic squadron, and it is generally believed that preparations were being perfected to carry on fleet maneuvers in this vicinity during the next 24 hours. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning seven torpedo boats arrived from the southward and anchored near the flagship Kearsarge, while the United States tug Nina also came in and anchored shortly after noon. The stay of the torpedo fleet was not long, however, and the vessels got away at 3:30 yesterday afternoon, heading toward the south.

The main squadron, which has been at anchor in Sandy Bay Harbor of Refuge since Saturday, did not show any lights at the usual hour of setting them last night. As darkness came on the vessels were just visible from this port. No lights were displayed during the evening with the exception of an occasional signal from one ship to another. It is the general opinion that the squadron is preparing to move within a few hours. Dense clouds of smoke have been pouring from the funnels of the battleships.

The torpedo flotilla executed manauvers late last night which somewhat resembled an attack under cover of darkness.

General Smith Still a Soldier

Portsmouth, O., Aug. 20.—General Jacob H. Smith was tendered a public reception here last night and a banquet later. In response to an address of welcome, General Smith spoke in part as follows: "Since that time 40 years ago when I answered to the call to arms, I have been and am still a soldier. The duty of a soldier is to his country. His is to maintain the honor of his nation, to protect its citizens wheresoever they may be and to enforce allegiance to the flag in whatever distant lands it is planted and unfurled. For the humble part which I took in bringing into subjection the tribes of Samar, I am aware that there has been much criticism, but to take criticism is part of a soldier's training. My sword is still at the command of my country, and subject to the order of the commander-in-chief."

Complimentary to Great Colleges

Rome, Aug. 20.—The church authorities have received information that 4085 Catholic students are attending secular universities in the United States, 500 of whom are at the University of Pennsylvania, while the Catholic university at Washington has only 100 students. It is believed here that this discrepancy is due to the fact that the Catholic university at Washington undertook instruction in other branches of education, in addition to theological studies, without having means, apparatus or professors to compete with the great American colleges.

What Schwab Has to Say

New York, Aug. 20.—Charles M. Schwab arrived here last evening en route to Europe. As he stepped from his car he said to a number of newspaper men present: "I am going to tell you three things and I don't want you to ask me any further questions. In the first place, I don't look like a sick man. In the second place I feel the necessity of a rest and I am going to take one. In the third place I am not going to resign and have no intention of retiring from the presidency of the United States Steel corporation. That's all I have to say."

A Woman's Awful Revenge

New York, Aug. 20.—Fearing her husband, from whom she had been separated for four years, was about to leave the city without paying her alimony, Mrs. Claire Chenau drenched him with oil of vitriol last night and burned him so severely on face, shoulders, back and chest that it is feared he will not survice. When arrested Mrs. Chenau said that should her husband recover she would divulge the story of a crime he had committed in France about five years ago, as a result of which they had to flee from the country.

Faith In Leishman's Diplomacy

Washington, Aug. 20.—It is admitted at the state department that there is a renewal of tension between the United States and Turkey. There is the fullest confidence on the part of the authorities here in the course being pursued by Minister Leishman, and, as he has been given such a free hand in directing affairs, it is not thought desirable to prejudice any steps he may be taking by official comments as to what has been or will be done.

Revolutionists' Bloodless Victory

Willemstad, Aug. 20.—The seaport of Cumana, Venezuela, was captured at noon yesterday by the Venezuelan revolutionists without the firing of a single shot. The government forces and the local authorities of Cumana evacuated that town Monday night. They withdrew to the island of Margarita, about 40 miles north of Cumana, on board the steamer Ossun.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The town of Pontianak, near the west coast of Dutch Borneo, has been almost completely destroyed by fire. Many lives were lost.

Captain Hunker has been detached from the naval station at Newport, R. I., and also from the command of the Constellation, and ordered home on waiting orders.

Good Afternoon.

If a crowd is wanted at the Houghs Neck carnival the committee or the street railway has made a mistake in not advertising the attractions.

It would be a surprise if the Democrats of the Tenth district should turn down Congressman Naphen for a renomination, but Hon. W. S. McNary is very popular with Quincy people.

That taxes are burdensome on many is shown by the fact that $96,671.24 of the levy of $396,462,10 in 1901 was unpaid July 31 this year. This is nearly twenty-five per cent. of the total. These taxes were due on Nov. 1 last, and interest is collected from that date. There were unpaid Jan. 1, on account of 1901, a balance of $160,538.87, and only $63,867.63 have been collected in the seven months of this year.

The petition for ice privileges at the Quincy reservoir discloses the fact that the city has something that is valuable, not only for ice but for business purposes. There is a large body of water there which many industries would appreciate, and again there is a great fall of water which could be utilized as power by an industry located a short distance below the reservoir. The ice privileges is undoubtedly worth a $1,000 or more per year, but it should not be based at any price if it is to be controlled by an ice trust. The protection to the people of Quincy is worth more than $1,000 per year.

It is said that Quincy could have secured the United Shoe Machinery Company as an industry if the city had offered a location near this reservoir. This company is seeking a location a short distance from Boston, and will employ upwards of 5000. Now that today's papers report that the plant has not selected Beverly as a location it may not be too late for Quincy to make a proposition.

Drift of Opinion.

☞There is substantial foundation in fact for the reports concerning the weakness of the coast defences of the country, and the starting point is said to have been in the investigation ordered by congress as to the practicability and availability of the disappearing gun carriages now in use. The work witnessed was not sufficiently satisfactory and is said to have revealed clumsy work in handling, as well as defective mechanism, and behind that is said to have revealed the bottom of many of the troubles in the war department, the division of responsibility, which Secretary Root aimed to eliminate in his staff reorganization bill. The disappointment in the working of the guns has developed the old quarrel between the fighting officers and the men in the bureaus who are responsible for the condition of the ordinance, and under the present system there is no one with unquestioned authority to step in between the quarreling officials and set them about their business.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞Good, healthy amusements are an aid to religion; but low or unseemly or doubtful amusements are a fetter and a drag. We shall only save ourselves, or at least our posterity, from a return to the Puritan severity by not overdoing our play. There ought to be some middle ground between Roundhead and Cavalier. And there is, if reasonable Christian people would only carefully seek it. Amusement is not a friend to religion when it is excessive. Man was not created to be amused. We may not be quite so sure as our forefathers that "cards are the Devil's prayerbook;" but we have reason to feel that cards were never worthy to take the place of the sober pursuits of life or to engross the solid hours of day. Golf may be a healthful game, but it is a poor vocation. And any amusement is a foe to religion which must be sought among the enemies of religion. However innocent a "burst of speed" may be, the companionship of jockeys is not an aid to godly living. Do not overdo the matter of recreation. Do not make a business of any pleasure. Seek such recreations as have sweet and beneficient associations connected with them. And play, as well as pray, among those worthy of the fellowship of a son of God.—Interior, Chicago.

Milton Town Meeting.

A special town meeting was held at Milton Saturday afternoon to elect a board of water commissioners for one, two and three years. John P. S. Churchill was moderator and the polls were kept open from 2 to 6 o'clock.

There was but one candidate for the one-year term, Ellerton P. Whitney, and he received 423 votes.

The candidates for the two-year term were John Graham, Timothy P. G. Ryan and Proctor K. Browne. Graham received 319 votes, Ryan 179, and Browne 68.

There were also three candidates for the three-year term, Charles S. Pierce, C. Wilder Holmes and Stephen A. Meagher. Pierce received 273 votes, Holmes 204 and Meagher 84.

The meeting also voted by a vote of 192 to 32 to accept sections 58 to 64 inclusive of Chapter 48 of the Revised Laws, relative to jurisdiction of towns over highways on county bridges.

Surprise Party.

A pleasant surprise party gathered at the home of Mr. Charles Martin on Trafford street Monday evening to bid him Godspeed on the occasion of his leaving Quincy for a short time for Prince Edward Island. Mr. Martin has not been enjoying good health this summer and goes there to see if the change will benefit him. His friends, thinking this a good time to show their appreciation of his worth, called upon him at his home. During the evening Mr. James McDonald in behalf of the choir of the United Presbyterian church and others presented him with a purse of money. Mr. McDonald referred to excellent work that he had done for the church in the past, and hoped that he would soon come back with renewed health to carry on the work in the future. A pleasant evening was spent in singing and story telling.

Called to Houghs' Neck

The patrol wagon was called to Houghs Neck early Monday evening to bring back John Nelson who had been arrested by Officer Curtin for drunkenness. It is alleged that Nelson was on a spree and during an argument with his wife he struck her a savage blow on the head with a clock. The clock was smashed and the woman received quite a bad cut which was sewed up by Dr. Ash. Nelson was arraigned in court on Tuesday for drunkenness and the case continued to await the result of the injuries of his wife.

No One Blamed.

No one was to blame for the death of Mrs. Julia A. Kendall of Bigelow street, according to the finding of Albert E. Avery, justice of the District Court of East Norfolk, filed with clerk of courts Cook at Dedham. He finds that she came to her death at Quincy, on April 12, in consequence of falling and striking upon her head, causing several fractures through the base of skull. Deceased was driving with horse and buggy on Washington street, Quincy, at about 7.30 P. M., April 12, and, while turning to cross the tracks of the Old Colony Street Railway Company at the junction of Revere road and Washington street, was thrown out of her buggy in consequence of a collision with a passenger car. The accident caused death, but no blame is attached to the unlawful act or criminal negligence of any person or corporation.

PRESIDENT.

To Visit Boston and Lynn Next Week.

Program for His Reception.

Will be a Guest of the State While in Boston.

President Roosevelt will be in Boston a part of Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, the program for his reception being as follows:

Sunday, Aug. 24, Lieut.-Gov. John L. Bates, with a staff officer, will meet the President on the line of the New Haven railroad and proceed to Lynn with him.

On arrival at Lynn, at 5 P. M., he will be received by Senator Lodge, and, escorted by Troop F, will proceed direct to the residence of the senator, where he will remain until 2.30 Monday, Aug. 25. Under escort of Troop F he will go to the City Hall, Lynn. At the City Hall, companies D and I, 8th infantry, and company E, naval brigade, parading as a battalion, will be in line, under direction of the mayor of the city of Lynn.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies at the City Hall, the battalion of foot companies and body guard of cavalry will escort the President to the depot in season to take a train for Boston at 4.30.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

On his arrival in Boston he will be met by the 1st battalion of cavalry, and will be escorted to Symphony Hall by way of Friend street, Washington street, School street, Tremont to Boylston street, to Huntington avenue, to Symphony Hall. After the ceremonies at the hall he will proceed to the Hotel Touraine, where he will remain until Tuesday morning, then taking a train for Lowell, being escorted from the hotel by a detail of cavalry outriders.

Gov. Crane will receive the President at the depot on Monday, and he will be the state's guest during his stay. Gov. Crane will also accompany the President to the depot on Tuesday morning.

Personal.

The Rev. Frank Wright Pratt, who has been spending his vacation in England will return Sept. 5. Mr. Pratt's friends will be glad to learn that he has passed a remarkably enjoyable summer, encountering almost none of the proverbially rainy and cloudy English weather. Mr. Pratt's trip has taken him from Liverpool through the Shakespeare country to London where he preached in the Unitarian church, at Brixton on Sunday, July 20. Other engagements for preaching kept him in London and the neighborhood till after the coronation, when Mr. Pratt and his mother sailed from Hull for Scotland with a cousin who is a sea captain. Their trip will be completed with a visit to relatives in Suderland. Among the places of interest Mr. and Mrs. Pratt have visited are Chester, Harwarden, Stratford, Oxford, Windsor, Warwick and Kenilworth.

Socialist Conventions.

The Socialists hold their State convention in Boston Sept. 8. The tenth district Congressional convention will occur Sept. 16, the Second Councillor Sept. 18, the First Norfolk Senatorial in Quincy Sept. 20, and the Norfolk county convention at Quincy Sept. 22.

☞Commissioner Eugene F. Ware of pension office has laid down an ironclad rule that a charge of intemperance brought against a pension office clerk will be a cause for dismissal if proved, and that promises of reformation will not be accepted. An equally strong regulation has also been adopted by the commissioner relating to the dismissal of employes who do not pay their debts. Whenever any indebtedness of a clerk is brought to the attention of the commissioner the debt must be paid at once or the clerk dismissed.

THE CARNIVAL.

Beautiful Weather and the Children Are Happy.

Today is the opening day of the carnival and illumination at Houghs Neck. It will be given up entirely to the amusement of the children. The program included a free vaudeville show, this morning, at the Casino, and free dancing this afternoon. Ice cream and cake will be served to the children free of charge.

There will also be a band concert this afternoon and evening and a display of fireworks tonight.

The only sporting event scheduled for today was a game of ball between the "Manet Avenues" and "Houghs Neck" teams, for a box of cigars.

The children are out in large numbers and they are certainly having a grand time. When they were scattered about the beach it did not seem as though there were many, but when they began to arrive at Kaplan's hall where the ladies were serving Nash's fine ice caeam it was evident that there was a big crowd.

All of the children wanted to be served at one time, but as the hall would not accommodate more than a hundred they were let into the room in groups. The others had to remain impatiently outside.

The street railway is giving good accommodation and have been running two cars every fifteen minutes. This means eight cars an hour. Tonight more cars will be put on and an effort will be made to keep them moving on time. Assistant Superintendent Conway is looking after the beach end of the line today and can be depended upon to keep things moving.

Chief Hayden has several officers on duty today, and will have more tonight.

Up to this noon no general attempt at decoration had been made although there were one or two cottages along Manet avenue that were decorated.

It is an open question whether there is to be a parade or not. Some say yes, and others that there will be no parade. The official program conveys but little information in regard to the affair.

With continued good weather there should be a large crowd at the beach during the next two days.

—Comparatively few horses attain to 17 hands, but Kansas boasts of one that measures 20 hands and weighs 2,412 pounds.

A REVIVAL.

What Fore River Works Mean to Massachusetts.

The Ledger has already noted the fact that the Fore River Company has the contract for another large schooner. Commenting editorially the Boston Journal says:

"That seven-masted steel schooner, Thomas W. Lawson, whose launch at Quincy Point last month was such a majestic spectacle, is not long to be alone among the great wooden coastwise fleet. Another steel monster from the same yard will be afloat next summer. Even before the Lawson slid overboard plans were preparing for a six-masted vessel of the same general type, and a contract for this ship has now been signed between Capt. John G. Crowley, New England's schooner king and the Fore River Ship and Engine Company.

"This second steel schooner will be somewhat smaller than the Lawson, but still an immense craft, larger than the largest and heaviest of our Yankee wooden merchantmen. She will have a carrying capacity of 5700 tons of coal as compared with the Lawson's 7500 tons. It is fortunate for our New England maritime interests that one more steel sailing vessel is immediately to be built for this practical test of the merits of the steel hull and the wooden hull in the North Atlantic trade ought to be made as exhaustive as possible.

"It must not be thought that whatever the result, the construction of great wooden schooners will straightway be abandoned. There is too much capital, experience and technical skils in the old established shipyards of the Kennebec River and Penobscot Bay. Still it is the Journal's expectation now, as it was the Journal's prediction several years ago, that the time is not far distant when a majority of the sailing coast carriers of fifteen hundred tons and upwards will be of steel, as are now most of our best coastwise steamers.

This inevitable change in ship-building material means much for Boston and its neighborhood. It has long seemed as if in wooden building Massachusetts could not compete with Maine. In any event, nearly all of the large wooden many-masted schooners have been launched from Eastern yards, though constructed for Boston owners. But when it comes to steel Boston is nearer to the sources of supply than Bath or Woldoboro or Camden. And—more important still—Boston enjoys a great advantage in the size and completeness of its steel working establishments.

Maine has one yard, and an excellent one, equipped for all kinds of steel construction—the Bath Iron Works, which have done much for the government and are now building a first-class battleship and completing a monitor. The Sewall yard, also at Bath, has launched some large steel sailing ships for deep sea trade, and has now in hand a five-masted schooner. But Maine has no steel ship plant so extensive as the Fore River establishment.

The increased use of steel in our great and prosperous coastwise fleet means for our old Massachusetts seaport a revival of that calling which was one of Boston's glories in the years when Donald McKay's clippers were challenging the world."

Master Plumbers.

The first annual meeting of the Master Plumbers' Association of Quincy and vicinity, was held at Grand Army hall, Friday, August 15. The following officers were elected:

President, M. F. Corbett.
1st Vice-President, A. E. Damon.
2d Vice-President, D. J. S. McCurdy.
Secretary, D. H. Keniley.
Treasurer, J. E. Luddon.

The Association now numbers fourteen members and bids fair to prove a complete success.

Against Monuments.

President Frank Eurich of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents made the radical suggestion Monday, at a convention in Boston, that monuments in cemeteries are many times out of place, and he further stated, by implication, at least, that resting places of the dead would be better without monuments of marble and stone.

Elected Treasurer.

News from Bangor, Me., reports that at a meeting of the directors of the Public Works Company Aug. 14, James H. Cutler resigned as treasurer and John R. Graham was elected. Mr. Graham is second vice-president of the Massachusetts Electric Company and a resident of Quincy, Mass.

Another Cup.

Utowana of the Manchester, Mass., Yacht club, won the Coronation cup in the great regatta at Cowes. The Utowana is 191 feet over all, 155 feet water line, 27.8 feet beam, and has a draught of 6.6 feet.

For the Ledger.

A Street-car Trip to Onset Bay.

I took the 7.45 car from Quincy for Brockton, by way of Randoph, and met a friend, J. E. Hayward of Quincy Neck at Braintree, who was also on the way to Onset. It took 75 minutes to Brockton; fare 15 cents. Then we took a car for Middleboro, through Bridgewater, a very fine ride. Changed cars at Middleboro for Wareham, the cars run quite fast in this section; fine new cars with all the modern improvements; went through the villiages of Rock and Tremont to Wareham and Onset Bay. About 4 hours and fifteen minutes on the way. Cost ten 5 cent fares, or 50 cents.

We registered our names at headquarters and found a good place to lodge. The meetings were well attended; we had the pleasure of hearing W. J. Colville, the well known speaker from England; Rev. B. F. Austin of Canada, formerly a Methodist preacher; also the Rev. F. A. Wiggins of Boston, at one of his test meetings.

Friday and Saturday, August 7 and 8, we had the pleasure of attending the Woman's Congress and listening to addresses by Rev. Anna Shaw of Philadelphia and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York city, President of National Woman's Suffrage Association.

We had the pleasure of attending several evening circles of different mediums and had some fine tests of Spirit return.

There was a crowd of visitors at Onset on Sunday. The electric cars from New Bedford brought in hundreds of visitors. A fine trip to New Bedford; nice cars, and they run through Marion, Mattapoisett, Fairhaven; fare, 20 cents to New Bedford. A trip to Monument beach for 10 cents.

The speakers for Sunday, Aug. 21, will be Miss Susie C. Clark of Cambridge and Rev. F. E. Mason of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Sunday, Aug. 30, Rev. Cora L. V. Richmond of Chicago and Kate R. Stiles of Boston will speak.

Mrs. M. A. Bonney of Boston was at her brother's cottage for two weeks, and has resumed her Tuesday circles at Quincy. Henry Chubbuck.

Hanley Boat Entered.

A dispatch from Halifax, N. S., says The Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Squadron will give a special race here on Thursday, open to all, and a great deal of interest is being taken in it, owing to the fact that the Boston boat Marion, owned by Dr. Grahan of Boston and the Hermes, another Massachusetts built racer, designed by Hanley of Quincy, will compete against the yachts of the Nova Scotia squadron. The latter's handicap system will be used. Dr. Grahan has interested himself in the arranging of a series of races at Shelburne, Chester and Halifax next season, and thinks a number of Massachusetts yachts will take part.

City Expenditures.

Both the City Treasurer and City Auditor claim they are right relative to the expenditures this year on account of 1901, although the former reports the amount as $84,185.11 and the latter as $54,185.11. The difference comes on the payment of $30,000 by the Treasurer on account of temporary loans. The City Auditor says he is not required to approve for payment temporary loans, and therefore they are not included in his report. For a similar reason the City Treasurer reports the expenditures for 1902 as over $2,500 in excess of the amount given in the City Auditor's report, because he includes: Cash to credit of perpetual care fund of public burial places, water service deposits refunded, taxes refunded, a payment to the State, and an excess of appropriation paid on Tax Collector's account.

Examination for Cadets.

The Secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Education has been requested by Hon. George F. Hoar, U. S. Senator from Massachusetts, to arrange for a competitive examination of young men desiring to secure a nomination as a candidate for a cadetship at large from Massachusetts in the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. Each senator is entitled under a recent act of Congress to recommend to the Secretary of the Navy for appointment, one cadet with five alternates. The examination will be held at the State House, in Boston, on Wednesday, Sept. 3, at 9 A. M., in the examination room of the Civil Service Commission, No. 15.

—If the story of the selection of Gov. Crane for the head of national committee in the next campaign was all a midsummer night's dream, it may accomplish its purpose. The Republican managers will have discovered the confidence which the people of the country have in the Massachusetts governor. If they haven't thought of his selection, they can't help giving it a thought now.—Haverhill Gazette.

Sea Bathing.

Most of the benefits usually ascribed to sea bathing are due to the breathing of salt air, says a writer in Good Housekeeping. The ideal ocean bath comprises the plunge, the moment of benumbing cold, the immediately succeeding moment of irradiating warmth (in which the strength of individual vitality asserts its supremacy over a destroying element), then the hard rub and quick run along the beach, by which means a possibly reluctant reaction is triumphantly realized. If, even after an hour or two, there is a feeling of chilliness or lassitude, it is convincing proof that the plunge has not been swift enough nor the exercise following it energetic enough. Where the circulation is poor, an indoor dip into salt water at eighty degrees is quite sufficiently chilling.

A delicate woman might as well go out to slay a lion with a paper knife as to oppose her feeble spark of warmth for more than a few seconds at a time to the death-cold clutch of ocean. Cold is a powerful tonic. So is hardship. So is privation. Each stimulates the vital powers to their utmost; and when the forces of defence have been weakened by indoor living, complex foods and shallow breathing, they are further injured by being subjected to an over powering assault. To come back to nature is profitable only when we fully understand that nature is not sympathetic, nor refined, nor considerate of our feelings. She is the original strong-minded woman. If we are hardy enough to defy her she will allow us to survive; if we are not she won't. In the right use of air and water, food and exercise, are undoubted health and strength; but if we neglect all other means of physical well-being and stake our faith on water alone, we are deceived. "Nature never did betray the heart that loved her," but it must be a steadfast all-the-year-round love, not a fancy of the over-heated season.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

Not Over-Wise.

FIGHTING IN MINDANAO

May Be Necessary to Bring Moros to Terms

CHAFFEE HAS AMPLE FORCE

To Subdue Hostility Displayed Toward Americans—Captain Ryan Thinks Water Cure a Slight Offense Compared With Treason

Washington, Aug. 20.—There are no developments in the Moro situation on the island of Mindanao. General Chaffee was expected to reach Cebu on the army transport Ingalls yesterday, but the vessel's arrival at that port has not yet been reported. It is possible that General Chaffee has decided to shorten his trip to the southern islands and return to Manila direct. An order at Manila from the war department at Washington, leaving action in the Moro situation to General Chaffee's discretion, has been transmitted to him in the south, but has probably not reached him.

It is believed here that General Chaffee will increase the American forces on Mindanao and issue an ultimatum to the hostile Moros. There are at present 27,000 American troops in the Philippine islands, a goodly portion of which could be spared for active service.

Manila newspapers received on the incoming Philippine mail at the war department contain important information concerning the affairs in the islands.

Captain Pershing recently undertook to ascertain the condition of Bacolod, and was informed by the sultan of Bacayuan that there were three forts, all of which were strong. The people had been strengthening them by lining them inside and out with stone so that the projectiles of the Americans could not penetrate. He said that Bacolod had 300 men, but if the Americans went there the Moros adjacent would assist in the defense. Other native chiefs informed Captain Pershing that the sultan of Bacolod would kill them (the natives) if he knew they had been on friendly terms with the Americans.

The paper of the latest date states that many troops were being sent to Mindanao and that it was the evident intention of the government to occupy the country around Lake Lanao, which would require a considerable number. It is said that the health conditions in this region are perfect and that soldiers could stay in such a climate and enjoy the delights of Camp Meade, Pa.

The papers are full of reports of the trial of Captain Ryan, who was charged with administering the water cure. Ryan was defended by Major Glenn, who had been under similar charges. Captain Ryan in his own defense used this language:

"Did my sticking the heads of these treacherous, lying native office-holders into a pail of water, thereby washing away an impediment in their speech, constitute a greater crime than treason against the flag and the soldiers who defend it?"

Ryan was criticised by General Chaffee on account of a report he made regarding Judge Rohde, but General Davis, who reviewed the report, agreed with the main facts as presented by Ryan. He regretted Ryan's sneers at Rohde and his defiant attitude toward Chaffee.

Of the condition in Kisimas province General Davis takes the same view as Captain Ryan. He said that Rufino, whom Ryan disciplined, was as much a menace in Mindanao as Lukban in Samar or Malvar in Luzon. General Sanger, who reviewed the case of Ryan, practically acquitted Ryan of all charges. During the testimony Lieutenant Elliott of the Thirtieth infantry said that each town in Mindanao had a band of assassins, whose duty it was to kill anyone holding communication with the Americans.

The celebrated Gardiner investigation had come to an end at the time the last mail left Manila, and it is stated that the record and report on the case will be forwarded to Washington for consideration.

Police Officers Indicted

New York, Aug. 20.—The grand jury returned three indictments yesterday on charges growing out of the riots recently at the funeral of Chief Rabbi Joseph. Two of the indictments charge Roundsman Jackson with two assaults in the second degree. The third indictment is against an unnamed police officer, who is away on his vacation.

London, Aug. 20.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Express says: During the maneuvers near here a squadron of cavalry was ordered suddenly to charge. It galloped into a river and 50 men are reported to have been drowned. Details of the affair are difficult to obtain.

Counterfeiting Joint Unearthed

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 20.—Governor Savage has decided that conditions do not at present warrant sending the state militia to North Platte to cope with the Union Pacific strikers. He has reached this conclusion after a personal investigation of the situation.

THE NEWPORT TRAGEDY

Remington's Mind Was Sound, In the Opinion of His Brother

Newport, R. I., Aug. 20.—Edward P. Remington, brother of Robert R. Remington, who killed himself at the Newport Reading Room, arrived from Pittsburg last evening and two hours later left for the former home of the family in Williamsport, Pa., where his brother's body will be buried.

Mr. Remington was seen as he left the Wickford boat and his first words were an emphatic expression that his brother was of perfectly sound mind before he shot himself. Mr. Remington said he was extremely surprised at what he had read in the papers ascribing the suicide to mental derangement. Mr. Remington said that the last time he saw his brother was in April, just prior to the announcement of his engagement to Miss Van Alen. At that time he had a long talk with his brother Robert and saw no evidence of any mental change whatever. On passing through New York yesterday he said he stopped at his brother's office and closely questioned business associates who all declared that it was impossible that Robert Remington's mind was unbalanced. Furthermore, Mr. Remington said, he could see no reason for any change, as the family for many generations had never shown any symptoms of insanity. He said that he knew nothing of his brother's relations with Miss May Van Alen except that they were to be married in the fall. As to his brother's financial condition he said that all he knew was that his brother had a good income.

Kidnapping Secrets Out

Vienna, Aug. 20.—The correspondent of the Neus Weiner Tagblatt at Sofia, Bulgaria, describes in a dispatch the violent conflicts which occurred during the recent congress there of the Macedonian committee. M. Sarafoff, the notorious ex-president of the committee, was accused of misappropriating $50,000 and of being the chief agent in the kidnapping last year of Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary. He was also accused, according to the correspondent, of paying $10,000 to a friend named Deltscheff, who planned the kidnapping.

Death Few Hours After Marriage

Manila, Aug. 20.—Rudolph Zumstein, 22, an instructor in the government schools, and Miss Jeannette Williams of Denver had become betrothed while they were students at the University of Colorado and Miss Williams crossed the Pacific to wed the teacher. He met her at the landing early Monday morning and shortly thereafter he was taken suddenly ill of cholera. His condition being critical, the wedding ceremony was performed at once. At 1 o'clock Zumstein died.

A PROMOTION FOR KNOX

President Said to Favor Him For Supreme Bench

QUESTION OF ACCEPTANCE

Somewhat In Doubt Because of Matters Now Before Him of History Making Value—Justice Shiras Intends to Retire Early Next Year.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Attorney General Knox, whose return to Washington was predicted in some of the morning newspapers, is still at Pittsburg, and is not expected at the department this week. No direct confirmation can thus far be obtained of the report that he is to succeed Justice Shiras on the supreme bench, whose retirement before many months has for some time been anticipated, and was asserted in a Pittsburg dispatch to be expected by his son.

It is known that the president would like to have Mr. Knox on the supreme bench. Whether Mr. Knox himself would like the place is, however, a question much debated among his closest friends. They point not only to his prominence at the bar and its compensations, but to the deep interest which he has taken in the great projects now before the department of justice. Cabinet places as such rise and fall in prominence with national conditions, just as do the various committees in congress. Today the department of justice is doing work of perhaps the most importance of any of the executive bureaus; its work in helping to shape a suitable anti-trust policy for the Republican party may prove of history making value. Its responsibility in Panama canal enterprise is very great.

The number of new questions arising from the constitutional relation to the insular policies, now in formative shape, is notably large. Mr. Knox properly estimates the value of the work, and it is said, would greatly dislike to leave it. Some embarrassment might, moreover, be occasioned should cases come before the court of which he were a member, involving an interpretation of laws which he may have helped to frame. Such a situation is, however, still conjectural.

The Pittsburg dispatch referred to above says: George Shiras, 3d, confirms the report that his father, Justice Shiras, will retire from the supreme court bench early next year. He says: "There is no particular reason behind the retirement except that my father believes that there is wisdom in the law passed by congress enabling judges to retire when they have reached the age of 70 years. The duties of this position require all of the physical as well as the mental force that an able-bodied man has. While mentally a man does not deteriorate at that age, he undoubtedly does not have the same physical resources as earlier in life. The requirement law is meant to open the way for voluntary retirement."

Asked when Justice Shiras would retire, he said: "I do not know that a positive time has been fixed. One report, I see, says that he will leave the bench in April next. My opinion is that if he remains there that long he will continue in service until May, when the adjournment of the court occurs."

George Shiras, Jr., was appointed by President Harrison associate justice of the United States supreme court on July 19, 1892, as the successor to Justice Bradley, who died Jan. 22, 1892, and the nomination was confirmed by the senate on July 25, the senate judiciary committee having reported the nomination to the senate without recommendation. There was considerable contest over the nomination.

Didn't Come Across Will

New York, Aug. 20.—Charles L. Fair's will was not found in his vault in the stock exchange building, which was opened and examined by his sister, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, and her counsel, on Monday. The order of the court granting permission to search the vault stipulated that if found the will must be filed within 24 hours in the surrogate court. No such will was filed yesterday.

Gates Refused an Injunction

Denver, Aug. 20.—The application of John W. Gates and others for a preliminary injunction against John C. Osgood and others to prevent them from refusing to allow the complainants to vote their proxies in the coming meeting of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company was denied by Judge Biner of the United States district court yesterday.

Iglesias Again In Trouble

San Juan, P. R., Aug. 20.—Santiago Iglesias, president of the Federation of Workmen of Porto Rico, has been arrested at Aguadilla for issuing a pamphlet criticising and attacking the insular authorities for their attitude on the recent labor strike. He was released in $500 bail.

Driven From Home by Storm

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Aug. 20.—A rainfall of 1.79 inches did damage in this city last night estimated at nearly $200,000. Storm water sewers were inadequate and thousands of people stayed up all night, their homes being menaced.

HOUSEHOLD UTENSILS.

Republican Factional Divisions Annoy the President

CREDIT FOR GOOD WORK

Will Fall on Leaders Who Make Best Showing at Polls—Organizations Which Exist Only For Office Have No Claim Upon Him

Oyster Bay, L. I., Aug. 21.—President Roosevelt yesterday expressed his disapproval of factional differences in the Republican party. Cecil A. Lyon, chairman of the Republican state committee of Texas, called upon him and presented his side of the controversy which has arisen among the Republicans of the Lone Star state. The president stated to him with the utmost emphasis that no man has any authority to speak for the president as regards Texan matters and that he was taking no side for or against any man or any faction among the Texas Republicans.

He said he was exceedingly impatient with those Republicans who went into factional divisions. Mr. Roosevelt believes that in the states in which the Republican party is a minority the credit for good work should fall on those Republican leaders who are able to make a good showing at the polls, especially for congressional candidates, and not to those who spend their time plotting how they can get delegates or receive offices. He told Mr. Lyon that he could explain this to all Texas Republicans of every faction.

The president also told him that if ever in any such southern state a Republican congressman was elected it would amount to far more in the president's mind than anything which could be done in the way of offices and that he felt there was little need of recognition for an organization which existed only for office and delegates.

It was learned that the president told Chairman Babcock of the Republican congressional committee when the latter visited him a few days ago, that he was profoundly discontented with the Virginia Republican organization for not making a resolute effort to elect Republican congressmen from the western districts of Virginia, and that he felt that an organization which did not try to develop the fullest party strength at the polls had no claim upon him.

Mr. Lyon was the president's guest at luncheon, the other guests being George L. Roberts, director of the mint; Frederick W. Nolls of New York, who was secretary of the American embassy at The Hague peace conference, and Dr. Albert A. Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews.

Before leaving for New York, Mr. Roberts said that he had discussed Iowa politics with the president and had informed him that the actions of the Republicans of Iowa on the tariff was not of a revolutionary character. The Republicans of his state, he said, believed that certain changes in the tariff were necessary and thought it would be better to make the movement now than wait until later and be forced into it.

Tariff and Trusts

Rockland, Me., Aug. 21.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw was the principal speaker at a Republican mass meeting last night held in the Rockland opera house. Secretary Shaw's speech mainly pertained to the tariff.

Thomaston, Me., Aug. 21.—Congressman Pou of North Carolina addressed the Jackson club here last evening. The speaker devoted his attention mainly to trusts and the Philippine issue, criticising the administration in connection with both.

Body Not Fully Identified

Chicago, Aug. 21.—After an investigation by the Chicago police extending over a fortnight and a two days' coroner's inquest, the authorities are still in doubt whether or not the body of the murdered woman found at Seventy-Fourth and State streets was that of Minnie Mitchell. Three men stand accused of complicity in her death and that of Mrs. Annie Bartholin and are held in heavy bonds to the grand jury.

Havana Longshoremen Strike

Havana, Aug. 21.—The longshoremen and lightermen of all classes and the dock laborers went out on strike yesterday. They have several grievances, one being that coal should be unloaded by the ton instead of by day wages. Efforts are being made by the union leaders to bring out the laborers at Cienfuegos and Cardenas.

Miles on Tour of Inspection

Washington, Aug. 21.—Lieutenant General Miles has left Washington with his aide, Colonel Whitney, to make an inspection of a number of forts in New England, including some which will participate in the joint maneuvers.

ENFORCED VACATION

For Over Two Hundred Men by Burning of Iron and Steel Plant

Portland, Me., Aug. 21.—The plant of the Portland Iron and Steel company at South Portland was destroyed by fire last night, entailing a loss of over $100,000. The fire started from an explosion in the puddlers' mill, caused by an ingot of iron dropping into a pool of water. The flying metal set the shed on fire in several places and within an hour the buildings were in ashes.

The mills were burned in the fall of 1899 and rebuilt by the present corporation. They were reopened in June, 1900. The business has been exceedingly prosperous and the mills were running on double time. It had orders enough to keep the present crew busy well into 1903. The concern employed 225 men and its payroll averaged $12,000 a month. It manufactured merchant bar iron for railroads and shipbuilders. There was insurance of $63,000 on the plant.

Noise an Element of Damage

Boston, Aug. 21.—In the superior court yesterday Chief Justice Mason sent down his decision in the case of E. F. Baker vs. the Boston Elevated Railway company, holding that where property is damaged by the construction of the railway, the petitioners have a right to recover for the damages caused by the noise occasioned in the operation of the road. The case was a test suit and was bitterly contested by the railway company, which contended that the petitioner could not recover for the noise.

Treasurer Said to Be Missing

Providence, Aug. 21.—Frederick G. Stiles, president of the Provident Home Benefit company, has entered a petition in the supreme court for a temporary receiver for the concern, alleging as his reason for asking such action "the continued absence from the city of the treasurer of the corporation." The treasurer is De Witt McClease. Application has been made for a warrant for McClease's arrest.

Railroad Management Blamed

Marlboro, Mass., Aug. 21.—Judge Kingsbury yesterday filed his finding of the inquest into the cause of the death of John H. Harris, who was killed in the street railroad accident in this city on June 28. He finds that the death was due to the negligence of the Hudson-bound car and to the general negligence of the management of the road. Harris was employed as a motorman by the company.

Two More Rioters Arrested

Wareham, Mass., Aug. 21.—Two additional arrests in the McDonald tar and feathers incident at Marion were made yesterday, Joseph Silva and Hector McLoud being the men. Both were held in $500 bail. Their cases will be called when the other five defendants appear in court. It is reported that the people of Marion have raised a $5000 defense fund for the men arrested.

Van Derlip Held For Grand Jury

Boston, Aug. 21.—Willard C. Van Derlip, well known among Boston lawyers and business men, who is charged with the larceny of four bonds of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads, appeared before Judge Wentworth yesterday. Through his counsel he waived examination, and was held in $8000 for the grand jury. Bail was furnished.

Killed by Electric Car

Norwood, Mass., Aug. 21.—Miss Nellie Parks died here last night as a result of being struck by an electric car while with her brother, George Parks, Jr. They were driving from their home in East Walpole to Norwood, when their horse became frightened and ran in front of an electric car. It is thought Mr. Parks will survive his injuries.

Brewers' Petition Granted

Boston, Aug. 21.—In the superior court yesterday Judge Richardson entered a decree for an injunction against the defendants in the cases brought by the Massachusetts Breweries company, and others, vs. Frank H. McCarthy, and others, to restrain the defendants from boycotting beer made by the plaintiffs.

Old Home Basket Picnics

Concord, N. H., Aug. 21.—Perfect weather brought all the "Old Home Week" folks out of doors yesterday and made the basket picnics in the groves as enjoyable occasions as could be devised. There was a large number of "Old Home Day" celebrations on this plan held yesterday.

Gloucester Strikers Lose

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 21.—The fish skinners' and handlers' strike was ended last night, when the union voted to have the men go back to work today. The 700 strikers lose all their contentions, which were for a nine-hour day, an increase in wages and recognition of the union.

Capture of Alleged Thief

Attleboro, Mass., Aug. 21.—Patrick Kane was arrested yesterday for alleged complicity in robbing John Gateau at his hut in the Bear swamp woods. Gateau identified the prisoner as one of the men who had attacked him, but Kane denies all knowledge of the affair.

Coal Takes Another Jump

Boston, Aug. 21.—The price of coal in Boston was advanced yesterday to $10 a ton for furnace, egg, stove, nut and Shamokin, and Franklin was placed at $11 a ton. The Boston dealers wish to discourage the idea of citizens laying in a large supply of coal for winter use.

THE NAVAL WAR GAME.

The "Enemy" at a Disadvantage Because of Limitations and a Full Moon.

Washington, Aug. 21.—The mimic naval war began at noon yesterday. Admiral Higginson and Commander Pillsbury, in command of the rival fleets, respectively designated "Blue" and "White," the latter under command of Commander Pillsbury, being the attacking fleet, were supplied with confidential instructions which went into effect at noon.

The problem for the "White" fleet, which is at sea, is to effect a landing between Portland, Me., and Cape Cod before Aug. 25. To be successful the attacking fleet must seize some undefended anchorage between the points named—Portland harbor being included, but not Casco Bay—and hold it for six hours without being opposed by a superior force. The instructions define the harbor seized as one that must be capable of gun and mine defense, with not less than six fathoms of water, anchorage for several large ships and in all respects suitable for an advance base for an enemy's fleet, including heavy ships.

Under the instructions defining the character of the harbor he must seize, Commander Pillsbury is considerably restricted. The Prairie, which is the heaviest draught vessel in his fleet, draws slightly under 22 feet, the Prairie 18 feet, 2 inches, and the Supply 20 feet.

Naval officers here generally agree that the chances against the white squadron are very great, and that practically its only chance of success would lie in the existence of a heavy fog under cover of which Commander Pillsbury might slip through the cordon of scouts and reach an anchorage in an undefended port.

To win the white squadron must be in port for six hours without being confronted with a superior force. Within that time after the white squadron was sighted Admiral Higginson, if he held his heavy ships midway between the two extremities of the line to be defended, at Rockport for instance, could reach his enemy by steaming 10 or 11 knots an hour. From Cape Ann, which is just outside of Rockport, to Cape Cod, is only 42½ miles, and from Cape Ann to Elizabeth light, outside of Portland, is only 58 miles.

Another feature of the situation which will militate against the chances of the white squadron is the instruction which requires Commander Pillsbury to enter "an undefended harbor," one "with deep water-approach, with six fathoms of water," one capable of defense "by guns and mines" and one in which heavy ships could anchor. These restrictions will confine him to less than a dozen harbors, among them Portland, Portsmouth, Rockport, Salem, and Provincetown. None of the many other places, like Newburyport, Ipswich, Annisquam, Gloucester, Manchester, Beverly, Marblehead, above Boston, or Plymouth, Barnstable, and the other ports below, would be available. A full moon is also another factor against the enemy's success.

No Sign of Hostile Fleet

Rockport, Mass., Aug. 21.—The New England coast from Portland harbor to Cape Cod is on a war basis. This is not a condition of fact, but of theory. Admiral Higginson has under his command 20 vessels consisting of line of battleships, cruisers, converted yachts and torpedo boats. Theoretically his fleet is placed at 50 points, while that of Commander Pillsbury, made up of three cruisers, is credited with only half the fighting strength.

Admiral Higginson moved his fleet out of the Harbor of Refuge here at noon yesterday and went in search of the enemy. The picket line has been established and mimic war may begin at any moment.

The question which confronted Admiral Higginson as he studied his maps on the Kearsarge last night was the location and hour of attack of the opposing squadron. He has his naval intelligence bureau connecting all points along the shore from Portland to Provincetown, and the central point is in a shed on the shore of the Harbor of Refuge. By telephonic communication the flagships can be informed of the appearance of any strange vessel off the coast, and in such an event he can quickly assemble his fleet, proceed to that point and endeavor to crush the enemy. All was activity on the defending squadron last night, although the night was one of the most beautiful of the summer, almost making it certain that Commander Pillsbury would not be so rash as to attempt to run into the coast when his craft could be seen miles away.

Beginning at midnight the defending squadron put into use an elaborate system of coast defense, notably the use of all the lighthouses from Portland to Barnstable on Cape Cod. In addition nearly every yard of the coast line was patrolled by a representative of the defending squadron, the patrols being from two to three miles in length. Each patrolman made frequent telegraphic reports, and these in turn were transmitted from the base here to the flagship.

A Disease-Stricken Crew

Port Townsend, Wash., Aug. 21.—The Peruvian bark Santa Rosa arrived yesterday from San Buena Ventura, Colombia, with most of the crew sick with beri-beri. She had been out 73 days and since Aug. 1 the only persons left to navigate the bark were Captain Rentrie, one man and a boy.

Robber Used Knife on Woman

Nyack, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Mrs. Mary Scofield was awakened late at night by a man in her room who demanded money. When told she had none he stabbed her in the head and then gashed her throat. The woman's cries aroused her sister and the man fled. Mrs. Scofield is seriously injured.

Good Afternoon.

The abolishment of the Saville street grade crossing is something that should be considered in connection with the double tracking of the street. It is already a complicated problem, and would be more so if there were more tracks. Should the company abandon this location it would escape an assessment. a Few cities or towns can rival Quincy in low tax rates. Only nine times in 110 years has our rate been in excess of $17 per $1,000, and $19.20 was our high water mark. This year is one of the exceptions, but $17.40 is not an excessive rate, and it may be possible to get below $17 next year.

The City Council should not exhaust its debt limit on the Quincy Point schoolhouse and the Houghs Neck fire station, for it may be necessary to make additional appropriation for coal and emergenices. It developed at the Council meeting this week that the Mayor in his annual estimates had made no provision for election expenses, and already two appropriations for current expenses have been exhausted. The City Charter is being violated relative to a special election to fill vacancy, because no money is available.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The seriousness of the coal strike is becoming more and more apparent. When it comes to the stage that your local dealer is unable to fill an order for five tons of furnace coal and able to deal out the range variety by the half ton only, it would seem that matters had arrived at a pass where there should be such a protest go up all over the land as to compel some sort of a settlement of the existing difficulty. It is undoubtedly true that the operators feel that it is absolutely necessary for them to win in this conflict, but the strike has gone on long enough to establish the fact that there is not such an oversupply of labor as has been asserted to exist. The subject ought to be capable of arbitration, and, at all events, the idea that the people of the country are denied their fuel is not to be tolerated. The operators could have conceded far more than is demanded by the miners and kept the retail price of coal far below what everybody is willing to pay today.—Tradesman.

☞The Providence Telegram in attempting to criticise the proposed plan of having cabinet officers go upon the stump this year, refers to political meeting as "meeting the mob upon the hustings." Pretty good, isn't it for an organ of a party which pretends to be of the people and represent the people to talk about the "mob?" If it is beneath the dignity of a cabinet officer or of the president himself to meet his fellow citizens in any gathering and discuss before them the political questions of the administration, the sooner that dignity is punctured the better it will be for the nation. The cabinet officers are not going out to "meet the mob," but are going to talk with their fellow citizens, with the men of the country who stand on a level with them.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞The terrible deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fair in France shows that the automobile is not without its dangers, even in the hands of an expert. Mr. Fair was one of the first to introduce automobiles on the Pacific coast, and had for years been familiar with the handling and management of these machines. But an apparently unexpected break in some part of the machine rendered his knowledge of no avail. Carefulness will do much to prevent accidents, it is true, but not everything. A defective piece of steel, a nut working loose, may upset all the calculations of the most expert automobilist in an instant. In this particular case it appears that the automobile was being driven at an excessive rate of speed, which contributed to the danger. It would seem that an expert would understand that this magnifies the chances of accident greatly, and that familiarity would suggest the increased danger in case of accident. But the question properly may be asked: Why should an automobilst desire a vehicle designed for the purpose of making the speed of a mile a minute, unless built and owned for purely racing purposes? With the prohibition placed upon the speed of automobiles in this country, what advantage can there be in owning a machine for road travel which is capable of exceeding the legal limit of speed by several times that limit? Road racing with automobiles in this count try has already resulted in disaster, and unless it is stopped by the owners of these vehicles themselves, it will be stopped by legislation. People do not own racing horses, as a rule, for their own pleasure driving. If the owners of automobiles wish the same rights upon the road as are granted to drivers of horses, it is incumbant upon them to use their automobiles as one would use a horse. Yet every day we read of efforts to secure more powerful automobiles, capable of making the speed of a mile a minute, or even more, for use in a country where such speed is absolutely prohibited. If an automobile is to be used only on the race track it might be understood why it might be desirable to own one of these forty-five horse-power machines. But for the automobile to be used upon the road there are limitations which should be respected by the most enthusiastic of automobilists, if not for his own safety, at least for the safety of the public.—Transcript.

Vacation Notes.

Many of our young people remember Mr. Southworth who formerly taught at the Adams Academy. Some Quincy tourists met him at a rural district Unitarian church last Sunday evening, when he preached what now seems the newer theology of that denomination, but which conservatives recognize as the oldest Christian Faith. He is now president of the Meadville Penn. Theological school; the position which has been held so long by the Rev. Mr. Cary, brother of Mrs. E. C. Butler. He asked after very many of his old pupils whom he remembers. He had supplied the Lynn, Mass. Unitarian pulpit in the morning, and he said that church was kept open for stay-at-homes during vacation Sundays by private generosity of two of its parishioners.

Concerning Vacation Cats.

Dr. Abele our veterinary surgeon is going out to Minneapolis to attend the national convention of the faculty. He is thinking of taking as travelling companions three cats to demonstrate the feasibility of carrying these domestic animals when it is necessary rather than to desert them as many so called good people often do. Dr. Abele says the best way to carry a cat is to enclose it in a stout bag tied around its neck.

A Quincy apostle of cats, a practical teacher, transported one of these four-footed friends to her destination in this manner, but the cat preferred the farming district to Quincy, and had to return in a nice roomy box with breathing spaces.

FEW ILLUMINATIONS.

Many Disappointed Who Went to Houghs Neck Last Night.

As an illumination, the affair at Houghs Neck was a failure last night, only a very few of the cottages being lighted. Again no one seemed to know what the attractions were or where they would come off, and there was more or less disappointment.

There were probably more children at Houghs Neck Wednesday than ever before at any one time. It was a grand day for the children to be out and they came from Quincy and surrounding towns. The first thing of importance was the serving of ice cream and cake to the children. This was served to over 1300 children and it required 58 gallons of cream and 104 loaves of cake. Henry H. Faxon contributed $25 toward the cream and cake and the children are grateful to him.

For entertainment there was a vaudeville show and an exhibition of fancy dancing by the pupils of Professor Kaplan. This included a Hoop dance by sixteen girls; tamborine dance by Miss L. A. Holbrook; cake walk by Miss Grace Larry, and skirt dance by Miss Grace McDonald and Miss Minnie Stroup.

There was also a series of sports consisting of a game of ball between two nines known as the, "Dew Drop Inn" and "Manet Beach." The former won by a score of 11 to 7. The result of the other sports is as follows:

100-yards dash for boys, won by W. J. McCarthy second, Geo. Sullivan

100-yards dash for girls, won by Miss Fannie McDonald; second, Miss Lucy Newman.

Potato race, won by W.J. McCarthy; second, George Nag.

The only thing in the way of excitement was the Houghs Neck steamer getting stuck in the mud near the Yacht club float. The band that was to give the concert was on the boat and it was sometime before they were got ashore by the use of smaller boats. It was late in the evening before she got away.

There was no general attempt at illumination and there was little at the beach proper, other than the crowd and fakirs to lead one to think anything unusual was going on.

The band concert was given on Manet avenue, near the street railway turnout and the fireworks were set off in the field opposite. A few of the cottages in this vicinity were illuminated for the occasion.

This served to scatter the crowd somewhat and the railroad scooped in quite a few nickels by those who went way through to the end of the line, only to find out that they had passed the chief attraction.

This mistake was due to the rather blind program issued by the committee, who apparently are without experience.

This afternoon there was a series of field sports, for which cash prizes were given.

Prices for Headstones.

Tenders for headstones were received in Boston, Wednesday, for furnishing the government with 1500 headstones to be shipped to different Grand Army posts and opened by Capt. Palmer, U. S. A.

To bids were submitted, one from the Lee (Mass) Marble Works and the other from the Vermont Marble Works at Proc tor. The former company ask $1.80, $2 95 and $3.95, and the latter $2.13, $2 33 and $3.47. The stones are practically of uniform size and shape, the prices differing with the cut of stone, which comes in three thicknesses.

Two bids will be sent to Washington and Quartermaster General Ludington will make the award.

New Industry.

The old felt mill at Atlantic, recently occupied by the Launch & Canoe Co., has been leased by Bossom & Lane, manufacturers of dye stuffs at 36 Central wharf, Boston. An additional three-story building is being erected and it is said the new firm will employ about a hundred hands.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

YOUR BOOK PLEASE.

The N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Objects to Speculators' Business.

As already noted war is being waged by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad against ticket speculators, who buy books containing from twenty-five to one hundred rides and sell single rides at a profit of from one and one-half cents upward, yet always below the single fare charged by the railroad. Trip tickets between Quincy and Boston with 100 rides are sold for $9 and 25 rides for $2.25, or nine cents per ride. Some speculators have torn out and sold single rides for twelve cents. This form of money making is quite a feature of out-of-town districts, where from five to twenty or more people each day apply to the speculator for passage to and from Boston.

Apparently the road does not relish this loss of revenue, and its present plan to circumvent the speculator is to require each passenger to show his book from which the ticket was torn. This is an old rule of the road, but except in rare cases it has long been neglected by conductors. In fact it is a settled habit of the average passenger to enter the car, tear a ticket out of his book and fasten it in the back of the next seat, then bury himself in his newspaper or whatever might claim his attention, giving no thought to the coming and going of the ticket taker.

To thousands of passengers, whose faces are entirely familiar to conductors, the enforcement of this old order seems uncalled for and a nuisance; and since Saturday conductors have been plied with indignant questions, and, in some cases, with abuse. Nevertheless all have been compelled to comply with the demand, and for the time being the speculator seems to have the small end. Yet even now the road has little chance to operate against the speculator who buys his railroad ticket books and then loans book and all to the would-be passenger.

Fidgety

people are lacking in nervous strength. The weak, care-worn, melancholy, headachy, and low-spirited men and women are easily excited, impatient, fidgety, and unable to sleep at night. Worn-out nerves must be built up, and the vitality of the whole system replenished before relief can come.

"The least bit of noise or sudden jar would nearly drive me crazy, and I was just too fidgety for anything. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. The first dose of Dr. Miles' Nervine brought me sleep, and after that I got well fast."

MONUMENTS.

A Cemetery President Who Would Do Away With Them.

Naturally the granite manufacturers of Quincy do not take very kindly to the sentiment of President Eurich of a Detroit cemetery against monuments, but the artistic has received considerable attention from Quincy manufacturers, so they may not be as hard hit as rival places. Mr. Eurich is reported at the convention in Boston as follows by the Transcript:

Mr. Eurich began by welcoming his associates, spoke of the good that all derived from the exchange of ideas in these annual conventions of which this is the sixteenth, and then proceeded to show how the so-called landscape treatment for beautifying cemeteries by means of wide, grassy lawns and natural scenery was at present the favorite. This led him to speak of monuments.

"What shall we say of them?" he asked: and then continued, "having given the subject much earnest thought I have arrived at the conclusion that the one thing we ought to do is to find a remedy to prevent the useless disfiguring of beautiful scenery and surroundings by stonework which is neither characteristic nor artistic. When we remember that from time to time immemorial there has been implanted within human beings the desire to mark the last resting-place of a relative with some memorial, and, moreover, that this desire has been carefully used and cultivated by those engaged in the manufacture of the memorials from disinterested persons, we can easily understand that this custom has remained deep-rooted with the general public.

"It is true, we have witnessed much progress and improvement from the old-style memorials to the monuments of the present time, and we are occasionally agreeably surprised with sentiments expressed favoring the abandonment of monuments, so much so that we may look forward to the time when more radical changes will be accepted as a move in the right direction. Already many cemeteries have a rule prohibiting monuments on certain-sized lots; while in others, sections are opened where no monuments and only markers level with the lawn are permitted."

He urged the superintendents to educate their lot-owners up to the point where they would be willing to do away with monuments, or at least, where they would be willing to use them only in subordination to some general scheme for developing each part of a cem tery as a harmonious whole.

At the Wednesday evening session, "The Progress of the Cemetery Memorial Industry During the Past 20 Years," was the title of an address delivered by Mr. W. B. Van Amringe. Having mentioned that more than $5,000,000 worth of granite working machines are sold every year in the United States, or more than the annual value of all the cemetery memorial work done in the country, the speaker said that dealers have realized that if they are to keep pace with the public taste they must put in their best efforts. Several firms have sent their designers to Europe, paying their salaries and expenses, in order to get improved ideas. The speaker then took up military memorials, saying that on the battlefield of Gettysburg there are 248 monuments, erected by the different states, representing a value of $500,000; it was proposed to have 1000 monuments at Chickamauga, and of these nearly 250 had already been erected. At the present time, said the speaker, there is between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 worth of memorial stone worked up every year in the United States.

☞ The people of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, had a feeling of something like consternation when they watched the tree-cutting operations on that thoroughfare by the city workmen, and some protests followed. Yet the destruction of the lindens will only serve to give a better growth to the English and American elms along the avenue, and the removal has been done with skill, so that the appearance of the avenue is not injured. The amount or food provided for the trees on the made land of Commonwealth avenue is limited, and unfortunately it cannot well be increased. Few people realize the demands which a large tree makes upon the soil and in order that the Commonwealth avenue elms shall not be starved, as some of those on the Common have been, it is necessary to sacrifice some of the lindens. Last year about as many trees were removed as have been this, and some uneasiness was caused thereby among those who did not grasp the reasons for it, but the work was scientifically done and approved by outside experts. Next year more may be removed.—Boston Transcript.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

CAUGHT RED HANDED

Systematic Robbery of East Milton Store will Probably Stop.

Eugene Gallagher reported to the police a few days ago that his store on Adams street was being entered after it was closed for the night and the money drawer opened and rifled of what there was in it. Suspicion was directed to a certain party, but there was nothing to connect him with the breaks. It was evident, however, that entrance was through a window which someone who visited the store took care to have unlocked.

Monday night Officer Patterson was one of the visitors to the store, and when Mr. Gallagher locked up for the night the officer was inside. It was rather lonesome for the officer sitting their in the dark all alone, but he was after the burglar, and he got him. He had slipped into a kind of repose when he was aroused by hearing a window open. Following quickly came the leg of a man and then his whole body. The fellow was evidently familiar with the store for he walked directly to the money drawer, pressed the combination keys and helped himself to what change there was.

Officer Patterson who had been a quiet witness thought the game had gone far enough and called time. The burglar proved to be Robert Delory about 17 years of age, a young fellow well known in East Milton.

The wagon was called and Delory passed the night at the police station. Delory has been a frequent visitor to Gallagher's store and was therefore well acquainted with the surroundings. He would visit the store early in the evening and, it is alleged, would manage to unfasten the window through which he would enter later.

Women as Escorts.

The funeral of Miss Mary Garland Mischler, daughter of Mr. Andrew M. Mischler of Whitwell street, was held this morning from St. John's church. The services were very largely attended, and were conducted by Rev. John P. Cuffe.

The women of the American Order of Foresters, of which she was a member, attended these services in a body and escorted the remains from her late residence to the church. The burial was at Randolph.

Miss Mischler was well known throughout the city and was extremely popular with all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. She had frequently appeared upon the local stage as an entertainer and many large audiences have enjoyed her fancy dancing.

She was a regular attendant at the St. John's church and sung in the choir. The many beautiful flowers which surrounded the casket containing the remains in a measure testified to the regard in which she was held.

Dr. and Mrs. England have been adopted citizens of Quincy for seventeen years, a longer period Dr. England says, than he ever lived in any one place in his life, and while his Baltimore and Philadelphia friends are urging a change for him, his Quincy friends hope to keep him among them.

Got a Bargain.

Years ago, before the corrupt practices act, when a Scottish parliamentary candidate was canvassing his constituency he called at the house of an aged couple. Finding the old woman alone, he entered into conversation and asked her to use her influence in getting her husband to vote for him. While they were conversing the would be M. P. noticed a kitten playing about on the floor and offered 5s for it. The bargain was struck, and on leaving he again expressed the hope that she would secure her husband's vote for him.

"Weel, sir," answered the woman, "as I said afore, John's a man o' his ain mind and just does what stricks his ain noddle, but at ony rate, sir, you've gotten a real cheap kitten, for yer oppenent was in nae farer gane than yesterday, an he gied me £10 for its brither."—London Answers.

The German Soldier's Wage.

One of the peculiarities about the military service in Germany is the paternal interest that the officers are required to take in the frugality of the men. The pay of the soldier is only 6 cents a day, but the army regulations guard it jealously. Each man is expected to keep his money in a little bag suspended from a string around his neck, and any officer during inspection may demand to have the bags opened and their contents shown. If it be found that a soldier is spending his pay too freely—think of that, with the pay at so low a mark—he is reprimanded and punished. He is compelled to make his pay cover his expenses.

—The tax rate of Newton is $16.40; reduction of forty cents.

CHILL WINDS

Are the dread of those whose lungs are "weak." Some fortunate people can follow the summer as it goes southward, and escape the cold blasts of winter and the chill airs of spring. But for the majority of people this is impossible.

Family cares and business obligations hold them fast.

"Weak" lungs are made strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures the obstinate cough, heals the inflamed tissues, stops the hemorrhage, and restores the lost flesh to the emaciated body.

"I am a railroad agent," writes I. B. Staples, Esq., of Barclay, Osage Co., Kans., "and four years ago my work keeping me in a warm room and stepping out frequently into the cold air gave me bronchitis, which became chronic and deep seated. Doctors failed to reach my case and advised me to try a higher air, but, fortunately for me, a friend also advised me to try Dr. Pierce's medicines. I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and by the time I had taken the first bottle I was better, and after taking about four bottles my cough was entirely gone. I have found no necessity for seeking another climate."

Sometimes a dealer, tempted by the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines, will offer the customer a substitute as being "just as good" as the "Discovery."

You get the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, the best medical work ever published, free by sending stamps, to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound volume, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Golf In Old Dutch Picture.

By the seventeenth century golf in Holland had become almost entirely a winter game. The Dutch painters of the period seem to have found a peculiar fascination in winter scenes, with their clear, bright atmosphere and the moving clouds of figures in their various occupations of sledging, skating or golf. As might be expected, many a golfing scene is to be found in pictures by Van de Velde, Van der Neer, Avercamp, Van Goyen and others of their school. Several drawings of this period showing single figures or small groups give perhaps a better idea of the golf of the time.—Connoisseur.

"Yes, but he wanted me to give him a guarantee that the medicine wouldn't make him feel worse than the cold did."—Washington Star.

As He Called It.

"But why," asked the man who always wants to know—"why do you call that little jump you make from a tower into the water 'a leap for life?' They tell me it is not at all dangerous."

"Well," replied the "artist," "don't I make me livin' by it?"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

FOR REVISION OF TARIFF

Northwest Is Dissatisfied With Present Schedules

FEARS A LOSS OF TRADE

Because Protected Trusts' Goods Are Sold Cheaper In Foreign Markets Than at Home—Geographical Issue Taken Up by Newspapers

Washington, Aug. 21.—Significant of the northwestern movement for tariff revision are the utterances of Representative Joel P. Heatwole of Minnesota, who has declined to be a candidate for re-election, after eight years' service in congress and has returned to his editorial desk doubtless with the intention of trying for the gubernatorial nomination in 1904. Copies of the Northfield News, which Mr. Heatwole owns, have just been received here in which he plants his political future on the side of revision.

"The people of the northwest," he says, "have become fully convinced that they are paying excessive prices for protected trusts' goods which are being sold cheaper in foreign markets than at home. They are beginning to realize that the foreign trade of the northwest, especially in its food products, will be diminished and is liable to be destroyed unless some of the tariff schedules are modified."

Mr. Heatwole does not believe, however, that the tariff will be changed during the remainder of the present administration unless an extra session is called this fall for that purpose. The regular short session would be too short and the next long session beginning in December, 1903, would be too near the presidential campaign for any effective action.

Nearly every Republican newspaper in Minnesota favors tariff revision, and a perusal of their columns reveals some unfortunate outcropping of the geographical issue. They assert that the present schedules are made in the interest of eastern manufacturers, and suggest that the next tariff should be more western in its character. While believing strongly in protection, they want a somewhat different application from that now in force, and according to all accounts, will begin to make themselves felt in the national councils of the party. It will be recalled that Representative Tawney of Minnesota voted in the ways and means committee for the Babcock bill, and that he had the support in doing so of his own delegations, as well as many Republican members from adjoining states. Mr. Heatwole's successor will be nominated by the direct primaries which are to be held on Sept. 16.

Higher Licenses to Sell Oleo

Washington, Aug. 21.—The commissioner of internal revenue has made a ruling to the effect that dealers who sell oleomargarine which paid a tax of 2 cents a pound prior to July 1, 1902, must take out a license costing $480 a year for wholesalers and $48 a year for retailers, instead of $200 and $6, repectively. The only dealers who pay the minimum license rate of $6 and $200 a year are those who deal exclusively in oleomargarine which has paid the tax of 1-4 cent a pound.

PULP MILLS WRECKED

Explosion of Digesters Causes the Death of at Least Eight Men

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 21.—Eight workmen are known to have been killed, six are missing, and three others were badly injured by the explosion of two steel digesters in the Delaware pulp mills of the Jessup & Moore Paper company yesterday.

The digesters were located in a two-story building. There were 10 of them in the building, each one resembling a vat and about six feet in diameter. They were used for reducing wood pulp. Eighteen men were at work in the building. There were two terrific reports and the next instant the building and other mills about the structure were completely wrecked. One digester was blown into the air and fell to the ground 250 feet away.

An alarm of fire was sounded and the entire fire department of the city and a large force of police were soon on the ground and the work of rescue was begun. Several of the workmen were taken out unconscious, only to die after being removed to hospitals. The wreckage was piled up for more than 30 feet and the escaping steam made the work of rescue rather difficult.

Those who were not killed outright were mangled and burned by escaping acid that flowed over their bodies from the broken digesters. To add to the horror of the disaster the wreckage took fire, but after some difficulty the fire department subdued the flames.

Steam was used in the digesters. The officers of the company think that too much steam was generated in them and that this was the cause of the explosion. The monetary loss is estimated at $35,000.

The Coal Strike Situation

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 21.—The coal operators of the Wyoming region took a step forward yesterday. The Warnecke washery at Duryea, under a strong guard, was kept in operation all day, and the Maltby breaker of the Lehigh Valley Coal company prepared a lot of coal, which had already been mined, for the market.

At strike headquarters it is claimed that the output of coal at the washery was very small and that 50 or 60 special officers were required to protect the few men employed at the place.

The strike leaders here think that J. Pierpont Morgan will consent to a conference of some kind with President Mitchell and that the strike will be over by the first of September.

Death List From Philippines

Washington, Aug. 21.—Between June 25 and July 10 72 deaths occurred among the enlisted men of the divisions of the Philippines. Of the total number of deaths, 35 were due to Asiatic cholera. The war department yesterday received this information from General Chaffee, at Manila, together with a list of those soldiers who had died. In addition to the 35 who died of cholera, 17 died of dysentery, 6 of malarial fever and the remainder of various other diseases. Of those who died of cholera, nine were Philippine scouts and natives.

Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Four men were killed, one seriously injured and about 23 others slightly near Hoffman's Ferry, 10 miles from this city, last night by the breaking in half of a New York Central freight train and the subsequent crashing of the rear half into the front part, which had stopped. The men composed a fence gang and 30 of them live in a house car which was about the middle of the train.

Canada's Objections Shelved

St. Johns, Aug. 21.—Premier Robert Bond left Liverpool yesterday for Washington. It is understood he goes to Washington for the purpose of reviving reciprocity negotiations with the American state department, and his visit is taken to indicate that the British government no longer recognizes Canada's objections to the Bond-Blaine convention.

To the Bitter End, Says Mitchell

BOYACA HEARD FROM

Rebels Captured Colombian "Gunboat" From Government Forces

Panama, Aug. 21.—The government gunboat Boyaca, which left here July 29 to carry 300 soldiers to Agua Dulce and which was captured by the Colombian revolutionists, is now at sea flying the rebel flag. The rumors that the Boyaca had been sunk are therefore refuted.

Before she left here General Salazar, governor of Panama, ordered the commander of the Boyaca not to fire the guns on that vessel because he feared the bad condition of the Boyaca would endanger those on board if her guns were discharged. Revolutionary reports of the capture of the gunboat are that she fought two hours before being captured. The Boyaca's machinery and keel were in very bad condition. She was built in 1883 at Wilmington, Del., for the Colombian government.

The hopes of the Conservatives of Panama are now centered in the steamer which Senor Concha, Colombian minister at Washington, is supposed to have bought recently at San Francisco. Should this vessel sail promptly for the isthmus with good gunners on board it is believed by government officials that with the reinforcements expected here from Barranquilla, General Salazar need have no fear of an attack from the revolutionary forces under General Herrera.

The steamer Palena reached port yesterday from the south and her captain reports having met the Boyaca flying the flag of the revolutionists off the island of Taboguilla, about 15 miles from Panama.

Kruger Clings to Boer Flag

The Hague, Aug. 21.—The conference at Utrecht yesterday between the Boer generals and the delegates and Mr. Kruger was rather stormy. At the end of an hour and a half the delegates withdrew, leaving Generals Botha, De Wet and Delarey together with Mr. Kruger. Little has been allowed to traspire as to what took place, but it is understood that the generals found Mr. Kruger in no way inclined to acquiesce to British dominion in South Africa. Mr. Kruger is even said to have bitterly upbraided the generals for giving up Boer independence. The generals returned to The Hague last night.

Cubans Wax Wroth

Havana, Aug. 21.—A lively discussion occurred in the house of representatives yesterday over the action of Manuel L. Diaz, secretary of public works, in granting a concession to Senor Castenada to establish an electric light plant at Havana. Several members of the house said that unless President Palma revoked the concession, he (Palma) should be impeached by the senate. The house was divided on the question and no vote has as yet been taken.

Given Vent at the Annual Ashfield Dinner

IMPERIALISM IS ASSAILED

Professor Norton Says That Great Forces of Evil Are In the Ascendant—Louis Ehrich Speaks of Lack of Protest From Pulpits

Ashfield, Mass., Aug. 22.—The 24th annual dinner in aid of Sanderson academy here yesterday was a decidedly interesting affair. Aside from an address by Dr. G. S. Hall, president of Clark university of Worcester, the addresses were bitterly anti-imperialistic. These sentiments were both vigorously applauded and as vigorously hissed. Many persons left the hall because of the sentiments expressed.

The intense feeling had been steadily growing for the past year, and yesterday at least one of the trustees, Charles Howes, and many of the warm friends of the academy declined to attend, because of the extreme criticisms by the speakers of the past, notably ex-Governor Chamberlain of South Carolina, when they severely scored President McKinley.

Dr. Hall did not hesitate to say that he thought some of the addresses were in exceedingly bad taste, and that if he thought the words spoken by some of the speakers were literally true that he should blush with shame when he entered Faneuil Hall and he should not dare to stand in the shadow of Bunker Hill monument. He said: "Let us have here no more vituperation or extreme criticism of public men, whom the committee respect. Let the methods of antagonism and partisanship find no place at these tables."

Professor Norton of Harvard university, who has presided for 23 out of 24 years in which the dinners have been held, lectured his audience on the alleged decadence of the Republican party. He held that the voters of Ashfield and surrounding towns, a great majority of whom vote the Republican ticket, were voting for a party name only and a party that had deserted its principles. He said in part:

"Among wars which, even in the warlike days of the 17th century Bacon ranked as unjustifiable, were 'wars made by foreigners under pretence of justice or protection to deliver the subjects of others from tyranny and oppression.' If under pretence of humanity it engage in a war of aggression for the sake of acquisition of territory or other gain, it adds hypocrisy to the crime of unjustifiable war. And what else but this is to be said of our war with Spain? What credit have we won by that war, save such as comes to a robust man when he knocks down a weakling who has begged for mercy? What credit do we get from our pitiless fightings but the credit of the bully and the ruffian? What service can President Roosevelt, with every good intention and with every good fortune attending him—what service can he render that will ever compensate for the evil which he renders by his exultation of war? The lovers of peace and justice, of their country's honor, are powerless against the madness and folly of the rampant materialism and militarism of the day. The great forces of evil are in the ascendant. But, however dark the skies, the lover of peace and justice knows that the stars are with him."

Louis R. Ehrich of Colorado took strong anti-imperialistic ground. He began with a comparison between George III and the late President McKinley, both extolled by contemporaries for purity of domestic life, and the object of universal esteem, yet both doing great mischief to their countries. "Let us not dwell on the horrors of the last three years," he said. "The saddest fact is that while our national ideals were being desecrated, while from 50,000 to 100 000 lives were being sacrificed, the pulpits of Christ applauded and conventions professing to represent the patriotic spirit were not heard in protest. Two wholly divergent paths are open. One leads to honor and true glory; the other to disgrace and moral suicide. Each is urged, strangely enough, by a United States senator from this state. I trust that only one of them represents Massachusetts. Your one senator is a seer, your other is an opportunist. Justice to the Filipino is the issue of issues. We shall not deserve or retain our liberties if we use our strength to enslave the weak. The Filipino was fighting for your liberties and mine. Now that the musket has been wrested from his grasp, our duty to speak becomes the stronger."

The address given by Mr. Ehrich made a pronounced hit. Professor Norton and those who hold with him thought that the address of Mr. Ehrich reached the climax and that the effect would be spoiled if another topic should follow it. He, therefore, asked permission of William Garrott Brown of Alabama, who had prepared an elaborate address on southern problems, to omit it, and this was done. Rev. John W. Chadwick, the poet preacher of Brooklyn, who was down to give an address, was not called upon for the same reason.

Previous to this Edwin B. Smith of Chicago, who was one of the signers of the recent open letter to the president concerning the condition of our army in the Philippines, made an address in which the familiar anti-imperialist doctrines were given at length.

WAIVED EXAMINATION

Defendants In Rogers Murder Case Will Be Heard In October

Bennington, Vt., Aug. 22.—The state had made preparations for a lengthy hearing of the case against Mrs. Mary Rogers, Leon Perham and Miss Stella Bates, who are charged with causing the death of Mrs. Rogers' husband, Marcus Rogers, on Aug. 11, but when the defendants were brought before Justice Shurtleff yesterday they waived an examination and the case went over to be considered by the grand jury at the October term of the court for Bennington county.

But little evidence was introduced, the most important being the testimony of Levi Perham, brother of Leon Perham. He said that Mrs. Rogers offered him $500 to go to Hoosick, N. Y., with her and assist her in killing her husband. He said she made the offer to him a few days before Rogers was murdered, and while the latter was engaged at his labors in Hoosick. He said her plan was to pretend to show her husband a rope trick and get him to jump a rope until he was tired out, then bind him with the rope and administer the chloroform. The witness said he refused to have anything to do with this plan.

Another important witness was Charles Mallory, through whose testimony Mrs. Rogers endavored to establish an alibi. He testified that he was with Mrs. Rogers on the night of the alleged murder from 7:30 to 1 o'clock the next morning and that they did not go near the place where Rogers is supposed to have been murdered.

Maine Woman Murdered

Cornish, Me., Aug. 22.—After a hard day's work the authorities are at sea as to the identity of the murderer of Olive Broad, whose body was found in a pasture here yesterday. A partially completed autopsy shows her to have been brutally beaten with a sharp stone and shot with a small calibre revolver. Miss Olive Broad was 55 years old and resided in the outskirts of the town. That the motive of the murder was robbery seems evident from the fact that no valuables were found on the body.

Political Contract Invalid

Montpelier, Vt., Aug. 22.—The decision that a contract by which a newspaper should agree to support a candidate for office is invalid, reached by the lower court, was affirmed by the supreme court yesterday in the case of J. H. Livingston of Bennington vs. former Governor C. S. Page. The alleged contract was made 10 years ago when, it is claimed, Livingston made an agreement to support Carroll as a candidate for congress in the newspaper of which Livingston was editor.

Arnold May Be Pardoned

Augusta, Me., Aug. 22.—At a meeting of the executive council last night it was voted to recommend the pardon of Charles W. Arnold, now serving a six months' sentence for the crime of obtaining money under false pretenses. He drew a check for $6 on a bank when he had no deposit and cashed it for $3. His home is in Boston.

Not a Candidate For Governor

New Haven, Aug. 22.—Mayor Studley last night declined to permit his name to be presented to the Republican state convention as a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. He says: "I am moved not only by reasons personal to myself, but also considerations for the party to say that I should not become a candidate."

Englishmen Win at Tennis

Newport, R. I., Aug. 22.—A grand defense and almost perfect team work enabled R. F. and H. L. Doherty to defeat Holcombe Ward and Dwight F. Davis yesterday and win for England the tennis championship in doubles for the first time in the history of the game in this country.

Isherwood Sent to Prison

Fitchburg, Mass., Aug. 22.—In court here yesterday, Edward Isherwood, who broke into a house at Barre in the night-time, was found guilty of breaking and entering, larceny and assault, and was sentenced to the state prison for not less than 13 nor more than 15 years.

An Alleged Incendiary

Bridgewater, Mass., Aug. 22.—James Hudson was arrested here last night on the charge of setting fire to a building owned by C. A. Smith. He was arrested through the efforts of Deputy Fire Marshal Scott of Boston. He will be taken to Brockton for a hearing.

"Took Advantage" of Turnkey

Ellsworth, Me., Aug. 22.—Leroy Varnum, Bert Gray and Frank Harvey, prisoners at the county jail, made their escape yesterday afternoon. They had the privilege of the yard, and took advantage of the turnkey and left the institution.

SQUADRON HAS SPIES ASHORE.

A Perfect Signal System Enables Defenders to Learn of Presence of the Enemy.

Rockport, Mass., Aug. 22.—At midnight 36 hours had passed of the possible 120 for the naval conflict between the attacking squadron, in charge of Commander Pillsbury, and the defending squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Higginson; the coming of another day was recorded, but the anticipated meeting between the hostile fleets had not come to pass. After a day which had been on the whole devoid of any sensations, the night, thick and cloudy, with the moon quite obscured, developed so many extraordinary situations and so many extraordinary reports that the Higginson squadron had just cause for uneasiness. Somehow the feeling grew that it would not be such a difficult attainment after all for the three auxiliary cruisers of the white squadron to slip in and anchor in some harbor, protected as they would be by the inviting darkness which prevailed.

Perhaps the greatest danger which came to Admiral Higginson was that of yielding to the temptation to withdraw the Kearsarge, and leave only the Alabama and the Massachusetts, to go in search of the enemy, reported on apparently reliable authority to have been sighted at either this point or that point along the coast. Such reports were in fact made. In the early part of the night the station on the Isles of Shoals notified the nearest mainland point by the use of torches and the secret code of the navy that a large, strange two-masted craft had been sighted outside the shoals.

Admiral Higginson's wonderful system of signals worked to perfection. Almost in a moment, it seemed, the destroyer Decatur was rocketted from Portsmouth to pursue the mysterious comer, and in another moment the Decatur was ploughing furiously through the heavy seas. The stranger turned and fled at full speed, and this fact led to the decision that she may have been one of the attacking fleet passing inward on secret duty. At a late hour the Decatur had made no report.

At 11 o'clock came another report of a strange ship sighted south of eastern Point light, Gloucester. Admiral Higginson at once ordered the torpedo boat Bagley to investigate, but the Bagley found to her surprise that it was the cruiser Brooklyn, which had come down from her northern station pursuant to the privilege extended by Admiral Higginson.

The reason that the admiral steadfastly refused to leave his anchorage in the harbor here, central point as it is between Portsmouth and Cape Cod, was that he dared not leave Rockport exposed to the enemy, which, taking advantage of the needless passage of the defending battleships to another port, might easily creep in and drop anchor at the very heart of the operations of the blue squadron. It was all those considerations that forced Admiral Higginson to the conclusion that on none but the surest authority would he leave the Rockport station to join other members of his squadron in the work of putting the enemy out of action.

The complications which developed in the shape of undoubted news that Commander Pillsbury had secretly landed some of his officers ashore to spy upon the movements of the blue squadron served only to increase the perplexity of Admiral Higginson's position, and this reported shore system of spying was one of the things that led the admiral to establish the new signal station off Straightsmouth Point and also to remove his ships as he did early in the evening to a point just inside Thatcher's island. In the early morning the position of these boats had not been changed. The Kearsarge held the outer berth, and the Massachusetts was innermost.

Fell Twelve Hundred Feet and Lives

Danville, Ills., Aug. 22.—At the Homer fair yesterday 12,000 people saw Aeronaut Sartell fall 1200 feet. When he cut loose from his balloon his parachute failed to open. His feet were driven into the earth six inches and there was a compound fracture of both legs. He may recover. Sartell's wife was killed two months ago by a fall from a balloon, the parachute refusing to open.

Roosevelt Endorsed

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 22.—The Republican state convention yesterday nominated a state ticket and extended to President Roosevelt its hearty support. The protective tariff is endorsed.

Malden Has a Flood

Malden, Mass., Aug. 22.—The bursting of a 30-inch water main, having a water pressure of 105 pounds to the cubic inch, on Main street last night caused considerable damage to streets and property in that vicinity by a heavy flood. During the first hour the water supply of eight neighboring towns was shut off from the Metropolitan system. The break occurred in one of the pipes of the Metropolitan water system and is thought to be due to defective laying.

Union Not Recognized

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 22.—The fish skinners, cutters and handlers' strike was declared off yesterday noon and the greater proportion of the 700 men who have been out for 20 days returned to work at 1 o'clock, while the rest of the men will be taken back just as fast as they can be accommodated. The men receive a small increase in wages, but the packers will not recognize the union, neither will they discriminate against union help.

Good Afternoon.

The appropriations for current city expenses this year amounted to $253,932.45. If we deduct from this the city receipts of the year—$62,737 53—the net amount to be raised by taxation for city purposes was $191,194.92. At the same time the city raised $123,646.84 for debt and interest. What a chance there would be for improvements without incurring debt if the city was free from debt.

With the Republicans of Boston all at sea for a candidate for Congress in the Tenth district, the party should unite on a strong candidate from Quincy. Not a man with a barrel but a man with ability. Such a candidate would command the support of the Republican State Committee and the National Congressional Committee. The district is more strongly Republican than it was when Congressman Barrows was elected, but no Republican candidate would have a walkover. There are too many factional fights among Boston Republicans for the success of a Boston man, but all might unite on a Quincy man. Milton named the candidate in 1900, and why not Quincy this year.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The situation is unparalled. Unless relief is found, the people are helpless in the hands of a very few men who owe their wealth, not to their ability to render service to the public, but to their abuse of laws whereby they rob the public. Such a condition cannot long continue with a self-respecting people. It will not be long before some ability is found in the service of the people which will find or make a constitutional way out of this morass of legal difficulties.—Fitchburg Sentinel.

☞ Along with this talk about the modern lack of familiarity with the Bible, and all the deploring of the alleged fact by scholars and preachers and editors, and with the constant evidences which are met that the allegation has a substantial basis, there comes the assertion that more copies on the Bible are sold annually than of any other book that is printed. What becomes of all of them? Frequenters of second hand book stores know that few Bibles are to be found on their shelves, and what do appear are chiefly of curious old copies, most of which are held at a good price. It is hardly profitable to buy Bibles for use for wrapping paper, and it is not probable that the enemies of the book are purchasing copies for the sake of suppressing them. Yet in spite of all the Bibles that are sold and paid for, it is scarcely possible to find a person, except the few professional students of the book, who knows much about what there is in it. The suspicion must be that most of these buyers procure it because they think it is a sort of amulet for the protection of the house.—New Bedford Standard.

THE CARNIVAL.

Crowd at Houghs Neck Not as Large as Expected.

Lowery weather, with frequent showers, were the elements which kept many from attending the carnival at Houghs Neck Thursday afternoon. A large crowd was expected but did not materialize. Late in the afternoon and during the early evening hours there was a rush of young people to the beach but at no time did the crowd come anywhere near being like that present at the illuminations of the past when one day was enough for everybody.

The idea of three days was to give the storekeepers a chance to make up what they had lost by the bad season, but as far as observation could distinguish the fakirs took in about all the money that was put in circulation.

By far the most interesting sight at night is fakirs row. That is Sea street between Taber street and Bay View avenue. Both sides of the street between these two points are lined with fakirs. There is the African dodger, the cane and knife ring, pop corn man, souvenir stand and in fact almost everything to catch the nickels. Inspector McKay was about among these people and closed up those who were doing a skin business.

The illumination Thursday night was but little better than that of Wednesday night. Some few cottages were illuminated but by far the greater number were shrouded in darkness, and up to the present time the illumination can not be said to have been a howling success in anyway. Today the last day may bring the crowd and the general illumination but it is doubtful.

During the evening the war ships in Boston harbor throw their search lights over the beach and they made quite an illumination, the space within their rays being almost as light as day.

The chief attractions Thursday were the band concerts in the afternoon and evening, and the field sports in the afternoon. Of the field sports those that attracted the most attention and furnished the greatest amusement were the pie eating match and greased pole.

James Fontoni, a little Italian boy, secured the prize for climbing the greased pole, but he made several attempts before he reached the top; he secured the prize of $2 for his achievement.

In the pie eating contest Herbert Rynderstrom demonstrated his ability to get outside of a huckleberry pie in the shortest space of time, and also got $2, while Timothy Driscoll, a good second, secured $1. It would seem that nearly all of the amount received would be needed to clean the youngsters and their clothing.

The other sports resulted as follows:

100-yard dash for boys, prizes $3, $2 and $1, awarded to A. W. Smith, Parker Carver and W. J. McCarthy.

100-yards dash for girls, prizes $2 and $1, won by Eva Baker and Charlotte Jacobs.

Potato race, prizes $2 and $1, won by W. J. McCarthy and W. J. Turner.

Egg race for girls, prizes $2 and $1, won by Charlotte Jacobs and Bertha Wolfinger.

Candle race for girls, prizes $2 and $1, won by Agnes Gambert and Elizabeth Jones.

Potato race for girls, prizes $2 and $1, won by Loretta McGrath and May Delaney. Prizes were also awarded Agnes Gambert and Eva Baker.

Three-legged race, prizes $2 and $1; first to W. J. McCarthy and W. J. Turner, second to W. J. Delaney and J. J. Murphy.

Sack race, prizes $2 and $1; won by W. J. McCarthy and W. J. Turner.

100-yard dash for young men, prizes $3, $2 and $1; won by W. J. Turner, J. L. Elcock and W. Clark.

The display of fireworks Thursday evening was quite good and was given off Centre road near the shore. It was sometime, however, before people found out where they were.

Dances were held in several halls and they kept open until midnight, at which time the last cars left.

A number of Brockton people got left in City Square and Officer Goodhue had a busy time finding places for them to put up over night.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

IS NAPHEN OUT?

Report That He Will Decline Renomination.

W. S. McNary the Favorite.

Boston Republicans Have No Strong Candidate.

According to statements made Thursday by Democratic politicians who claim to have knowledge of the matter, says the Herald, the Hon. William S. McNary will be a candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination in the 10th district to succeed the Hon. Henry F. Naphen, who will not be a candidate for a third term.

Messrs. McNary and Naphen have been in conference recently, but neither is yet ready to make a formal announcement and both were out of the city yesterday. Ex-Councillor Charles I. Quirk of ward 17 and Patrick H. McDonald of ward 20 are also in the field, but neither would be likely to prove a formidable rival to Mr. McNary.

The relations between Mr. McNary and the congressman have of late been friendly, and it has been said that with Mr. McNary out for the nomination Congressman Naphen would be ready to gracefully withdraw and rest on the laurels gained during two terms.

Congressman Naphen has had fairly smooth sailing during his four years' service. His first nomination was secured after a hard-fought contest with the Hon. Boardman Hall, while two years ago he was allowed to have the nomination without opposition.

The 10th district was formerly considered close, but the Republicans have not succeeded in electing a candidate since the Hon. Samuel J. Barrows was elected six years ago. Four years ago Mr. Barrows met defeat at the hands of Mr. Naphen, while in the last contest Dr. George B. Pierce, then of Milton, was also vanquished.

The Republicans are completely at sea with reference to a candidate at the present time, the only persons mentioned in this connection being former Senator and Wire Commissioner William H. Lott of ward 16, and former Senator William W. Towle of ward 20, formerly of ward 12. It is doubtful if either of them would prove very formidable against a candidate with united Democratic support.

There has been considerable talk during the past few months to the effect that Mr. McNary intended to relinquish the chairmanship of the Democratic state committee and give way to the Hon. Josiah Quincy, who is now abroad, but who is expected to return in season to participate actively in the fall campaign. With a congressional campaign on his hands Mr. McNary might very gracefully turn the reins of party management over to Mr. Quincy, yet there is nothing in the situation which would require him to do so. But whether he will continue in the chairmanship or the state committee while a candidate for Congress is yet a matter for the future to determine.

A Deed Worthy of Notice.

Mr. Cooper, of the Gypsy camp located on Hancock street, by his knowledge and activity saved a small boy named La Croix, this week from a severe sickness, and probably lockjaw. The boy was returning from an errand and being bare-footed accidently stepped upon a piece of wire near the new car barn which penetrated the foot from center to back of heel, it was indeed a sad sight.

The doctor was sent for, but the child was getting weak and exhausted and something had to be done for him immediately.

The Gypsy camp was thought of and word sent to Mr. Cooper of the child's distress, and in a second he was with him, only too glad to be of help to any one.

He pulled the wire from the foot, drew with his mouth the blood from the cut, bathed it often in warm water, then chewing tobacco was placed in the cut, then bandaged it.

On the arrival of the doctor there was really very little to be done. The boy is doing well.

Work on Quincy Avenue to Stop While Point Bridge is Closed.

Work has been rushed during the week on Quincy avenue putting it in condition so that teams can go through. The street is not completed as yet, and while it is a little rough in places, heavy teams can get through all right. The Weymouth end of the street seems to be in a much worse condition than Quincy and is practically impassable. Teams coming from below Weymouth can come by Shaw street to Newcomb square and thence by Quincy avenue to Quincy.

For the past week, or since the Point bridge has been closed, teams have been going round via Centre street through West Quincy and East Milton and into Boston by Granite avenue.

All-New England.

There will be many prominent speakers at the All-New England Christian Endeaver convention in Boston Oct. 14-17, including Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, William R. Moody, Mr. John R. Mott, the famous leader of the Student Volunteers; Mr. Robert Speer, the "Young Man Eloquent" in behalf of Missions; and Dr. William E. Whitter, of the American Baptist Missionary Union. Dr. Clark will be there, fresh from his nine months' field work in nearly all the countries of Europe. Dr. H. M. Nickerson, Portland's popular chorus leader, will assist Mr. Percy S. Foster in conducting the music. The platform of Tremont Temple will be enlarged and the chorus banked in the front of the great auditorium. The favorite speakers and workers from all the New England States will have parts on the programme. New England Endeavor will put its best foot forward and make it a week to thank God for.

Fear a Nuisance.

It seems to be the opinion, of people who live in the vicinity of the place selected at South Quincy, to dump the contents of cesspools and vaults into the public sewer, that the value of property in that vicinity will depreciate. Said a well known resident, people who now live in that vicinity will find the value of their property deminishing and as for building in the future there is no one who would want to do so. There may be no odor from the constant stream of teams, containing vault matter, but people will imagine that there is, and that will be enough.

The same citizen further says that it will be a nuisance and the city has no more right to maintain a nuisance than an individual.

VIEWS ON CORONATION

How the Ceremony Impressed Three Noted Americans.

NO SUCH PAGEANT SINCE 1804.

General Wheeler Says Effect of the Display Will Be of Great Benefit to England—Justice Brown Thought Spectacle Worthy of Historic Traditions—Music Impressed Holis.

The New York Herald's European edition publishes the following from its London correspondent:

General Joseph Wheeler, who, with his three daughters, saw King Edward's coronation procession passing both ways from his stand, was much impressed by the spectacle.

"It was certainly one of the most brilliant pageants ever witnessed since the coronation of Napoleon Bonaparte, in 1804," said General Wheeler. "The soldiers were selected men from the Horse guards and the best military organizations in all parts of the empire. I think the effect of the display will be of great benefit to England.

"The colonial troops will go home filled with gratification at the attention and applause they received. The effect must be to cement the feeling of good will toward England throughout the colonies.

"The Indian chiefs and troops were especially applauded. I was rather surprised to learn of the extent of the independent attitude of the princes of India, who are almost absolutely independent sovereigns, the exactions by Great Britain resting upon them in as light a manner as possible. During my almost three months' stay in Europe I have accumulated evidence of the unfaltering loyalty of the Indian princes and people to the British government. It was interesting to see their devotion to Earl Roberts. I have seen a great deal in the army administration of Great Britain and France which highly commends itself to me. I hope commissions of able officers may be sent from America through Europe to study European systems in order that our own may be brought to a higher state of perfection.

"Of course the pageantry was one appropriate only to monarchy and one that could not very well take place in our country, but the formations were made and the troops put into position without any confusion and in a manner showing it was done under men who thoroughly understood the control of troops on occasions of ceremony.

"The most striking thing to me about the whole event," said General Wheeler in conclusion, "was the great applause given to Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener."

Mr. Frederick W. Holls of The Hague arbitration tribunal said:

"Quite apart from the political and constitutional aspects, the coronation struck me spectacularly and musically as one of the most beautiful and impressive religious services which could be imagined.

"The impression produced by a large number of persons assembled for the same purpose was of course immediately heightened by the grand building, the decorations, the brilliant uniforms and the noteworthy dresses.

"It was most efficiently arranged. Nothing could have been more solemn and sweet than the beginning of the service with the singing of Luther's hymn, 'Eine feste Burg ist unser Gott,' in the distance and then the subdued but very impressive rendering of the hymn 'O God, Our Help In Ages Past,' in the body of the abbey. The anthems were all superbly sung, the climax being perhaps reached in 'Be Strong and Play the Man.' It was an occasion which can never be forgotten by any lover of an impressive religious musical ceremony.

Justice Brown of the supreme court of the United States, enthusiastic over the completeness and gorgeousness of the ceremony, voiced his appreciation of the scene as follows:

"The spectacle was one that no one present could ever forget, for it was inconceivably gorgeous and beautiful. It was worthy of the traditions of the most ancient and powerful empires and of the venerable and historical pile in which the ceremonies took place.

"To the scholar it suggested at once Macaulay's magnificent description of Westminster hall at the opening of the trial of Warren Hastings, particularly the sentence, 'There Siddons, in the prime of her majestic beauty, looked with emotion upon a scene surpassing all imitations of the stage.'"

A Strange Order.

Recently a London merchant received from a crack regiment an order for a peck of fleas. The officers wanted the "varmints" to put in the bed of an unpopular subaltern.

A Mild Kick.

[Sir Liang Chen Tung will succeed Wu Ting Fang at Washington.]

Glad to see you, Sir Liang,
But we'll miss old Wu Ting Fang—
Miss each diplomatic poke
In our ribs, each slant eyed joke of our quaint, Celestial dark
Haired interrogation mark;
Think it's mighty mean of you
When you know we love our Wu.

Try to stand it, Sir Liang,
Though it gives us all a pang;
Makes us heave a sorry sigh
For the fourth day of July!
Who will make the big kotow
O'er in Philadelphia now?
Oh, you don't know what you do
When you take away our Wu!

Here's our glad hand, Sir Liang,
But we do miss Wu Ting Fang!
Love you every bit we can;
But, dear amiable man,
Tell you frankly we can't be
More than sisters to you. See?
Love you dearly—'deed we do—
But we're woozy for our Wu!

Mrs. Everett Crane of Elm street is convalesing at Port Island, since her return from the hospital.

Woodward avenue looks very attractive with its clumps of yellow tansy blossoms, edging both sides of the road.

W. E. Badger who had the contract for installing the heating system at City Hall has about completed his part of the work.

Mr. C. F. Brown, a present occupant of Mrs. James Bagley's house, has purchased the adjoining estate of Mr. Frank Rogers, on Prospect street.

Maple lodge, K. & L. of H., will hold a picnic next Wednesday at Crescent beach. They will leave City square by electrics at 10.30.

While it seems to be a useful pastime for boys to learn to shoot, it is much better for them to practice on targets than on birds, as they are doing in Wollaston. Where is the "Audobon Society?"

William Kitts, the well known actor, is playing the comedy part in the "Price of Honor," at the Grand Opera House, Boston, this week. Mr. Kitts is uncle of Miss Virginia Thornton formerly of this city and during his Boston engagement is making his home with his sister Mrs. James Levering of Norfolk Downs.

Clam Chowder

Mrs. Lincoln gives the following recipe for clam chowder:

"The proportions for a good clean chowder are one-half peck of clams in the shell, one quart of potatoes sliced thin, two thin slices of fat pork, two small onions sliced, two tablespoons of butter, one-half teaspoon of pepper, one quart of milk, six butter crackers, and either flour or two eggs for thickening. Clams in the shells are better than those already opened, for then you have more of the clam liquor as the basis for the chowder.

Wash, scrub and cook the clams in a tightly covered kettle, with half a cup of water till the shells open. Fry the pork in the kettle, cook the onions in the hot fat, and, if you prefer, skim out the pork and onions, leaving only the flavor in the fat. Pour in one pint of hot water and one pint of clam liquor, and when boiling add the potatoes. The chowder will be less rank if the potatoes are soaked in cold water, then cooked two minutes in boiling water before putting them into the clam liquor.

When potatoes are tender add the milk, which should be hot, the butter and seasoning. The amount of salt depends upon the clams. Add the clams and the crackers, split and broken slightly.

If eggs are used, beat them slightly, add some of the hot liquid, and stir them into the chowder after the kettle is set off from the fire.

The crackers should not be soaked in cold water unless you prefer to use some of the hardtack varieties. Browning them in the oven gives a pleasant variation.

Some people think a chowder is not complete unless a tomato, parsley, or some sweet herbs are used, but I prefer only the onion and pepper.

If flour is used to thicken the broth, cook it with the butter, as for a white sauce.

The New Maine.

The new battleship Maine will have her government trial Saturday off Cape Ann. The course is the usual one of 33 miles toward Cape Purpoise and return. The contract calls for 18 knots, and the battleship made 19.95 at the builders' trial.

ENGLISH SWIMMERS LIKE LONG DISTANCES.

Holbien's Novel Preparation For an Attempt to Cross the Channel.

Long distance swimming is an art in which few Americans have attained a pronounced degree of accomplishment, and this is naturally a disappointment to natatorial enthusiasts who would like to see this branch of the great sport developed. Aside from the very evident utility of the pastime from a life saving viewpoint, long distance swimming is a superb developer of the body and of the lungs, giving a man hardihood that will prove of inestimable benefit throughout his entire life.

English swimmers are very fond of going long distances, and they have placed on record some remarkable records. The channel swim is always a dangerous and tempting lure to the Britishers, and the recent determined but unsuccessful attempt to cross the strait by Cyclist Holbien again brought prominently before the public eye this daring all around athlete.

Holbien attempted the swim last year—and was unsuccessful; consequently his latest effort was produced by an even stronger ambition to reach the coveted goal. He started from Cape Griz-Nez, France, to swim to Dover, England. Between these points the channel is thirty miles wide. Holbien covered all but six miles of the distance, when, to save him from being carried into the North sea, he was picked up by a tug.

Holbien was in the water, which was at a temperature of 62 degrees, more than sixteen hours, and yet he had plenty of reserve strength when taken on board the tug. His preparation was largely responsible for his condition. Before entering the water he covered himself thoroughly with a mixture of oil and iodine, serving to nullify somewhat the effect of prolonged submersion. He uses this preparation before all of his long swims. American swimmers frequently resort to the use of a liberal coating of vaseline, which, they say, is a wonderful aid.

Holbien has the following to say about swimming:

"Foolhardiness is a prevailing fault with those considering themselves swimmers of more than the ordinary ability, and it is a well known fact that more so called 'good swimmers' are lost every year than performers of mediocre power.

"And right here I desire to give a few words of advice, regardless of age, sex or experience. Don't go into deep water within an hour after a heavy meal, for cramps invariably are had when undigested food is in the stomach. However, there is little use in staying out of the water for two or three hours after eating, as is frequently suggested. A single hour will usually be found to answer the purpose. Don't go into the water when the temperature is below 55 degrees. Excessive cold will give cramps to the hardiest of athletes. Don't try to swim across a body of water unless you know the exact distance, for appearances are very deceptive. Don't take long swims early in the season unless you have been practicing for a week or two, for swimming muscles are seldom used in other exercises, and a sudden overtaxing of them will result in cramps and exhaustion.

"Don't venture into unknown tide waters without companions. Currents are very treacherous and deceiving, especially in rivers, and many a man has lost his life through carelessness. Don't dive into unfamiliar waters. Rocks and stumps often lurk below the surface, and every year broken necks result because of them."

How Do You Make a Circle?

The intelligence of people may be gauged by asking them to make a circle on paper with a pencil and noting in which direction the hand is moved. The good student in a mathematical class draws circles from left to right. The inferiority of the softer sex, as well as the male dunces, is shown by their drawing from right to left. Asylum patients do the same.—London Family Doctor.

The Suit.

Lawyer (to timid young woman)—Have you ever appeared as witness in a suit before?

Young Woman (blushing)—Y-yes, sir; of course.

Lawyer—Please state to the jury just what suit it was.

Young Woman (with more confidence)—It was nun's veiling, shirred down the front and trimmed with a lovely blue, with hat to match—

Why He Cried.

Old Gentleman—Why are you crying, my little man?

Small Boy (sobbing)—I dreamed last night that the school burned down, and—

Old Gentleman (sympathetically)—Oh, but I don't believe that it has.

Small Boy—Neither do I. I kin see the top of it over the hill.

Never Make a Player.

First Caddie—I saw ye carrying for the minister, yesterday, Donald. What kin' o' player is he?

Second Caddie—Man, he'll never mak' a gowffer! D'ye ken what he says when he misses the ba'?

First Caddie—No; what does he say?

Second Caddie (disgustedly)—"Tut, tut!"—Glasgow Times.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, hut in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

A REMARKABLE STORY

In Connection With Northern Pacific Merger Suit

LAMB AND POWER TESTIFY

As to the Names of the Men Who Acted as Sponsor For Plaintiff, and Who, It Is Alleged, Advised and Urged His Flight From New York

New York, Aug. 22.—Lawyer George A. Lamb, attorney for Peter Power, went on the stand yesterday and named the men who, with Power as plaintiff and Captain Henry Stern as go-between, he said, had hoped to conceal their connection with the Northern Pacific merger suit, and keep their identity hidden. Those he named were: W. Bourke Cockran, Camille Weidenfeld, H. Content & Co., and Edwin R. Thomas of the firm of Thomas & Post, Wall street bankers and brokers.

The story of Power's wandering came out; a plan to send him to Europe was revealed; his quasi-connection with the suit at issue, and, in short, a story of the most remarkable action ever begun to prevent a combination of capital. Lamb said that he was practically forced by the people back of him to send Power away, and that they paid the expenses of his trip to West Hurley and Montreal.

Weidenfeld, Cockran and other sponsors of the Power suit, Lamb declared, feared that Power would be broken down as a witness and would "give away the people behind it." Cockran was telephoned to for advice, Lamb declared, and was one of the persons for whom, he (Lamb) was given to believe, he was acting in pushing the suit. Lamb said Cockran was one of those who advised Power to stay out of the court's jurisdiction and was ready to supply him with funds to enable him to do so.

Peter Power himself was on the stand at the afternoon session. He said to the best of his belief he had received 100 shares of stock in payment for the use of his name. That was his sole interest in the suit. He had been instructed that the subpoena service was bad and had left New York city with that understanding. In a measure his testimony was corroborative of that given by Lawyer Lamb regarding the connection of Messrs. Cockran and Weidenfeld with the suit.

Power began his testimony by saying that he was 24 years old; that he first met Mr. Lamb in November, 1900, and that he began the study of law in Lamb's office in April of the next year. He was to receive $30 a week salary.

"Did you ever own any stock in the Northern Pacific Railroad company?" asked Mr. Kellogg, who conducted the examination.

"Mr. Lamb told me Mr. Weidenfeld would carry 100 shares of the stock for any one who would bring suit. The stock was assigned to me."

Power said he never saw Mr. Weidenfeld. All he knew of him was that Mr. Lamb told him the stock was his. This was in May of last year. He understood he was to pose as plaintiff, but he did not know until six months later what was the object of the suit. He understood Mr. Weidenfeld was to bring the suit and pay the expenses. All the information he had was from Mr. Lamb. Power said he understood the stock was given to him because the real parties to the suit wished to remain under cover.

Power first saw the certificate at the Auditorium Hotel in Chicago. That was the only time he saw the certificate.

Power said, replying to questions, that he saw in the newspapers that he was wanted as a witness before the examiner. The first subpoena was served upon him July 24 and an attempt to serve a second was made next day. A third was served upon him a few days later. Lamb told him that counsel had decided that the service was not good. The witness declared that he had said he would appear before the examiner if Lamb advised him to do so.

"Did anyone else tell you the service of the subpoena was no good?" Kellogg asked. "Mr. Chandler and Captain Stern were talking about it in Mr. Lamb's office and Mr. Chandler told me in their presence that I need not worry, as the service was not good."

Chandler and Lamb met at the Calumet club, Power said, and he called up Weidenfeld at Oyster Bay on the telephone. After their conversation Lamb told him Weidenfeld wanted him to go to Europe. He said he refused to go.

Replying to questions by Lamb, Power said he remembered Lamb telling him he would have to testify in the present proceeding, although Weidenfeld and the others did not want him to do so. He was willing then to testify and has always been willing. He went away because he understood the lawyers were satisfied that the service of the subpoena was not good and the people back of him desired his absence.

To a direct question Power said he had called Bourke Cockran on the telephone 40 or 50 times during the different times Chandler was in consultation with Lamb.

After Power had denied that he ever acted as an automobile chauffeur to anybody, his examination was ended. The hearing will be resumed next Tuesday.

W. Bourke Cockran, in an interview last night, characterized all the testimony relating to him as false in every detail.

SUSPICION OF MURDER

Laid to Be Harbored by the Brother of Robert Remington

Williamsport, Pa., Aug. 22.—It is reported from an authoritative source that Edward P. Remington is not satisfied that his brother Robert died by his own hands. To an Associated Press representative Mr. Remington said that he would neither deny or affirm anything relative to his brother's death, except that the autopsy performed yesterday revealed that the bullet in the mouth caused death. When asked if the bullet found imbedded in the dead man's brain fitted the revolver found by his side, he declared that he had nothing further to say. Asked if developments in the case could be expected he said time alone would tell.

Mr. Remington and his attorney, as well as the physicians who performed the autopsy, were together in secret conference until late last night and their action is surrounded by much mystery. They positively refuse to give out any further information.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—The coroner's jury, at the inquest yesterday over the body of Mrs. Anna Bartholin, brought in a verdict recommending that her son, William Bartholin, be arrested and held as principal for her murder, and that Oscar Thompson and Edward Counselman, who are under arrest, accused of complicity in the murder of Minnie Mitchell, be held as accessories to the crime.

Kingston, Ja., Aug. 22.—Considerable excitement prevails at Montego Bay over the arrest of certain people with influential connections on charges of complicity in the riots of last April. What Miners' Wives May Do Indianapolis, Aug. 22.—"Mother" Jones, well known through mining districts, was a visitor at the national headquarters of the United Mine Workers yesterday. We will have a popular congress when the other congress is in session."

FINANCIAL RUIN

Will Follow Continued Trade Combinations, Says Russell Sage

New York, Aug. 22.—Russell Sage in an interview yesterday referred to a published statement quoting J. Pierpont Morgan as saying that the era of great trusts had just begun, and that more gigantic corporations are stored in the near future, some of which may overshadow the steel trust. Mr. Sage said:

"Whether Mr. Morgan said that or not, combinations of all industries are a menace to true government. Not only so, but they are the oppressors of the people."

"What will be the result of such an era?" asked a reporter.

"In such an event the American people will revolt against them, and there will be financial ruin the like of which this country has never seen—or any other."

It was suggested to Mr. Sage that there was a general opinion that combinations at certain times were good things for the country. "Yes," Mr. Sage replied, "when several industries are starting out in business it is well for individuals to combine for mutual protection until the business is firmly established. When the business is so established the combination should be disrupted and conducted on individual lines. Then if one individual became embarrassed it would not mean the wrecking of the industry. I believe it is best to have such industries divided among several individuals than combined into one great combination, the embarrassment of which would mean the ruin of all."

Death of General Sigel

New York, Aug. 22.—General Franz Sigel died at his home in this city yesterday of old age. He was in his 78th year. General Sigel fought with the revolutionists in the German insurrection of 1849, became commander-in-chief of the revolutionists and was made their minister of war. He came to this country in 1852, making his home in St. Louis, where he organized a regiment of infantry at the outbreak of the Civil war. He came to New York in 1867 and was twice a candidate for secretary of state on the Republican ticket. He was appointed pension agent in 1886 by President Cleveland.

Major Delmar Took Big Stake

Readville, Mass., Aug. 22.—The Massachusetts stake race for 2:12 class trotters, purse $15,000, the biggest prize of grand circuit week at the Readville track, proved to be a commonplace affair through Major Delmar's win in three straight heats. Before the race the wiseacres were picking The Roman to win. The absence of keen racing made the event fall flat to everyone who had not taken The Roman at 8 to 1. Major Delmar is owned by George Van Dyke of Boston.

Hill Talks to Farmers

Albany, Aug. 22.—Former Governor Hill spoke to a crowd of 8000 persons at the Orleans county pioneer picnic yesterday. Addressing himself to farmers he said the Boer farmers had invoked the admiration of the world. "I wish to God," said he, "that the Dutch farmers had won." Mr. Hill said he found nothing in the Bible in regard to accumulation of corporate wealth and believed that the only right means of accumulation was by personal endeavor.

Fast Mile by Cresceus

Indianapolis, Aug. 22.—Cresceus stepped a wonderful mile here yesterday over the state fair grounds track, clipping one-quarter of a second off the track record for trotters. His time was 2:04 1-4. Cresceus was forced to go against a bracing wind down the back stretch, which had its effect. The mile was a decided surprise, considering it was his first start. He seems to have the power to reach the 2-minute mark.

THE LAST DAY.

Wind-Up of the Houghs Neck Carnival.

Prizes Awarded for Illuminations.

Result of the Afternoon Sports—Other Attractions.

Friday was the last day of the carnival and illumination at Houghs Neck and it was by far the best day of them all. Most of the cottages did not make any attempt at decoration until the last day. There were a few very prettily decorated cottages, but as a rule the illumination was not general.

There was nothing in the way of amusement during the morning hours, and there were but few visitors. The crowd began to arrive about 2 o'clock, but it was not until night that there was anything like a crowd present. Then they came in bunches until after nine o'clock.

A series of water sports were held at 3 o'clock near the steamboat wharf which resulted as follows:

Tub race, won by Chester Cutler, Edward Taber second.

Single working boats, won by Edward Taber; second, J. Murphy.

Double working boats, won by Lester Miller and Charles Mullally; second, Arthur Holbrook and Alden Beausaug.

Swimming race for boys, won by Chester Cutler; second, John Jackson.

Swimming race for men, won by J. P. Lewis; second, Joseph McInnis.

Flag race, won by Albert May.

Diving contest, won by Thomas O'Hara; second, Edward Delaney; third, Albert May.

Tug of war, won by team composed by William McIntosh, Leo Fraser, John Sullivan and Edward Jackson.

Cash prizes were given in all of these events. Band concerts were also given during the afternoon and evening.

There was no display of fireworks in the evening, a parade being substituted.

The parade formed near "The Willows," and marched over the beach and were reviewed near the fountain. The parade was not a howling success for there was but four or five features.

Henry P. Furnald was the chief Marshal and on his staff were W. J. Tilley and Perley A. Glass. The chief features were "Fatty Felix," "Alphonse and Gaston" "The steamer boys," and Prof. Kaplan and his dancing girls.

Committee headquarters were established yesterday at the cottage of Mrs. Hattie Conner and here all information was given out. It was the first attempt at having anything like a head to the affair, and did much to make the final day successful.

The prize for the best decorated cottages were awarded as follows:

Sunnybank cottage, occupied by the Saturday Night Club.

Peerless cottage, occupied by J. P. Lewis.

K. T. Cottage, occupied by Dr. Murphy.

If the funds are sufficent a fourth prize will be given to the Danielson cottage, occupied by G. L. Steinberg.

Cottages receiving honorable mention were the Lehigh, Seber, Dever, Midland, Mabel, May, Chester and Warren.

There was a gang of pickpockets about the beach Thursday and yesterday. Four parties reported to the police that they had lost their watches.

Mrs. Ellen M. Perry chairman of the executive committee entertained on Thursday, her guests being Mrs. Eva Porter, Miss Laura Alexander, Mrs. Caroline Cushing of Brockton and Dr. McCue of Boston.

LARGE PAY ROLL.

The City Expending About $3,000 per Week for Labor.

Most everybody understands that the city is quite a large employer of labor, but few realize to what extent. The weekly pay roll of the several departments amounts at present to something like $3,000 which is smaller than at times, owing to the lack of special appropriations for streets. The weekly pay roll of $3,000, however, does not include the salary of the city officials such as the Commissioners, Clerk, Treasurer, Tax Collector, etc., or the clerical force. The number of men now on the pay rolls of the several departments amounts to about 250 and about 30 teams of the city and individuals are employed.

Under the Commissioner's department 108 men are employed. Of this number 18 are at work under the appropriation for highways; 45 on the State road on Quincy avenue; 13 on Chubbuck street; 13 on the street railway excise tax; 7 on Rawson road; 5 on Grove street; 3 on bridges; 2 at the Lincoln school and 2 on the John Hancock school.

The largest number of men employed however, are in the Sewer department which is doing a considerable work. At present this department employes 113 men. Other departments employing men are Burial Places, 10; Engineers, 7; and Board of Health, 4.

Tax Rate $18.30.

The tax rate of Cambridge is $18.30, an increase of $1.40 per $ 1,000. The valuation is $98,136 785 against $96,216,875 last year. The increase in polls was only 372. Mayor McNamee had urged the assessors to increase the valuation, but instead the increase was below the average.

Ordained.

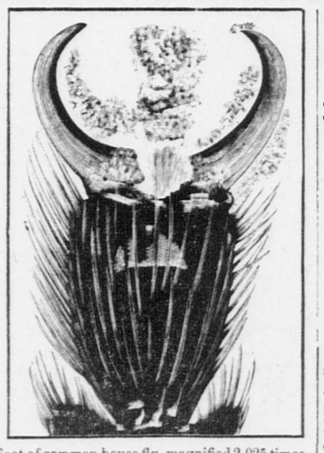

Rev. Frederick W. Raymond was ordained as a Congregational minister at East Weymouth last evening, and has accepted a call to the Hope Congregational church at Anderson, Md. Mr. Raymond is the son of John A. Raymond, the town clerk Weymouth.

In the OLD STEINE ROAD

By Zoe Anderson Norris

Copyright, 1901, by Zoe Anderson Norris

IT often happens that a friend and an enemy wear the same face. It was a friend who advised me to go to that boarding house for ladies in the Old Steine road at Brighton. Later I came seriously to question the sincerity of her friendship, if not to doubt it altogether.

Hesitatingly I stopped in front of the portico—a portico with four pillars and steps recently scrubbed to so exaggerated a whiteness that they should have warned me. They did not. I walked on up.

A boarding house for ladies!

The enormity of it never once struck me until I gazed upon those two long tables filled with old blue china and flowers and surrounded by ladies—middle aged ladies, ladies past middle age and ladies old—old—old as the china, if not older—and so wrinkled that I hardly dared look at them for fear they would break. And not a man!

Fortunately I found a kindred soul who had drifted there accidentally, as I had done. She flashed dark eyes at me from across the table. Her name was Jane.

When tea was over, I arose, passed a sideboard upon which some rare bits of Wedgwood almost compensated for the weakness of the tea, and met her at the door. We went up to my eyrie together. I asked her in. We stood at the dressing table reading the notices to guests.

"Please wipe your feet on the mat," came first.

"No gentlemen allowed," came next.

"No guest must stay out later than 10 o'clock. If it is absolutely necessary that she should stay out, notice must be given to the principal."

"Who is this principal?" I demanded to know. "Is she the young woman with blue eyes that match the china who sits at the head of the table?"

Jane shook her head.

"There is probably no such person. She is a scarecrow, a bugbear. Here, what's this? 'Butter must not be eaten with meat or marmalade or cheese.' Then what in the name of goodness is it to be eaten with?"

"By itself perhaps, or not at all."

I walked away from the rules to the window.

"I want to go home," I said. "This place stifles me."

Jane had followed me. She leaned out.

"There is a splendid view of the sea from here," she exclaimed—"a birds-eye view! And look at the green in front! By and by a band will begin to play. They illuminate the park and play there till 10 o'clock."

"I suppose the principal won't let them play any later."

"I suppose not. Shall we go out on the sea front?"

We went. It swarmed with people coming and going in a steady stream.

WE STOOD AT THE DRESSING TABLE READING NOTICES TO GUESTS.

We walked on and on to the west pier, where we sat in a small circular temple fitted up with benches and looked out at the sunset.

I turned and looked at Jane. There were golden lights in her dark eyes—soft, mellow lights.

"I was thinking of him," she said, "and how far he is away."

"How far?"

"In Australia."

She paused to let the distance sink into my mind.

"It's a long, long way," she sighed, "and he has been gone for three years—three long years. I promised to wait for him a year, and he has been gone three."

"It is a good while to wait," I mused, "particularly in the days of your youth. They pass quickly, those good days, and they never come again."

"I know. And you get old waiting. When my brother came home from the Transvaal last summer, he took me down and dusted me. I had been on the shelf so long, he said."

"I didn't mean that," I hastened to affirm. "You are young, very young. I didn't mean that."

"I am twenty-eight," she told me, with a straightforward frankness which was convincing. "That is not so very young."

"I thought you were twenty-one or twenty-two," I said; "not more."

She searched in her pocketbook for a shilling, which she tendered me. I pushed it gently but firmly aside.

"No extra charge," I assured her.

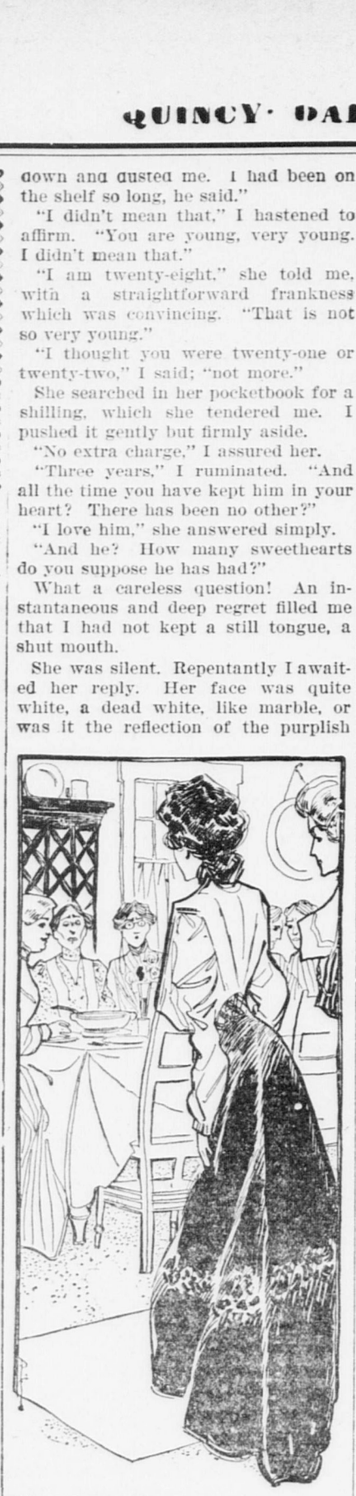

"Three years," I ruminated. "And all the time you have kept him in your heart? There has been no other?"

"I love him," she answered simply.

"And he? How many sweethearts do you suppose he has had?"

What a careless question! An instantaneous and deep regret filled me that I had not kept a still tongue, a shut mouth.

She was silent. Repentantly I awaited her reply. Her face was quite white, a dead white, like marble, or was it the reflection of the purplish blue skies which had slowly replaced the gold of the sun?

"I never thought of that," she murmured by and by. "Not once."

I arose. "Shall we go on toward the boarding house for ladies?" I asked. As we walked through the crowd I said, "Don't think of it again."

"It isn't that I, too, haven't had attention," she said presently, apparently apropos of nothing. "I have all along. But I have not cared for any of them; not in the least. There is a young man who wants to come after me Saturday and wheel back to London with me. He is very fond of me."

"Let him come, then," I advised.

The sea had turned to a delicate purple. The white sloops showed exquisitely against hazy skies. The Skylark, manned by a jolly crew, hove to. We could hear the captain's voice giving stentorian orders.

"Would you?" she questioned.

"It is just as well to have two strings to your bow," said I.

A group of small boys leaped into the sea. A lifeboat veered around toward them watchfully. Climbing into the stern, they dived gleefully into the sea.

"Boys have the best of it," she declared, "from the time they are little children." After a long while, "They don't have to wait."

Once more we rose and walked through the crowd, which had increased.

The ladies were mustered in long rows at supper when we arrived. We took our places in a shamefaced, truant manner and listened meekly to the conversation going on. The dovecot was in a terrible way. There had been a bullfight at Boulogne. English travelers had patronized it. To think that English travelers should patronize a bullfight! Horrible! They elevated their eyebrows; they rolled their eyes.

"I should like to see a bullfight," I said defiantly.

"Should you?" There was a flutter of wings, a pluming of combs, and, settling down with difficulty, they observed me out of blazing eyes lavish of scorn.

"Why in the world did you do that?" exclaimed Jane outside in the hall. "Do you want to get yourself disliked?"

"It is so weary here," I complained. "It pleases me to get up a little excitement. If I stayed, I should purposely shock them periodically. What's more, I should deliberately throw an occasional bomb in the shape of a proposal to introduce a man."

Jane threw up her hands. "A man!" she repeated hoarsely. Then she laughed.

"Did you hear the maid ask me whether I would have cucumbers or pickled beets?" I went on. "When I told her I would have both, she was paralyzed for the moment. Another thing, I took butter and marmalade at one and the same time. A little old lady next to me was struck dumb seeing me do it."

In the drawing room I sat at the piano for one brief moment. A sign confronted me: "No Practicing Allowed. By Request." I got up and went to the window. A sign blazoned itself there: "This Blind Is Not to Be Pulled Up Until the Sun Goes Down For Fear of Fading the Carpet." I walked to the mantel. Another sign: "Only Two Gas Jets to Be Burned at Once."

I faced Jane exhaustedly. "What's all this?" I begged to know.

"Don't ask me," said she grimly. "It's the way they have of talking to you. It's that invisible principal who does it. She is a mind reader. The other day I thought I would bring my sewing downstairs, where there was more room. I had hardly settled myself comfortably when, looking up, I spied a sign, 'No Dressmaking Allowed In the Drawing Room.'"

"I can't stand it!" I groaned. "Come upstairs with me. We can look out the window there and look at the sea and breathe the atmosphere without a special written request to desist."

This was how it happened that Jane and I came to live in the open air, like birds. We ate and slept in the Old Steine road. That was all. Frequently we found it impossible to go back to eat. We went into little restaurants instead, where we had a skate or a fried sole or some other toothsome fish fresh from the sea. We sat on the sea front and watched the clouds. We took a sail in the Skylark. We went to sea in a skiff owned by an old weather beaten sailor, who, finding that we were able to row, left us with the sculls and, ensconcing himself in the stern, lit his pipe and fell fast asleep. We had paid for an hour's rowing. While he slept we made straight for the horizon, from whence it took him two mortal hours to row back. We strolled along the beach, where the fishermen were mending their nets, asking them questions, to which we received answers totally incomprehensible to landlubberly ears. We took rare baths early of mornings, dragged into the waves by the curious little wagons and out again.

We took a trip on the sea car, visiting the home of Rudyard Kipling. Going, Jane concluded she would marry the youth who was to wheel back to London with her on Saturday.

Coming back the skies shone with splendor. They mingled with the soft blue of the sea. "Perhaps he is sailing home to me now," she breathed. "Who knows? I will wait for him."

"Good!" said I. "Do."

She took my hand and held it. "I am sorry you are going away tomorrow!" she sighed. "You are sweet."

I was pleased.

Late last night we sat together at the window in my room listening to the moan of the sea. It took on an added note of sadness, or was it the pending separation from the girl who, like a fair white sloop, was about to pass me in the night?

There were two narrow beds in my room. I wished to have her sleep in one, to be near, but on the landing we found a mysterious sign reading, "No Changing Rooms or Occupying the Same Apartment With a Friend Even For a Night."

It was as Jane had said. They were mind readers, those people who ran the boarding house for ladies in the Old Steine road.

Toward dawn I awoke from a dream of Jane. I thought I saw her waiting, waiting, waiting, for that lover of hers in Australia. I thought I saw her gray, toothless, bent double with age and ready for the grave. Still he came not.

The next night I left without telling her my dream.

She accompanied me to the station, lugging my satchel all the way uphill. "I shall be so lonesome without you!" she wailed. "I believe I shall have to let him come for me, after all, for company."

"I should if I were you," said I inadvertently, absorbed with the fear of missing my train. In that event I should be obliged to spend another night in the Old Steine road. My very soul revolted.

She stopped short and gazed upon me with astonished eyes.

"Would you?" she cried.

"What have I said?" stammered I. "Whatever it was I didn't mean it. Of course not!"

I was just in time, thanks to our haste. Breathlessly we stood at the gates. I threw my arms about the girl. I kissed her goodby. There was a tear in her eye.

"I am going to wait for him!" she wept, clinging to me. "I love him!"

"I would, too," I assured her. "And now goodby."

That was in the summer time. Late in the fall I had a letter from Jane.

"I was right to wait," it ran. "He has come!"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 24—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Freedom for service.—II Tim. ii, 4; Gal. v, 1; Heb. xii, 1, 2.

God saves us not altogether for the sake of saving us, but also that our lives may be consecrated to Him. We are saved to serve. In the twelfth chapter of Romans Paul says, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." That this consecration and this service may be performed to the fullest extent it is absolutely necessary that we should be free and untrammeled in our service. That freedom for service is necessary Paul suggests to Timothy by the illustration of the soldier. "No man that warreth and tangleth himself with the affairs of life that he may please Him hath chosen him to be a soldier." No soldier can be entangled with other affairs in life. He must give himself up entirely to the service; he must be free from worldly cares and avocations or it will be absolutely impossible for him to produce the best results as a soldier. The same thing is true of the Christian soldier. To be a good soldier of Jesus Christ we must have freedom for service.

We must be free from affairs of this life. There is nothing that so much interferes with active Christian service as unnecessary association with the things of this world. A spirit of worldliness crushes out a spirit of consecration and service. An unwise indulgence even in the harmless things of life seriously interferes with the faithful performance of our obligations and our duties to God. Unnecessary worries about the cares and the business pursuits of life deprive us of the power to serve God as we ought to serve Him. While in the world we are not to be of the world to the extent that our relations with the world interfere with the performance of our duties to God.

2. We should be free from false conceptions of the law. "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberties wherewith Christ hath made us free and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." The yoke of bondage here referred to was the bondage of the law. It was the conception of the ancient people of God that they were to be saved by the observance of the law. The result was that they became slaves to the law. It usurped the place in their lives that Christ should have had, and it was impossible under these conditions for them to render the cheerful and whole hearted service to God that was His due. The lives of many Christian people have been made miserable and they have been made incompetent for service by a false attitude toward the law. The early religious experiences of Martin Luther were of such a character. He was taught to look upon God as a severe judge ready to punish and to destroy him for the breaking of His law. He had no idea of God as a kind and loving Father or a realization of the fact that Christ had kept the law for him and had paid the penalty for it on the cross. The result was that his life was miserable and he was unfitted for the best and truest service. It was only when the scales fell from his eyes and he lived in the liberty wherewith Christ made him free that he was enabled to perform great service to God. Christians are not above the law; they are not immune from the penalties of the law, and yet in Christ they possess a freedom from it that should inspire them to better lives and should give them greater liberty for effective and whole hearted service.

3. Freedom from besetting sins. "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." All sins have not the same attractive power for all people. What tempts one man may have no temptation for another. In each one of our lives are besetting sins or sins that easily intwine themselves about us. The apostle here likens the form of such sins to the flowing robe of the Grecian athlete. We can easily understand how the runner would be hindered in the race if he had about him the loose, flowing garment of the Greek. It would wrap itself so closely about him as to hinder his every movement. Such is the result of besetting sins in the life of service. If they are allowed to have power and influence with us, they hinder us and destroy our powers for effective service. That we may be free to serve it is therefore important that we should lay aside all cares and all besetting sins and that we should look to Christ for the power to overcome besetting sins and to continue in the life of faithfulness and of patient service.

The Main Battlefield.

The main battlefield is the one which moves about with us, go where we will—ourselves. So dingy and inglorious oftentimes that we would like to flee it altogether and lose ourselves in some great campaign which should keep us from ever being reminded of it again! Great things have sometimes been done by men who never won the battle of their own natures, but they are the standing incongruity and puzzle of the moral world. When the thing we want to do has outrun the thing we want to be, our thought about life has ceased to be real and moral and essential, and God and men will forgive us all the delay that is necessary in order for us to go back into that battlefield of our own souls.—Sunday School Times.

The Test.

The test of a fine character is attention to the minutiæ of conduct—to do the little commonplace service of love, the cheerful word, the cup of cold water, when rendered not grudgingly or of necessity.—Friend.

Have Come to Us as a Result of War With Spain

OUR EXTERNAL PROBLEMS

President Roosevelt Points Out What Has Been Accomplished In Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines During the Past Four Years

Hartford, Aug. 23.—The president on his arrival here yesterday afternoon was cordially welcomed. He was taken for a drive around the city and was enthusiastically cheered all along the route.

In Pope Park, one of the outlying recreation spots of the city, the president was greeted by 10,000 workingmen who presented him with a magnificent floral horseshoe inscribed: "Workingmen's Welcome to Our President."

Father Sullivan made a few remarks of welcome in which he commended the honesty and sincerity of purpose of the president in all his acts. The president responded and paid high tribute to the character of the American workingman.

Five thousand people crowded the Coliseum last night to hear the address of President Roosevelt. He was introduced to the audience by Colonel Green. His address follows:

The events of the last few years have forced the American republic to take a larger position in the world than ever before, and therefore more than ever before to concern herself with questions of policy which effects her interests beyond her own borders. As a people we now have duties and opportunities in the tropic seas and lands south of us as well as in those of the farthest east. And much depends upon the way in which we meet these duties, the way in which we take advantage of these opportunities.

From the days of Monroe, Clay and the younger Adams, we as a people have always looked with interest upon the West Indies and the isthmus connecting the two Americas, feeling that anything happening in those regions must be of concern to our welfare. There is now ampler reason than ever before for this feeling. The outcome of the Spanish war put us in possession of Porto Rico and brought us into peculiarly close touch with Cuba; while the successful negotiation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty at last cleared the way for the construction of the isthmian canal. Porto Rico may now serve as an example of the best methods of administering our insular possessions. So excellent have been the effects of our administration and legislation concerning this island, that their very excellence has resulted in their being almost forgotten by those at home.

In Porto Rico and Cuba

First and foremost in Porto Rico, we have consistently striven to get the very best men to administer the affairs of the island. Here at home we always have in our own hands the remedy for any failure to provide such qualities. In a far off island things are different. In making appointments to the insular service, it is necessary to disregard any question of mere party expediency and to look at the matter solely from the standpoint of the honor of our nation and of the welfare of the island itself. This has been the standpoint adhered to in selecting the men who represent our government in Porto Rico. In consequence, all Americans should feel a real pride in the way in which their compatriots who are responsible for the government of the island have administered it. Moreover, in shaping the government of the island we have acted with good sense as well as with good faith.

In Cuba the problem was larger, more complicated and more difficult. Here again we kept our promise absolutely. After having delivered the island from its oppressors, we refused to turn it loose off-hand with the certainty that it would sink into chaos and savagery. For over three years we administered it on a plane higher than it had ever reached before during the four centuries since the Spaniards first landed upon its shores. In return for what we have done Cuba must have peculiar relations with us economically. She must be in a sense part of our economic system. We expect her to accept a political attitude toward us which we think wisest both for her and for us. In return we must be prepared to put her in an economic position as regards our tariff system which will give her some measure of the prosperity which we enjoy. We cannot, in my judgment, avoid taking this attitude if we are to persevere in the course which we have outlined for ourselves as a nation during the past four years; and therefore I believe that it is only a matter of time—and I trust only a matter of a very short time—before we enter into reciprocal trade relations with Cuba.

The isthmian canal represents what is probably to be the greatest engineering feat—the greatest feat of the kind—of the 20th century. Before we start upon the construction of the canal certain questions of detail and of our relations with the people owning the soil have to be settled. When this has been done, the primary aim must be to get men who, though able to control much greater salaries than the nation is able to pay, nevertheless possess the patriotism and the healthy ambition which will make them willing to put their talents at the government's service.

So much for what has been done in the Occident. In the Orient the labor was much more difficult.

It is rare indeed, that a great work, a work supremely worth doing, can be done save at the cost not only of labor and toil, but of much puzzling worry during the time of the performance. Normally, the nation that achieves greatness can do so only at the cost of anxiety and bewilderment and heart-wearing effort. Timid people, people scant of faith and hope, and good people who are not accustomed to the roughness of the life of effort—are almost sure to be disheartened and dismayed by the work and the worry, and overmuch mast down by the shortcomings which in real life always accompany the first stages even of what eventually turn out to be the most brilliant victories.

Burdens Imposed by War

All this is true of what has happened during the last four years in the Philippine islands. The Spanish war itself was an easy task, but it left us certain other tasks which were much more difficult. One of these tasks was that of dealing with the Philippines. Finally we adopted a course fraught with danger and difficulty, as is generally the case in this world when some great feat is to be accomplished as an incident to working out national destiny. We made up our minds to stay in the islands; to put down violence, to establish peace and order, and then to introduce a just and wise civil rule, accompanied by a measure of self-government which should increase as rapidly as the islanders showed themselves fit for it.

The first and vitally important feat was the establishment of the supremacy of the American flag, and this had to be done by the effort of those gallant fellow Americans of ours to whom so great a debt is due—the officers and enlisted men of the United States army, regulars and volunteers alike. In a succession of campaigns, carried on in unknown tropic jungles against an elusive and treacherous foe vastly outnumbering them, under the most adverse conditions of climate, weather and country, our troops completely broke the power of the insurgents, smashed their armies and harried the broken robber bands into submission. I do not refer to the Moros, with whom we have exercised the utmost forbearance, but who may force us to chastise them if they persist in attacking our troops. Among the Filipinos proper, however, peace has come. Our army in the islands has been reduced until it is not a fourth of what is was at the time the outbreak was at its height.

Success of Civil Rule

Step by step as the army conquered, the rule of the military was supplanted by the rule of the civil authorities—the soldier was succeeded by the civilian magistrate. The utmost care has been exercised in choosing the best type of Americans for the high civil positions and the actual work of administration has been done so far as possible by native Filipino officials serving under these Americans.

The success of the effort has been wonderful. Never has this country had a more upright or an abler body of public representatives than Governor Taft, Vice Governor Wright and their associates and subordinates in the Philippine islands. It is a very difficult matter practically to apply the principles of an orderly free government to an oriental people struggling upwards out of barbarism and subjection. It is a task requiring infinite firmness, patience, tact, broad-mindedness. All these qualities and the countless others necessary have been found in the civil and military officials who have been sent over to administer the islands.

Congress has, with far-seeing wisdom, heartily suported all that has been done by the executive. Wise laws for the government of the Philippine islands have been placed upon the statute books, and under those laws provision is made for the introduction into the Philippines of representative government, with only the delay absolutely necessary to allow for the establishment of definite peace, for the taking of a census and the settling down of the country.

Of Great Benefit to All

It would be hard to say whether we owe most to our military or our civil representatives in the Philippines. The soldiers have shown splendid gallantry in the field and they have done no less admirable work in preparing the provinces for civil government. The civil authorities have shown the utmost wisdom in doing a very difficult and very important work of vast extent. It would be hard to find in modern times a better example of successful constructive statesmanship.

Finally, in the Philippines, as in Cuba, the instances of wrongdoing among either our civil or military representatives, have been astonishingly few; and punishment has been meted with even-handed justice to all offenders.

Nor should it be forgotten that while we have thus acted in the interest of the islanders themselves, we have also helped our own people. Our interests are as great in the Pacific as in the Atlantic. The welfare of California, Oregon and Washington is as vital to the nation as the welfare of New England, New York and the south Atlantic states. The awakening of the Orient means very much to all the nations of Christendom, commercially no less than politically; and it would be short-sighted statesmanship on our part to refuse to take the necessary steps for securing a proper share to our people of this commercial future.

The possession of the Philippines has helped us, as the securing of the open door in China has helped us. Already the government has taken the necessary steps to provide for the laying of a Pacific cable under conditions which safeguard absolutely the interests of the American public. Our commerce with the east is growing rapidly. Events have abundantly justified alike from the moral and material standpoint all that we have done the far east as a sequel to our war with Spain.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Outside the Scarcity of Fuel Business In General Is Prosperous

New York, Aug. 23.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Fuel scarcity is still the one serious industrial handicap. Protracted idleness at anthracite mines increased the pressure for soft coal and coke, and, despite new records of output, deliveries are utterly inadequate, owing to the lack of motive power. This freight blockade of coke trains has closed many furnaces, while the increasing call for transporting facilities on crop account gives little prospect of early relief. Notwithstanding the congestion, railway earnings thus far reported for August show gains of 3.4 percent over last year and 17.0 percent over 1900.

Weather conditions have been less uniformly favorable for agricultural products, yet no severe loss is reported. Current trade is of good volume for the season, while the outlook for the future is bright. Buyers are numerous in all the leading markets, placing orders liberally at well sustained quotations. Speculation has grown very active, without producing any pressure in the money market, and securing new high prices for stocks.

Textile mills are well occupied, business gradually increasing in the cotton goods division, and demands for quick delivery emphasize the fact that stocks are low and requirements for consumption are pressing. Quotations are steadily maintained, with the market in healthy condition.

Footwear shops at the east have assurance of full operation for two months, although there is much complaint of quotations in connection with the sensational movement of the material.

Staple products average somewhat higher in prices, owing to less uniformly good news from the agricultural sections.

Governor Taft's Popularity

Manila, Aug. 23.—Civil Governor Taft reached here today at daylight on board the gunboat General Alava from Singapore. The day had been made a holiday and 20,000 natives from adjoining provinces participated in the demonstrations in honor of the governor's arrival. Responding to an address of welcome General Taft outlined the progress and the result of his negotiations at Rome in the matter of the Philippine friars and said that all church questions were progressing toward a satisfactory settlement. He advised the Filipinos to till the soil and restore their country rather than waste time in useless political agitation. He promised personally to labor for the natives and asked for their confidence and support. Governor Taft was given an ovation on the streets of the city.

Harrowing Accident to Little Ones

Filay, Eng., Aug. 23.—Five children, who were playing on the sands here yesterday, were cut off by the inflowing tide and drowned before their mothers, who were sitting on the beach, had noticed the danger which threatened them. The shore at the scene of the tragedy was deserted and no boats were available. The mothers of the children and others made heroic attempts at a rescue. The oldest child made a futile attempt to save the youngest one by holding it up in his arms.

Turkey Comes to Terms

Washington, Aug. 23.—The state department has received a dispatch from Minister Leishman at Constantinople saying that amicable relations have been re-established between the legation and the porte. The sultan has directed that a portion of the agreements reached between Minister Leishman and secretary of foreign affairs be carried out. These agreements were annulled by the grand vizier.

Boy Fire Brigade Checked Flames

New York, Aug. 23.—A fire of unknown origin started yesterday in the tower of the main building of the Catholic protectory in Westchester. The fire department of the institution, composed of 50 boys, held the flames in check until the arrival of the engines. Perfect discipline was maintained among the 800 boys in the institution. The damage is estimated at $10,000.

Saloon Wrecked by Women

Belmont, Ind., Aug. 23.—A mob composed of women made a raid on a saloon yesterday and completely demolished it. They began by throwing rocks through the windows and then proceeded to enter and finish the work, breaking bottles and completely wrecking the place. The proprietor fled.

Smallpox-Stricken Island

Bridgton, Barbadoes, Aug. 23.—There is an alarming increase of cases of smallpox in Barbadoes island, and the bodies of the dead are being thrown into the sea. There have been 1876 cases of smallpox here since July 13.

NEWS IN BRIEF

John Lunkin, a hostler, hanged himself in a stable at Gloucester, Mass. It is thought he was despondent.

Owing to the resignation of Curtis Guild, Jr., the office of the president of the Republican club of Massachusetts has become vacant, and a special meeting has been called for Sept. 2 to fill that vacancy.

Of all the 700 fish handlers, cutters and skinners, who were out on strike at Gloucester, Mass., all but 25 women are now working.

Vice Consul Stuart of the British consulate at Boston has presented his resignation of that position to his government. It is thought the resignation will be accepted.

A VICIOUS ASSAULT

Nine Wounds Inflicted Upon a Woman by Her Infuriated Husband

Southbridge, Mass., Aug. 23.—George H. Whitney, an employe of the shoddy mills of Acres & Taylor at Charlton City, is under arrest charged with assault upon his wife, with the probability that the charge will be much more serious, as the woman is thought to be in a dangerous condition. Whitney and his wife had had severe quarrels and yesterday noon one of these started while they were at the table. After finishing his meal Whitney started for the mill, his wife following soon after. At the mill gate they met and it is claimed that Whitney first struck her over the head with his fist, then drawing a needle used in his work at the mill, about a foot long and as big around as a pencil, he stabbed her nine distinct times, most of the wounds being near the heart.

Officer Conway almost immediately arrested Whitney. Mrs. Whitney was carried to her home, where she is in a precarious condition. Whitney was turned over to Deputy Sheriff Jacobs, who has him confined in the Southbridge station awaiting the result of Mrs. Whitney's wounds. The Whitneys have been married three years and have no children.

General Miles at Westminster

Westminster, Mass., Aug. 23.—The Forbush public library building, erected as a memorial at a cost of $15,000, was dedicated yesterday and General Miles was the special guest, this being his home town. The exercises were held in the Congregational church and Daniel C. Miles, brother of the general and chairman of the building committee, presided. In the town hall last evening General Miles was tendered a reception by the Grand Army and the Sons of Veterans.

Shot by Brother Officer

Boston, Aug. 23.—In a midnight chase after a fleeing burglar, Patrolman Joseph L. Snow of division 6 was shot and perhaps fatally wounded by a bullet from the pistol of Patrolman Keane. The affair took place on B street early this morning. The bullet which was expected to summon help of the relieving officer then due, struck Snow in the back and lodged in the right side. While Snow fell fainting to the ground, Keane kept on in pursuit of the fugitive, finally overtaking him.

Went Across the Sea

Barre, Vt., Aug. 23.—Word has been received from Miss Lois G. Paige, who disappeared from this city two years ago last February, that she is now living on the Isle of Wight and is married. She left Barre one night without telling anyone that she was going away. Every effort to locate her was futile. At the time she disappeared she was a public school teacher and a singer of note.

He Was Discouraged

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 23.—Thomas Harald, a painter, drank corrosive sublimate yesterday with the intention of putting an end to his life. He was taken to a hospital, and it is stated that he cannot possibly recover. Harald broke his leg two years ago and since that time has been a cripple. His wife also is a cripple and there are five children, the oldest of whom is 9 years.

The Monk Beats Lord Derby

Readville, Mass., Aug. 23.—The one great surprise at the Readville track on yesterday's grand circuit card was the appearance of Lord Derby in the 2:07 trot. Geers drove The Monk under the wire ahead of Lord Derby in two straight heats and won, in the first heat establishing a new record of 2:05 3-4, and a new race record for the track. The purse was $2500.

Old Home Festival Ended

Concord, N. H., Aug. 23.—Concord's fourth annual "Old Home Week" formally closed last night, though a few towns will celebrate today. On the whole the week has been more successful than its predecessors, indicating that the festival has found a permanent place on the state calendar.

Maine Crops Suffer

Fryeburg, Me., Aug. 23.—During the thunder storm last night there was a heavy downfall of hail in the vicinity of Bridgton, Brownfield and this town. It was said to be an inch deep in some places. The crops, which promised to be abundant, will be much damaged.

Work of Train Wreckers

Fort Scott, Kas., Aug. 23.—A train heavily laden with passengers was derailed near here yesterday. Some one had driven a spike between the switch rails and opened the switch halfway. The engineer and fireman were injured, but none of the passengers was hurt. Detectives are working on the case.

A Good Hearted Man, or in other words, men with good sound hearts, are not very numerous. The increasing number of sudden deaths from heart disease daily chronicled by the press, is proof of the alarming prevalence of this dangerous complaint, and as no one can foretell just when a fatal collapse will occur, the danger of neglecting treatment is certainly a very risky matter. If you are short of breath, have pain in left side, smothering spells, palpitation, unable to lie on side, especially the left, you should begin taking

Good Afternoon

The Boston Record says: "H. H. Faxon of Quincy has a big libel suit on his hands, growing out of his attacks at the way the 'city' government of that little burgh is run. But the people of Quincy, instead of attacking Faxon, ought to praise him. Quincy is practically bankrupt. That is, its burden of debt is so great that real estate is practically unsalable at its assessed value. Of the towns within 10 miles of Boston, only Weymouth, Everett, Chelsea, and Saugus make a worse showing.

"Yet Quincy spends as much per head for schools as Boston; for its streets as Cambridge; for its fire department as Newton. It has a right to spend less than 25 p. c. as Brookline, yet it spends more for sidewalks, sewers, water, printing and interest than Brookline, while the latter spends less than twice as much for schools. And yet people wonder that folks who pay taxes go to Brookline, Nahant, Boston, Newton, Cohasset or Milton, to live, rather than to the towns mentioned, or Woburn, Somerville, Wakefield, Stoneham, or Hyde Park. What these later need, and they need it badly, is men who will make these places live within their means."

The above attack of the Boston Record escaped our notice until today, and should not pass unnoticed. Some of the comparisons of the departments with Brookline and Newton are undoubtedly true, but it is a fact, probably, that no city or town can make a favorable comparison with these exceptionally rich places, not even Boston.

Why should not Quincy spend as much per head for schools as Boston! Why not half as much as Brookline for schools when we have twice as many pupils!

The attack on Quincy is entirely uncalled for. We are willing to admit cities and towns are not living within their means, and that Quincy is one of them. We deplore the fact. The rapidly increasing debt for current expenses is appalling. It is in special appropriations rather than in department expenses that the city is extravagant and reckless.

But Quincy is not bankrupt, as city property is valued at $2,000,000 or $3,000,000, or more, and its total debt Jan. 1, 1902, was $1,566,035.64, largely for water and sewers.

An assessment of $20 per capita would pay the entire municipal debt immediately. Not over 25 of the 368 cities and towns of the commonwealth show greater activity in real estate, and not 25 are keeping up with Quincy in increase in valuation, population, polls, voters, new houses, improvements, etc. We challenge the Record to make a comparison.

The libel suit against Henry H. Faxon is for quite a different thing, Mr. Faxon having criticised the manner in which the City Scavenger has done his work, as is alleged to the injury of his reputation.

The management of the Fore River Heights land evidently believes in the value of the home paper as an advertising medium. It is unnecessary to call attention to their adv. in this issue any more than it is necessary to claim that the land they have for sale is a beautiful property. Each is as apparent as the other.

The publication of the new Presbyterian creed promised for today is unavoidably crowded out by the new page advertisement, and will appear next Saturday.

It seems that the granite cutters of Barre are not satisfied with their bill of prices. The Quincy cutters are paid weekly where Barre pays monthly.

NEW BILL AT BARRE

Granite Cutters Want $3 per Day and Pay Fortnightly.

A dispatch from Barre to the Globe says: "Three dollars a day and pay day twice a month" will form the basis of the new bill of prices to be submitted to the Barre granite manufacturers' association next March for an agreement to continue for a term of years.

The prices under which the granite cutters are now working here will expire on March 1, and the new one is under consideration by the members of the local branch of the Granite Cutters

At the time the present bill was accepted the original demand was for $3 a day, but it was modified to 35 cents an hour for an eight-hour day, with the assurance that it would be granted at the next time that the matter would come up.

At present the men are paid only once a moth. They now want their pay oftener.

Cochato Club, Braintree.

Pennock and Norris will play off the finals in the August 9th tournament today at 4 o'clock.

The first annual doubles tennis tournament for men will be started Saturday, August 30, at 2 o'clock. The club will put up a cup which remains their property, and the winners of each of these annual tournaments will be engraved on this cup.

A new post has been put in to strengthen the railing on the south side of the piazza overlooking the tennis court.

The program for the promenade concert this evening is quite a varied one and includes several selections from late musical productions. It also includes the Intermezzo Sinfonico from the Cavalleria Rusticana, the solo portion of which is played by Mr. Stuart Mason. A new waltz is also to be rendered, "Loves' Confession," by Louis Crimm, an American composer who is rapidly coming to the front in the rank of American musicians. In all, the program cannot help but please, for it is an admirably arranged one. Arranged to suit the tastes of the most fastidious as well as the one who cares somewhat for the latter-day school music.

FIRST PART.

March, "Cosey Corner,"	Bratton Kimball
Overture, "Light Cavalry,"	Suppe
Waltzes, "Loves' Confession,"	Grimm
Intermezzo Sinfonico, "Cavallerie Rusticana"	Mascagni
Entre Act, "Dancing Sunbeams,"	Cruenwald
March, "Frost King,"	Kenneth

SECOND PART.

The concert of last Saturday evening seemed to suit all the persons present even more than usual. It is very noticeable that as the weeks go by the audiences grows larger and larger and it is to be regretted that but two more concerts remain of the present series.

A GOOD SCOOP.

Fourteen Toughs Arrested at Houghs Neck Last Night.

Among the crowd at Hough's Neck last night was a gang of Neponset toughs. According to the story as it came out in court this morning, they contributed $1 each, which went to pay for a keg of beer and a team. The party camped out in the rear of the Casino and about 11.30 when the beer was all gone they came out into Sea street and began to create a disturbance. Inspector McKay attempted to check them, when one of them hit him over the eye with a seal ring making a severe cut.

Officers Bradley, McAloon and Curtin came to the rescue and the result was that fourteen were arrested. The patrol wagon was called and part of the gang came back in this team and part on another wagon.

The fellows gave their names as Timothy F. Heffernan, John A. McClusky, John Swift, John Kelley, Ernest Stock, J. J. Sullivan, Charles Wilson, Dennis Cummings, Daniel Daily, Richard Dusette. Thomas H. Keenan, Willard Clark, Timothy F. Sullivan, William J. Kelley. They were all in court this morning.

Sacreligious.

[From the Braintree Observer.]

The following account of the contemptible and sacreligious deed of some unknown party seems almost incredible.

A few weeks ago a young man in the bloom of youth died in a neighboring city. His death was the result of a terrible accident. Its suddenness spread a gloom over his neighbors, friends and schoolmates, by whom he was greatly loved. To attest their love for the deceased they sent to the parents their hearts purest offerings in the form of floral emblems. These emblems were furnished with ribbon streamers, chaste and beautiful.

When the body was brought to Braintree and interred with many tears in Pond cemetery, the floral offerings so earnestly given not only covered the grave but the entire lot in which the loved one rested.

Each piece representing a friend of the lost one touched a chord in the sorrowing hearts of the parents. And they felt as they returned to their lonely home that love still hovered over the grave of their son.

But, with night came a ghoulish thief who stole all the ribbons from the emblems. Not one, or a piece of one, as was done a few years ago in this cemetery, but every one, and there were many. When the parents returned to the grave the following morning, this worse than wicked deed chilled their hearts.

No punishment is too great for the offender in this case. We trust the thief will soon be apprehended. We feel quite sure that the guilty party will not be at large much longer.

Boston Music Hall.

The announcement was made early this week that Boston Music hall had passed to the control of E. D. Stair and A. L. Wilbur and these managers will assume control of the property on Monday, Sept. 1. They control nearly 100 theatres in the United States and with the opening of Music hall will complete a chain of popular-priced theatres that extend from Boston to San Francisco. Besides their theatres they also control a large number of road companies, many of which will appear at the Music hall during the season. Stair and Wilbur are also the builders of the New Majestic theatre in Boston, which will probably open in November and at this house higher priced attractions will be played. It is the intention of Stair and Wilbur to present at the Music hall popular-priced attractions, the class of entertainments including farce comedies, melodramas, comedy dramas, musical comedies, etc., at prices ranging from 15 to 50 cents for the evenings, and with daily matinees at 15 and 25 cents, will prove particularly popular with ladies visiting Boston to do their shopping and every endeavor will be put forth by the management towards the comfort of the ladies attending the afternoon performances.

Hyde Park Valuation.

The tax rate of Hyde Park is $18.10 against $17.80 last year. The assessors report a valuation of $11,674,600 as follows: real, $10,253,600; personal $1,421,000.

In the Duxbury open race of yesterday first places were taken by the Ayreto, Little Haste, Question, Rambler, and Rooster, and second prizes by the Calypso, Chloras, Gertrude, Thordis and Quinet.

A boy fond of animals must have good material in him. Only the other day we saw a dirty little urchin laying flat on the sidewalk in front of the Quincy Fair kissing a little gray kitten curled up in the lid of a croquet box.

The friends of County Commissioner Wright of Quincy are circulating nomination papers among the republicans in several towns of the county, and we hear that he has a big list of names in Brookline, Dedham and Stonghton, with other towns to hear from. If the republican nomination goes to Quincy it will be a pretty fight between the two nominees from that city. —Hyde Park Gazette.

—When William E. Chandler was secretary of the Navy he issued an order that officers should not allow their wives to reside at the foreign stations to which they were attached. One day he received the following: "It becomes my painful duty to report that my wife, Eliza Fyffe, has, in disobedience to my orders and in the face of the regulations of the department, taken up her residence on the station and refuses to leave." It was written by Commodore Fyffe of the Asiatic squadron. The order was rescinded on the following day.—Old Colony Memorial.

Dysenterv Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

QUINCY CANDIDATE.

William E. Badger Again in Field for County Commissioner.

Already there is a contest on for the Republican nomination for Norfolk County Commissioner for the full term of three years, the Republicans in other parts of the county not relishing the idea of being represented by a Democrat. While many Republicans of Quincy would like to see Marshall P. Wright reelected, they realize that his chances in the county are not good for securing the Republican nomination. At the same time the eastern part of the county, and the city of Quincy in particular, have good claims for representation, as Mr. Blanchard of Stoughton and Mr. Hewins of Medfield are from the western part of the county.

A year ago Quincy presented a worthy candidate and were unwavering in his support during the many ballots necessary. On the final ballot he lacked but four votes of a nomination. He was really the choice of the convention but corrupt politics led to the nomination of Mr. Bowker, a choice which the people were quick to repudiate in an emphatic manner.

William E. Badger of Quincy is as worthy of support this year as last year,—an honest, intelligent, representative citizen,—and will have the united support of the Republicans of city in the caucuses and convention. If the Republicans of the county really desire to elect a Republican, they will be wise in nominating one from Quincy, where Mr. Wright now resides. No out-of-town candidate could be expected to poll as large a vote against Mr. Wright as Mr. Badger of Quincy, and the vote of this city will be an important factor in the result.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

TWO TRAMPS ARRESTED

In Connection With Murder of Olive Broad

ONE TRACED FROM CORNISH

Where He IsB elieved to Have Been Seen Near Where Crime Was Committed—Man From Bridgton Told a Queer Story of Dream of Murder

Cornish, Me., Aug. 23.—The officers consider that they have made good progress in working up the Olive Broad murder case. Deputy Sheriff Sawyer and Constable Favor arrived here last evening with Martin McNally, a tramp, whom they arrested at West Buxton yesterday, and James Willis, also a tramp, arrested near Center Waterboro by Judson Roberts.

McNally answers the description of the stout, red-faced man seen at Cornish near the scene of the murder Wednesday afternoon and for whom diligent search has been made by the officers. He was traced over the Limerick road to Hollandville, where he had failed to find work and had gone toward West Buxton. When the officers arrived at West Buxton they were told that McNally was in a barber shop. When McNally left the shop they followed him to a boarding house: t which he had secured a room, having found a situation in the woolen mills. He peaceably accompanied the officers to Cornish. No weapons were found on his person.

Willis was arrested merely for the fact that he was travelling about the country and was a suspicious character.

Both were immediately taken before the coroner's inquest last night and were examined until midnight. McNally claims that he left Bridgton Wednesday noon, where he had been working in a woolen mill, sleeping in a box car about six miles from Cornish Wednesday night, and came here Thursday forenoon.

An important statement was made by him that he saw Mr. and Mrs. Cook, who found the body and who are being held by the officers, near where the murder was committed between 8:30 and 9 o'clock Thursday morning. The discovery of the body was not known until 9:30 a. m. McNally is considerably worked up on account of being in Cornish Thursday morning. He is 35 years old.

James Willis, 22 years old, while before the jury appeared nervous, moody and sullen. He claims that he left Littleton, N. H., passing through Norway and arriving at Portland Wednesday night. He went to Sebago Lake and slept in the woods there Thursday night. He says that he cannot prove an alibi, as he has been travelling constantly and no one knows him. Willis says that he lived in Stoughton, Mass., until two years ago, when he ran away from his parents.

State Detective Hartnett has arrived from Portland at the request of the local officials and immediately commenced work on the case.

Deputy Sheriffs Pendexter and Miles were at Conway Center yesterday, where Miss Broad visited Wednesday, and learned that she left there on the train at 3:22 p. m. It was learned that she had three bank Books showing deposits to the extent of several thousand dollars. The amount is not given out by the officers.

Thursday morning a Bridgton man told a peculiar story. He arrived in town about the time the body was discovered and before the news had spread and announced that while sleeping at his home in Bridgton the night before he had a dream that an old lady at Cornish had been murdered by her cousin. He was so excited by the dream that he immediately drove to Cornish to see if it were so. At the time no attention was paid to the story and his name was not even learned. He will be looked up and his whereabouts Wednesday afternoon and evening ascertained.

Chaffee Hopes to Avoid Fighting

Manila, Aug. 23.—General Chaffee returned to Manila yesterday from his tour of the southern islands. He has not taken decisive action against the Moros of the island of Mindanao. He regards the situation there to be uncertain, but not critical. General Chaffee still hopes that moral suasion may avert a conflict between Moros and Americans.

THE BOY GIANT AND THE ICE CREAM

. . . Copyright, 1900, by Caroline Wetherell . . .

Ah Grim wished some ice cream to try,
But found it expensive to buy.
He could gobble a ton
Before you'd spell one
And quicker than puss winks her eye.
Jack said they could go to the pole
And dig in an iceberg a hole;
Next pour in some cream,
Stir it round with a beam
And sweeten and flavor the whole.

Then straight to the north pole they sped,
Where the northern lights flash high and red.
Their berg they selected
And, calm and collected,
To make their ice cream went ahead.
They fished out a berg that looked nice,
They clipped out some bits in a trice.
Then they opened the cream,
Gave an agonized scream—
It had changed to a big block of ice.

An Honest Newsboy.

A customer of Joe Weisberg, a Detroit newsboy, gave him a five dollar goldpiece for a penny by mistake. The boy soon discovered the mistake and found the customer and gave the $5 back to him. A Detroit newspaper related the incident, and C. R. Randall of Oxford, Mich., sent the boy a draft for $2.50, with the following letter:

"While I want to send you a small remittance, I don't want it considered as a reward for honesty, because honesty is its own reward, but I want to say to you that business men over the country are looking for honest boys."

The letter then went on to invite the boy to visit Mr. Randall and his family at Oxford and stay a week.

Do Something.

If the world seems cold to you,
Kindle fires to warm it!
Let their comfort hide from you
Winters that deform it.
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather;
You will soon forget to moan;
"Ah, the cheerless weather!"

If the world's a "vale of tears,"
Smile till rainbows span it!
Breathe the love that life endears—
Clear from clouds that fan it.
Of your gladness lend a gleam
Unto souls that shiver;
Show them how dark sorrow's stream
Blends with hope's bright river!

A Half and a Half.

A small pupil in one of our schools stood before her teacher at recess with the half of an apple in each hand.

"Which half is the biggest, Miss H.?"

Her teacher was in a mood to be critical and answered:

"A half is a half, whether it's half of an apple or the half of the world. So, you see, if the apple is cut exactly in halves, one half must be just the size of the other half."

The eyes of the little pupil filled with tears as she heard this scholarly discussion, but she still held out the two "halves" of her apple, although her little hands trembled.

"I didn't mean it that way, teacher," she said sweetly. "I want you to have the biggest half."

"Thank you, my dear," said the teacher, who suddenly discovered that it took very little learning to be generous and thoughtful.—Detroit Free Press.

A Warning.

A little boy who was often told to keep his hat on when in the sun or he'd get black was visiting. He stood watching the colored washwoman washing in the sun bareheaded. After awhile he said, "You better put your hat on or you'll get white."

ENEMY IS STILL AT SEA

Anxiously Watched For by the Coast Defenders

CONDITIONS ARE CHANGED

Fog and Storm Favorable to Fleet Under Commander Pillsbury—Every One Alert on Board Battleships, as Attempt to Land Was Expected

Rockport, Mass., Aug. 23.—Commander Pillsbury and his fleet of three auxiliary cruisers are still at sea. Unless he makes an attempt to reach a harbor within 60 hours from last midnight, his efforts to win a victory in the game of mimic war will fail, for theoretically it will be considered that his ships have sunk, or he has found that the blockade established by Admiral Higginson from Portland to Cape Cod cannot be broken.

It is only fair to say that naval experts believe that Admiral Higginson's defense is good. Everything yesterday certainly favored an attack by the enemy, but no scout of the blue squadron reported signs of Commander Pillsbury's fleet. Fog and storm swept the coast during the afternoon, and while for a time last night the sky was clear the haze on the water continued.

Last night Admiral Higginson's three battleships were still at anchor off Thatcher's island, and besides them were two torpedo boats, but a nasty sea was running and the lightning occasionally lighted up the bay. At midnight the flagship's launches found difficult work in making landings and incoming craft reported a wild sea outside. On the battleships the men were wide awake, as every one expected to get word of the enemy.

What problem was being solved by Commander Pillsbury under cover of the fog was only a natural question to trouble the mind of Admiral Higginson who, himself knowing very well Commander Pillsbury's knowledge of the New England coast line and his determination to place in operation some bold coup, at the most opportune moment, had a growing conviction that something was in the air.

To justify the statement that the day in its nature might be called one which would puzzle even the most omniscient of weather sharps one needs only to continue by pointing out what actually happened. The fog lifted, revealing in the east a smoky haze which had hung there earlier in the day. The wind came about east and then, as if assuming a new freak, drove in the eastern haze, spreading it in all directions; then blackness rushed in from the north, the east and the south, focussing almost over the battleships. Then quickly came a crash of thunder. The anxious watchers on shore believed that the long waited for battle had actually started. Quickly the storm enveloped the land, and the shower of rain filled the streets of Rockport with miniature rivers.

During the night the freak weather of the day took on another turn. The rain ceased and the stars shone out bright in the sky. Lightning, however, continued. The region about the battleships still continued very dark on account of the fact that the thick haze did not abandon the eastern location which it had occupied during the entire day.

For some reason or other the number of dispatches from the stations along the coast from Portland on the north to Provincetown on the south were not as frequent as they had been previously. There were, however, a number of very important telegrams which were immediately dispatched on the government launches to Admiral Higginson.

Power Released From Jail

New York Aug. 23.—Peter Power, who was named as complainant in the suit to prevent the turning over of Northern Pacific stock to the Northern Securities company, and was was sentenced to 30 days' imprisonment for contempt of court, in failing to obey a subpoena to testify, was released from jail yesterday. Power gave evidence before Examiner Mabey, and his lawyer pleaded that this should relieve him of the charge of contempt.

Vessel Cut In Two

Stonington, Conn., Aug. 23.—A vessel has been sunk about five miles southeast of Fisher's island, and the circumstances point to this craft having been cut in two. Considerable cabin furniture was adrift, but nothing by which the craft's name could be determined.

Champion Amateur Bicyclist

New Haven, Aug. 23.—Marcus Hurley won the amateur bicycle championship of America here last night by winning the half-mile championship and securing second place in the two-mile championship. Root of Boston won the two-mile race.

REJANE, WHO WILL TOUR AMERICA NEXT YEAR.

She Is the Favorite Actress of Paris and an Artist to Her Finger Tips.

George C. Tyler of Liebler & Co. brought back with him from Europe on his recent return after a three months' absence quite an extraordinary bunch of contracts with noted foreign artists, unquestionably the most distinguished collection that any American managerial firm has been able to boast for many years. It was Mr. Tyler, it will be remembered, who called Kyrle Bellew "back from the mines" of the interior of North Queensland, Australia, and compelled him to undertake a journey of 4,000 miles just to convince the American public that he is and still remains one of the greatest romantic actors of the time. How thoroughly this has been proved his sensational success during his long run at Wallack's theater, New York city, in the Harriet Ford dramatization of the Stanley Weyman story of "A Gentleman of France," will bear evidence, and the other cities of the United States which he is to visit the coming season will have an opportunity to judge.

Then came the triumphal tour of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, an English actress with whom other managers had in vain sought a contract for many successive years. This season he brings over Signora Eleanora Duse and her own Italian company for a tour of ninety performances, and next season he is to bring Mme. Gabrielle Rejane, Signor Ermeta Novelli, who is probably the greatest of all living actors, and Vesta Tilley, the famous vaudeville artiste, whom Mr. Tyler is to put into a high class comedy and for the first time in her professional career present her in skirts, for Vesta Tilley's marvelous triumphs in England and America, be it understood, have all been gained as a male impersonator, in which line of work, it is generally conceded, she has no rival on earth. A pretty bunch of high priced stars truly, any one of whom has refused offers of over $2,000 per week!

Mme. Rejane's tour will be inaugurated in October of next year and will be for fifteen weeks. Like Duse, she will bring over her own company, and, also like Duse, she will be seen in those plays in which she has acquired fame in her native land and in other European capitals. Rejane's repertory will therefore doubtless include "Sapho," "La Robe Rouge," "Divorcons," "Zaza," "Ma Cousine," "Lolotte," "Madame, Attend Monsieur," "La Passerelle" and possibly "Le Partage" and "Germinie Lacerteux."

Rejane's presentation of Zaza is in itself a marvel of dramatic art. Commenting on her recent presentation of Zaza in London, the critic of the Times went into ecstasies. "Watch the music hall artiste at her toilet," said he. "How she rubs in the grease paint, unpins her false hair, dabs the powder puff over her shoulders, puling on a pinafore the while in order not to soil her skirt. Not a detail is missed. Even when the corset is unlaced Zaza is careful to go through the pantomime of holding her breath. Having combed her hair in act 1, she combs it more in act 4 and offers you a further piece of minute realism by removing the loose ends of hair from the comb and throwing them out of the window. Then she dusts the chairs with her uplifted petticoats, cleans the wine glasses by blowing into them, hides the hole in the tablecloth with a plate and makes a face at the bonne about it. Then watch her in an attack of 'nerves.' See her mouth twitching, her hands clinched; listen to the shrill note gradually coming into her voice. Then sit tight in your seat for the final explosion, the total physical abandonment and degradation. It is the very thing."

That is Rejane. She is the acme of realistic art and the idol of Paris. She was a graduate of the Conservatoire under Regnier, and Francisque Sarcey, the great French critic, came very near creating a riot in Paris because she was not given the first instead of the second prize. She made her debut at the Vaudeville and from that eventful night to the present time has remained the queen of the Parisian heart. Her coming to America is an event to be anxiously awaited. In private life Rejane is Mme. Porel. She is the daughter of a Parisian actor of note by the name of Reju and is a niece of Mme. Arnault of the Comedie Francaise.

TIMELY BASEBALL CHAT

St. Louis Americans Hope For the Pennant

Elkes, Cyclist; Geers, Driver

ST. LOUIS "fans" are enthusiastic in approving the work of the Americans. The team is certainly putting up a good article of ball and should finish with the leaders. Indeed many St. Louisans have already figured out the pennant for Jimmy McAleer and his boys.

The infield ranks with any in the American league. That able shortstop, Bobby Wallace, is just as steady as ever. It doesn't worry Wallace when an error is charged against him. He simply goes after everything and, of course, loses out sometimes. John Anderson is fielding his position well and is batting a fine clip. But one or two first sackers in the league have anything on big John. His size enables him to stretch out after throws that kill a batter's chances for reaching the base in safety, and in handling bad throws there are few better in the business.

ED GEERS, AMERICA'S LEADING REINSMAN

Barry McCormick is putting up a splendid game at third. Last year in Chicago McCormick never played up to his true form. He appeared listless and like a sick man. When he started the season with the Browns, he seemed afraid of his own shadow. But he regained his nerve and is now covering his position in great style. McCormick is also hitting well and of late has been working in home runs with appreciated regularity.

Of course Comiskey's Chicago White Sox will have something to say about the distribution of prizes. Comiskey's men have a good lead in the race and are bent on making it larger, but at the same time they are taking no chances with the Browns in striking distance of the top.

Speaking of Chicago, it is noticeable that the Nationals are playing about six times better than they did at any time last season. They will surely finish in the first division and should give Brooklyn a pretty battle for second place. The Brooklynites, however, are probably better stayers than the Orphans. One man who is earning his salary these days is "Middy" Schaefer, the Windy City National's game third base man. Schaefer has not a very wide reputation, but he is speedily acquiring one. He is speedy, accurate and a fair batsman and will be heard from one of these days. He has plenty of ambition and determination, a good combination that succeeds more often than it fails.

The contest for the motor paced cycling championship is going merrily on.

Albert Champion, Bobby Walthour, Harry Elkes and half a dozen other speed merchants are engaging in middle distance races every few days, and the man that can figure out the final winner of the title is wise indeed. Despite his recent injury Elkes is now rounding into dangerous form, and he will shortly begin to show his old time ability. He is in line for the championship if any one is, and unless Bobby Walthour does some startling stunts the contest will narrow down to Elkes and Champion.

Elkes hails from Glens Falls, N. Y., and has long been a prominent factor in cycle racing affairs. He is trained and managed by his father, "Pop" Elkes, who takes excellent care of the rider.

Probably the most prominent of the active horsemen at present is Ed Geers, the great reinsman of Hamlin's Village farm outfit. Geers is driving winners galore along the grand circuit, and as usual the purses will come very near paying the stable's expenses next winter. As a breadwinner for an employer Geers is unexcelled.

Geers it was who drove E. E. Smathers' Lord Derby in his recent race against Thomas W. Lawson's Boralma at Charter Oak park, Hartford, Conn., and in calming down the strenuous trotter after he went "higher than a kite" in the first heat and in winning out with a margin Geers showed that he always has his nerve with him. Of course the injury to the Boston horse detracted in a measure from the victory of the Derby horse and Geers, but at the same time impartial observers agree that, accident or no accident, the result of the race would have been the same. Boralma's accident is not serious enough to cause the postponement with the race against John Scannell's The Abbot at Readville, Mass., Aug. 30. Geers is also to drive against the Boston trotter in this event.

SHOOTING

Holly Thompson, a fifteen-year-old boy of Savannah, Ga., recently won the gold medal offered by the Atlanta Gun club and the amateur shooting championship of Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, Virginia and Alabama. His record was twenty-five straight kills. Holtzendorf of Waycross tied with Thompson, but withdrew in his favor.

Miss Edith Renner, a sixteen-year-old lass of Urbana, O., accompanied her father to the Wabash (Ind.) tournament recently and took part in the shooting. She made several good scores on the flying targets.

The Interstate association's shooting tournament will be held at Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 27 and 28, under the auspices of the Haverhill Gun club, S. G. Miller, secretary.

League Players at Cornell.

According to Captain Costello of the Cornell university baseball nine, Pitcher Dineen of the Boston American league club and Christy Mathewson of New York will enter the Ithaca institution next year for a course in the college of forestry.

St. Louis and the Pirates.

St. Louis has won more games from the champion Pittsburgs than any other club in the league except Chicago.

Time seems most untimely when he brings a woman to the turn of life. Life is or should be at its ripest and best for her, and she approaches this change with a dread of its effect born of her knowledge of the sufferings of other women at this season.

There is not the slightest cause for fear or anxiety at this period if Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is used. It gives health of body and cheerfulness of mind, and by its aid the pains and pangs of this critical period are prevented or cured.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is woman's medicine with a wonderful record of cures of womanly diseases. Diseases that all other medicines had failed to cure, have been perfectly and permanently cured by the use of "Favorite Prescription."

"I feel it my duty to write you as I have received so much benefit from the use of your medicine," says Mrs. Lizzie A. Bowman, of New Matamoras, Washington Co., Ohio. "I have taken four bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' for female weakness and change of life. Before I began taking it I could not do anything. I had such pains in my head and in the back of my neck that I thought I would lose my mind. Now I can work every day. I recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to all females suffering in the period of change of life. It is the best medicine I have found."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

MIMIC WAR IS ENDED

White Fleet Captured Off Massachusetts Coast

HEADED FOR SALEM HARBOR

When It Was Surrounded by the Defending Squadron—Failure to Enter and Hold a Port on Seaboard Between Portland and Provincetown

Rockport, Mass., Aug. 25.—The naval search problem on the New England coast was terminated at 5:40 Sunday morning by the signal "Surrender; Demand and Unconditional" from Rear Admiral Higginson's flagship, and the reply "Accept Surrender," from the fore truck of the Prairie, Commander Pillsbury's flagship.

The battle between the blue, or defending squadron, and the white, or attacking squadron, was thus quietly ended eight miles south of Thatcher's island. The enemy had most signally failed to make a harbor, having Salem for its objective. A preponderance of fighting strength, relatively 64 points, represented by the battleships Kearsarge, Alabama and Massachusetts, Scorpion and a torpedo boat had overwhelmed the 45 points represented by the auxiliary cruiser Prairie, Panther and Supply.

To speak from a theoretic standpoint the white squadron was entirely destroyed by the guns of the defending battleships. Thus on the fourth night the game of naval strategy was brought to an end, it having covered a period of unceasing toil, sleepless nights of anxious and wearying vigil, and of grave uncertainty to its participants.

The destruction of Pillsbury's squadron occurred at a point just within the outer limit of Gloucester harbor, not over eight miles southerly from Thatcher's island, off which had been anchored since Wednesday, when the war game was declared opened, the three powerful battleships of the blue squadron.

The surrounding and "putting out of action" of the squadron in charge of Commander Pillsbury was the culminating incident in one of the most interesting chapters in the peace history of the American navy. For the placing in operation of the maneuvers of the warships of the coast of New England the navy had prepared itself and had long looked forward to them with keen anticipation. This mimic war was the outcome of the belief that the rapidly growing navy should have some opportunity of engaging in practice, in tactics and in strategy, in brief with all conditions of a state of war. As planned by the naval authorities at Washington two squadrons were to be put into the game, one the blue, the defending fleet; and the other the white, to be a hostile fleet bent upon effecting an anchorage into some unprotected harbor on the coast from Cape Elizabeth to Cape Cod, opposed all the time by the first named fleet. This anchorage had to be maintained against the defenders for a period of six hours.

To win in the mimic war the blue squadron had to bring against the attacking vessels warships, superior in their combined assumed fighting power. Each side had the right to capture individual craft of the other fleet by overcoming them in point of strength and under the rules of the "game" the captured vessels were to retire altogether from the field of action. In the defeat of Pillsbury the defense, with three battleships, with the Scorpion, and with a single torpedo boat was valued at 64 points, so that the balance was against the attacking squadron.

Throughout the mimic war there was placed in operation a system of coast defense which was admittedly of credit to those who engaged in it. Even in its partial unfairness toward the attacking fleet the problem was most profound.

The final event of these war moves was the sequence of many complicating developments. The defeat of Pillsbury came at the end of a night filled with rumors as to the location of the attacking squadron. At 9:30 o'clock the three battleships of Higginson got under way in a hurry and sailed to the eastward. The intention was to move on to Portland and if this had been carried out, Admiral Higginson, as it later developed, would have unconsciously swung the balance of his fighting force to that end of the coast line, as Pillsbury had intended he should, but which was not done on account of the heavy seas running outside Cape Elizabeth.

Higginson, however, deflected his course back to Gloucester after a swing seaward, in response to a report that the enemy had not been sighted when it was believed she had been, but in the last hours of the night Pillsbury sailed towards Cape Ann from the outside, and as it proved, right under the very guns of the defending squadron. Commander Pillsbury had stood well out to sea, disappointed much at the failure of the long planned ruse to draw the blockading ships away from the destined seat of engagement, and then after maneuvering, headed straight for Salem harbor, but the desired vantage was never reached.

When Pillsbury's boats had arrived off Magnolia they were sighted by the signal station on Baker's island. A message was sent to the station here, and the torpedo boat Barney was sent out to notify the blue squadron. It was real war then. General quarters were sounded. There was a quick rush of many feet, the manning of a hundred posts, the clank of the anchor chain, the ringing of bells, the giving of orders, and a general clearing for action. Not many moments passed before the flagship was under way, steaming at 14 knots, with the Alabama and the Massachusetts many boats' length in the rear. Some distance back was the Barney, rapidly overhauling the ships ahead.

The naval experts are discussing the reason for Commander Pillsbury's maneuver in steaming finally to the northward and coming to anchor as he did at a point off Magnolia and near to Gloucester harbor, especially in the light of the announcement that Pillsbury had determined to anchor in Salem harbor; and the theory was advanced that the acting admiral of the white squadron either had observed that he had been sighted and decided to surrender hopelessly, or try at the last moment to run in unseen by Admiral Higginson, astern of Norman's Woe, in Gloucester harbor.

Something of the realization of his prodigious problem came to Commander Pillsbury, so he himself confesses, as he sailed at an 11-knot speed into the final place of engagement. For four days and nights he had been wandering up and down the New England coast 100 miles out from shore waiting for the moment of his movement upon Salem. The truth came home to him that the odds were vastly against the attacking squadron when one considered that the coast held to be in peril from the enemy extended only from Portland to the tip of Cape Cod, and that for purposes of defense a score of war vessels were employed by the defending admiral.

At 5:40 o'clock the three battleships, aided by the converted yacht Scorpion, which had chased in from the south in time to be in at the finish, and the Barney, which had overtaken the fleet, formed a horseshoe about the white squadron. The elation among the men on board the blue squadron ships ran high.

Commander Pillsbury, after he had signalled his surrender, passed in his barge from the Prairie, walked up the starboard gangway of the Kearsarge and offered his sword to Admiral Higginson. "Keep your sword, sir," said the senior officer. "I would not accept the sword from so gallant a foe." "And I, sir," responded Pillsbury, "could not surrender to a nobler or better officer."

This exchange of swords ended the actual surrender, and at the invitation of Admiral Higginson, Commander Pillsbury stepped down to the cabin of the Kearsarge and here the two officers discussed in privacy the incidents of the days since the "declaration of hostilities" on Wednesday. At the conclusion of the conference Commander Pillsbury was returned to his flagship and it was not long after that the Prairie headed down the coast.

The main theme of discussion in Rockport among the seafaring people, who know the Massachusetts coast as well as they know their own houses, was the apparent rejection of all strategetic movements by Commander Pillsbury. He had not tried to land officers or marines ashore to learn of the enemy's movements, and he had sailed almost to the base of the defense just before daylight, when capture seemed inevitable.

In an interview on board his flagship, Admiral Higginson expressed his pleasure at the real work which had been done during the week. He commended Staehle, the apprentice boy, who was the first to report the presence of Commander Pillsbury's squadron.

Navy Will Try to Beat Army

New London, Conn., Aug. 25.—Major General McArthur, who is to be in command of the army maneuvers in the coming war game with the navy, is expected to arrive here today to assume personal direction of the preparation in the forts at the east entrance of Long Island sound. The war game will begin next Friday night at midnight. The enemy, in this case, will be the north Atlantic squadron, whose purpose it is to force an entrance to Long Island sound, running the gauntlet of the island forts.

Funeral of General Sigel

New York, Aug. 25.—Simple and unostentatious was the funeral of General Franz Sigel yesterday. Surrounding the flag-covered coffin wherein lay the dead general attired in the well worn uniform he used during the war stood the few surviving comrades who had fought shoulder to shoulder with the veteran in wars in two hemispheres. The body was followed to its last resting place in Woodlawn cemetery by a long and ragged line of scarred and crippled veterans, bearing with them tattered flags.

New York, Aug. 25.—Rabbi Moses Sagersohn of Boston was injured seriously yesterday by falling accidentally or being pushed from a trolley car in Williamsburg, after a number of young men had annoyed him. In attempting to leave the car he fell to the pavement, striking his head. He is suffering from concussion of the brain.

President Roosevelt the Guest of Senator Lodge

TRAVELED ON SUNDAY

After Acting as Godfather of Baby Chanler at Newport—Crowds Along the Route Through Massachusetts Welcomed the Chief Executive

Nahant, Mass., Aug. 25.—President Roosevelt left Newport yesterday at 2 o'clock in a train of four special cars. Accompanying him to the depot were Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Chanler, Senator and Mrs. Lodge, the two latter journeying with the party to Nahant, the home of the Lodges, where the president spent last night.

A more quiet day could not have been spent by the president. He arose early and after eating a light breakfast, left the Chanler house about 9 o'clock and went out to meet Mrs. Roosevelt, who had come up on the Sylph during the night. The president was aboard the ship for about two hours, and Mrs. Roosevelt left for home shortly after his return to the Chanler villa, where the ceremony of christening the baby was performed. He was named Theodore Ward Chanler. The president acted as godfather and Mrs. Lodge as godmother.

Travelling on Sunday was something new for the president, but in this instance he was obliged to depart from his usual custom, as he went to Newport for no other purpose than to attend the christening, and it was necessary to make the short journey to Nahant in order to maintain his schedule.

That the enthusiasm attending the president's journey shows no abatement was evident by the crowd which gathered about the depot at Newport, which cheered his arrival and continued it until the train departed and was lost to view.

Stonebridge, R. I., and Fall River, Taunton and Mansfield, Mass., turned out in force to greet the president and as each place was reached the train was slowed down, the president appearing on the rear platform and bowing his acknowledgements.

At Boston the party disembarked and entered the special which was standing on another track, the crowd in the meantime keeping up a continuous cheering. Upon arriving at Lynn carriages were in waiting to take the party to Nahant. Stretched from the depot, through the city and across the peninsular to Nahant, a distance of four miles, were fully 60,000 people, who cheered as the president passed. There were two miles of carriages on either side of the road. The president rode with Mrs. Lodge and was escorted from Lynn to Nahant by a troop of cavalry.

The arrival at Nahant was a signal for another outbreak of applause and the two places seemed to vie with each other as to which should be the more cordial in the greeting. Flags and bunting were displayed everywhere, and Nahant took on a genuine holiday appearance.

The most extraordinary precautions were taken by Senator Lodge for the president's safety. Last night the entire house was surrounded by a number of cavalry attached to the state militia. These were later replaced by a strong police guard.

Victims of Superstition

Pekin, Aug. 25.—An edict has been issued ordering the murderers of an English missionary named Lewis and an Australian missionary named Bruce to be punished. The crimes were committed in Hu-Nan province. The government expresses deep regret at the occurrence and promises to make reparation. The populace imagined the missionaries in question had caused an epidemic of cholera by poisoning drinking water.

Interesting Contest Promised

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 25.—The Republican state convention meets here today. A full state ticket will be placed in nomination. The chief fight is over the governorship. There are five prominent candidates. H. T. Gage, the present state executive, and Messrs Flint, Pardee, Hayes and Edsen. Governor Gage has the largest following, but he is thought to be much short of the requisite number.

Ladrones Attacked Constabulary

Manila, Aug. 25.—Ten members of the native constabulary were ambushed at a point near Magdalena, Luzon, by a band of 60 Ladrones, and a desperate fight at close range took place. One member of the constabulary was killed, two were wounded and three were captured. Seventy constabulary have taken the field in pursuit of the Ladrones.

Train Pitched Into Lake

Auburn, N. Y., Aug. 25.—There was a railroad wreck half a mile north of Ensenore yesterday. The baggage and smoking cars left the rails and went down an embankment into Owasco lake, where they were overturned. The passengers escaped through the windows. Four men were painfully injured.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The creditors of Randolph C. Surbridge, the Boston lawyer who suddenly disappeared in January last, are to be paid a dividend on the amount of his indebtedness after Oct. 1. This announcement is made by Surbridge's counsel. The present whereabouts of Surbridge is not generally known.

The total fresh mackerel catch of the New England fleet to date amounts to 62,777 barrels, against a catch of 46,514 barrels for the same length of time in 1901. The total catch of salt mackerel is 31,993 barrels, against 54,901 barrels in 1901.

The largest shipment of cattle ever taken across the Atlantic left Portland, Me., on the steamship Norseman. In all there were 1179 head of cattle and 1398 sheep.

Walter West, aged 23, was struck by a train at Quincy, Mass., while walking on the track and killed.

Fire at Woolsocket, R. I., destroyed a barn, burning to death 22 head of cattle owned by Walter Wilbur.

Otto Heirel, a laborer, was crushed to death under a building that was being moved at Pittsfield, Mass.

Miss Grace Lucas of Everett, Mass., who was found unconscious in a park with an empty bottle, labelled carbolic acid, by her side, died at her home.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

Referring to the large expenditures under which the city of Quincy is struggling, the Brookline Chronicle says: "The true cause is to be found in the city form of government, which has brought misfortune to the only town in Norfolk county that has adopted it. If Quincy had not turned a deaf ear to wise counsels, and had retained our venerable New England town meeting, the town would be wealthier and more prosperous today."

We challenge the Chronicle or any other newspaper to show by figures that 25 of the 368 cities and towns of Massachusetts are more prosperous than Quincy. Either in population, valuation, new voters, assessed polls, new houses, schools, fire departments, improvements generally, etc., etc. The per capita debt of Quincy is not as large as Brookline.

The withdrawal of Congressman Naphen from the field will weaken considerably the Democratic chances of success in the Tenth Congressional district. Mr. Naphen was very successful in uniting all the factions, which it is doubtful if any other candidate can do.

Many of the members of the religious orders expelled from France purpose to make their future home in the United States. Uncle Sam's domain is the first or second choice of almost everybody.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The price of hard coal rises ominously. It was nine dollars a ton in early August, and one newspaper predicts that the price will go to twelve or sixteen dollars before the winter is over. The same paper declares that even if mining should be resumed at once the present rate would be maintained. As we have pointed out before public opinion seems to have veered around and is now strongly set against the operators. If they had made a determined effort to reopen the mines and had been prevented by force, they would retain the sympathy of a large part of the public. But they have done practically nothing and their complacent inactivity, which is proving so costly to the public, has aroused adverse criticism in quarters where the cause of the employer is usually upheld, right or wrong. As one of their critics puts it: "Blowing hot one day and cold the next; announcing now that the mines will surely be opened and next that it was never intended to open them; waiting for something to turn up; getting the troups but not taking advantage of their protection; saying that they have got plenty of certificated miners one day and denying it the day after—this may be a firm and wise way of meeting a great public emergency, but it looks painfully like a timid and foolish way." It is difficult not to believe that the operators have some hidden motive for their erratic course, something that has more to do with the operations of Wall street than the operations in the coal fields. They seem to have no plan directed toward the resumption of production and they give the country no reasonable ground for hoping that it will soon be relieved from a situation that amounts almost to a national calamity.—Colliers' Weekly.

THE QUINCY CUP.

A Move to Change the Rules and Restrict Sails.

H. M. Faxon will not challenge for the Quincy cup next year says the Boston Advertiser. This was vouched for yesterday by a yachting man who is close to him, and who sailed on the Flashlight this year.

However, there will be a challenge for the cup in two years, which was the interval elapsing between the Quincy cup race this season and the race preceding. It was in 1900 that the Quincy cup was taken from its home at Quincy to Manchester in the famous race between Mr. Faxon's Hostess and the Manchester boat, the Lookout, and it was in 1902 that the Quincy club made its first effort to restore the cup.

Between now and the next cup race, two years hence, one great change will be wrought in the conditions surrounding the Quincy cup—and that is the deed of gift will be radically modified.

This sentiment is now expressed openly by members of both the Manchester and the Quincy Yacht clubs, and probably this winter a conference of Quincy and Manchester yachtsmen will be held to alter the deed. The extreme criticism which the freak boats have received this year has made an impression upon yachting men, and the move to modify the deed of gift is receiving strength continually.

Principally, the change will be in restricting the sail area which the 21-ft. boats may carry, and if the sail area is brought down to certain limits it will not be necessary to have so broad a boat or so long, at another cup race. The boats in this year's race carried enough sail for sloops of 40 ft. racing length.

The move for a change, which will eliminate such freak boats from racing another season, will be cordially seconded by yachtsmen in general, and the prospect of a change in the Quincy Cup deed of gift will be supported everywhere. It is no easy task sailing a freak boat, and with the dimensions approaching more closely those of the association, 21-ft. restricted cabin class, the boats will be somewhat normal.

Art. 1. of the declaration of trust of the Quincy cup provides:—

"Contests shall be open to yachts of any country representing any organized yacht club in good standing provided the racing length is 21 feet or less."

Art. VI. "There shall be no restrictions on sails."

It is in this article that the change is coming.

NOT A CANDIDATE.

Congressman Naphen Declines a Renomination.

Congressman Naphen of this district has written the following open letter declining a renomination for Congress this fall:

"I am not a candidate for renomination. I reached this conclusion before the adjournment of Congress and so informed some of the party leaders in Washington, and my friends.

"In deference to their wishes I did not make this decision public as they strongly urged me to reconsider the matter. I have thought it over carefully; the result, however, has been only to confirm my first determination.

"I find that the best interests of my family, and the varied matters entrusted to my care by my clients, demand my retirement from congressional life at the close of the present term, and I deem this an opportune time to so notify the voters of the district, now that the Democratic state convention has been called.

"Notwithstanding what has appeared in the public press, no one was authorized to state up to the present moment that I would not be a candidate for a third term, and nothing other than what I have stated causes me to decline a renomination.

"I emphatically deny that any agreement concerning the future has been entered into by me.

"It is true that I have said I would not make any contest in the caucuses. Two years ago I did not make any personal effort for a renomination. My friends took care of my interests, and were I a candidate this year I would pursue the same course, and I have no doubt, from assurances received, as to what the result would be. I shall support the nominee of the party.

"The district is in splendid condition to elect a Democrat to the next congress. It was represented by a Republican when I received my first nomination, and it seemed almost a hopeless effort to overcome the large Republican majority, but owing to the Democratic ward committees, who labored untiringly during my two campaigns, the majority of 4000 was overcome, and with a Democratic majority of 8000 in the last contest, the 10th district is a Democratic strongold.

"If I have in any way, by my efforts, helped to bring about this result it is at best but a small return for the honor my party has bestowed on me.

"To the Democrats of the district who supported me so loyally at the polls, and to my Republican friends also, who brushed aside party lines to show their friendship for me, I return my sincere thanks.

"I have always endeavored to work for the interest of the entire district. To represent the 10th district, with its vast commercial and industrial enterprises, is an honor that any citizen might highly prize. Though I return to my profession, I shall take an active interest in public affairs."

ANOTHER SCOOP.

One Officer Arrests Thirteen Disturbers of the Peace.

The big scoop by the officers at Houghs Neck last week was paralleled on Sunday by Officer John L. Donovan, who was on duty at Quincy Point. Complaints have frequently been made by the worshippers at the Washington Street church that their services were disturbed by barge parties. Sunday a barge party persisted in being noisy near the church after being warned by the officer. The patrol box was handy and the wagon was summoned, and soon thirteen young fellows were confined at the police station.

They were grocery clerks employed in Boston, Somerville, Cambridge, Everett, Malden and Gloucester. All were aarrnged in court.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

An Octogenarian.

Mr. Dexter Pierce of Hancock street today reaches the eightieth milestone in his life's journey. He is still in good health and works at his trade, that of a baker, being employed as foreman of the G. H. Bent & Co. Cracker factory at Milton. This factory is almost in sight of the old Bent & Co. factory which was established in 1801.

The crackers are made in the old original way, the ovens being heated the same manner, and the crackers put into the oven one at a time. During Mr. Pierce's fifty years experience he has set millions of crackers.

Mrs. Pierce, who was the daughter of Mr. Seth and Susannah Bass Burrill, and a descendant of Priscilla Alden through the Adams family, died a few years ago, but Mr. Pierce has four children and five grandchildren to comfort him.

His children are: Mrs. Clara Bell, widow of Mr. James H. Bell, who was a prominent member of several organizations and who built the bakery at South Braintree now occupied by Schrant Brothers; D. Vinton Pierce, who owns a large farm at Wilton, N. H.; Mrs. Charles White, and Mr. James Stetson Pierce, a conductor on the Old Colony street railway.

We wish Mr. Pierce another score of years of activity, pleasure and good health.

Q. Y. C. RACE.

The Eclipse and Dabchick Head the Handicap Classes.

Seventeen boats were entered in the club race of the Quincy Yacht club on Saturday, off Houghs Neck, sailed in a fresh easterly breeze. The contests were close in all the classes.

The Eclipse had a safe margin in the First class, and won by over four minutes actual time and over one minute by corrected time. The other three were closely bunched at the finish, and the handicap caused the Ida J. to drop two places.

The handicaps did not effect the Second class, the Dabchick winning by actual time and corrected time by nearly two minutes.

The Omeme and Cleopatra had it out from the start to finish and the former won by 49 seconds.

The Ethel I. won by the largest margin outsailing her rivals nearly three minutes.

It was a question of seconds in the class for launches, which was won by the Marjorie.

The summary:

The judges were: ex Commodores Saville and Pettengill and Councilman Whiton.

Dangerous Character.

George Ging held for the grand jury for breaking and entering the house of Councilman Nichols may not be guilty on that count, but he is a dangerous man to be at large, and it is unfortunate that the Fore River works attract such men to our city. He has travelled all over the country, but says he never payed a car fare. He has done time in jail more than once. He has been away from home, he says, since he was 12 years old.

THE TRUST QUESTION

Illegal Combinations Are Difficult to Deal With

SUGGESTIONS BY ROOSEVELT

Enactment by Congress of Laws Similar to Those on Statue Books of Massachusetts Would Help the People—Knox Comes In For Praise

Boston, Aug. 26.—The week's work for President Roosevelt in his trip through New England began in earnest yesterday afternoon when he departed from the summer home of Senator Lodge at Nahant, and amid the enthusiasm of the greatest number of people he has ever faced since the Pittsburg visit on July 4, rode into Lynn under cavalry escort and spoke from a platform at city hall. Then he was taken to Boston by special train and on arrival went to Symphony hall, there addressing a great gathering of Boston business men. His speech here was devoted almost entirely to consideration of the trust question. He said:

I am glad to have the chance of saying a few words to you this evening. There are several maters that I should like to discuss, and I can say in all sincerity that when I come here to New England, when I come to Boston, I like to go over as many subjects as possible so that I can get light on them. I have great faith in your judgment. I want to take up this evening the general question of our economic and social relations with specific reference to that problem with which I think our people are now greatly concerning themselves—the problem of our complex social condition as intensified by the existence of the great corporations which we rather loosely designate as trusts.

But I wish to say one or two things as preliminary. In the first place I have not come here to say that I have discovered a patent cureall for the trusts. When people's minds are greatly agitated on any subject, and especially when they feel deeply, but rather vaguely, that conditions are not right it is far pleasanter in addressing them to be indifferent as to what you promise, but it is much less pleasant afterwards.

Of course the worth of a promise consists purely in the way in which the performance squares with it. That has got two sides to it. In the first place if a man is honest he will try just as hard to keep a promise made on the stump as one made off the stump. In the second place, if the people keep their heads they won't wish promises to be made which are impossible of performance. Now you see that one side of that question is my duty and the other side is yours. Mankind goes ahead but slowly and it goes ahead mostly through each of the majority of us trying to do the best that is in him and doing it in the most inteligent and sanest way.

When we come to the question of good citzenship the first requisite is that the man shall do the homely, everyday, humdrum duties well. But he must do more than that. In this country of ours the average citizen has got to devote a good deal of thought and time to the affairs of the state as a whole or those affairs are going to go backwards. It is of no possible use to decline to go through all the ordinary duties of citizenship for a long space of time and then suddenly get up and feel angry about something or somebody not clearly defined in one's mind, and demand reform as if it was a concrete substance and could be handed out forthwith.

Now this is a preliminary to what I want to say to you about the whole question of corporations as affecting the public. There are very many and very difficult problems with which we are faced as one of the results of the forces which, taken all together, we speak of as progress. It is worse than useless for any of us to rail at or regret the great growth in industrial civilization of the last half-century. Boston and the thriving cities of Masachusetts have been built up as a result of those forces. There is but little use in regretting that things have not shaped themselves differently. The practical thing to do is to face the conditions as they are and see if we cannot get the best there is in them out of them.

We are not going to get any complete or perfect solution for all of the evils which come to our minds when we think of the trust by any single action on our part. A good many actions in a good many different ways will be required before we get many of those evils even partially remedied. We have got to first of all think clearly. We have got to probably experiment somewhat. We must above all show by our actions that our interest is permanent and not spasmodic, and we have got to see that all the steps are taken toward the solution.

I am inclined to think that much the greatest trouble in any immediate handling of the question of the trusts comes from our system of government. Let me go back one moment. I want you to understand that my words are being taken at their exact face value. Remember, I am not saying that even if we had all the power we could completely solve the trust question. Gentlemen, if what we read in the papers is true they are speaking of a number of international trusts now. It would be very difficult for any set of laws on our part to deal completely with a problem which becomes international in its bearings, but a great deal can be done in various ways now.

When this government was founded there were no great individual or corporate fortunes, and commerce and industry were being carried on very much as they had been from the days when Nineveh and Babylon stood in the Mesopotamian valley. They were easy to control. Now, however, the exact reverse is the case, and remember I say "corporations." I do not say merely trusts, merely combinations of corporations or corporations under certain peculiar conditions

For instance, some time ago the attorney general took action against a certain trust. There has been considerable discussion as to whether the trust aimed at would not seek to get out from under the law by becoming a single corporation. Now I want laws to enable us to deal with it no matter what shape it takes. I want to see the government able to get at it definitely, so that the action of the government cannot be evaded by any turning within or without federal or state statutes. At present we have really no efficient control over a big corporation which does business in more than one state. Frequently the corporation has nothing whatever to do with the state in which it is incorporated except to get incorporated, and its actions may be taken in entirely different communities, communities which may object very much to the methods of incorporation in the state named.

At present if we pass laws nobody can tell whether they will amount to anything. Now that has two bad effects. In the first place the corporation becomes indifferent to the law-making body, and, in the next place, the law-making body gets into that most pernicious custom of passing a law not with reference to what will be done under it, but with reference to its effects upon the opinions of the voters. Now that is a bad thing. What I hope to see is power given to the national legislature which shall make the control real.

Here in Massachusetts you have what I regard as, on the whole, excellent corporation laws. I think that most of our difficulties would be in a fair way of solution if we had the power to put upon the national statute books and did put on them laws for the nation much like those you have here on the subject of corporations in Massachusetts. If we can get adequate control by the nation of these great corporations then we can pass legislation which will give us the power of regulation and supervision over them. The first thing we want is the publicity and I don't mean publicity as a favor by some corporations. I mean it as a right from all corporations affected by the law. I want publicity as to the essential facts in which the public has an interest. I want the knowledge given to the accredited representatives of the people of facts upon which those representatives can, if they see fit, base their actions later. The publicity itself would cure many evils. The light of day is a great deterrent to wrong doing.

Some of these things I have said can be done now. A good deal is being done now. As far as the anti-trust laws go they will be enforced. Every suit that is undertaken will be begun because the great lawyer and upright man whom we are so fortunate as to have as attorney general, Mr. Knox, believes that there is a violation of the law which we can get at, and when the suit is undertaken it won't be compromised excepting on the basis that the government wins. Of course, gentlemen, no laws amount to anything unless they are administered honestly and fearlessly. You have got to have the administration before the laws amount to that. (snapping his finger.) Then I believe it is possible to frame national legislation which shall give us more power than we now have, at any rate over corporations doing an interstate business.

I think we have got to make up our minds to the fact that if it proves on effort that we cannot under the constitution as it is give the national administration sufficient power in dealing with these great corporations, then no matter what our reverence to the past may be our duty to the present and to the future will force us to see that more power is conferred upon the national administration. And when the power has been conferred then it will rest with the national government to exercise it.

And finally, men and women of New England, I ask you to remember that after all that has been done that can be done by government action it will still mean that what has been done is not to make everything smooth for each man, but simply to give a better opportunity for each man to work out his own future on good terms for himself. After those laws have been enacted after they have been enforced it will remain true that the fundamental factor in each man's success in life must be that man's own character, the total sum of the qualities of truthfulness, earnestness, energy, thrift and business ability on his part.

This state cannot carry anyone. The state cannot do as much for you as you can do for it. Under no circumstances will it be possible by law to shape convictions so that each man shall succeed. If the man has not got in him the stuff out of which he can work success, the state cannot supply it. What can be done by the state, by the nation, is to make the conditions such that each man shall be able under the best circumstances, with everything most favorable to him, to work out his fate for himself. If under those circumstances he fails, I am sorry for him. I will help him as far as possible. I will lift him up if he stumbles, but I won't try to carry him, for that is neither helping him nor helping me.

SAM SMALL COLLAPSES

Just as He Was About to Address a Big Rally at Brattleboro

Brattleboro, Vt., Aug. 26.—The most sensational incident in the present state campaign occurred here last night when a monster rally in the interest of Percival W. Clement, high license and local option candidate for governor, came abruptly to an end by reason of the collapse of Rev. Sam Small, the Georgia evangelist, the chief speaker.

The Auditorium was crowded with men from all parts of the county, the rally having been preceded by a torchlight parade. The rally opened in the usual style and Rev. Mr. Small was introduced. He made incoherent remarks and was led from the platform, collapsing as he reached the floor of the hall. Physicians could not make any explicit explanation of Small's condition. While he was being led from the stage he was vigorously jeered and many people left the hall. He himself is unable to explain his condition. He spoke at a Clement rally in Putney in the afternoon and arrived here at 7:30 last evening, when he at once went to the Auditorium to deliver his evening address.

A Vanderbilt Entertainment

Newport, R. I., Aug. 26.—One of the most unique entertainments of the season was given last evening at Beaulieu, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., where in a specially constructed theatre Lederer's Wild Rose was produced. The entire theatrical company was brought over from New York and the play was given under conditions as nearly as possible like those of the regular theatre. Before reaching the theatre proper Mrs. Vanderbilt's guests passed through a midway along which were arranged all the well known side shows by professional fakirs. At the conclusion of the play the entire theatre was cleared and at once brilliantly illuminated for dancing, which followed.

A MYSTERIOUS FIRE

Which Officials Deem Worthy of a Searching Investigation

Boston, Aug. 26.—The fire marshal's department of the state police today begun an investigation into the most mysterious fire that ever occurred in Boston. Last Friday night fire destroyed the entire stock of the American Decorating company at 68 and 70 Pearl street, causing a loss of $6000 to stored wall paper and damaging goods owned by the firm of Sartwell, Heinold & Humphrey, harness dealers, to the extent of $6000 to $7000. The goods were on the fifth and sixth floors of the building. No alarm was turned in, not an ounce of water placed on the fire and no records appear on the fire department books. The fire, after doing an immense amount of damage, finally smouldered itself out.

The occurrence, according to the fire department officials and men from the office of the fire marshal, declared such a fire to be impossible, but when confronted with the facts were obliged to change their opinion. Investigation has failed to explain the occurrence and yesterday summons were served upon the officials and employes of the American Decorating company to appear and give their evidence that the mystery may be cleared up if possible.

An examination has resulted in the theory that the fire, after exhausting the oxygen in the air and being unable to force its way through the partitions, finally died out.

Troops to Protect Non-Unionists

Tamaqua, Pa., Aug. 26.—A portion of the First battalion of the Twelfth regiment stationed here will be moved into Lansford today to protect non-union men on their way to work. Joseph King, a non-union men, went to Lansford last night and swore out a warrant for the arrest of a dozen strikers who, he alleges, threw a lariat over him while he was on his way to work and held him a prisoner until he was rescued by the coal and iron police. With one exception all the men arrested are foreigners.

Botha to Succeed Kruger

London, Aug. 26.—The Brussels correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says he hears that as a result of the conferences between former President Kruger and the Boer generals, De Wet, Botha and Delarey, Mr. Kruger is to resign the leadership of the Boer people. General Botha, adds the correspondent, was unanimously designated future leader of the Boers.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

THE DEADLY PARALLEL.

Quincy Libelled by Brookline But Nevertheless in a Prosperous Condition.

FALSE FIGURES.

The City of Quincy Roasted by Brookline Chronicle.

The Brookline Chronicle of Aug. 16 published the following editorial which is a gross libel on the City of Quincy under the caption—"A City Living Beyond Its Means." The roast is republished in full that Quincy people may not be in ignorance of the bouquets that are being thrown at them, and that we may comment thereon.

"One of the public-spirited citizens of Quincy, Mr. Henry H. Faxon, has revealed an astonishing condition of affairs in that city. From 1885 to 1901 the population of Quincy has merely doubled, but the expenditures have increased six-fold, and last year they were about six percent of the assessed valuation. Quincy, in fact, is involved in an indebtedness out of all proportion to its resources, and is on the verge of insolvency. As an illustration of the advantages of the city over the town form of government, the example of Quincy is certainly not edifying.

"Nothing could be clearer, as Mr. Faxon observes, than that the affairs of Quincy have too much been managed by men of the sort 'who are not capable of running a peanut stand without getting financially involved.' The City Council of Quincy has diligently fostered extravagance, with an energy which in more populous cities might excite awe and amazement. The limits of the resources of the city have been complacently ignored, and the statutory restrictions on municipal indebtedness have been wantonly disregarded. How Quincy ranks in relation to other cities and towns in the metropolitan district may be seen by the following:

METROPOLITAN MUNICIPALTIES.

Arranged on the basis of per capita Valuation, 1902.

1—Exceeding $3,500.
Brookline.
Nahant.

2—$1,500 to $3,500.

Boston,	Cohasset,
Newton,	Milton,
Weston,	Hull.

3—$1,000 to $1,500.

Cambridge,	Swampscott,
Dedham,	Arlington,
Wellesley,	Canton,
Belmont,	Winthrop,
Watertown,	Winchester,
Medford.

4—$900 to $1,000.

Melrose,	Revere,
Westwood.

5—$800 to $900.

Malden,	Braintree,
Waltham,	Lynn,
Somerville,	Needham,
Stoneham,	Wakefield.

6—$700 to $800.

Quincy,	Woburn,
Hyde Park,	Hingham.

7—$600 to $700.

Weymouth,	Chelsea,
Everett,	Saugus.

Though Quincy may thus be seen to rank very low in valuation, being one of the eight poorest municipalities within ten miles radius from the State House, yet it spends per capita (valuation) as much for its schools as Boston, more for its streets than Cambridge, and nearly as much for its fire department as Newton. Quincy's population being 25,000, or only a little larger than that of Brookline, and its valuation about one-quarter as much, the expenditures should be somewhere near one-quarter of those of Brookline. But note the following comparisons:

EXPENDITURES, 1901.

	Brookline.	Quincy.
Fire Department,	$66,681.45	$42,078.81
Streets,	80,644.07	71,098.57
Sidewalks,	14,995.64	13,022.00
Sewers,	60,764.45	62,276.71
Water,	51,500.91	54,441.10
Schools,	253,082.85	132,480.64
Printing, etc.,	3,303.45	3,793.26
Interest on Debt,	53,917.74	64,895.49

"Can it be that Quincy has been seized with a foolish desire to emulate the example of its more favored neighbors? Has it determined to live up to the scale of expenditure of the nearby towns of Dedham, Milton, and Canton, which it cannot afford? Certainly the example of neighboring municipalities may de partly responsible for an expenditure of $1,097,710.59, in 1901, for a city of an assessed valuation of about $20,000,000. But the true cause is to found in the city form of government, which has brought misfortune to the only town in Norfolk county that has adopted it. If Quincy had not turned a deaf ear to wise counsels, and had retained our venerable New England town meeting, the town would be wealthier and more prosperous today.

GROWING WEALTHY.

People of Quincy Richer Per Capita Than Under Town.

The Chronicle's arrangement of municipalities according to per capita valuation is unique, but even then Quincy belongs in a higher class than it has been placed. The following official figures show the population and valuation, being taken from the "Manual for the General Court:

POPULATION.

Population in 1885,	12,145
Population in 1890,	16,723
Population in 1895,	20,712
Population in 1900,	23,899
Gain in 15 years,	11,752

VALUATION.

Valuation in 1886,	$8,926,734
Valuation in 1889,	10,258,618
Valuation in 1892,	14,821,079
Valuation in 1895,	17,487,205
Valuation in 1898,	18,945,036
Valuation in 1901,	20,956,671
Gain in 15 years,	12,027,937
Gain in 12 years,	10,698,053

While the population of Quincy did not double in the fifteen years from 1885 to 1900, the valuation more than doubled in that time; in fact it doubled between 1889 and 1901. In the table below the population is estimated, except in 1895, but the census figures above were an accurate basis. Quincy inaugurated its city government in Jan. 1889, and it will be noticed that under the last three years of the town government the per capita valuation was reduced. Under the city government it has steadily increased and last year was higher than ever, and about 33 per cent. more than during the first year of the city government:

PER CAPITA VALUATION.

In 1886, (Pop 13,000)	$686
In 1889, (Pop. 16,000)	641
In 1892. (Pop. 18,000)	823
In 1895, (Pop. 20,712)	844
In 1898, (Pop. 22,500)	842
In 1901, (Pop. 24,500)	855

Quincy's per capita valuation being $855, the city belongs in a higher class than the Chronicle placed us. Perhaps other figures of the Chronicle may have placed some towns too high. But who will admit that Nahant is more prosperous than Quincy? No one! That Weston, Cohasset and Hull are more prosperous? That Dedham, Wellesley, Canton and other towns are more prosperous? Not many!

It must be admitted that Quincy is not a rich man's paradise, but it is not always the rich who make the most desirable citizens. We ask no favors of the State, but may sometime obtain justice. It is an injustice to tax personal property where a person resides rather than where it is invested. The latter furnishes the plant with fire and police protection, builds streets to support its heavy teaming, and provides and maintains schools to educate children of its operatives. This is why Quincy and manufacturing cities are not so wealthy per capita as Brookline, Nahant, Milton, Cohasset and Wellesley, but if we are willing to pay a higher tax rate it ill becomes the rich towns to say we are bankrupt. It is not for the rich man to say that the child of the poor man shall not have as good an education as his child.

The report of the State Board of Education gives the cost per pupil for education in Quincy, according to the average daily attendance as $22.84. In the State, $29.00. While Quincy is one of the first 25 in the state in valuation and population it ranks 153 in amount of money appropriated for schools per child, and 155 in percentage of valuation appropriated to public schools.

Brookline with half the number of pupils appropriates twice as much.

The average daily attendance at the public schools of Brookline in 1900—1901 was 2,742 and in Quincy 4,403. The amount raised and expended for each child in the average attendance was: Brookline, $49.08; Quincy, $21.57. Brookline raised $147,242.39 for 2,742 pupils, while Quincy was forced to economize and raised but $101,500.00 for 4,403 pupils. And yet Brookline says Quincy is extravagant.

The mistake of H. H. Faxon and the Chronicle is in the figures given as Quincy's expenditures. The total, for instance, includes $300,000 paid for money borrowed in anticipation of taxes, also cash on hand, State and county taxes, Metropolitan assessments, etc., etc.

Mr. Faxon in his comparison added to the department appropriations all special appropriations which he thought belonged there. He did not distinguish between current expenses met by taxation and permanent improvements provided for by loan. If land was bought for a school house, fire station or public building, the expense was added to the department expenses that year. It was the same if a new building was authorized. If a street was widened and rebuilt it made no difference it was called an expense of the Street Department for the year.

GROWING WEALTHY.

Where Mr. Faxon gives the expense of the School department as $132,480.64 it was according to the annual appropriations and City Treasurer's report but $109,196.62 and this including repairs of building as well as salaries, transportation, fuel, care, books and supplies. It does not include about $14,000 on account of the new Cranch schoolhouse and lot, or about $3500 for installing plumbing in three schoolhouses, or about $7000 for Washington school lot, etc.

Mr. Faxon gives the expense of the Street Department as $71,098,57, but the annual appropriations and report of the City Treasurer places it at less than $25,000. Special appropriations like Copeland street widening and claims, Coddington street claims, Quarry street paving, widening Coddington and Sea streets, etc., should not be added as a current expense of the department.

We doubt if the Chronicle in its comparisons added special appropriations to its department expenses. No comparison of current expenses can be made where this is done.

The claim that Quincy is living beyond her means is undoubtedly true, and the same may be said of Brookline and almost every city and town. Quincy needs a city government of business men who are tax payers; a City Council which will consider each appropriation on its merits; Councilmen who will not enter into deals; Councilmen who will not try to get all the appropriations through that they can; Councilmen who will take a firm stand for economy.

CITY BREVITIES.

Mrs. Frank E. Hall moves this week to Worcester.

Walter McKenzie has returned from Alton Bay, N. H.

The office of the Superintendent of Schools has been reopened.

Supt. Parlin of the public schools has returned from his vacation.

The public schools will reopen Monday, Sept. 8, with many new teachers.

Quincy now has mails from Boston practically every hour from 6 A. M. to 8 P. M.

Miss Lucy M. Hallowell returned on Saturday, having passed her vacation at Mt. Vernon, N. H., and Portland, Maine.

Miss Mary M. Souther of Edison street has accepted a position in the Wilimantic (Connecticut) Normal school.

Mrs. Frank F. Prescott was called to Hooksett, N. H., today by the death of her uncle. She was accompanied by her son Carl.

After a number of years of faithful service, John Newcomb, the obliging salesman, has severed his connection with G. W. Jones, gents furnishing goods.

Mrs. Charles French and Miss Annie French have returned from a visit to Cottage City and are now at Houghs Neck attending Henry W. French who is at his summer cottage ill with malaria.

These are especially dahlia days. The variety in shape and color is great. Mr. Charles Sampson has some exceptionally rare kinds. Mrs. E. C. Butler has the pond lily and cactus varieties and these are only two of the many gardens where the passers by may pause to enjoy an old time favorite.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

A FALLING OUT.

J. M. Fisher Warns Bath People Concerning F. E. Betts.

A dispatch from Bath, Me., to the Boston Herald, under date of Aug. 25, says:

"When news reached this city last fall of the sudden termination of the banking business of J. M. Fisher & Co., of Boston, a score of Bath people uttered deep groans, as they had made heavy investments, while all chances of getting their money back seemed slight. Fred E. Betts, who seemed to play the leading part in the firm's business, is well known in this city, and has been entertained by his friends to no little extent.

"This summer he has been here frequently, and is said to have been trying to interest people in a new investment scheme.

"When J. M. Fisher arrived in town yesterday and proposed to call a meeting of some of the creditors to talk matters over, the idea seemed very pleasing. The meeting was held in a Front street office today, and six or eight of the heaviest creditors were in attendance.

"Mr. Fisher did most of the talking and explained the situation by saying that he had heard that Betts was trying to interest Bath people in another scheme, and he wanted to do all in his power to prevent him. He also wanted the Bath creditors to put in a claim in a suit now in progress in the courts, brought in the name of Addie R. Keller, to have a receiver appointed for some funds alleged to be in the possession of Betts. The claim is made, as a reason for the petition, that Betts is dissipating the funds which rightfully belong to others.

"Fisher told of his own connection with the concern, saying that he had received a salary of $20 a week, which had sometimes been increased to $40. He had thought the business had been conducted honestly, but later became suspicions, but was unable to get out, for he feared he would lose all that he had invested in the concern. For several months he had been devoting himself to securing testimony which he hopes will aid him in the recovery of funds invested not only by himself, but his aunt, Addie R. Keller, and other relatives.

"He read affidavits relating to the business from George F. Adams, president of the Cobb-Everett Investment Company; Frederick R. Harwood of Worcester; William E. Hingston, a Boston auditor; James A. Terrel of Boston; Julia A. Farrell of Dorchester, Mary A. Kelliher, Arthur F. Dow of Somerville, Hattie May Jackson of Roxbury, and Frank Henry Hayes, paying teller of the Federal Trust Company.

"The Bath creditors are undecided what to do."

BLACK SEA BASS.

Both Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Kendall Successful in Landing Them.

California papers report some remarkable fishing in California by Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic.

One paper says: Dr. W. G. Kendall of Quincy, Mass., vice president of one of the largest angling clubs in America, had his first experience with the black sea bass of the Pacific yesterday, (July 19.) He was out with the Nellie B., when he reeled in one of those monsters weighing 270 pounds. The doctor is not accustomed to spending an hour and forty-five minutes in landing a single fish, but concluded when the big fellow was safely landed that the game paid for the trouble.

The marvel of taking these great fish with rod and reel is only partly realized when one sees the slight rod and mere thread of a line, a thousand feet of which is wound in the compass of a reel. The line is a twenty-four thread Cuttyhunk with a lifting capacity of 48 pounds, which is no larger than the wrapping twine used in stores for tying up packages. The rod does not exceed sixteen ounces in weight, and yet these great fish, weighing a fifth of a ton, are taken with it. The more one studies the problem the greater becomes the wonder at the performance. Mr. Kendall will have his huge fish mounted.

Another paper says: "An event in angling circles was the taking off Catalina of the first black sea bass for this season by a woman, Mrs. W. G. Kendall, wife of Dr. Kendall, of Quincy, Mass., who is spending the summer here, is the fortunate angler. The doctor and his wife are both ardent sportsman and anglers, and Mrs. Kendall demonstrated that she is thoroughly up to date in handling a rod, as she brought her fish to gaff in 37 1-2 minutes. It weighed 145 1-2 pounds. She was out with Jim Gardener.

A photograph of Dr. Kendall's fish may be seen at the Ledger office. The doctor writes: My launch with four men in it was towed several miles out to sea, while I was fighting the monster with all my muscle. It was considered a sufficent feat for the people on the island to denude the fish's body of the scales as mementoes.

—Reuben P. Collins, roadmaster of the Plymouth division of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. is dead.

A MAN CAN'T swim in shackles. It isn't a question of his winning a race, but a question of being able only to keep afloat. The man who is suffering from malnutrition is like the fettered swimmer. His stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition are diseased. It is not a question with him of winning in the race for business but of simply keeping up under any circumstances.

Whenever disease affects the stomach it is affecting also the blood and the health of every organ of the body. For blood is only food converted into nutrition and nutrition is the life of the body and every organ of it.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It purifies the blood and enables the perfect nutrition of the body which means perfect health.

"For six long years I suffered with indigestion and my liver and kidneys, which baffled the best doctors in our country," writes E. L. Ransell, Esq., of Woolsey, Prince William Co., Va. "I suffered with my stomach and back for a long time, and after taking a 'cart-load' of medicine from three doctors I grew so bad I could hardly do a day's work. Would have death-like pains in the side, and blind spells. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' Before I had taken half of the second bottle I began to feel relieved. I got six more bottles and used them, and am happy to say I owe my life to Dr. Pierce."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

The Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 large pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

QUARTER OF A MILLION

People Honored the President During Yesterday's Journey

REED RULE IN CONGRESS

Comes In For High Praise In a Speech at Portland—Work of Everyday Citizenship Essential to the Progress and Greatness of Our Nation

Augusta, Me., Aug. 27.—President Roosevelt yesterday passed through three states, delivered eight speeches and received the plaudits of 250,000 people. The greeting which has marked his progress through New England has been flattering in the extreme, and yesterday's experience demonstrated his popularity perhaps more than ever before. Everywhere at the regular stops and the smaller stations along the road the people were frantic in their efforts to catch a glimpse of him or to hear him speak and at Haverhill, Mass., this desire assumed such a form that the crowds completely overrode the police and surrounded the president's carriage, making it difficult for it to advance.

The day's journey was not without its incidents. As the president was about to board his car at South Lawrence, Mass., after delivering his address, the leader of the band stepped up and made himself known to him. He said his name was Banan, a former cow-puncher and barber at Medora, N. D., where the president's ranch is located. The president immediately recognized him and greeted him as an old friend.

While on his way through the streets of Portland his carriage was stopped and he was presented with an album containing views of the city. He stood up in his carriage and briefly thanked the donor. He has been the receipient of many floral gifts, and where the admirers were unable to get near enough personally to hand them to him, they threw them over the heads of the crowd into his carriage.

Among those who boarded the train at Old Orchard to extend a welcome to the president was Congressman Littlefield. His visit was brief, and the conversation turned on other subjects than trusts. When Danville Junction was reached the president was greeted by Postmaster General and Mrs. Payne, Mrs. Garret A. Hobart and Mrs. Charles Emory Smith. Mr. Payne accompanied the president to Lewiston.

Some stops were made which were not on the itinerary. At Lisbon, Lisbon Falls and Brunswick, Me., immense crowds gathered and the president, in response to their clamorous calls, was obliged to appear on the rear platform and say a few words.

Although the day had been a particularly hard one on him, the president gave but slight signs of fatigue. Last night he was the guest of Governor Hill, who met him at the depot and escorted him to his residence, where the president made a short address.

Although the train did not arrive at Augusta until 8:55, after the most exhaustive day of the trip, the president spoke from a platform erected near the front of the Blaine residence, a place historically associated with speeches made there by Blaine, a fact evidently appreciated by the president, who paid eloquent and touching tribute to Mr. Blaine's grand and far-seeing Americanism.

At Portland President Roosevelt was met by Mayor Boothby and was introduced to a delegation of citizens including Thomas B. Reed, Judge Putnam, Judge Hale, ex-Governor Cleaves, General Chamberlain, ex-Governor Robie and others. The president was escorted to a raised platform just outside the train shed and spoke to a crowd that filled the great square. He said:

I wish to say a word to you in recognition of a great service rendered not only to all our country but to the entire principle of Democratic government throughout the world by one of your citizens. The best institutions are no good if they won't work. I do not care how beautiful a theory is. If it won't fit in with the facts it is no good. If you build the handsomest engine and it won't go, its usefulness would be limited. Well, that is just about the way that congress had become at the time when Thomas Reed was elected speaker.

We had all the machinery but it did not work. That was the trouble and you had to find some powerful man who would disregard the storm of obloquy sure to be aroused by what he did to get it to work. Such a man was found when Tom Reed was made speaker. We may differ among ourselves as to what course government should follow, but if we possess any intelligence we must be a unit. If government cannot go on it is no government. If the legislature cannot enact laws then there is no use of misnaming it a legislative body, and if, as it is according to our principle, the majority is to rule, some method by which it can rule must be provided.

Government by the majority in congress had practically come to a stop when Mr. Reed became speaker. Mr. Reed, at the cost of infinite labor, at the cost of fiercest attack, succeeded in restoring that old principle, and now through congress we can do as well or ill according as the people demand, but at any rate we can do something. We will be that much ahead and we owe it more than to any other one man to your fellow citizen, Mr. Reed, and it is a great thing for the city, a great thing for any man to be able to feel that in some one crisis he left his mark deeply scored for good in the history of his country, and Tom Reed has the right to that feeling.

I was greeted here not only by your mayor, not only by other men standing high, but by you, general, (turning to General Chamberlain) to whom it was given, at the supreme moment of the war, to win the supreme reward of a soldier. All honor to the man, and may we keep ourselves from envying because to him came the supreme good fortune of winning the medal of honor for mighty deeds done in the mightiest battle that the 19th century saw—Gettysburg.

I see everywhere I stop—in Maine, as in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Connecticut, men who in the times that tried the nation's worth, rose level to the nation's need and offered up life gladly to the nation's altar—the men who fought in the great Civil war from '61 to '65. Now, general, and you and you (pointing) who wear the button, when you came down to the root of things in war time you had to depend upon the qualities of manhood which had made good soldiers from the days when the children of Israel marched out of Egypt down. Rifles now instead of bows then, but the man behind the rifle is more important than the rifle itself.

So with our laws. We need good laws. We need a wise administration of the law, an upright and fearless administration of the law. But the best constitution that was ever devised by the wit of man and the best laws that were vere put upon the statute books will not avail to save us if the average citizen has not in him the root of right living. The army of the Potomac could never have seen Appomatox if it had not been for the spirit that drove you from the office and the factory and the farm to take up the burden of war, and when you went to war to stay there until you saw it through. They did not conquer in war by hysterics. Doubtless you will remember that after Bull Run there were some excellent people that thought the war was over, and over the wrong way. It was not over. Three years and nine months had to elapse and then it got over the other way.

About the worst quality you can have in a soldier is hysterics or anything approaching it, and it is pretty nearly the worst quality in civil life. We need in civil life the plain, practical, everyday virtues which all of us admit in theory to be necessary when we all practice which will come mighty near making a state perfect.

There are two kinds of greatness that can be achieved. There is the greatness that comes to the man who can do what no one else can do. That is a mighty rare kind, and of course it can only be achieved by the man of special and unusual qualities. Then there is the other kind that comes to the man who does the things that everyone could do but that everyone does not do; who goes ahead and does them himself. To do that you first of all have got to school yourself to do the ordinary commonplace things.

Now, general, I was a very little time in my war; you were a long time in yours. I did not see much fighting, but I saw a lot of human nature. I recollect one young fellow who came down to join a cavalry regiment. He was filled with enthusiasm. After three days the young man came down to me and said: "Colonel, I wish to make a complaint, sir. I came down here to fight for my country and the captain has put me to work digging kitchen sinks." I asked the captain about it and he said: "Yes." The captain was a large man from New Mexico and he explained to that excellent youth that he would go on digging sinks and that when the fighting came he should have all the fighting there was, but that at present his duty was to dig kitchen sinks. In other words, he had to do the small duties that were done and thereby best fit himself to do the big duties that might loom in the future.

So it is with us in the work of everyday citizenship. I believe that this nation will rise level to any great emergency that may meet it, but it will only be because we now in our ordinary work-day life, in the times of peace, in the times when no great crisis is upon us, we school ourselves by constant pracice in the commonplace, everyday, indispensable duties, so that when the time arrives we shall show that we have learned aright the primary lessons of good citizenship.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Although the measured speed of the new battleship Maine, which had her trial trip last Saturday, was only 17.96 knots, 18 knots being her contract speed, the navy department must accept the ship. Under the terms of the contract with her builders she must be accepted if she makes over 17 knots, subject to a penalty at the rate of $25,000 for each quarter knot below 18.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, hut in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon

The summer weather of 1902 got misplaced somehow, but may be it is on the way now. This is the time for out of door living and for curing the colds and rheumatism which come with the prolonged wet weather. The clear air should bring health to many who return from vacation outings with illnesses. Home is good enough in summer days and going away not always a gain. The evenings are exceptionally clear and favorable for star gazing. One of the most conspicuous constellations for a novice to find, is the northern crown, a semi-circle of stars, compact and nearly overhead, and to the west. Last evening the magic brilliancy of the evening planet was exceptional in our latitude.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ President Roosevelt's speech on trusts, although it contains nothing really new, acquires new character and increased force when spoken by the President of the United States. It is a matter of consequence, too, that Mr. Roosevelt's words are not spoken today in order to be forgotten tomorrow. Moreover, they do not say, "Good Lord, good devil." They compel the Republican party either to adopt an aggressive policy toward trusts and industrial monopolies, or to confess itself unable to deal with the most momentous question of domestic policy, and therefore unfit longer to govern the country.—New York Evening Post.

☞ The projecting of consolidations has afforded chances for the accumulation of immense fortunes, but it has not proved helpful to the general condition of the people. Commodities they control have been materially advanced. Since consolidation has invested each trust with semi-monopolistic privileges, it has thereby placed in all their hands the possibilty of gradually advancing prices. They have ungenerously exercised this power. So obvious in their influence that the people are crying against the exacting practices of "the trusts." The latter are charged with wringing earnings on their heavy capitalization out of the pockets of the masses.

Consolidations may be beneficial to the engineers of such projects, but there are others to be considered besides these engineers. No policy can be suffered to continue which is injurious to the majority, it matters not how valuable it may be to a minority. If, then, the consolidation idea is found to be working a serious damage to the people at large, it should be checked and curbed. This will be but common justice, despite the protests of the trust champions. The country has already experienced enough to know what consolidations will do. There are other consolidations of even more gigantic proportions now in contemplation. It behooves he Government, therefore, to take such steps and to make such modifications in existing laws as will prevent the consolidated corporations from further increasing the burden of the masses.—Baltimore American.

COAL AND WOOD.

Dr. Hunting for the sub-committee reported that only one bid had been received in response to the call for proposals for coal. The proposal of J. F. Sheppard & Sons to supply 275 tons of hard coal at $9, and 202 tons of soft coal at $5, was accepted.

This is only one-third of a year's supply which is generally contracted for in the summer. It is calculated that it will carry the schools until the Christmas holidays.

The proposal of O'Brien & Sons to furnish wood was accepted.

A Walkover.

Only one of the contestants for the great Johnson—Brooks foot race appeared on the scene Tuesday evening. He walked over the course alone, but declined the purse. He, however, accepted the gift of a gold mounted revolver presented by the Ramblers.

Later in the evening a friend of the missing contestant appeared with a doctor's certificate, stating that it would be positively dangerous for him to exert himself.

Picnic of the Clans.

The annual picnic of the clans of Massachusetts will be held as usual at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, on Labor Day, Sept. 1, and weather permitting the big grove will be filled, as it is always the gala day of the year for Scotchmen and friends.

In the morning the parade headed by the Quincy City Band and pipers, will leave the corner of Washington and Kneeland streets, Boston, at 9 A. M., and by a route arranged proceed to the Union station.

The entries already made show that keen competition will prevail in the sports. In the heavy weight class Gill, Powers, Mahoney and Gideon Perri, will contest. The 100 yards will be a hot pace set by Keane, Hobbs, March and others, and the splendid performance in the sack race by Ross of Quincy will be a feature, as Ross holds the championship of New England. The one mile handicaps have drawn large entries, and Thos. Buchan of Hyde Park has been busy allotting positions to the various runners.

FRANCIS MORRISON.
Quincy Man Clerk of the Ring.

Such men as Pollard, McDonald, Guenther, and others will make a hard contest in both running and jumping. The five-mile race with $175 as prize money, will no doubt be looked after by Kanaly, Williams, Tincler and Sullivan. Kanaly, a new star, has shown great speed and it is to be hoped he will keep it up.

Quincy has in training a team for the tug of war and no doubt will make a hard pull to regain the laurels lost last year.

Altogether $1200 will be awarded in cash prizes. The sports will be conducted under the direction of Thomas Johnston, assisted by Alex. W. Russell, while entries may be made to Francis Morrison, clerk of the ring, Quincy.

Obituary.

Mrs. Mary Johnson Ellis, who died last week, was born in Sanbornton, N. H. in 1826, the sixth of a family of fourteen children. Was married in Quincy to Hosea B. Ellis and lived for many years at their fine residence on Penns hill. She was a true and loving wife and mother, and will be kindly remembered by her many friends. She became interested in Spiritualism many years ago, and passed to the spirit land well prepared for her new life. Appropriate services were held at her late residence on Gay street conducted by Rev. E. C. Butler of the First church, assisted by Mrs. Carrie Loring of East Braintree, who gave a fine tribute to the memory of her friend of many years. Music was ably rendered by Mr. A. W. Turner of Boston. The selections were "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" and "Eternity." Many flowers were sent by friends. Her daughters have the sympathy of their many friends.

ALL FINED.

One Found Guilty and Others Plead Nolo

For Disturbance at Quincy Point.

All Were Arrested Sunday by Officer Donovan.

When the continued cases of the disturbers of the peace at Quincy Point on Sunday was called in court this morning, they were defended by Lawyer Moran. He elected that only one of the defendents should be tried at a time, and the case of Michael Barry was heard. Officer Donovan who arrested all thirteen was the first witness and testified to the disturbance and to warning the occupants of the barge; a bugle was blown and there was hollering, etc.

Lawyer Moran cross questioned and ridiculed the witness at length. He endeavored to confine the evidence solely to Barry and first asked Officer to describe Barry. Then he inquired about the different barges; how many, how many horses, how many in the barges, etc.

The officer testified that after the barge turned into South street they shouted to him to "pull in the box and give us a ride," etc. That all contributed to the commotion. That he saw Berry's mouth open. Ran after barge and ordered driver to stop which he did. Requested driver to turn barge and return to box. Said street was too narrow. Had men get out and walk back to box, and all were taken in patrol wagon to station. Had revolver in hand after I stopped barge.

Arthur W. Newcomb and T. B. Pollard who were attending services in the church testified to the services being disturbed by hollering.

A. M. McCurdy and Charles W. Bushnell testified to seeing barges on Washington street, and knew the officer warned them.

Inspector McKay testified that Barry was one of those who at the police station after arrest admitted that occupants of barge had caused disturbance, and enquired as to fine, and suggested pleading guilty.

Officer Curtin gave similar testimony.

The only witnesses for the defence were Edwin N. White the driver of the barge and the defendant, Barry. The latter admitted it was necessary to talk loud to be heard, and that a harmonica was played.

Lawyer Moran made a half hour argument holding that all were not guilty for the acts of one.

Judge Cook fined Barry $2, and allowed the other twelve defendants to plead nolo contendere when they were fined $2 each which they paid.

A Clam Farm.

A well known Old Orchard man contemplates starting a clam farm at the mouth of the Saco river.

He has become convinced that such a scheme would be a money maker from the start, and especially at this time when meat is selling at sky rocket prices. He is anxious to try the experiment and will probably make arrangements to commence the raising of bivalves by a scientific plan some time this fall.

He says he has had the matter under consideration for the past two months and it seems to offer a tempting prospect. He believes that there should be a market for clams in the large cities in the country. Clams are greatly prized by people from outside the United States. He is of the opinion that in a couple of years at the outside he could make clams as popular and as much sought for in the West as they are in the New England States today. The clams, as a general thing, that are sold in the inland cities resemble the clams dug on the coast of Maine in looks only. There is no taste to them.

It is his idea to suspend operations every summer, doing business only during the fall, winter and early spring months. His plan is to secure a strip of sea coast where there are clam flats and commence to cultivate these flats on a scientific plan of breeding. He thinks that with proper attention he can raise the finest clams in all New England, and that they would command a gilt edge price in any market.

He would ship clams to market alive, and believes that he can fix a contrivance for so doing. This man is very enthusiastic over the idea and is confident that in a short time he could build up a large wholesale business.

CITY BREVITIES.

The F. D. Fellows Co., is prepared to fit your boys with school suits.

The members of the Memorial Congregational church of Atlantic hold a picnic at Houghton's pond today. They were conveyed to the pond in barges.

Mrs. Mary J. Turner is making a short visit at her old home on Spear street, the guest of Miss Julia M. Little.

Mr. and Mrs. Newell O. Parker of Belmont street, are guests of Mrs. Frank Prendergast of Chelsea, at their summer residence, Campton, N. H.

Mrs. Craigie Richards, the famous English auther, who is more popularly known by the pen name of John Oliver Hobbes, is visiting relatives in this city.

Our Wollaston correspondent was treated to some fine cider at Boynton & Russell's store recently. It was of their own manufacture and he says it is all right.

Mrs. Pollock and Miss Pollock of Bigelow street have returned from Point Allerton, where they have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Brown this summer.

G. W. Davenport of the Fore River Ship and Engine company, says that if the new seven master proves a commercial success, the next increase in the number of masts in sailing vessels will be to nine.

Herbert Delorey, a carpenter, while on his way to work this morning, had a close call from getting badly hurt. While crossing Hancock street, he was thrown down by a passing team, falling under the horse. His bicycle was smashed.

JUST IN FUN.

A Wollaston Man Masquerades as a Woman.

A man masquerading as a woman called at Wollaston houses last evening requesting employment as a domestic. Although his face was blacked, his disguise was not complete, and later officer Lyons summoned the patrol wagon and he was taken to the police station.

In the court this morning Winthrop D. Baker pleaded nolo contendere and paid a fine of $3 for violating the city ordinance. He said he only meant to have a little fun.

In Collision.

Acting Chief of Police McKay had an opportunity last night to prove how dark it is via Manet avenue to Houghs Neck. He was in a buggy and came in collision with a bicyclist before they saw or heard each other. The shaft of his carriage was broken. Thereupon the officer jumped and was thrown. He injured his side and wrist. The bicyclist was helpless for a while, and his wheel was demolished. The pony driven by Mr. McKay ran a short distance. Manet is a private way and there are no lights upon it.

Quincy Market.

Quincy Market had its 76th birthday yesterday. Nearly every one calls the building Quincy market, though that is not its official title. When it was opened in 1826 it was the general wish that it should be named for Mayor Josiah Quincy, but he counselled otherwise and the silver plate in the cornerstone is marked "Faneuil Hall Market."

A few years later the hall on the second floor was officially called Quincy Hall, hence the confusion in names. When the large market was opened the stalls under Faneuil Hall were closed and the building was not used again for a market until Oct. 28, 1858, when it was reopened under the name of New Faneuil Hall Market.

TODAY'S COURT.

The following were fined $2 each for disturbing the peace at Quincy Point, Aug. 24: Patrick Looney of Boston, Michael Rahilly of Boston, Thomas McCarty of Boston, Timothy Cahill of Somerville, Thos. Caswell of Cambridge, Thomas O'Brien of Cambridge, Robert Ceswell of Boston, John Gaffney of Boston, Jeremiah O'Neill of Boston, James Higgens of Boston, Patrick Frawley of Malden, John Curtin of Everett, Michael Barry of Boston.

Dysenterv Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

FASHION HINTS.

A Charming Afternoon Toilette. The Popularity of Tucks.

A charming afternoon toilette is fashioned of cream voile of the softest quality and the preference for tucks is clearly evidenced. The waist has a deep yoke effect of horizontal tucks alternating with bands of inset black lace and below this the lace and tuck run lengthwise. A soft rosette of liberty satin ribbon is placed at the left side. The elbow sleeves are trimmed with ruffles. The same idea is followed in the skirt which falls in very graceful and artistic lines. Corticelli silk is used in the making of his costume.

For earlier spring voile and silk and wool materials are very much liked, embroidered, uni, spotted faintly or striped, in short in every form and shape and color these delicate fabrics still hold their own, the favorite color being a delicate yellowish-buff tint shading to cream. Gray is always welcomed by the sartorial powers, just now a faint shade of dove color predominating. There is another color in vogue in Paris at present which may also take here among certain esprits in coming modes. It is a very undecided shade of brown almost running to purple, a trifle heavy perhaps for wear in summer, but certainly acceptable for the variable "samples" of weather we may yet be treated to.

Boston Music Hall.

The Castle Square Theatre stock company will end its summer season at Boston Music Hall the present week, with a production of W. S. Gilbert's mythological comedy, in three acts, "Pygmalion and Galatea," thus giving a brilliant finish to the remarkably successful series of performances which has so delighted the patrons of the company during its temporary absence from the home stage. Gilbert's unique treatment of the story of the statue, and its sculptor, created a sensation in the theatrical world when first seen at the London Haymarket, in 1871, and its success, with W. H. Kendal as Pygmalion and Miss M. Robertson as Galatea, quickly made the play talked about on both sides of the Atlantic. The scene is in the studio of Pygmalion, and ancient customs and modern ideas are juggled with by the author in his usual clever way. The box office at the theatre and Music Hall Place will be open on Monday, the 25th inst., at 9 o'clock, for the sale of seats for the first week of the sixth regular fall and winter season of the Castle Square Company, which begins on Monday, Sept. 1st. There will be no change in the scale of prices. The attraction for the week beginning Monday, Sept. 1st., will be "As You Like It."

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The long and successful engagement of the Fadettes woman's orchstra at Keith's will be brought to a close at the end of the week commencing Aug. 25. Nothing in the form of music ever offered at this theatre has attracted such widespread attention, and the withdrawal of the organization will be regretted by all patrons of the house. The coming week their concert program will be made up of the most popular selections played during the past three months. In the surrounding vaudeville will appear the following: Valerie Bergere, a favorite actress, and her company, in a new comedy, "Billie's First Love;" "Whistling Tom Brown, of "A Trip to Chinatown" fame; Paul Stephens, a remarkable one-legged acrobat and equilibrist; Morton and Elliott, novel paper tearers, vocalists and harmonica players: just back from a successful European engagement, and the Meloni troupe of musicians and dancers, one of the latest Keith importations. The living pictures with several new subjects, and an entire change in the biograph views, will lend novelty to those two numbers.

QUINCY COAL.

Six Hundred Tons Being Shipped to New York.

The Herald reports that Lynn is being shorn of what little hard coal supply the city has to meet demands of Boston and New York.

The barge Bizarre is loading 600 tons at Quincy Point for New York.

—For twenty-nine years not a stick of old San Domingo mahogany has been obtainable, according to a Bath, Me., dealer in antique furniture, and, on the authority of one of our leading Bath lumbermen, there is not in all Maine a good sized white pine tree standing. The San Domingo mahogany is all scrub trees and the Maine pine scrub pine. The old-fashioned pine trees which made the fame of Maine were probably all of them from three hundred to four hundred years in obtaining their growth. This is the reason, or one reason, why old furniture made of the woods available a century ago is so much in demand and why it commands high prices. Modern mahogany is much lighter than that in the old pieces and no longer comes from San Domingo. As for the old-time pine it is now out of the market.

BILL SEWALL'S DISTINCTION

Old Guide and Hunter Dines With President and Governor—Farmers at Bangor Hear Address on What Makes a Good Citizen

Ellsworth, Me., Aug. 28.—The president's second day in the Pine Tree State was full of interest. Starting from the governor's residence at Augusta at an early hour, he was taken for a short drive about the city and at 9:30 left for Bangor, where the principal speech of the day was delivered at the fair grounds in the presence of an immense audience. Close attention was given him at Waterville, where hundreds saw and heard the first president who has visited Maine in many years. In anticipation of his coming a general holiday was declared and all business was suspended.

Just before leaving Augusta the president heard that his old guide, "Bill" Sewall, of Island Falls, Me., who had accompanied him on many hunting expeditions and who had for a time been employed on his ranch in Dakota, was at Bangor. He wired Congressman Powers at Bangor to corrall him and hold on to him until he reached that city. That the congressman carried out these instructions was fully proven when he produced the tall, raw-boned, red-whiskered hunter upon the president's arrival.

"I am glad to see you, Bill," said the president, whereupon Bill replied: "You ain't no gladder than I be."

Then it was that the president told the story of his friendship of many years with the old guide and hunter, and how, many years ago, while on a hunting trip through Maine, owing to the shortage in the meat supply, they had eaten muskrat together, which the president said was the last meal he had eaten in Maine before this trip. The president seemed to delight in the rural simplicity of the man and insisted that he should sit down to dinner with him. Bill therefore had the distinction that comes to but few of dining with the chief executive of the nation and the governor of his state at the same time. While at the fair grounds some one suggested to Sewall, who was seated on the platform with the president, that he should go to Washington and secure an appointment as postmaster, but Bill had already received this honor and said to his inquisitor: "I be postmaster already."

The platform from which the president spoke was directly in front of the grand stand, which was packed with humanity. Upon leaving the platform the president drove around the race track in response to cries from the audience that he do so.

Last night the president dined here at the home of Senator Hale, who accompanied the party from Bangor. At the depot when the train pulled in the president was escorted to a platform nearby and delivered a short address. He left at 10 o'clock for Nashua, N. H., and other points in that state, where he will speak today.

In his address at Bangor the president said:

I am glad to greet the farmers of Maine. During the century that has closed the growth of industrialism has necessarily meant that cities and towns have increased in population more rapidly than the country districts. And yet, it remains true as it has always been, that in the last resort the country districts are those in which we are surest to find the old American spirit, the old American habits of thought and ways of living. Self-help and individual initiative remain to a peculiar degree typical of life in the country, life on a farm, in a lumbering camp, on a ranch.

There has been much change, much progress, in farming and farm life. The granges and similar organizations, the farmers' institutes and all the agencies which promote intelligent cooperation and give opportunity for social and mental intellectual intercourse among the farmers, have played a large part in raising the level of life and work in the country districts. In the domain of government, the department of agriculture since its foundation has accomplished results as striking as those obtained under any other branch of the national administration.

But after all this has been said, it remains true that the countryman—the man on the farm, more than any other of our citizens today—is called upon continually to exercise the qualities which we like to think of as typical of the United States throughout its history, the qualities of rugged independence, masterful resolution and individual energy and resourcefulness. He works hard and often he lives hard but his life is passed in healthy surroundings, surroundings which tend to develop a fine type of citizenship.

The aim to set before ourselves in trying to aid one another is to give that aid under conditions which will harm no man's self respect, and which will teach the less fortunate how to help themselves, as their stronger brothers do.

The true line of cleavage lies between the good citizen and the bad citizen; and the line of cleavage may, and often does, run at right angles to that which divides the rich and the poor. The signs of virtue lie in man's capacity to care for what is outside himself. The man who lives simply, and justly and honorably, whether rich or poor, is a good citizen. Those who dream only of idleness and pleasure, who hate others and fail to recognize the duty of each man to his brother, these, be they rich or poor, are the enemies of the state.

The misuse of property is one manifestation of the same evil spirit which under changed circumstances denies the right of property because this right is in the hands of others. In a purely material civilization the bitterness of attack on another's possession is only additional proof of the extraordinary importance of being regarded as a valuable foundation on which happiness may with wisdom be built and this is mistaken for happiness itself, so that material prosperity becomes the one standard, then, alike by those who enjoy such prosperity in slothful or criminal ease and by those who in no less evil manner rail at envy, and long for it, poverty is held to be shameful and money, whether well, or illgotten, to stand for merit.

Now all this does not mean condemnation of progress. It is mere folly to try to dig up the dead past, and scant is the good that comes from asceticism and retirement from the world. But let us make sure that our progress is in the essentials as well as in the incidentals. Material prosperity without the moral lift toward righteousness means a diminished capacity for happiness and a debased character. The worth of a civilization is the worth of the man at its centre. When this man lacks moral rectitude, material progress only makes bad worse and social problems still darker and more complex.

Gage Falls of Nomination

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 28.—The most hotly contested factional fight in the history of the Republican party in California came to an end yesterday when the sixth ballot was taken in the state convention for the gubernatorial nomination. Governor Gage reached his highest vote on the fourth ballot, when 339½ votes were credited to him. When Shasta county was reached in the sixth rollcall, the Gage people began to cast their votes for Pardee and then the slide commenced. Long before San Diego county was reached Pardee's nomination was assured. Dr. Pardee made a brief address, thanking the convention and predicting success.

CUT TO WATER'S EDGE

Steamer Barely Escapes What Might Have Been Fearful Calamity

New York, Aug. 28.—In broad daylight and bright sunshine a collision occurred in New York harbor yesterday between an incoming passenger liner and an out-bound freight steamer.

Steamship Liguria, with over 1100 souls on board, was run down in the Narrows by the British steamer Peconio, bound out for ports in the Mediterranean. A succession of whistle blasts was followed by a tremendous crash and the Peconio's bow smashed into the hull of the Liguria just forward of the foremast.

The Liguria's hull was cut to the water's edge and water poured into the aperture. The Peconio, as she drifted away, scraped the hull of the Liguria and carried away the companion ladder. The bow of the Peconio on the port side was stove in and the stem turned to starboard.

On board the liner all was confusion for a few minutes, but Captain Montano restored order promptly, and forced the steerage passengers over to the starboard side in order to bring the hole cut by the Peconio above the water. This effort was so successful that very little water entered the liner.

Pilot Kramer, who brought the Liguria into port, said that the fault was all with the Peconio. The Peconio was so damaged that she returned for repairs. The Liguria, after the inspection of passengers at quarantine, proceeded to her dock.

On board the Italian liner were 21 saloon, 29 second cabin, and 965 steerage passengers. There were no casualties on board the Liguria nor on the Peconio.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, hut in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

To Let—House.

Good Afternoon

The Vermont campaign is drawing to to a close—election next Tuesday.

The papers are publishing an automobile death list. It is surprising how reckless some people will be.

Many have complimented the Daily Ledger on the stand it has taken in defence of the good name of the city of Quincy which has been unjustly maligned by Boston and Brookline papers. We do not wish to be understood as endorsing the reckless extravagance of the present administration and its successors. It is very fortunate for Quincy taxpayers that there is a limit on the amount which the city can raise for current expense, and a limit on the municipal debt. There should be a limit on the loans which may be issued in one year.

So long, however, as there are limits on the tax levy and the debt there is no danger of the city becoming bankrupt, unless the Legislature authorizes special loans, and the Metropolitan commissions are voted too much money. It may be a good thing that the debt limit has been reached. It has been quite a check on the present city administration.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The schoolhouse is not the only well defined educational force in America today, and its prestige depends upon its doing better work than any of the other forces.—Journal of Education.

☞ Talk of Anarchists! Who are doing more to break down the confidence of the public in the governments, national and state and municipal, under which we live, than men who pervert their true office from service to the public to service of the selfish interests of individuals and corporations. The men who work with their hands and wear blouses are not near so influential in making government and law unworthy of honor and support as are some men who wear broadcloth and own pews in the churches.—Boston Herald.

☞It is rather a bald statement that appears in a dispatch from Westfield in this State, stating that committee of influential professional and business men of the town made a trip to Boston and interviewed the chief of the State police, as a result of which interview a telegram was received in the town stating that the horse racing and pool selling could go on without interruption. The authorities of the town of Westfield certainly ought to be competent to look after the morals of their own town and suppress such offences against the law as may be necessary, and the State police certainly have enough on their hands without chasing after such cases as this, but it is not a very creditable statement, that a committee of men from any town, however influential, can visit the head of the State police and be promised immunity from the law of the State in any regard.—Haverill Gazette.

☞ Reports come from New Jersey that Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, the author of many charming stories, is a marked success in her new home, not only with literature as of old, but with plum-puddings, roast meats and soups. This should silence for a while the unthinking critics who claim that a woman with a career as a writer is not likely to become a desirable housekeeper. Deep as the most profound emotions of the heart of artistic woman is the desire to make nice pies and tarts and cakes and other good things, and sit down by an appreciative husband and see them disappear. The wide horizons of art outlooks can no more make a woman's soul proof against this instinct than a view of the great sea can make the child forget its desire for a playmate to pass happy hours with, creating new and wonderful things in the sands of the beach.—Transcript.

☞ The syndicate that underwrote the Steel trust scheme has already divided $30,000,000 of profits on an investment of $25,000,000. Charles M. Schwab, according to the Philadelphia Press, has sold to the ship building trust for $26,000,000 the Bethlehem Steel Works, which he recently bought for $7,500,000. When the Steel trust itself was formed, one concern after another was sold to it at enormous profits. It is current gossip that Carnegie, who got $315,000,000 for his property, had not long before valued it at $50,000,000. Now where does this "profit" come from and how does it happen that men can make such monstrous fortunes between winks of the eye? The money does not rain down. So far as there is any, it must come from somebody who has it. We have not yet seen any satisfactory explanation of who are the people whose money has gone into the bulging pockets of these multi-millionaires. So far as appears up to date, nobody has been made any poorer by these enormous transfers. But it is not in the nature of physics to draw millions out of nowhere and nothing. Somehow, or other, some day or other, it will develop that there is a mighty hole somewhere. Then there will be developed an amount of hind-sight that will be as abundant as it will be useless to those who do the hind-looking.—Hartford Courant.

BRIBE OFFERED.

Henry H. Faxon Says He Was Not Travelling That Way.

"I had an interesting talk the other evening with Henry H. Faxon, the veteran temperance agitator, says the "C. A. P." editor of the Boston Journal. "The old gentleman has retired from active service in the Prohibition field, a competent secretary performing all the exacting details in connection with the Total Abstinence Society. This interesting ardent Prohibitionist ushered me into his 'den' as he calls it, where the pamphlets on temperance, court proceedings, civil dockets and newspaper clippings are piled around his desk in perfectly methodical arrangement. He has all his business transactions, involving many lawsuits on temperance questions, filed away for 40 years back. Packed away in his mammoth desk are the proceedings of 500 lawsuits, from Civil War times to the present day.

"I have had big bribes offered me in my day, said the kindly Prohibitionist. One instance, particularly, I recall. It happened during the days when Quincy was in balance between license and no-license. I was leaving no stone unturned to wipe out the drink curse here in my native town, and eventually succeeded. During the hottest stage of the fight, a prominent rumseller of Boston (I remember it just as well as if it were yesterday; it was over at the old depot) came to me and said, Look a-here, Faxon, if you will let down out here in Quincy we will give you any political position you want and a good cash bonus to boot. I quietly remarked that I was not going to travel that road. I had no more offers."

TODAY'S COURT.

Joseph Mantia of Quincy was arraigned for threat to assault a neighbor. After a hearing the case was continued until Friday.

The case of Fred Sanborn of Holbrook for drunk came up on continuance and he was defaulted.

Child Labor.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

For a year I have been much interested in the Child Labor question in the south and have read all the articles on the subject to be found in the papers and magazines. It seems from the trend of the papers, we have an evil in the south almost as great as the slavery question, which was settled at so great a cost nearly forty years ago.

At that time it was the north which realized the evil and finally freed the slave, but now to our shame it is the north which is condemning to something worse than slavery thousands of little children and women. All through the south northern men and northern capital are operating cotton factories and employing child labor. Do the people of the north realize what this means? If you have a little boy or girl ten to twelve years old can you imagine what his life would be if put into a factory at half-past six in the morning and worked like a machine until half-past six at night and more often until half-past nine with only a half hour for meals? You fathers and mothers can you sit comfortably at home and realize the misery and suffering of these little children and not say a word to arouse the country to make proper laws for the protection of its own? Why is it allowed? Why should a wealthy man grow more wealthy, have every luxury, give to church and charity and be patted on the back and called a good fellow, when this same money is made by the human suffering of little children, even to causing their death in a few years?

People who have visited these factories say the children are puny, with hands like bird's claws and with little old faces in which there is not a spark of animation. Even when spoken to, if they answer at all, it is in a dazed kind of way, they are nothing but human machines doing their work mechanically. No schooling, no wholesome food, just to drudge from daylight until dark that some one else may enjoy the luxuries.

What a life, and it is worse than painted. Instead of degrading the south, northern capital should do missionary work, help the poor white trash to help itself in the way of schooling and honest labor, making it impossible for a father to hire out his wife and children to factories while he loafs about and spends their earnings. When the mother is forced to work there can be no home, no good food, and all for what, that the father may pocket perhaps ten dollars a week, the combined earnings of his wife and children if its family is large, while ten times that amount goes into the pockets of the capitalists.

Every day we hear of factories in the north closing and moving to the south because here they are restricted to hours of labor and rate of wages. In every case that means several hundred more children condemned to slavery.

This is a subject on which I feel keenly and if this letter will cause a few of its readers to think and perhaps study into the matter it will not be many years before the condition in the south is bettered. When people begin to think, a thing is half accomplished.

I know of several Quincy men who are interested in southern factories where exists just the conditions above mentioned and they know they exist, so I cannot hope to change their ideas by this letter, but a little seed sometimes takes root.

Quincy for Congress.

The apparent indifference of the State and City Democratic machines as to the identity of the man who is to receive the congressional nomination in the new Eleventh district is thought to have its explanation in the fact that the political leaders are waiting for the return from Europe of Hon. Josiah Quincy, when he will be asked to accept the nomination. It is expected that Mr. Quincy will accept the offer, notwithstanding the fact that before he left Boston he stated that he was not a candidate and did not want to be considered even as a possibility.—Transcript.

THE ARMY IS PREPARED

To Meet Attack on Southern New England Ports

DEFENSES NOT YET PERFECT

But Could Quickly Be Made Absolutely Invincible In Real War—Target Practice Establishes the Efficiency of the Batteries

New London, Conn., Aug. 28.—Confident of victory, the army stationed within the artillery districts of Narragansett and New London is awaiting the attack of the red fleet. Gunsare booming at all the forts within the area of defense, and searchlights are playing at night, the first to ascertain and increase the efficiency of the gunners, and the latter to train the observers to pick up promptly a suspicious object attempting to enter Newport or to pass through the entrance of Long Island sound. Major General MacArthur, commander of the department of the east, is making an inspection of the New London district. Discussing the condition of the defense, he said:

"While our defenses are not in perfect condition, they are yet in an effective state of preparedness. Before the preliminary work in connection with the maneuvers began the forts were not adequately equipped. With an unlimited amount of money, as would be available in time of impending war, and given co-operation by a force afloat, the defenses would now be absolutely invincible even if attacked by all the navies of the world. Before the maneuvers commence, therefore, results beneficial to the country and the service have been obtained."

General MacArthur has had frequent consultations since his arrival in New London with General Greely, chief signal officer; General Gillespie, chief of engineers, and General Crozier, chief of ordnance, who are also in the city. The officers have discussed and determined upon their plan of campaign and little remains to be done.

"We are not in a complete condition of preparedness," said General Greely, "but we have worked hard to put the defenses in as efficient a state as possible with the means at our disposal. We are greatly handicapped by lack of men. The signal corps is short of its legal quota, and it has been necessary to order to the New London and Narragansett districts men whose stations are in the middle west."

General Gillespie was asked whether the engineers were ready to combat the "enemy." "There they are," he said, pointing to a camp on Fisher's island within the military reservation of Fort Wright, "three companies strong. The engineers are ready to do their share of the work."

At the moment General Crozier was explaining some technical details in connection with the construction of a disappearing gun-carriage, which was being used in target practice. When he left General MacArthur, he expressed confidence that the armament would perform satisfactorily during the maneuvers.

Thus the high ranking officers of the army are satisfied that the shore defenses will not be found wanting when the attack begins. To ascertain the efficiency of the gunners of the New London district, and to fit them to make hits when the squadron dashes past the forts, General MacArthur has ordered extensive target practice.

As projectiles will not be employed in firing upon the red fleet, the board of arbitrators, who will determine the victor, will take into consideration in deciding whether or not a ship was put out of action the gunnery efficiency of the batteries. It is therefore important to each battery to make the best possible record in the present practice. The target is towed by a tug and represents a ship under way. A hit is scored if the shell falls within a battleship's length of it. The last shot fired by one of the six-inch guns yesterday fairly struck the target and destroyed it.

General Greely has consulted with Colonel Reber, who is in supreme command of the balloon detachment, and Captain Russell, who has charge of all the exterior and interior lines of electrical communications in the New London district. It had been intended to use two balloons, but difficulty was experienced in getting the machines and men to operate them, and only one will be employed. The balloon detachment, under the immediate command of Lieutenant Clifton, has arrived at Point Judith, 40 miles from New London. Rear Admiral Higginson has designs upon this balloon, and will capture it if he can. He is particularly anxious to ascertain its location. "It will be somewhere between New London and Newport," remarked a signal corps officer, "but it won't be captured or destroyed; of that you may be sure."

He instantly killed Fredericks and fatally wounded Stange. They had prepared tar and feathers, but he managed to reach his gun before they could act.

Rejected Youth Shoots Swe theart

Yonkers, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Dora Leske, 17 and pretty, was shot by her equally youthful lover, Joseph Breskovitz, yesterday at her home here. He was inflamed by the girl's rejection of his suit. The girl is now in a precarious condition. Breskovitz was arrested.

Has His Hands Full.

Evidently Mayor Bryant is giving Mr. Faxon a lively hustle, or Mr. Faxon intends to make it hot for His Honor this fall. The Boston Advertiser says:

"H. H. Faxon has decided, with some reluctance, that it will be impossible for him or his temperance bureau to take much part in the campaign on the referendum regarding the district option law in Boston this year.

"I find that my business in Quincy demands not only my time, and all my time," said Mr. Fazon, "but it will be necessary also for me to have the assistance of Miss Brown, who has been managing my Boston bureau at the legislature and elsewhere during the last two years.

"I regret that I have to take this course for I am still tremendously interested in the work which is to be done in Bosion this fall; but my first duty is to my property interests here, and it is one which cannot be neglected, especially as I feel no longer as energetic and vigorous as I did at a younger age."

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

Counterfeiting Apparatus Found

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 28.—Three Italians were arrested at Port Blanchard last night, charged with counterfeiting. Moulds and other apparatus used for coining silver dollars were found in the house occupied by the alleged counterfeiters. The accused came here from New York six months ago.

Army and Navy Pensions

Washington, Aug. 28.—The annual report of the auditor of the interior department shows that the disbursements from the appropriations for army pensions for the year ending June 30, 1902, amounted to $133,556,039. The disbursements for navy pensions for the same period amounted to $3 844 702.

Double Murder and Suicide

New York, Aug. 28.—Lizzie Otto, Arthur Campbell and Christian Gans are dead as the result of a tragedy which took place yesterday in the apartments of the woman. The woman and Campbell, it is believed, died almost instantly. Gans died last night. It is said by the police that Gans shot the woman and Campbell because he objected to the presence of the latter there. Then he fired a bullet into the base of his brain, striking the spinal cord.

FOXBORO ASYLUM.

Gov. Crane Adopts Some of the Suggestions of Senator Sprague.

Some of the credit of the reform to take place at the Foxboro asylum is due to the work of Senator Sprague, chairman this year of the joint committee of the Legislature on Public Charitable Institutions. The Boston Advertiser says editorially: It is with some satisfaction that we are able to state this morning that at last there is a good prospect for reform in the management in the state asylum for hard drinkers—an institution which is located at Foxboro in Norfolk County. The goings on at this institution have disgusted many people who have known of the farce for years. The state's money has been wasted in a good many cases. A larger element of business men has just been put on the board of trustees by Gov. Crane, and we can say if half the charges made against the Foxboro asylum by those who ought to know are anything more than mere spite talk, there is going to be a very welcome reform in the way of running that institution.

Outside of the talk about speakeasies in that neighborhood, the worst feature about the Foxboro asylum at present is that it has become a dumping ground for hopeless and irreclaimable "drunks." Men and women who could no more be reformed by the methods at Foxboro than Vanderbilt's Red Devil could be safely used by a baby as a go-cart, have been sent to Foxboro and are being sent every year —why? Simply because the families of these men and women get tired of supporting them during their frenzied bursts of intoxication and they unload their troublesome charges upon the state institution simply to get rid of the drunkards for as long a time as the state is willing to support these hopeless cases.

"Every business man will say at once that is no good way to spend the states money. It is not right that taxpayers should be obliged to chip in every year to take care of the confirmed "drunks" in Massachusetts, especially in such cases where the families of these hopeless cases can afford to care for them, but are too lazy or too unfeeling to do so. Anyway, the Foxboro institution was never established by the state with any such idea in mind.

"This thing has been said by the Advertiser more than once in the past, and it would be unnecessary to repeat it now, except for the fact that there is hope in sight at last for a clean reform. The trouble has been with some of the older members of the board of trustees, in former years. They claimed that the courts sent these "old soaks" to Foxboro and that the institution was obliged to receive them. They threw all the blame on the courts, and while they admitted that the system was wrong, they would take none of the blame themselves.

"Now as the matter of fact there is law enough to justify the trustees any time in refusing every hopeless case sent to them. The new members of the board know it, and we think the other members of the reorganized board understand it, too. There is a chance to make a good clean record for economy at Foxboro, next year, and it looks very much now as if this would be done, from the pledges we have already received. The reform is going to help the institution and that is something worth considering, even outside of the fact that it would save the state money.

The practise of sending hopeless drunkards to Foxboro and the record of such men as soon as they got out, again, naturally have combined to give the institution such a bad name with public generally that decent men and women who still have some hope of reform would rather go almost anywhere than to this Norfolk county rest cure for the black sheep of Massachusetts families. If it were understood that the Foxboro institution is no longer to be merely a dumping ground for the victims of delirium tremens and that it was to be actually a reformatory, a good many mild cases of the drink habit would willingly go there and might be cured.

Nobody objects to spending the state's money in that way. Most hopeless drunkards come eventually to be a burden on taxpayers in the almshouses of the cities or towns in this state, and if the number of hopeless drunkards in this state can be reduced, it means a saving in taxes in the long run. It would also mean that the money spent by the state could be put to the uses for which it was appropriated. Still further it would mean that at last a long and disgraceful scandal in a state institution had been brought to an end —One way for the young man to get rich is to save money. Another way is to marry a girl whose father has saved money.—Somerville Journal.

BLIND-FOLD.

Blindfold a woman and she loses all confidence in herself. Her step is slow, hesitating and uncertain. Her hands are raised to ward the imaginary blows which threaten her. When a sick woman seeks the means of health she is often like a woman blindfold. She has no confidence. She cannot tell what her effort will lead to. She turns now to this side and then to the other in uncertainty and doubt.

The sick woman who uses Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription may do so with absolute confidence. It invites open-eyed investigation. There need be no hesitation in following the hundreds of thousands of women who have found a perfect cure for womanly ills in the use of this medicine.

"Favorite Prescription" cures irregularity and dries weakening drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"With a heart full of gratitude to you for sending out over the land your wonderful medicine I send these few lines, hoping that some poor suffering women will try Dr. Pierce's medicines," writes Mrs Cora L. Root, of Greenspring Furnace, Washington Co., Maryland. "I had suffered severly from female weakness and had to be in bed a great deal of the time. Had headache, backache, and pain in left side when lying down. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and had not taken two bottles when I was able to be around again and do my work with but little pain. Can now eat anything and it never hurts me any more. Have taken seven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and one of his 'Compound Extract of Smart-Weed and several vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets.' Feeling better every day. My husband says I look better every day."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness and sick headache.

Governor's Staff as Waiters For President

REVIEWS WAR VETERANS

Says Soldiers In the Philippines Have Been Cruelly Maligned—Speaks of the Problems Before the Nation and Touches on Trust Question

Newbury, N. H., Aug. 29.—President Roosevelt arrived here at 6:30 o'clock last evening and spent the night as the guest of Secretary of State Hay, whose home is located a few miles from here along the shores of Lake Sunapee. The secretary and his daughters met the president upon his arrival and joined with the assemblage in extending him a hearty welcome. The president delivered a brief address in which he thanked the people for their greeting. He then entered Secretary Hay's launch and steamed away to the Hay home.

New Hampshire's arms were open yesterday in readiness to receive the president. Long before he was awake a committee representing the governor boarded the train. The welcome they extended to him on behalf of the state was magnified later in the day in the smaller towns through which the train passed, and at Nashua, Manchester, The Weirs and Concord, although the day was replete with the miscarriage of arrangements.

At the Weirs, where the Grand Army reunion was held, the people in the excess of their desire to accord the president a fitting reception came near to causing a crush which might have resulted disastrously. As it was the president was for a time in the midst of a howling, surging mass, and was all but carried off his feet. So inadequate were the police arrangements that the crowd had entire control of the situation, and much relief was experienced when the president, after reviewing the veterans, was escorted into the hotel for luncheon. And here again the carefully laid plans for his entertainment went astray. Luncheon was finally served through the gallantry of the governor's staff, who turned in and acted as waiters. The president's speech at the park, where the veterans were gathered, was most favorably received. He stood on a table at the extreme end of the platform and his athletic figure made him strikingly conspicuous.

A small riot was created at Concord as the train was pulling out. A number of the militiamen and citizens became involved in a mix-up and several of the latter were severely beaten with the butt end of rifles.

In crossing a bridge on the drive through Manchester the two lead horses to the presidential carriage became unmanageable, and they had to be taken out. A little farther on the whole procession was held up for a long time by a shifting freight train. The special train, however, finally started and reached The Weirs nearly on schedule time, and the president addressed the veterans at the G. A. R. encampment.

He spoke of the nation's great debt to those who fought in the Civil war and declared that the issues which separated us are dead. Continuing, he said:

Standing on the threshold of the 20th century and looking into the mists of the future, we see dark problems looming before us, for the successful settlement of which we shall need all our courage, all our kindness, all our sane common-sense. We can solve these problems aright only if we keep constantly in mind that each must work for all and all for each; that while there cannot with safety be any destruction of the power of the individual initiative, yet that each individual must have implanted in his being the sense of the common interest of all in the common good of all. In other words, we need to feel in our being the sense of brotherhood.

We have just brought to a conclusion a war in the far east which sprang up as a sequel to our short struggle with Spain. The army which has done its work so well in the Philippine islands has had a task which was small indeed compared with yours, but which nevertheless was fraught with hardship and difficulty peculiarly its own. The men have been cruelly maligned, even by some who should have known better. In any army, in the best army, and especially in an army doing its work under such wellnigh intolerable conditions as those which confronted our troops in the Philippines, there are bound to be instances of occasional wrongdoing. The temptation to retaliate for the fearful cruelties of a savage foe is very great, and now and then it has been yielded to.

There have been a few, and only a few, such instances in the Philippines, and punishment has been meted out with unflinching justice to the offenders. But the real marvel is that under such conditions there should have been so little wrongdoing. As time goes by and we get our sense of the proper proportion of things, these instances will be forgotten, but there will remain for all time new pages on the honor roll of our history because of what has been done for the nation in the Philippines. Our officers and men on the march and in battle showed themselves not unworthy of you, the men of the great war.

In discussing the industrial system at Concord the president said: The great problem that we should set before us is to keep prosperity, to render its advantages less unequal, to try to secure a greater equality of its benefits; but above all never under any circumstances to lend ourselves to the leadership of any who appeal to the baser passions of mankind, and who, because there is inequality in prosperity, would seek to substitute for that unequal prosperity community in disaster. In your state, in your great manufacturing centres—the reason that they are built up is because of the capital that has come there, mainly in corporate form. If you had never had the big captains of industry who worked as individuals or who worked in combination as corporations, you would never had that prosperity, you would not have had the material upbuilding in this community.

Evils have come through our very prosperity, but in warning against the evil let us be exceedingly careful not to war against the prosperity. It would be perfectly possible at any time to make it unpleasant for the trusts—perfectly possible to prevent big corporations from making money. They did not make any money in 1893--and neither did any one else.

Let us face the fact that there are evils. It is foolish to blink at those evils. Let us set ourselves, but temperately and with sanity, to strive to find out what the evils are and to remedy them. But above all let us resolutely refuse to use the knife in a way which will be less dangerous for the disease than for the sufferer.

There is not any more possibility of remedying all the ills, social, economic, political, of the body politic by some patent device now than there was such possibility in 1776 or in 1861. Victory then came to the men who showed the good, ordinary, sturdy common sense qualities. The men who won in the revolution and made this country take its place among the nations of the earth did it because they had in them courage, resolution, integrity, unbending will and common sense. Great, sad, patient Lincoln led us to victory from '61 to '65 because he did not trust to any mere trick or device, because he drove deep down to the heart of thousands and based his reliance on the fundamental virtues of mankind. That is the spirit we have to show in facing the problems of today. If we approach those problems in a spirit of hysteria we will fail; if we approach them in a spirit of envy and rancor and malice toward our fellows we will not only fail, but we will drag them and us in a common ruin. Shame to us if we blink the evils. Shame to us if we fear to face the problem. It is well to remember that in the long run the most unpleasant truth is a safer companion than the pleasantest falsehood.

Face the problem; realize its gravity and then approach it in a spirit, not merely of determination to solve it, but of hearty desire to solve it with justice to all, with malice to none; to solve it in a spirit of broad kindliness and charity; in a spirit that will keep us ever in mind that if we are to succeed at all it must be by each doing to the best of his capacity his own business, and yet by each remembering that in a sense he is also his brother's keeper.

Seals Not Becoming Extinct

Washington, Aug. 29.—The recent reported discovery of a new seal rookery near Aleutian islands has been brought to the attention of the state department. The report, if accurate, would go far toward sustaining the contention of the Canadian seal fishers that there has not really been any diminution of fur seal in Alaskan waters, and that what has happened has simply been an abandonment by the fur seals of their old rookeries on the Pribiloff islands.

A Fruit Trade Monopoly

Kingston, Ja., Aug. 29.—By a conclusion affected in London the United Fruit company of New Orleans and Boston has obtained a monopoly of the Jamaican fruit trade, and controls the British as well as the American fruit markets. The conclusion of this combination was announced here yesterday and the plan is creating the utmost dissatisfaction throughout the island.

Indians Will Get Relief

Washington, Aug. 29.—The commissioner of Indian affairs has received a telegram from Senator Rawlins of Utah saying that 6000 Indians on the Navajo reservation in southern Utah are starving. The secretary of the interior authorized the immediate expenditure of $3000 and relief will be sent at once. The destitution is due to a drouth.

Schwab Worked Even at Sea

London, Aug. 29.—The Havre correspondent of The Daily Express declares on the evidence of fellow passengers of Charles M. Schwab, who sailed from New York Aug. 21 on the LaLorraine, that Schwab worked extremely hard during the trip over and never gave himself five minutes leisure.

Virchow Nearing His End

Berlin, Aug. 29.—Professor Virchow, the famous scientist, appears to be near his end. The professor is at Harzburg, in the Harz mountains, and no one except his family and the doctors have been allowed to see him for several weeks.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

On Labor Day we don't labor. The office of the Daily Ledger will be closed on Monday, no paper being issued that day.

Good Afternoon.

Tolstoi furnishes food for thought when he says that parents will find it more efficacious to furnish their children with good example than with good advice.

Quincy is reported to have 3000 tons of coal on hand, which is more than Waltham, Brookline, Chelsea, Malden or Medford. Again we beat Brookline—this time three to one.

The clearings of the New York banks for the first three months of this year amounted to $18,000,000,000, while the clearings of the London banks for the same period amounted to but $12,333,000,000. Commercially New York is the centre of the world.

The recent sale of the Bethlehem steel works to the new ship building trust, for $18,500,000 more than it cost the steel trust, is another evidence of the wisdom of the President's policy of publicity for the trusts, to prevent the watering of stock and the endangering of the financial integrity of the investments offered to the public.

Drift of Opinion.

☞A strange race of partly civilized white people whose origin is unknown has been discovered in the interior of the Island of Mindanao. Investigation will probably show that it is the remnant of the American greenback party, which mysteriously disappeared along in the late 70s.—Chicago Chronicle.

☞It is not true that the poor have grown poorer, but some of the rich have grown so very much richer, that where multitudes of men are herded together in a limited space, the contrast strikes the on-looker as more violent than formerly. On the whole our people earn more and live better than ever before, and the progress of which we are so proud could not have taken place had it not been for the great upbuilding of industrial centres, such as our commercial and manufacturing cities.—President Roosevelt.

☞It is a sober fact which we record here strongly believing that any legislative interference with the management of a mining corporation is as yet most unwise, that nothing has done more to bring candid, sober, property-holding men nearer the conviction that this legislative interference is necessary than the uncompromising refusal of the managers of these great corporotions to make any concession in their dealings with their men or to propose any compromise or conciliation. By their conduct of the anthracite strike these managers have done more to educate the American public to the conviction that the time has come for public interference with corporate management of labor questions affecting the supply of the necessities of life when production is stopped, as it is now, by a deadlock, than all the agitators who have frothed and written for a century.—Philadelphia Press.

ROAST PIG SUPPER.

The Sunshine Club Say They Never Had a Better.

The Sunshine club held its annual dinner on Wednesday evening, at the residence of Thomas Smith on Cranch street, and covers were laid for forty-five. Red fire was burned on the lawn and the house was brilliantly lighted for the occasion. A hurdy-gurdy and graphaphone enlivened the festivities.

The roast pig with "stuffin," which was served by George Pawsey, came as a surprise to the club, who got their first inkling when Mr. Smith opened the banquet by reading Charles Lamb's dissertation on "Roast Pig." Three little pigs were served with a stuffing of vegetables. Vocal numbers, stories and reminiscences followed the supper. In the party were:

J. Percy Sears, Timothy F. Ford, Harry H. Hill, B. Johnson, Jr., John Lennon, H. M. Hall, Joseph Lizotte, Michael Coyle, J. H. Bisson, A. W. Bisson, J. Edwin Glover, Daniel Desmond, Dr. F. E. Jones, W. J. Parker, C. J. Foy.

William Emerson, Sanford Cressman, George Sacket, William Clark, J. H. Smith, John J. Gallagher, Walter Bates, J. J. Kenily, Robert Johnson, A. A. Linscott, T. Walter Good, E. J. Sandberg, A. W. Goodhue, J. W. Murray, D. R. McKay, Richard Prout.

STUCK IN THE MUD.

Horse Rescued With Difficulty from the Canal.

Brown & Martell keep their horse in a shed on Canal street near the canal, which of late has been more mud than water. It was 1 A. M. last night when they put him in the stable, and this morning they found the poor creature in the canal, and the mud made it difficult to rescue him. Planks, etc., were used but it was a long job and the horse was almost exhausted.

The most efficacious method seemed to be a rope placed around the horse's neck. When the horse emerged he was plastered with mud, tin cans, etc., and his flesh on the shoulder was torn off, requiring several stitches.

Dr. Abele thinks the horse may recover. It is thought that the horse started to get a drink of water.

Indiana Monument.

The new Indiana state soldiers' and sailors' monument at Indianapolis cost $600,000. It is 263 feet high, was 13 years in building, is lighted by 48 arc and 50 incandescent lamps, and has statues of Gov. Morton, Gov. Whitcomb, Gen. William Henry Harrison and Gen. George Rogers Clark. Morton was the "war governor" of Indiana, and few civic officials during the war so early gained and so long retained the admiration of union soldiers.

Lawn Party.

The residence of Mrs. Nellie C. Gragg on Crescent street was prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns for the Epworth League lawn party of Wednesday evening. There were tables for the sale of confectionery, lemonade, ice cream and college ices, presided over by Rev. David L. Marten, Miss Mary Manhire, Miss Mabel Ripley, Miss Nellie Rodman and Miss Olive Grant.

☞Cut this out and take it to any drug store and get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, the best physic. They cleanse and invigorate the stomach, improve the appetite and regulate the bowels. Regular size, 25c, per box.

Salt Rheum

You may call it eczema, tetter or milk crust.

But no matter what you call it, this skin disease which comes in patches that burn, itch, discharge a watery matter, dry and scale, owes its existence to the presence of humors in the system.

It will continue to exist, annoy, and perhaps agonize, as long as these humors remain.

It is always radically and permanently cured by which expels all humors, and is positively unequalled for all cutaneous eruptions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Lumber Stolen.

When the building at the corner of Washington and Coddington streets was demolished, N. B. Furnald, the owner had the lumber carted to a vacant lot at the corner of Coddington and Newcomb streets.

Thursday he wanted some for a job and went to the lot and picked it out. When he went for it this morning it it was all missing. It was not the first that has disappeared, as he estimates that $150 worth has been stolen.

With the assistance of Acting Chief of Police McKay and Officer Murray the house of Mrs. Congetti Sanlli on Newcomb street was searched and the identical lumber and more was found.

The patrol was called and the woman was taken to the police station, and will be in court Saturday.

A SERIOUS SITUATION

Miners Using Firearms on Those They Consider Their Enemies

Bluefield, W. Va., Aug. 29.—There is considerable excitement at Crane Creek and Simmons Creek over recent shootings. John Ruble, employed by the Sagamore Coal and Coke company, was shot by striking miners yesterday and killed. Reports were current that a number of guards had been killed and wounded by the strikers, but investigation proved that Ruble was the only man killed.

Ruble, in company with Barney Shumate, who had been employed as guard, left the company store to go to a point on the works to stand guard, as the company had feared a visit from a mob. Enroute they were fired on and Ruble fell. Shumate was armed with a Winchester and opened fire on the miners, who, after their first volley, ran.

The non-union men who took the strikers' places are terrorized and a good many of them are leaving.

W. H. McQuail, president of the Turkey Gap Coal company, was fired at through a window but was not hurt. A number of guards have been engaged and are being rushed into the field.

Killed While Unconscious

New York, Aug. 29.—Miss Victorine Raedle, 23 years old, who had been a patient since Monday last in the private sanitarium of Miss Annie L. Alston, was killed in that institution yesterday by falling five stories from a moving elevator on which, under the influence of ether, she was being conveyed from the fourth to the fifth floor to be operated upon. Both coroner and police are investigating the case.

Want Negroes Withdrawn

Lebanon, Pa., Aug. 29.—At a meeting of 300 iron workers of the American Iron and Steel company who have been on a strike since May, it was decided to notify the company that if the imported negroes, brought here from Reading early in the week, are not withdrawn at once, all other employes will also go out on strike, thus tieing up the extensive plant. The sheriff has sworn in 15 deputies.

Fighting Resources Giving Out

Kingston, Ja., Aug. 29.—Steamer Nicaraguan, from Colon, brings reports that the situation on the isthmus is still critical. The Colombian government is concentrating troops at Panama and Colon to meet the expected attacks at these ports of the rebels. It is said upon reliable authority that both the Colombian government and the insurgents are nearing the ends of their resources.

ARE EDUCATIONAL.

Cemetery Without Monuments Like a City Without Houses.

To Editor of the Quincy Ledger:

In a recent issue of your paper, as well as one of the Boston dailies, I noticed a statement made by President Frank Eurich of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents, to the effect that resting places of the dead would be better without monuments of marble and stone. That is to say, no memorials, no tablets of record, should be kept of the inhabitants in the cities of the dead; nothing that would preserve the memories of the dead to the living.

This statement is radical and a great surprise, as it comes from a man who must be educated, and is certainly a new idea, and will very likely be approved only by those who are unfortunately so poor that they can not erect a monument to their deceased relatives.

I never heard or read of a nation who had any degree of civilization, and had any love for science and art, who did not build some kind of monuments. A burying ground without monuments would be something like a city without houses, if such could exist.

A cemetery may have a fine landscape, but without the monuments it would appear more like a park or public garden. I have seen one of the finest cemeteries in the country both in landscape and artistic memorials, but take the monuments out and a stranger would think he was in a zoological garden, and a hunter or fisherman could there find a great sporting place.

We generally judge the civilization of the ancient people from the monuments and buildings they have erected, and from the inscriptions on the same. We have got the history of these people. What would we know about Egyptians, Babylonians and the highly civilized people of South America, to say nothing of the Grecians and Romans? Some of these nations which flourished 7000 or 8000 years ago, when our progenetors went half naked and lived in tents and huts of mud in the mountains of Persia and the valleys of India.

These people lived in palaces of stone of an architecture that would compare favorably with that of the modern time. Upon their monuments they engraved the history of their deeds and customs, and some of them stand today, after thousands of years have passed over them, while the people who erected them have been exterminated and the very lands on which they lived have for centuries been wilderness. Who would know that in these wildernesses had been civilization, but for the monuments which tell the history of their glorious past.

Monuments play a great part in ancient history. They have in some degree laid the foundations to nearly all branches of learning of the modern world, and who knows but what those erected in our days will play the same part in some future ages.

THE FERMOYLE MURDER

Arrest of a Man Who Is Expected to Throw Light Upon It

Boston, Aug. 29.—In Edward McDonald, arrested on Staniford street yesterday afternoon, the police believe they have the man who can solve the mystery of the murder of James H. Fermoyle of Arlington the night of Aug. 10.

Fermoyle was found in a vacant lot on Third street, Cambridge, dying from terrible kicks and blows on the head. He had left Green street, where he had been drinking heavily all the afternoon, about 6:30 o'clock on the evening of Aug. 10, in company with several friends. After that all trace of him was lost until his bleeding body was found in East Cambridge.

For nearly three weeks the police of Boston and Cambridge have been searching tirelessly for Edward McDonald, a tramp painter, who, according to several accounts, was with Fermoyle on the fatal evening and who mysteriously dropped opt of sight immediately after the tragedy.

Although the police are much elated over McDonald's arrest they are unwilling to talk of it, saying that they prefer to wait and see whether they can make out a case.

Last evening McDonald was given a severe cross-examination but the results are said to have been meagre. Today the Cambridge police will bring to station 3 several of McDonald's friends to identify him.

The police last night refused to give even the name of the man under arrest.

Bold Daylight Theft

Boston, Aug. 29.—On Wednesday of last week a gang of men with a two-horse caravan and tackle enough to move a steam engine went to the New York, New Haven and Hartford freight yards in South Boston and unloaded from the cars three sheet iron oil tanks, each with a capacity of 600 gallons. A big crowd stood about them and watched them at their work. Finally they drove away and it was only discovered yesterday that the teamsters with their dray had no right to the tanks. Now the police and railroad detectives are looking for them.

Bailey, who is to die in the electric chair during the week beginning Sept. 7, was secretly brought to the state prison here yesterday. Foundrymen Want Higher Wages

Nashua, N. H., Aug. 29.—A strike at the Nashua Co-operative iron foundry is expected to go into effect today. The present wage is $2.25 a day and $2.50 and $2.75 is asked.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. JACK AND JOAN

Such a sultry afternoon! Jack and Joan lay together in the hammock on the back porch, but, alas, they were back to back, and an ugly scowl in the eyes of each showed the reason! The twins had quarreled over the new St. Nicholas, which now lay between them. Each had refused to leave to the other the possession of the hammock and the new magazine; so there they were, both as cross and uncomfortable as they could be.

Bill ran out and pushed and pulled at the hammock, begging his "sisser twinnies" to let him in, but the twins would not speak to the little fellow. So Bill stood there in perplexity, his round eyes filling with tears and his mouth opened for a long wail.

At the sound of his mournful voice Faith rushed from the kitchen and strove to comfort the little chap.

"Jacqueline! Joanna! I'm ashamed of you, acting in such a ridiculous way. You know how busy I am getting ready for tonight, and why couldn't you take care of baby better?"

Then she carried Bill into the house and came back, hot and flushed.

"Girls, get right out of that hammock this minute and go into the house and amuse baby."

When Faith spoke in that firm tone, the twins knew they must obey, so they rose up, a cross looking pair enough, with hair tossed and tumbled and eyes sulky and red.

They looked at each other, and the sight was too much for either. They were used to falling in and out of quarrels easily, and the ache of disagreement had lasted long enough. Both burst out laughing, and Jack gave Joan a bear hug, which Joan returned, whispering, "I'm glad it's over, aren't you?"

"I'M GLAD IT'S OVER, AREN'T YOU?"

Faith had gone back to her baking, knowing that the girls would do as she had told them, and now a merry struggle took the place of the real quarrel, while each twin insisted that she would "mind" Bill.

At last Jack, who was a little the stronger, forced Joan into the hammock, laughing all the while.

"Now, Twinnie, you just stay where you're put, and I'll take care of that baby," said she, and was off in a flash.

Joan lay there idly swinging, thinking what a dear Twinnie she had after all, when a whistle from the hedge made her sit up very straight.

"All right, Howard; come up here," she called.

Howard tramped across the lawn, dragging a string of fish behind him.

"Hello, Twin," he said. "Which one are you anyway? Let's see if I can guess. Hum—now, Jack's hair is a little straighter than Joan's, I know that, and Joan's eyes sometimes are more blue than Jack's, so I guess, ma'am, you're Jack!"

"Wrong again! My, what a bad guess! Jack's busy nursing the kid. What's that?"—with a kick toward the fish.

"Brook trout, mum. Caught 'em this morning. What'll you give for 'em?"

"Pooh! I don't want your trout. Why didn't you come and ask us to go with you?" Joan was huffy.

"Couldn't. Ned Webster went with me and you know he hates—I mean, doesn't care to have girls around."

"Humph! 'Sif we were sissies!" Joan turned her back and would have no more to do with him. So Howard picked up his catch and went into the house to present the fish to Faith. When he sauntered out again, Jack also was in the hammock, for baby had soon gone to sleep under her care.

"Hello, Jack, shake! Glad to see you've been useful for once," said Howard gravely, using Joan's arm for a pump handle.

The twins giggled, and then Howard saw he had mistaken them again.

"Villains!" he cried. Then they rushed upon him. All three struggled in a heap on the porch, ending in rolling down the steps upon the grass. When they arose, Joan's dress was torn across the front.

"Jimmy, what shall we do now?" she said.

Jack's fertile brain worked quickly.

"It's a good thing we aren't dressed for tonight," she said. "Mamma's coming home then. You know she's been visiting at grandma's, Howard. Let's go down to the barn and get some of those old grain sacks and each put one on; then we'll parade upstairs and if Faith sees us it won't matter. Then we'll change our dresses—see? And we'll mend this one some time when nobody's looking."

Howard thought that was a fine plan. "But why not go right around the house and in at the front door?" he said. "That's much easier."

"But that wouldn't be any fun," said Jack. The argument was unanswerable, and so the three trooped off to the barn. There they petted the horses and tumbled on the hay and got very dirty, indeed, and it ended with Jack's ripping the sleeve of her dress.

"Now we'll have to have those sacks," she said. So they were routed out, the bottom and sides ripped open with Howard's knife, and each girl wrapped one around her.

With great display they paraded up to the porch. Howard doubled up with amusement at the queer spectacle they made. "Don't we look like the Rummans in their toggers?" asked Jack triumphantly, and Howard had to lie on the ground and choke his laughter, for the twins would have been insulted to think that they did not resembled the "togaed Romans."

"Why—why—who's that coming in at the front gate? I do believe it's mamma!" cried the two. Sure enough it was, several hours before she was expected too! With shrieks of delight the twins gathered up their "toggers" and rushed to meet the tall, sweet faced woman who was advancing to the house.

What matter if the sacks were in the way and Jack tripped and Joan fell over the clumsy things! The twins cast themselves, "toggers" and all, into the arms of their mother. And she—well, she was used to their plays and was not alarmed, and even when the sacks fell off, showing the ripped sleeve and torn skirt, she did not scold; she was too happy to see her twinnies again.

They led her around to the kitchen, Joan carrying her jacket and umbrella and Jack lugging her suit case and both chattering all the while.

Faith came to the door, blessing her stars that the cake was done, and her flushed cheeks grew rosier and her bright eyes brighter as she welcomed mamma home.

"And Howard, mamma—here's Howard Winship. You know, his father's bought New House," clamored the twins. They had forgotten Howard till that minute, and now as they turned to introduce their new friend—he was gone.

"Never mind, I'll see him soon," said Mrs. Arnold; but the twinnies could not understand why their Howard had run away.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Her Father's Profession.

Jean was four years old when she began to go to kindergarten. The first day she had a beautiful time, and when she got home at night she announced proudly that "tomorrow teacher wants us to tell our whole names, our whole ages and what our fathers do."

Mother proceeded to instruct her little daughter on these points, and before long Jean could rattle off quite proudly:

"My name is Jean Anderson Abbott. I am four years and three months old, and my father is a produce and commission merchant."

She said it over to herself all the way to school, but when she was really standing before the teacher somehow it did not seem so easy. The teacher asked each little girl in turn, and they answered glibly, but as it came to Jean's turn a great fear came over her. She could not remember what her father's business was.

Finally the teacher asked Marjorie, who stood just beside Jean. Marjorie answered rapidly enough:

"My name is Marjorie Rolfe Bidwell. I am five years and one month old, and my father is professor of history in Harvard."

Her answer gave Jean an inspiration. If Marjorie's father was a professor, of course her father was a professor, too, and he had eggs and butter in his store. She knew that, so when the teacher asked her the question she replied promptly:

"My name is Jean Anderson Abbott. I am four years and three months old, and my father is a professor of butter and eggs!"

Saving Up.

I'm savin' up. Ma bought a bank
With a sojer on it that turns a crank
Fer ev'ry penny I drop in,
An' nen he doesn't move again
'Tell another cent comes clickety click!
An' nen the sojer does his trick.

I got it day 'fore yesterday,
But jest already I've put away
A bran' new nickel an' seven cents.
Mother says I'm doin' immense
An' purty soon that I kin buy
A shirt like pa's an' a regular tie.

But pa says: "Don't be gittin' gay.
You're goin' to be a man some day,
An' now you'd better save your tin,
So's nen you kin buy a house to live in,
With a barn an' a hoss an' a kerridge, too,
An' a cow what'll give good milk fer you."

An' Uncle Bill don't believe in banks;
He says they wuz only made fer cranks;
Besides, they wuz bustin' every day,
An' half the time they wouldn't pay.
"An' ez fer me," he says, "my sock
Is bank enough fer Billy Rock!"

Late that night ma sez: "Now, Josh,
Don't listen to Uncle Billy's bosh!
He'll loaf all day an' set an' chat;
He never got married nor nothin' like that;
He ain't a model fer you." But still
I got the nickel from Uncle Bill.

I'm savin' up, but how I'd thank
My ma fer a gun instead of that bank!
A bank's all right fer a man, I guess,
'Cause he's got folks to feed an' dress,
But a gun that'll shoot an' make some noise,
Ah, that's the gift to give to boys!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 31—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Communion and transformation.—Ex. xxxiv, 29-35; Luke ix, 28, 29.

The two illustrations of communion and transformation which we have before us in the topical references are those of Moses and of Christ. The first one is that of Moses upon Mount Sinai. There he had held communion and fellowship with God, and when he came down from the mount the people saw that the face of Moses shone or that it had been transfigured with the light of God. The same thing happened to Christ upon the Mount of Transfiguration. While He had fellowship and communion with God we are told that He was transfigured, and this transfiguration took place while He prayed. The fashion of His countenance was altered, and His raiment was white and glistening.

In these two references we see that communion and transformation go hand in hand. Moses was in communion with God when he was transfigured with heavenly light. Christ was in prayer and communion with God when His countenance was changed and His raiment was white and glistening. The desire and the ambition of every Christian should be to lead a transformed and a transfigured life. The light of God should shine forth in our lives, and this can be the case only when we are faithful in holding communion and fellowship with God. Of an aged saint whose life was so beautiful the question was asked, How does it come that his life is so different from others? the answer was that he lived so close to heaven that he saw things that others did not see and heard sounds that they did not hear. His life of communion was rewarded by a life of transformation, the glory of God shone forth in his countenance and in his life above that which was manifest in the lives of others, and it was brought about by nearness to God in that and in life.

Communion and transformation are possible to all Christians. Communion with God is evidently possible to all. Through the Lord Jesus Christ we have access to the throne of God at all times and under all circumstances. God has encouraged us in His word to pray unto Him and to hold fellowship and communion with Him. The results of prayer in one case will not be different from other cases. If communion with God led to transformation in the case of Moses and in the case of Christ, it will also follow in the lives of all who spend much time in communion and fellowship with God. It would be absolutely impossible for the spirit of man to hold close fellowship and communion with the Spirit of God and this fact not to be produced in the life. The glory of God would necessarily shine forth in the life of one who holds constant communion and fellowship with God. We see those about us who impress us with the fact that the light of God is constantly about them. We oftimes wonder why it is that certain saints of God seem to be surrounded with a heavenly halo. Undoubtedly the cause, if we could investigate it, would be found in the fact that they spend much time in prayer and much time in communion, and it is while they pray that they are transfigured and the light of the glory of God shines constantly forth in their lives.

We scarcely realize what a great thing it is to have the opportunity of communion with God. We would find it a delight to hold fellowship and communion with the great men of the world, but how much greater a delight it should be to hold communion with God Himself, who has made the world and sustains it by His power. There is not only the privilege of prayer, but there are many blessings attached to prayer. It is not only that God answers our petitions, but in this act of worship we come in close touch and contact with the divine one, and this is impossible without producing beneficent results in our own lives. The cares of life are lightened, its burdens are easier borne after we have spent time in prayer with God, the dark places are lighted, and the ways are made easier of travel by the light that shines from above during the time which we spend in prayer and communion with God.

The Church and Economics.

The church has a relation to the whole life. It enters society as a wholesome, leavening influence, touching all that pertains to the every day living of the people. Its message is first of all the love of God. The first effort is to bring men to God, but it also seeks to help men and so lift them up to a higher level of life as well as to the hope of salvation. Thus all of life comes within its sphere. Expediency must determine what should be done to alleviate present suffering and to change the surroundings of the individual so as to develop industry, economy, enterprise and general thrift, but a broad view of the sphere of Christianity will reveal numberless ways in which to work for a social uplift.—United Presbyterian.

Present Opportunities.

That is the best kind of optimism which sees in existing conditions opportunities for making the home, the life, the state and the church better. A cheery and expectant view of possibilities and attainments becomes a practical and animating incentive to the highest exertions toward an improved situation, whereby reforms are effected and worthy transformations come to the surface for the general benefit of all classes.—Presbyterian.

Revelation.

His mystic seal He sets on everything,
For great and small are one to visual sense,
And in the dust, upon an insect's wing,
As in a world, we trace omnipotence.

To Repel Attack on Forts by Hostile Fleet

WIRELESS TELEGRAPH IDEA

Will Doubtless Prove of Great Value to the Signal Service—Much Reliance Placed on Searchlights—Actual Warfare Begins Sunday Night

Newport, R. I., Aug. 30.—The army of defense in the several ports along shore between New Bedford and the east entrance to Long Island sound is practically in readiness to repel the attack of the hostile fleet under the command of Admiral Higginson. The only thing that remains is the additional armament on both sides, the Massachusetts heavy artillery for the shore and the Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York naval militia for the fleet. These organizations will arrive today. The artillery will be at once distributed among the posts at the entrance of Narragansett bay and also at New Bedford.

As to the naval militia the gunboats Mayflower and Scorpion will be here in readiness to receive the Massachusetts and Connecticut troops, the New York naval militia arriving on the Supply. These three boats will immediately leave for sea and the militia will be distributed among the vessels of the fleet.

The principal event yesterday in this vicinity was the arrival of General MacArthur on a tour of inspection. He was received at Fort Adams late in the afternoon by the commander of the post, Colonel Hasbrook, and, together with the leading officers of the post, a long consultation was held last evening at headquarters. After his inspection of the three forts defending Narragansett bay General MacArthur will leave for New Bedford, probably this afternoon.

A large number of signal stations have been established by the army. These stations are all in telephonic communication with headquarters at Fort Adams. A wireless telegraph system has also been established between Fort Adams and the mainland, and also with Fort Wetherill on Cononiciut island and Fort Greble on Dutch island.

The main reliance of the army of defense in their vicinity is the searchlight station at Price's Neck, very close to the life saving station. It is hoped that this station will be able to pick up, by means of its powerful light, any vessels of the enemy. It is also a very exposed point and may be the scene of an attack, with the object of cutting the wires. The mines at the entrance of Narragansett bay are practically in position and the umpires have charts of the same. These umpires and observers all left for their different positions yesterday afternoon, and are now ready for duty.

The date for the commencement of hostilities was at midnight last night, but the actual warfare will not begin until midnight on Sunday. The 48 hours are allowed Admiral Higginson to obtain some advantageous position off shore.

A German Desperado

New York, Aug. 30.—William F. Schoo was arrested here last night. It is alleged that he was arrested in Hamburg, Germany, about six months ago on a larceny charge. He shot the policeman who arrested him, but was caught and sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment. Escaping, he came to this country. When arrested last night Schoo drew a pistol, but was overpowered.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Coal Strike the Only Drawback to Prosperous Conditions

New York, Aug. 30.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Gradual resumption of anthracite coal mining is encouraging, although the output is not yet sufficient to have any commercial value. Business conditions are unsatisfactory at the strike centre, but reports from all other sections indicate unusually prompt revival after the summer vacation season, with exceptionally large operations among dealers in the agricultural regions.

Iron furnaces are suspending production because coke cannot be secured and it is evident that the rate of output at the opening of the new month will show a serious loss. Anthracite coal is being produced at about 30 different places, 15,000 tons being marketed daily, but the bulk is of steam sizes from the washeries, as few collieries are operated as yet.

The dry goods jobbing trade reports a liberal distribution and supplies are only moerate in the primary market. Changed conditions in the raw material have accelerated inquiries for cotton goods.

Slightly less activity is seen in men's wear woolen and worsted fabrics, but fancy worsteds are in better request. New lines have been opened at prices ranging from 5 to 7½ percent above the last season's figures.

At last footwear makers have been able to secure a moderate advance in prices in response to the recent sharp rise in materials. Jobbers are no longer disposed to wait, but place orders freely and the situation is more satisfactory than at any recent date. Shops are running full time on fall business and have a fair amount of spring trade in sight.

An Estimate of Chinese Labor

London, Aug. 30.—The Times, in an editorial this morning on Chinese immigration as affecting the future of Australasia and South Africa, argues against the admission of Chinese labor into these countries on the ground that where the Chinaman is introduced into countries inhabited by indolent and feeble races, like the Filipinos, he becomes an important factor in their prosperity, but where he comes among a white population his tendency is to degrade the lowest class of the white community to his own level and to lower wages by reducing the standard of comfort.

Bridgeton, N. J., Aug. 30.—Job M. Williams, a negro, who was arrested on suspicion of having been connected with the death of John S. Holmes and his housekeeper, Miss Catherine Shute, whose bodies were found in the ruins of Holmes' barn, has confessed that he set fire to the building. The negro said that he was about to be married and was in need of money. He planned to set fire to the barn and rob the house while the old couple were attempting to save the livestock. He carried out his plan, he said, and stole $75, which he turned over to his sweetheart.

AN UNWELCOME GUEST

Carrie Nation Ejected From Hotel After Creating a Disturbance

Bangor, Me., Aug. 30.—Mrs. Carrie Nation created a disturbance in the Bangor House last evening and was forcibly ejected from the hotel by H. C. Chapman, the proprietor. Mrs. Nation arrived here in the morning from Dover, N. H., and went to Ellsworth, where she addressed a small audience in the afternoon. Returning to this city she was driven to the Bangor House and upon arriving there began a tour of the premises to find the bar, a hack driver having informed her that there was a bar in the hotel.

Mrs. Nation soon gave up her quest and went to the supper room, where, to satisfy herself on the question of whether or not liquor was sold in the house, she called for a bottle of beer. Being refused, she began loudly calling for liquor, whereupon Chapman asked her to leave the room. She refused and was gently but firmly put out at the side door.

Later Mrs. Nation said that she intended to bring a civil suit against Chapman for ejecting her from the hotel. Fearing that Mrs. Nation might not get accommodations at another hotel, friends of the temperance cause took her in charge for the night.

Through an Open Switch

Newton, Mass., Aug. 30.—An accommodation train from Boston ran through an open switch at Newton Upper Falls yesterday, crashing into a loaded coal car which stood on the siding. In the coal car was Michael Devlin, who was at work on the cargo of coal. He received injuries which are likely to prove fatal. Fireman Kauldenburg jumped from the cab just as the train struck the siding and fractured his left leg. Engineer Cook remained in his engine and was only slightly bruised. The passengers on board the train were shaken up, but no one was injured.

Dan Patch's Great Feat

Dan Patch, the unbeaten son of Joe Patchen, paced an exhibition mile in 1:59½, reducing his record from 2:00 1-4. The mile was within a quarter of a second of the world's record of 1:59 1-4, made by Star Pointer five years ago. This is the fastest mile in harness in half a decade and Dan Patch is the second horse to beat 2 minutes.

Thief Got Badly Pounded

Boston, Aug. 30.—While attempting to defend his home against two burglars yesterday, Edward Brown of Roxbury was stabbed in the face, but the wound is not serious. The man who did the stabbing was arrested, but his companion is at liberty. The one locked up says he is but 17 years of age, and that his name is James Russell. Brown gave Russell a pounding, and he was in bad shape when an officer took him into custody.

Italian Got Five Buckshot

Portland, Me., Aug. 30.—While a party of Italian laborers were eating dinner yesterday in the orchard of Benjamin F. Dow at East Deering, a shotgun was fired into their midst. One of their number received five buckshot, but was not seriously injured. Dow says that he fired at a woodchuck, while the Italians claim that he took deliberate aim at them and fired. Dow was arrested.

NOTED OSBORNE HOUSE

Description of Palace Given to the British by Edward VII.

QUEEN VICTORIA DIED THERE.

Former Royal Residence Is Situated on the Isle of Wight and Was Built In 1840—One of the Most Beautiful Palaces In Great Britain—Greatly Revered by Englishmen.

Osborne House, which has been presented by King Edward to the British nation, is revered by Englishmen because of its association with the memory of Queen Victoria, says the New York World. It was there she liked best to sojourn with the prince consort, and it was there she died. Perhaps no choice of a gift by King Edward would be more gratifying to the kingdom than Osborne House.

In comparison with other royal residences Osborne House is new. It was built in 1840 on the Isle of Wight, overlooking the Solent. The name is an ancient one and is properly "Austerburne," the "Easter Brook." The estate was held for many years by an old island family, the Bowermans, from whom it was purchased by Eustace Mann during the reign of Charles I.

Tradition has it that during the civil war Mann buried his wealth in a wood on the estate and afterward could not find it. The place is known to this day as "Money Coppice."

His granddaughter married a man named Blackford, who built the first Osborne House. Lady Isabella Blackford, a descendant, sold the estate to Queen Victoria in 1840. It has since been enlarged until at the present time it comprises 5,000 acres extending from Medina on the west to Brooks Copse on the east.

Osborne House was the private property of the sovereign. It is known as one of the most beautiful palaces in Great Britain. The structure is in the style of Palladio. It embodies, moreover, many of the ideas of the prince consort and reflects in a measure Queen Victoria's tastes. A bell tower ninety feet high rises above the palace, and behind the apartments occupied by Queen Victoria is a flag tower 107 feet high. The rooms are filled with rare pictures, statues and costly furnishings.

In the council room, one of the most magnificent in the palace and located in the pavilion, hangs Landseer's famous painting, "The Deer Drive."

The gardens are arranged in terraces, sloping to the water's edge, where is located a little jetty built for the queen.

The prince consort established a model farm on the estate, to which the queen and he gave much attention.

It was at Osborne House that the queen chose to rest during the illness which resulted in her death.

Princess Henry of Battenberg, the queen's youngest daughter, was appointed governor of the Isle of Wight by her royal parent and ruled from Osborne House.

Soon after the queen's death King Edward, it was said, wished to discontinue Osborne House as a royal residence owing to the expense of keeping it up and the distance from London. Lord Rothschild was named as a probable tenant at an annual rental of $100,000. William Waldorf Astor was also said to be negotiating to buy the palace as a wedding present for his daughter Pauline. Then it was announced that under a clause of Queen Victoria's will Osborne House could not thus be disposed of.

"CROWNING OF KINGSHIP."

Alfred Austin's Poem In Honor of Edward's Coronation.

The London Times published a poem by Alfred Austin, the poet laureate, entitled "The Crowning of Kingship." It is in thirteen stanzas, of which the first three are as follows:

What do we crown and celebrate today?
Empire and kingship throned on peaceful power;
Since to be weak is to endure the sway
Of every threatening hour.

Kingship symbolic of a people's will,
Themselves born kingly, sceptered by the sea,
And, like the sea, let whatso tempests shrill,
One worldwide, feared and free.

For 'tis nor crown nor purple men revere,
But the majestic mind and regal soul
That amid clashing clamors help to steer
A realm into its goal.

The last stanza is as follows:

So may a throne knit people long while crown
Kingship and kings, who, as the ages run,
Heirs to victory's wisdom, hand it down
From sire to son and son.

American Tools Needed.

American manufacturers of surgical instruments will find it to their advantage to look over the field in Switzerland, where our consul at Basel says that he believes there is a good market for their wares, says Leslie's Weekly. In a recent conversation with the consul Dr. Egli-Sinclair, an eminent physician of Zurich, who resided for many years in the United States, expressed surprise that so far no attempt has been made by our manufacturers to introduce surgical instruments into Switzerland, his opinion being that they would undoubtedly meet with a ready sale, as they were admittedly the best in the world. Our dental instruments, it appears, are largely imported and, in fact, are used exclusively by Swiss practitioners.

A Dangerous Cigar.

One of the imitation cigars now being sold as a cure for the tobacco habit is more dangerous to the smoker than a dozen tobacco cigars, declares the French hygienic council.

ALGER HAS NO DOUBT

That Roosevelt Will Be Nominated For the Presidency In 1904

New York, Aug. 30.—Former Secretary of War Alger, when asked yesterday his views on the political situation in Michigan, declined to discuss that subject, but wished to say that he considered that President Roosevelt had more than met the expectations of his most sanguine friends.

"The presidency," he added, "is a position of infinite and complicated duties, at best, but it is a critical test of ability to be called suddenly to the discharge of its functions, especially under the painful circumstances which attended the accession of President Roosevelt. He has, however, met and mastered every problem that came to him. He is a man of robust Americanism, of high ideals, of great mental vigor and discipline and remarkable aptitude for the discharge of high public duty. He has from the outset carried the burden of administration with great ability and unflagging industry and deserves and has the confidence and commendation of the people. That he will be nominated in 1904 I hope and do not doubt."

Bequests In Fair Wills

San Francisco, Aug. 30.—Theresa Oelrichs and Herman Oelrichs made application yesterday for letters of administration on the estate of Charles L. Fair, the dead millionaire, and filed his last will and testament. The document bequeaths the entire estate to the wife, who died by the same accident that ended the life of Fair. Mrs. Fair's will makes bequests to the testator's relatives of about $60,000 and the remainder of the estate is left to her husband.

In Favor of Land Trust

Dublin, Aug. 30.—At the annual meeting yesterday of the Irish land owners, the Duke of Abercorn advocated the idea of promoting a land trust as a valuable means of defeating the system of boycotting, blackmailing and conspiracy, which, the duke said, had arisen again almost entirely because the imperial government was strangely blind to its growth and unwisely deaf to the warnings and protests of the Irish loyalists.

Woman Charged With Poisoning

Blackwell, O. T., Aug. 30.—Mrs. Jack Frost, wife of a business man and politician of this city, was arrested last night charged with poisoning Mrs. Alice Combs and her eldest son, Ernest, and with the intent to kill the entire family of seven persons. The crime was committed in the absence of the Combs family. The house was entered and a liberal quantity of arsenic was sprinkled in the coffee pot.

Japs Gain Headway In China

Pekin, Aug. 30.—The Japanese government has appointed Major General Yamani, who was recently in command of the Japanese troops in China, to be military attache to the Japanese legation here. General Yamani will probably direct the reorganization of the Chinese army. His appointment is intended also to give Japan an equal standing with Russia.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

On Labor Day we don't labor. The office of the Daily Ledger will be closed on Monday, no paper being issued that day.

Good Afternoon.

The passengers on the 5.15 train from Boston last evening were very much amused to see a man, who left the car at Wollaston, pulling a McClure's September magazine to pieces. He littered the car floor with about fifty pages of choice ads. Those ads enabled that man to get his magazine for ten cents. Would he rather pay 25 cents for a magazine without advertisements?

It may surprise Brookline and Quincy people too, to learn that this city is gaining faster in valuation than other cities. They knew we were making a good record in population, voters, school children, new houses and improvements generally, but the facts are that Quincy is passing other cities in obtaining riches.

In 1889, the first year of the city government, Quincy had a property valuation, according to the "Manual for the General Court, of $10,258,618, and stood number 27 in valuation in the State.

In 1901 Quincy had a valuation of $20,956,671, and stood number 24, having made a net gain of three in twelve years.

The only cities in the State with a larger valuation than Quincy are: Boston, Worcester, Fall River, New Bedford, Taunton, Haverhill, Lawrence, Lynn, Salem, Holyoke, Springfield, Cambridge, Lowell, Malden, Medford, Newton, Somerville, Waltham, Brockton, Chelsea, Fitchburg, Brookline and Milton. Please remember that there are 354 cities and towns in Massachusetts.

In population Quincy stands number 23 in Massachusetts, having risen from number 31 in 1875. The population and number by each census are given below:

	Census Population.	Rank in State.
In 1875,	9,155	No. 31
In 1880,	10,570	No. 29
In 1385,	12,145	No 27
In 1890,	16,723	No. 23
In 1895,	20,712	No. 22
In 1900,	23,899	No. 23

Drift of Opinion.

☞ In the training of our children in the schools we must realize we are training not only the parents and citizens of the future, but the possible teacher as well, and there should be the greatest care in securing as far as possible, good material in the different grades, and also in maintaining, so far as we can, physical health of both the boys and girls.

And just here I would urge most strongly the physical examination of the children who are admitted to our primary grades. They come from homes many times where the relations of the eye and condition of the ear are not considered in any fashion; the obtuseness of the child being set down to stupidity or inattention, and instead of having a doctor come and see what is the matter with the little one, who fails to find the pair of spectacles which he was sent to search for, or who sits indifferent to the tinkle of the door bell which he had been told to answer, the small person has a box on the ear, which may intensify the progressive deafness, or he may be sent into a dark closet to cry and make his eyes very much worse when the light is restored. It seems to me that at the entrance to the primary school a physician well versed in child study should go over carefully our future citizen, find out the nerve force by his grip, examine eyes and ears, make measure of the height, weight and lung expansion, and then send to the parents suggestions as to the diet, exercise and general environment.—Dr. Julia Holmes Smith in the Pilgrim for September.

☞ Now it is said that the federal department of justice has the report of Col. Wright on the coal strike in hand and is seeking to get evidence to sustain its allegation that the railroad companies are the real owners of the mines, which fact, if established, would be sufficient to break their charters and smash the monopoly. If that is what is wanted, Mr. President, better turn the report over to the newspapers and let some of their bright men get the evidence for your attorney-general. If facts are wanted they will get them as quickly and as surely as anyone—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Sam Small's untoward experience is taken as a horrible example by both sides of the liquor question. The Prohibitionists point out that he was advocating license and that he shows the effects of bad associations, and the license advocate retort, See what can happen in a prohibition state! Meanwhile, consider if the preacher had only let the whiskey alone, what difference would it have made whether the law was one thing or another.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ It begins to look as if the coal barons were becoming alarmed at the feeling of hostility which is being created against them throughout the country, and which may culminate in the enactment of drastic legislation which will prevent the public from again being compelled to pay tribute to their methods of extortion. Either that or they now consider the time ripe for realizing the proceeds of the scheme which they have been working, for they have commenced to ship east and west the "reserve" supplies of coal held along their railroad lines, ostensibly for their own protection, it is stated, but not everybody will swallow that. The chances are that they dare not risk forcing prices any higher and will now unload their surplus stored coal at a tremendous profit. It is becoming more apparent than ever that the strikers are but mere pawns in the game.—Lynn Item.

The Cochato Club.

The fame of the promenade concerts Saturday evenings grow as time goes on. Last Saturday evening there was a marked increase in the audience and it was noticed that a majority of those present came from Weymouth, Quincy, Wollaston, Randolph and Holbrook. This is very gratifying to those having the entertainments in charge for it shows that the concerts are appreciated as they deserve. The program was fully up to the usual standard and perhaps may be said to be a little better.

A glance over the program of this week will show more ambition than ever. Especial attention is called to Gruenwald's "Suite De Ballet," "Antony and Cleopatra" which is a set of four dances dealing with four moods. That is, the tempo of each number is different. The suite commences with a dainty number and gradually works up to the march, "Antony's Victory. It will be well worth hearing.

It is to be regretted that this will be the last concert of the present series. However it is hoped that during a coming winter we shall have the pleasure of hearing the Orchestral club again.

To commemorate the present series F. Stuart Mason, a member of the Orchestral club, has written a stirring march which has been dedicated to the Cochato club. It is well written, and is bright and tuneful and is bound to become popular as it deserves.

The program for this week is as follows:

Part First

Valse Lente, Sweet Memories,	Gruenwald.

—Last week in Houston, Texas, a local rate war was in progress between agents of competing lines, and before the smoke of battle cleared away tickets from Houston to Chicago were 30 cents, to St. Louis, 20 cents, with one agent giving a box of cigars with every ticket sold. If only such a rate cutting would be in progress during the St. Louis Exposition, what a boom it would give that fair.—Old Colony Memorial.

You need iron, the greatest blood tonic and nutrient, itself a natural constituent of healthy, ruddy blood; and you can derive the most good from it as combined in the new iron tonic, Pept-iron, which is readily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, nor cause constipation however long taken. It is agreeable to the taste, leaving no inky or metallic flavor in the mouth.

EIGHTY YEARS OLD.

The Eventful Life of Capt. Charles N. Hunt of Quincy.

As already noted Capt. Charles N. Hunt was 80 years old yesterday, Aug. 29. The following interesting sketch is from the Globe:

"Capt. Hunt was born in Scituate, Aug. 29, 1822, and was the son of Nathan and Catherine Hunt. His father was lost at sea when Capt. Hunt was two years old, his ship, the schooner Ocean of Hingham, foundering on the Frying Pan shoals off the North Carolina coast. Her entire crew was lost. Two years after the death of her husband, Mrs Hunt moved to Quincy and in the public schools of this place, then a town, Capt. Hunt received his education.

On leaving school Capt. Hunt learned the granite cutters' trade, and worked at it for many years. Later in life he learned the stone masons' trade, and was afterward engaged in building many of the sea walls along the New England coast and in Boston harbor.

When fort Sumter was fired on, Capt. Hunt enlisted as a private in Co. H 4th Mass. infantry, commanded by Col. Abner B. Packard, at present one the leading residents of this city. The 4th regt. was the first body of volunteer troops to reach fort Monroe, which was threatened by the confederates, and they received a warm welcome from the garrison. With his regiment Capt. Hunt participated in the battle of Big Bethel, the first pitched battle of the civil war.

After serving his term of enlistment, Capt. Hunt was honorably discharged. On arriving home he entered the employ of the government, and was engaged in strengthening the fortification on Fort Warren in Boston harbor. Later on, when a call for three years' men was issued by President Lincoln, Capt. Hunt enlisted in Co. H. 39th Mass. infantry, and was commissioned first sergeant.

It was only a short time before he was made captain of his company, a position which he held during the war. With his regiment, Capt. Hunt was present at the battles of Mine Run, Wilderness, Petersburg, Spottsylvania, Weldon Railroad and at the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox.

At the close of the war Capt. Hunt was mustered out and resumed work at his trade of a stonemason. He worked at his trade till 1882.

Capt. Hunt was first elected constable of Quincy in 1847, an office which he has since held continually, with the exception of the years he was in the army. For the past 18 years he has held the office of deputy fish and game warden, and has proved a very efficient officer.

Capt. Hunt was married twice, the first time in 1848 to Miss Caroline Williams, the daughter of Lyman Williams. Four children were born to them. His first wife died in 1858. He married Miss Mary Hume in 1860, and two children were born to them.

Capt. Hunt is a member of Paul Revere post 88, G. A. R., and he is also a mason. Capt. Hunt is still vigorous and in good health, with the exception of intermittent attacks of rheumatism.

BILLHEADS PRINTED AT PATRIOT OFFICE

Bought For a Sixpence

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

While in hospital at Sydney, Australia, a sailor named Kane died. His effects were sold, and I bought them for a sixpence. Among them was a rude chart or drawing, and the writing was in pencil and displayed a very poor hand. It ran:

"North of Timor Laut about seventy-three. Enter north bay.

"Bring up line with three tall trees on highest point and in five fathoms.

"Spring of fresh water to left of big rock on port bow."

I found the chart when aboard ship.

I was mate of the schooner, and I at once laid the paper before the captain. We got out a chart of the Banda sea, found the island of Timor Laut and then measured off seventy-three miles to the north. This brought us to Pope's island. Neither of us had ever landed there, but understood that the island was not inhabited. The instructions were to enter the north bay and bring up at a certain spot. What for? The existence of a spring was mentioned, but why should we go ashore? Unless there was something of value on or about the island why had it been noted and the writing carried around by a sailor?

The captain and I talked the matter over and over, but could make it no plainer. It was natural under the circumstances that our minds should run to buried treasure. Indeed we couldn't get rid of the feeling that the sailor who had died in the hospital had planted something of value on Pope's island, and that being the case we decided to have a try for it. What hastened our decision was a conversation overheard between two sailors who had been at the hospital inquiring about Kane and his effects.

I think it was on the twenty-third day out of Sydney that we entered the bay on the north side of Pope's island.

After having reached the shore we found the spring, but as we stood beside it we looked at each other and asked what should be the next move. The island was thickly wooded, and we soon realized that we had better have hunted for a needle in a haystack at home.

The chart mentioned three tall trees in a group and the spring. We found the trees standing back a quarter of a mile from the beach, with never a mark of any sort on the trunks to furnish us a hint. The spring was about 200 feet above high tide, but nothing around it furnished the clew we were after.

For a week after our arrival we had every man ashore on the hunt. We paced off so many paces from the spring in every direction and then dug into the earth. We dug about the roots of the three tall trees and then at ten, twenty and thirty paces. When the tide was out, we dug up the beach in a dozen places. The island was finally explored in every direction, but we had our toilsome work as a reward. On the afternoon of the eighth day we gave it up. We did not doubt the existence of a treasure there, but we were satisfied that we couldn't lay our hands on it. We pulled off to the schooner about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and had there been any breeze we should have weighed anchor and put to sea at once, but it had fallen dead calm, and the day was a hot one.

On getting aboard the captain and I sat down to luncheon, while the Malays went overboard for a bath and a frolic in the water. We heard them shouting and splashing, but we were glum. We'd made a failure of it and were financially "busted." Under such circumstances some one must be held blamable. The captain suddenly began to blame me for the biggest fool that ever lived, and in the course of a couple of minutes our conversation was a great deal hotter than the weather. We'd been "pards" a long time without a word, but were now on the point of walking into each other tooth and toe nail when a wild yell from the Malays stopped us.

"Nipped by a shark, just as I expected!" growled the captain as he made a dash for the deck. I followed, of course, and as I reached the quarter deck and looked over the four Malays were in the yawl, and one of them was holding up something for the captain's inspection. We both knew what it was before it was passed up to us. It was a pearl oyster, and a monstrous large one too.

"Where did you find it?" asked the captain.

"On the bottom," was the answer. "There is one great bed of them down there!"

Five minutes later we had half a dozen more, and inside of an hour we had surveyed the bed and found our treasure—the treasure of John Kane's rude chart. In bringing up in five fathoms and in line with the trees we had anchored on the center of the bed. Why he had mentioned the spring we could not make out, unless it might be to save time hunting for it if in want of water.

You may have seen something in print in reference to "the great Pope island find," as it was called. It was not the largest pearl oyster bed ever found among the western islands, but it was by long odds the richest. No hand had ever disturbed it, and the heaviest and largest shells ever seen by fishermen or traders came out of that bed. At that depth of water it was no trick at all to bring up the shells, and the first dozen we opened more than paid all the expenses of the trip. From an oyster in this bed which weighed eight pounds was taken what was afterward called the Blood pearl. It was one of the largest and finest ever placed on the market.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CREED.

Comments, Article by Article, by Widely Known Author of Millennial Dawn.

THE PRESBYTERIAN General Assembly recently convened, in New York City, and has received and adopted the report of its Creed Revision Committee. All broad-minded thinkers will sympathize with our Presbyterian friends in their endeavor to hold to their Westminster Confession of Faith as an infallible document, and yet to adopt an explanation of it as a supplement, that will be more reasonable and that they confess with less twinging of conscience. We rejoice with those who have some conscience left that can be twinged; the wonder is that after years of stultification conscience is not so toughened as to be beyond twinging. Our best wish for them would have been that they had been still more noble—that they had possessed consciences whose twingings would not have allowed them even to "enjoy the peasures of sin for a season"—the sin of misrepresenting the Divine character and plan and of misrepresenting their own hearts—for the sake of name and place and emoluments.

Anyway, we are glad to note some of the changes now made, though we regret the dishonesty attaching to the whole matter in the claim that the new creed is exactly the same as the old one, only differently stated. Ex-President Lincoln's words should be remembered by the Assembly; viz., "You can fool all the people sometimes, and some of the people all the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time."

THE TEXT OF THE NEW CREED.

We give below the text of the revised creed with brief comments on each division of it in brackets. Italics are ours.

Article I.—Of God.

We believe in the ever-living God, who is a Spirit, and the Father of our spirits; infinite, eternal and unchangeable in His Being and perfections; the Lord Almighty, most just in all His ways, most glorious in holiness, unsearchable in wisdom and plenteous in mercy, full of love and compassion, and abundant in goodness and truth. We worship Him, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, three persons in one Godhead, one in substance and equal in power and glory.

[We can assent to this fully except the last sentence, which space forbids us to reply to here; our showing of the Scriptural teaching upon the subject of the Trinity is to be found in Millennial Dawn, Vol. V.]

Article II.—Of Revelation.

We believe that God is revealed in nature, in history, and in the heart of man; that he has made gracious and clearer revelations of Himself to men of God who spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit; and that Jesus Christ, the Word made flesh, is the brightness of the Father's glory and the express image of His person. We gratefully receive the Holy Scriptures, given by inspiration to be the faithful record of God's gracious revelations and the sure witness to Christ, as the Word of God, the only infallible rule of faith and life.

[We can endorse this statement heartily.]

Article III.—Of the Eternal Purpose.

We believe that the eternal, wise, holy and loving purpose of God embraces all events, so that while the freedom of man is not taken away nor is God the author of sin, yet in His providence He makes all things work together in the fulfilment of His sovereign design and the manifestation of His glory; wherefore, humbly acknowledging the mystery of this truth, we trust in His protecting care and set our hearts to do His will.

[This surely is a wise statement which it would be difficult to improve upon.]

Article IV.—Of the Creation.

We believe that God is the Creator, Upholder, and Governor of all things; that He is above all His works and in them all; and that He made man in His own image, meet for fellowship with Him, free and able to choose between good and evil, and forever responsible to his Maker and Lord.

[We can endorse this statement too; but wonder how the large and growing number of evolutionists in the Presbyterian denomination can endorse it without mental reservations and twinges of conscience. If Adam was created in God's image, was meet for companionship with him, and free, and capable of deciding his destiny by his actions, he surely was far removed from being a monkey-man;—and surely, too, far superior to his posterity today, all of whom are sadly deficient in the divine image and qualifications for companionship with their Creator. Even the saints, with their much advantage every way, are still lacking in these respects, and are accepted of God only on a basis of faith in their Redeemer.]

Article V.—Of the Sin of Man.

We believe that our first parents, being tempted, chose evil, and so fell away from God and came under the power of sin, the penalty of which is eternal death; and we confess that, by reason of this disobedience, we and all men are born with a sinful nature, that we have broken God's law, and that no man can be saved but by His grace.

[This important truth is also well expressed. Eternal death [cessation of life], not eternal dying, nor eternal life in torment, is "the wages of sin." (Rom. 6:23.) Hence Jesus Christ "by the grace of God tasted death for every man"—"poured out his soul unto death" for us.—Heb. 2:9; Isa. 53:12.]

Article VI.—Of the Grace of God.

We believe that God, out of his great love for the world, has given His only begotten Son to be the Saviour of sinners, and in the gospel freely offers His all-sufficient Salvation to all men. And we praise Him for the unspeakable grace wherein He has provided a way of eternal life for all mankind.

[We are glad for this statement, that God's love is for the whole world and not merely for the "elect" Church; and that "all men" are provided an "all-sufficient salvation." Good! very good! It only remains to remember the Apostle's word, "How shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard?" to prove that the "due time" for the majority of our race to be saved, by acceptance of the only name given under heaven or amongst men, must be in the Millennium.—Acts 4:12; 1 Tim. 2:6; Rom. 10:14.]

Article VII.—Of Election.

We believe that God, from the beginning, in His own good pleasure, gave to His Son a people, an innumerable multitude, chosen in Christ unto holiness, service and salvation; we believe that all who come to years of discretion can receive this salvation only through faith and repentance; and we believe that all who die in infancy, and all others given by the Father to the Son, who are beyond the reach of the outward means of grace, are regenerated and saved by Christ through the Spirit, who works when and where and how He pleases.

[This statement is the blindest and least satisfactory of all the Articles. It is God's election, not man's that is discussed; hence the word "innumerable" here must be understood to mean that to God the "elect" are either not numbered or beyond numeration or both. Surely this is inconsistent with divine fore-knowledge and predestination—without which

The Apostle Paul clearly shows that the "elect" are the "seed of Abraham"—Christ the head; his church the body. He declares also what is most obvious; namely, that the fulfilment of the promise to Abraham of which his "seed" "the elect" are heirs, is still future; and that promise is, "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." The "elect" are "the holy nation, the peculiar people, the royal priesthood," called now to offer sacrifices that thereby they may specially attest their loyalty to God and his righteousness and crystalize their character-likeness to their Redeemer, and thus be qualified to be the kings, priests and judges of the world during the Millennium—the world's judgment day or trial day. Speaking of the "elect" the Apostle asks, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?"—1 Cor. 6:2.

The "Elect" are tried, tested, judged along a very "narrow way"—of opposition from the world, the flesh and the devil; the world's way of the Millennial age is designated a "highway" of holiness, free from stumbling stones so that the wayfarer though unsophisticated need not err therein. (Isa. 35:8, 9; 5:27.) The path of the "elect" is a dark way, a night-time, in which they need constantly the Word of their Lord as a "lamp to their feet;" the path of the non-elect in the Millennium will be radiant because of the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams and drive away completely the darkness which now covers the earth, and the gross darkness which covers the people—drive away the miasma of sin, error, ignorance, prejudice, selfishness, etc. Ah yes! the elect may rejoice with the Prophet saying,—"Weeping may endure for the night—joy cometh in the morning!"—Psa. 30:5.

"The elect" who now during this Gospel night of sin and ignorance are to be "burning and shining lights," and are exhorted not to hide their lights under a bushel, but to set them upon candlesticks—to let the light shine out to the extent of their ability and thus to glorify their Father in heaven—are all to come together by and by, are all to be changed from human to spirit beings, like the Redeemer, and then they with him shall constitute the great Sun of Righteousness whose shining is to bring so great blessings to the world. See the Lord's own statement of this: The wheat are the children of God—"children of the Kingdom;" . . . During this Gospel age wheat and tares—true saints, the "elect," and mere professors, the tares—are to grow together until the end, or harvest of the age. . . . Then the wheat are to be garnered and "shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father."—Matt. 13:43.

If all who pray "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," could see that God's great plan for the world's salvation is as yet only beginning, that it will not properly begin until the Millennial Kingdom of Christ comes, then they would be prepared to see clearly that during this Gospel age God is merely selecting or electing from among men the Kingdom class, and fitting and preparing them for their grand and glorious service as the world's missionaries—prophets or teachers; priests, or helpers; kings, or rulers; judges, or disciplinarians. From this standpoint the doctrine of election is grand indeed, but from no other standpoint.]

Article VIII.—Of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

We believe in and confess the Lord Jesus Christ, the only Mediator between God and man, who, being the Eternal Son of God, for us men and for our salvation, became truly man, being conceived by the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary, without sin; unto us He has revealed the Father, by His Word and spirit making known the perfect will of God; for us He fulfilled all righteousness and satisfied eternal justice, offering Himself a perfect sacrifice upon the cross to take away the sin of the world; for us He rose from the dead and ascended into heaven, where He ever intercedes for us, in our hearts, joined to him by faith, He ever abides forever as the indwelling Christ, over us, and over all for us, He rules; wherefore, unto Him we render love, obedience and adoration as our Prophet, Priest and King, forever.

[This is a splendid confession of the truth whose Scripturalness rejoices us. We would have preferred a little clearer and fuller expression than "He ever intercedes for us in our hearts." It is true in an indirect sense that the spirit of Christ in our hearts intercedes for holiness as against the wickedness of the flesh: we prefer to suppose that the comma after hearts is a typographical error and should be omitted, thus expressing the Scriptural thought that our Redeemer "maketh intercession for us" with the Father. This omits the old and erroneous thought of intercession expressed by the hymn:—

"Five bleeding wounds he bears
Received on Calvary;
They pour effectual prayers,
They intercede for me;
Forgive him, oh forgive! they cry,
Nor let the ransomed sinner die."

No; the thought is that having paid to Justice the ransom price for the sins of the whole world he has ascended to the Father and is there ready to apply of his merit to the covering of our share in Adamic condemnation, and also for our unwilled sins present and future, the results of Adamic weaknesses and depravity. His entire work is one of intercession,—now, for his church, the household of faith, the anti-typical Levites; and by and by, for all the people—all who when the knowledge and opportunity are granted will desire to come unto the Father by Him. Intercede signifies go-between: our Lord Jesus became the Mediator of the New Covenant, and thus the "go-between" who took the responsibilities of the sinner Adam (and his race) and paid to Justice the price and now stands ready to apply the benefit of his sacrifice to all who will accept it upon New Covenant terms.]

Article IX.—Of Faith and Repentance.

We believe that God pardons our sins and accepts us as righteous solely on the ground of the perfect obedience and sacrifice of Christ, received by faith alone; and that this saving faith is always accompanied by repentance, wherein we confess and forsake our sins with full purpose of and endeavor after, a new obedience to God.

[Another excellent statement to which we can give our heartiest assent.]

Article X.—Of the Holy Spirit.

We believe in the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of life, who moves everywhere upon the hearts of men, to restrain them from evil and to incite them unto good, and whom the Father is ever willing to give unto all who ask Him. We believe that He has spoken by holy men of God in making known His truth to men for their salvation; that through our exalted Saviour, He has sent forth in power to convict the world of sin, to enlighten men's minds in the knowledge of Christ, and to persuade and enable them to obey the call of the gospel; and that He abides with the church, dwelling in every believer as the spirit of truth, of holiness and of comfort.

[This is a most peculiar statement and quite unscriptural. The Scriptures do mention the holy spirit or power of God moving or acting upon the waters during the creative period (Gen. 1:2); and they also speak of its moving holy men of old to speak and to write divine messages (2 Pet. 1:21); and they also speak of its operation upon the Church, the elect, but nowhere is it said to be imparted to any other than God's consecrated children. It shall be in you, the Church, as God's power, witness and anointing, and through its operation in you, through your words and conduct, it shall convince or convict the world of sin, of righteousness and of a coming of judgment or judicial recompense. Space here does not permit of a full discussion of this great theme; we refer our readers to "The At-one-ment Between God and Man."—Vol. V., of Millennial Dawn, chapters VIII—XI.]

Article XI.—Of the New Birth and the New Life.

We believe that the Holy Spirit only is the author and source of new birth; we rejoice in the new life, wherein He is given unto us as the seal of sonship in Christ, and keeps loving fellowship with us, helps us in our infirmities, purges us from our faults and ever continues His transforming work in us until we are perfected in the likeness of Christ, in the glory of the life to come.

[This peculiar statement is confussing however it be read. There is no Spiritual declaration that the Holy Spirit is our Father; but rather that the Father begot us by his holy spirit to newness of life—to be new creatures in Christ Jesus, perfected in the First Resurrection. If this is the thought of the first sentence it is Biblical, otherwise not. With the remainder we must be in hearty agreement.]

Article XII.—Of the Resurrection and the Life to Come.

We believe that in the life to come the spirits of the just, at death made free from sin, enjoy immediate communion with God and the vision of His glory; and we confidently look for the general resurrection in the last day, when the bodies of those who sleep in Christ shall be fashioned in the likeness of the glorious body of their Lord, with whom they shall live and reign forever.

[This statement emphasizes the general confusion of thought on this subject prevalent in all denominations. Our fleshly bodies are continually changing—science declares that a complete change is effected about every seven years. It seems very absurd to think that the last atoms of matter were any better than those previously sloughed off, or than any other "dust" for resurrection purposes, when it must be confessed that divine power is the all-essential of resurrection, anyway. It is peculiar reasoning, too, that urges that Adam and Abraham and David and Paul have been in heaven for centuries in perfect bliss without bodies, and even to claim that death set them free, and then to speak of "the hope of the resurrection" of their bodies, at the last day. If they were imprisoned while in them, and if they are supremely happy without them, the doctrine of resurrection as a hope is absurd. And if they needed the molecules of dust to make them still happier than they are why should God delay the matter until the last day?

PRESIDENT SHOT BOAR

REVIEW OF PRESENT TRIP

One of Good Fellowship and Personal Acquaintance With the People—Speeches Avoid Partisanship and Meet With Unanimous Approval

Newport, N. H., Aug. 30.—President Roosevelt was yesterday entertained in a manner much to his liking. Instead of making numerous addresses, meeting committees and indulging in handshaking, he plunged into the forest of the Corbin preserve in the Croydon mountain region and hunted big game, and just before dark succeeded in shooting a boar.

The president arrived shortly after 10 o'clock in the forenoon and after being driven through the principal streets of the town, delivered a short address in the public square. The town had at noon an air of expectancy, since his coming had been looked upon as the most notable event in its history. No sooner had he concluded his address than rain began falling and the president and those of his party got a thorough drenching.

Upon their return from the woods the party spent the night at the clubhouse, and it is not improbable that the president will again try for large game today.

Now that a breathing spell has come to President Roosevelt and his party there is time for a word as to the apparent purpose and result of the New England trip of the president. Much was expected of it by the people, and much promises to come of it; to the advantage of the party to which he belongs, it must be admitted, but not through any partisan devices or because he has departed in any degree from the strict line of non-committal utterances which he marked out for himself when he left Oyster Bay.

His most comprehensive utterance was that at Hartford, when he dealt at length with the Philippine and trust issues, and his most careful extemporaneous address was that in Boston, where he spoke as if he were addressing an audience composed chiefly of bankers.

Roosevelt's position with respect to the Philippines was so well known before this journey was undertaken that he said nothing new in Hartford. Memorial day, in Arlington cemetery, he declared for giving to the Filipinos the utmost power of self-government compatible with their capacity, and, if he did go further, quoting no obstacle to their ultimate independence; and in Hartford and Boston he treated the trust question as wholly a non-partisan affair. He said a little more than that, in these places or elsewhere; he said it was an affair for both parties and one to which the leading men of both should contribute their best thought. Beyond this point he has been conservative, and even his suggestion that if the constitution of the United States should be found to hamper congress in dealing with monopoly it should be changed, contained no hint of the changes he would recommend. In every place in New England in which he has touched upon these questions President Roosevelt has hewn close to the Hartford lines, and he has let one or two strong speeches stand as typical of his views upon leading questions, and elsewhere either has expressed the same ideas in other words or has kept clear of the administrative field and entertained his audiences with his peculiar oratory and his little sermons upon good citizenship and right domestic living.

The tariff President Roosevelt has not touched and one reason he has not is that he believes that to speak of it at this time would be introducing partisanship where he has pledged himself not to carry it. He had his opportunity in Boston but he let that topic severely alone and he will continue to do so.

His New England tour, therefore, resolves itself wholly into one of good-fellowship and personal acquaintance with the people. That it is the finest kind of practical politics for a man of Roosevelt's personal magnetism cannot be denied, but it can hardly be argued that the president should have remained at home because by so doing he would have neglected to add to his own popularity, for upon that theory the people never would get a glimpse of their president unless they called upon them at the White House. The arrangements for the reception of the president in every city and town are wholly official and the cordiality with which he is received is so spontaneous that it carries not a trace of partisan hesitancy. His speeches meet with unanimous approval, for he says nothing to rasp the pet notions of any of his hearers, and he plants himself with them upon the plane of a common brotherhood and then talks to them like a father.

There may be further incidents of general interest in the president's tour, but if there are they will relate to his personality and his experiences and not to his opinions.

It is a great affliction for a woman to have her face disfigured by pimples or any form of eruptive disease. It makes her morbid and sensitive, and robs her of social enjoyment. Disfiguring eruptions are caused by impure blood, and are entirely cured by the great blood-purifying medicine—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It removes from the blood the poisonous impurities which cause disease. It perfectly and permanently cures scrofulous sores, eczema, tetter, boils, pimples and other eruptive diseases which are caused by the blood's impurity. It increases the action of the blood-making glands and thus increases the supply of pure rich blood.

"For about one year and a half my face was very badly broken out," writes Miss Carrie Adams, of 116 West Main Street, Battlecreek, Mich. "I spent a great deal of money with doctors and for different kinds of medicine, but received no benefit. At last I read one of your advertisements in a paper, and obtained a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Before I had taken one bottle of this medicine I noticed a change, and after taking three bottles I was entirely cured. I can well recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to any one similarly afflicted."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book containig 1008 pages, is given away. Send 21 one-cent stamps for expense of mailing only, for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the volume bound in cloth. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

To Bring About a Settlement of the Coal Strike

BAN PLACED BY MORGAN

Means Universal Ruin, Riot and Bloodshed—General Gobin Will Permit No Further Insults to Troops on Duty In the Mining Region

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 30.—The Public Alliance of this city, which has been endeavoring to bring about a settlement of the coal strike in the interests of the business men of the anthracite region, has sent the following appeal to President Roosevelt:

"To the President of the United States:

"Since the inception of the barbarous and senseless struggle in the anthracite coal region we, the non-combatants who stand upon neutral ground, have suffered the inevitable fate of such unfortunates. The tide of battle ebbs and flows over and about us. We have endured patiently. We have petitioned humbly. We had hoped for much upon J. P. Morgan's return. But now, after a struggle of four months' duration, a period of suffering and progressive business paralysis, when it seemed to us that the time was propitious for a settlement of some kind, if not as a matter of concession to public opinion, yet as a plain business proposition Mr. Morgan has met with his henchmen and the edict has gone forth: 'There will be no settlement, no arbitration, no conciliation, no mediation, no concessions. The fight must go on.'

"Mr. Morgan has placed a ban upon us which means universal ruin, destitution, riot and bloodshed.

"Is J. Pierpont Morgan greater than the people? Is he mightier than the government? Will he be permitted to retain this menacing power?

"It is time the people should speak: it is time their voice should be heard.

"Representing the interests and sentiment of nine-tenths of our people, we appeal to you to use your influence to stay the juggernaut which crushes us. Encouraged by your recent utterances, relying upon your judgment and patriotism, confident of your great moral courage, we appeal from the king of the trusts to the president of the people."

President Mitchell said last evening that there were no negotiations on for a settlement of the strike so far as he knew.

WITHOUT FURTHER ORDERS

Marksmen Will Fire Upon Those Who Attack Troops Hereafter

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 30.—General Gobin returned to headquarters from the Panther Creek region last night. He received the report of Major Gearhart and made a personal investigation of conditions and then issued the following order:

"It is very evident from the recent conduct of the riotous element in this section that the conservative attitude with which the troops have heretofore borne insults has been misunderstood and has encouraged this element to repeated assaults upon the men in the performance of their military duty. This can no longer continue, and I have personally informed the chief burgess of Lansford and Tamaqua and directed that information be furnished the authorities of Summit Hill and Coaldale that the troops will no longer submit to insults or violence from any source. You are therefore directed to arrest any person using insulting language, epithets or violence towards the troops while in the performance of their duty. Have such parties arrested and taken to your guard house for future disposition.

"In moving troops place reliable, competent and skilled marksmen on the flanks of command and arm your file closers with loaded guns and instruct them that in case of attack upon the column by stones or missiles, where the attacking party cannot be reached, the men thus selected shall carefully note the man attacking he column and, be the man attacking the column and, being certain of his man, fire upon him without any further orders. For the execution of this duty select none but absolutely reliable men who will make no mistake. On a general mob, if resisted, use your bayonets and butts vigorously, if at all possible, before resorting to volley firing."

The general says that no more troops will be called out at present.

THE CREED.

The fact is that all this absurdity belongs to a misunderstanding of the grand doctrine of resurrection taught in the Bible. The Bible does not teach a resurrection of the body, but of the soul. It declares, "The soul [being] that sinneth it shall die." (Ezek. 18:4, 20.) It declares that because of sin all souls die, and that to redeem our souls our Lord became a man, a human soul, or being, and "poured out his soul unto death," "made his soul an offering of sin." (Isa. 53:10, 12.) The Bible further shows that it was our Lord's soul that was resurrected on the third day. "His soul was not left in hades"—the death-state. (Acts 2:27.) So, also the Apostle treats the subject, declaring, "It [the soul or being] is sown [in death] in weakness; it [the soul] is raised in power." In the resurrection God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him.—1 Cor. 15:43,38.

Our word soul signifies "sentient being," a cessation of which we call death. The Adamic sentence was death, which would have been the final end of us all but for the redemptive work of Christ. That redemptive work is not yet completed—the price has been paid, but the recovery of man out of death awaits the time appointed of the Father. Meantime the dead are no longer thought of nor spoken of as dead (extinct) by God who purposes their resurrection, the resuscitation of their beings, or souls; hence the frequent use in the Scriptures of the very word used by the creed-revisers in the above article; namely, "sleep" when referring to the dead.—"Them also which sleep in Jesus." (1 Thes. 4:14.) "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." (1 Cor. 15:51.) "Whether we wake or sleep." (1 Thes. 5:10.) "He saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of sleep. . . . Then said Jesus unto them plainly [coming down to their comprehension] Lazarus is dead." (John 11:11, 14.) "The maid is not dead, but sleepeth." (Mat. 9:24.) "David after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep." "David is not ascended into the heavens." (Acts 2:34; 13:36.) Martyr Stephen "cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this he fell asleep." Acts 7:60.) Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, etc., good and bad "slept with their fathers."

The Revision Committee's statement is in harmony with the above when it speaks, not of the bodies sleeping and being awakened at the last day, but refers to "the bodies of those who sleep in Christ." But if they sleep in Christ waiting for their bodies, how can it be also true that "they enjoy immediate communion with God and the vision of his glory"? Do the Revisers wish us to understand that the holy dead dream or that they are somnambulists?

The Scripture proposition is clearly stated, "The dead know not anything." "His sons come to honor and they know it not, to dishonor and they perceive it not of them;" "for there is no work nor device nor knowledge nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest." (Eccl. 9:5, 10; Job 14:21.) From this standpoint the importance attached to the resurrection in the Bible is reasonable and our Lord's words respecting the resurrection have fresh meaning,—"All that are in their graves shall hear his voice and come forth"—the approved the "elect" to the life-resurrection, and the unapproved world in general to the judgment-resurrection.—John 5:28, 29.

Article XIII.—Of the Law of God.

We believe that the law of God revealed in the Ten Commandments, and more clearly disclosed in the words of Christ, is forever established in truth and equity, so that no human work shall abide except it be built on this foundation. We believe that God requires of every man to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with his God; and that only through this harmony with the will of God shall be fulfilled that brotherhood of man wherein the kingdom of God is to be made manifest.

[An excellent statement; but it might have been improved, in our judgment, by a declaration showing that the Law Covenant made with Israel of which the Ten Commandments was the basis, has given place to the New Covenant, mediated by Christ and based upon an ability-obedience to its basic law of love.]

Article XIV.—Of the Church and the Sacraments.

We believe in the holy catholic church of which Christ is the only head. We believe that the church invisible consists of all the redeemed, and that the church visible embraces all who profess the true religion together with their children. We receive to our communion all who confess and obey Christ, as their divine Lord and Saviour, and we hold fellowship with all believers in Him.

We believe the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's supper, alone divinely established and committed to the church, together with the Word as means of grace; made effectual only by the Holy Spirit, and always to be used by Christians with prayer and praise to God.

[Here we have another excellent statement seemingly full of breadth and liberty in Christ; but it can be interpreted narrowly enough; and past experiences and our general knowledge of human nature lead us to fear that it will generally be given this narrow interpretation; viz., to make the words "our communion," i. e. our fellowship, to mean those only who will heartily and honestly accept the Westminster Confession of Faith and accept these articles, foregoing, as a later statement of the same meaning. Any who by thus joining our Church and who by thus coming behind our creedal fence separates himself from all other Christians we will fellowship.

We agree that there is but one Church, invisible, and one Church visible; but why then have different brands, different "communions;"—professedly different "bodies" of Christ? Were our Lord or his Apostles Presbyterian or other sectarians? And if not, have we any Scriptural authority for such divisions which separate the members of the body of Christ? Why not come out of all sects and creeds and stand together as at first on the one foundation, that Christ died for our sins and rose again for our justification, and that all so accepting his work and fully consecrating themselves to him to do his will constitute his elect Church?

Article XV.—Of the Last Judgment.

We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ will come again in glorious majesty to judge the world and to make a final separation between the righteous and the wicked. The wicked shall receive the eternal award of their sins and the Lord will manifest the glory of His mercy in the salvation of His people and their entrance upon the full enjoyment of eternal life.

[We are glad to note this acknowledgement of faith in our Lord's second coming, so prominently taught throughout the Bible. Could these dear friends get a more correct view of the resurrection they would see that our Lord's coming is as the Life-giver; and that none of his redeemed can enter into life eternal until he comes to receive them unto himself, from the prison-house of death in which they sleep. "Your life is hid with Christ in God [in divine power and promise]; when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory."—Col. 3:3, 4.

The glad welcome of the Lord's second advent, so noticeable in the New Testament, is not found generally among Christians of today for two reasons; one, we have just mentioned; the other is because of false views respecting the judgment our Lord comes to perform. When father Adam was in Eden he experienced his first trial or judgment, and for disobedience he was condemned to death—a sentence which his posterity has shared, dying mentally, morally and physically—a groaning creation under divine sentence or curse. What would Adam and all of his children specially desire of the Lord?

Their prayer would surely be: Lord, that we might have another trial, another judgment;—peradventure our experiences with sin may have taught us such lessons that we would be fully obedient hereafter and abide forever in thy favor. But the Lord's Word assures that we could not succeed if granted another trial under similar conditions; because we, although experienced now, are fallen and imperfect, and cannot do the things which we would wish to do. Furthermore, he shows us that Justice is the foundation of his throne, and that having declared us sentenced to death he cannot justly revoke his own sentence.

Then, while we wonder and despair, the Lord reveals to us his plan for our salvation, wonderful in its completeness. (1) He provided for our redemption by the death of his Son who took Adam's place, and by redeeming him redeemed all of his race who lost in his failure. Thus God shows us his law and justice inviolate. Nor was this effected by an injustice to his Son, whose full consent was first secured by "the joy that was set before him." (Heb. 12:2.) The obedient Son has been abundantly rewarded—"God also hath highly exalted and given him a name above every name."—Phil. 2:9.

But why this redemption of Adam and his race? What is its ultimate object? We answer that it is God's response to the 6000 years' prayer of our race;—Lord that we might have another trial or judgment. God proposes to answer that prayer in a better way than any except himself could have devised,—as he declares: "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord; for as the heavens are higher than the earth so are my ways higher than your ways and my plans higher than your plans."—Isa. 55:8, 9.

Foreseeing that fallen man could not obey the divine law, which requires the full measure of a perfect man's ability, God has not only redeemed our race, but proposes also in "due time" to establish the Redeemer as the King over all the earth, to rule and judge and regulate the world, and bring order out of present confusion and darkness and sin, and by corrections in righteousness gradually to raise men up, up, up, to perfection and the divine likeness in heart. This time of resurrection, also called the "times of restitution," is to be the world's "day of judgment," in which each member of Adam's fallen race, redeemed by the precious blood, shall taste of divine mercy and have the fullest opportunity that could be reasonably asked for re-attaining all that was lost in Adam; and meantime for developing such characters as would be fully approved by God as fit for the gift of God—everlasting life through Jesus Christ our Lord;—all others, failing under those favorable conditons being re-condemned,—judged worthy of the Second Death from which there will be no recovery.

This is the Lord's declaration: "God hath appointed a day ["One day with the Lord is as a 1000 years."—11 Pet. 3:8] in the which he will judge [grant trial to] the world in righteousness [equity] by that man whom he hath [afore] ordained [the Christ]; whereof he hath given assurance [ground for hope] unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." (Acts 17:31.) This is the "resurrection by judgment" to which our Lord refers. (John 5:29.) No wonder then that the prophet David rejoiced so in the prospect of the world's coming judgment day; saying (1 Chron. 16:31-34):—

"Let the heavens be glad,
And let the earth rejoice;
And let men say among the nations,
Jehovah, reigneth.
Let the sea roar, and the fullness thereof;
Let the fields rejoice, and all that is therein.
Then shall the trees of the wood sing out
At the presence of Jehovah,
Because He Cometh
To Judge the Earth!
O give thanks unto Jehovah; for he is good;
For his mercy endureth forever!"

Does someone inquire why the Day of Judgment should be put off—why it did not begin at once, as soon as the sacrifice of Cavalry was finished? We answer, that God hath appointed a day—the seventh or last day of the week for this judgment—the world's great Sabbath of rest after the 6000 years of sin and death, and that is sufficient. But we are glad to see just why our Father so "appointed"; viz., because in the interim he designed the calling and perfecting of the Church, the saints, the "elect," to be joint-heirs with the Redeemer and share his glory and work—his ruling, judging and blessing of all the families of the earth.

For further discussion of this subject we must refer our readers to Millennial Dawn, Vol. 1., Chap 8.]

Article XVI.—Of Christian Service, and the Final Triumph.

We believe that it is our duty, as servants and friends of Christ, to do good unto all men, to maintain the public and private worship of God, to hallow the Lord's day, to preserve the sanctity of the family, to uphold the just authority of the state, and so to live in all honesty, purity and charity that our lives shall testify of Christ. We joyfully receive the Word of Christ, bidding His people go into all the world and make disciples of all nations, and declare unto them that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself" and that He "will have all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth." We confidently trust that by His power and grace all His enemies and ours shall be finally overcome, and the kingdoms of this world shall be made the kingdom of our God and of His Christ. In this faith we abide; in this service we labor, and in this hope we pray. Even so, come Lord Jesus.

[We are specially glad that the two Scripture citations we have quoted have been made prominent in the Revised Confession. These may assist some to see that the election of the Church is for the purpose of bringing the whole world to a knowledge of the truth in order to their everlasting salvation. If it was the thought of the Revisers that the Church in her present condition can accomplish this, let them reflect that nineteen centuries have accomplished little for the world in general in the matter of knowledge of the Lord. Let them reflect, too, that even in the day of missionary effort, statistics show that the whole annual Church increase, including all even nominally Christians, is less proportionately than the natural increase of the human family; so that if the hope expressed, that the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our Lord, means a hope of converting the world, it is a blind and baseless one. The Scriptural thought, as shown by old MSS. is quite a different one; namely, that the dominion of this world [is to] become the dominion of God and of his Christ. If the entire world were brought into the condition of earth's best kingdoms it would still leave much, oh! so much, to be desired and prayed for—"Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Hence we pray this prayer, and expect and patiently wait for that Kingdom which will now speedily be introduced by "a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation." "Even so, Come, Lord Jesus."]

The preceding article originated with the Bible and Tract Society, of Allegheny, Pa. The reading of it so impressed a Christian gentleman that he volunteered $3,000.00 to be divided as premiums amongst the leading journals first publishing it to their readers. It is from the pen of the widely-known author of Millennial Dawn, of which over a million copies are in circulation, and the demand still growing. This Society has issued another timely tract, entitled, "Calamities—Why God Permits Them." It offers free samples to our readers, on postal card application to above address.

Mrs. Nutter with H. A. Monk and daughters took a trip to Blue Hill, Thursday, going the greater part of the way by electrics. The clearness of the atmosphere enabled the party to discern nearly every point of interest mentioned by Mr. E. G. Chamberlain in his letter published in the Observer-Reporter issues of July 19 and 26.

Walter N. MacKean takes the place of Mr. A. S. Morrison on the board of registrars.

Mr. Geo. Ricker and family have moved into the house on Ash street ormerly occupied by Mr. F. W. Crooker.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Haskell have returned from Sunapee. They were hastened home by the death of Mr. Haskell's grandfather. He was 92 years of age and had lived through every administration but that of Washington.

The Union Vets will attend the muster at Framingham Monday.

The public schools open Tuesday, Sept. 2.

Mr. I. W. Horne, former Superintendent of Schools, has been in Braintree the past week, and left for Berlin, N. H., today at noon.

The "Cochato" is entered for the playout at Waltham Labor day and the boys are going to work for prize money. Thursday evening at practice a stream was put over 200 feet.

Prof. James H. Horne instructor of physical culture in the university of Indiana and a brother of Mr. Irving W. Horne, has been under treatment of Dr. Ernest DeWolf Wales for deafness. He has tried many specialists and grew worse under their treatment but Dr. Wales has given an entirely different treatment with very satisfactory results.

Major W. E. Morrison has had plans made, which are now being figured for a house on Lamonie street, for Mr. W. J. Harrison of Somerville. Everything is to be thoroughly up-to-date, particular attention being paid to the heating and plumbing. The house will be situated on land near the Ibrahim Morrison place. Mr. Edgar Norris is the architect.

A ROOMY HOME.

Attractive Dwelling Suitable For Almost Any Location.

[Copyright, 1902, by Dennis & Gastmeyer, 280 Broadway, New York.]

A very neat and attractive home is shown in the accompanying perspective view and floor plans. This is a roomy and conveniently arranged low priced house, special features being the large open fireplaces in the dining room and parlor and the large hall and piazza.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

There is a cellar under the whole house, with walls of stone laid up in black cement mortar on the face. The cellar floor is cemented, and a hot air heating plant is located in the cellar, as also are coal bins, storerooms, etc.

All of the frame is built of hemlock lumber and timber and is framed together balloon style, and all of the walls are sheathed, papered and sided with pine siding. The gables and the main roof are covered with random width cedar shingles, with drop courses in the gables, etc.

The exterior walls are covered with two good coats of Atlantic white lead and pure linseed oil paints of such colors as may be selected, and the shingles are covered with two good brush coats of shingle stains.

All of the floors are of narrow yellow pine, tongued and grooved and well blind nailed. The walls throughout are plastered with hard patent plaster, finished with white sand finish. The trim, doors, moldings, etc., are of clear, kiln dried cypress of special designs. The stairs are of ash, with oak turned newels, rails and balusters. The bathroom and the kitchen contain full and complete modern fixtures and plumbing, as shown in the plans.

The hardware is of plain bronze, with apple wood doorknobs, roses, etc. The interior woodwork is all filled with wood fillers, well and properly rubbed down smooth and covered with two good coats of interior varnish. The open fireplaces in the parlor and the dining room are built of fancy molded bricks, etc., complete.

This house as here shown and described can be built in many locations for $1,800, but in or around New York the cost will be about $2,000.

Architectural Gardens.

The partial hiding of the house in trees, vines and window boxes, instead of decreasing the air of hospitality, strongly accentuates it. One can enter such a house with a feeling of strength and of joy. Only a book agent can cheerfully pass up a walk that is raked by the gaze of the household in front and the community in the back. When there is not space enough for a satisfactory grouping of bushes between the house and the street, even a stone wall can be used to advantage, says J. Willson. Of course there are those who will cry out against such seclusion in our democratic country and say we are dropping back to old country snobbery, but rather is it dropping back to some of continental comfort.

Composition For Cleaning Brass.

A writer in American Homes gives the following recipe: Rotten stone, eight ounces; sulphuric acid, two ounces; olive oil and water, each one and one-half ounces; mix.

NEW STAMP CRAZE.

Twenty Thousand Distinct Victorian Issues In the British Empire.

Many celebrated stamp collectors are just now concentrating their energies on collections of the Victorian era, says a correspondent of a London exchange. Such a collection possesses singular interest, for it will not only illustrate the artistic progress that has been made in designs since the inauguration of the postage stamp, but it will also demonstrate in a fascinating fashion the expansion of the British empire.

"I take it there were about 20,000 distinct and representative issues throughout the British empire during the reign of Queen Victoria," says F. R. Grinn, the well known stamp dealer of London. "This number," he added, "does not, of course, include variations of type or other trivial peculiarities. Already there is a run on Victorian stamps of a high value. For instance, a canceled one pound stamp selling a few weeks ago for 25 shillings is now worth 35 shillings. An elaborately perfect collection of the Victorian era would have to include a British Guiana pink circular stamp, which it is practically impossible to purchase in the open market, and the Mauritius postoffice stamp, which is worth several hundred pounds.

"Among the stamp collectors there is a growing tendency to specialize. I have found that the demand for foreign stamps has been growing less for some time past, whereas British colonial stamps have never been so greatly sought after. As almost every colony, dependency and outlying province of the British empire has its own issue on which the sovereign's head appears the accession of King Edward will practically inaugurate an entirely new epoch in philately. I have received demands from all parts of the empire for the new issues of English stamps.

"It is a noteworthy fact that alongside this increasing demand for colonial stamps is an equally great one for those of the United States. There is a big demand for the new American stamp bearing the head of the late President McKinley. Among the other new stamp issues expected in 1902 are those of Germany, necessitated by the kingdom of Wurttemberg relinquishing its right to issue its own stamps. The Russian government, it seems, has decided to mark the two hundredth anniversary of the foundation of St. Petersburg. Prince Ferdinand's head will soon figure on the stamps of Bulgaria in place of the lion familiar to the collector. A special coronation stamp was issued, too, when the young King Alfonso of Spain was crowned."

SIBERIA A LAND OF PLENTY

John Foster Fraser Says It Will Be World's Food Center.

John Foster Fraser, who wrote "The Real Siberia," stepped ashore at New York the other day from the Campania with the avowed intention of studying American workmen for the purpose of making a comparison with English workmen in order to note just wherein the latter fail, says the New York Journal. Mr. Fraser has been in thirty-two different countries.

"I had my choice to cover the coronation for the Yorkshire Post, the Glasgow Herald and Birmingham Post or to take this assignment in the United States," said Mr. Fraser. "I chose to come here. You see, my wife is an American.

"My views of Siberia differ from those of other writers and especially so in the book I have written? Yes, I am well aware of that. The trouble is that the public up to now has never had the real Siberia pictured to it. It is a beautiful land; not one of eternal snow.

"Why, do you know that I believe Siberia will be the great food producing center of the world in the future? It is a great agricultural country. It reminds me of the vast stretches of agricultural lands I have seen in the United States.

"There are plenty of evidences of American craft in Siberia, in Baldwin locomotives and in farming implements that the Russian government sells to the peasants at cost price. Americans do not sell as much agricultural machinery as they might. That little countervailing duty that the United States imposes on Russian sugar operates against them. The Russians have retaliated by imposing a duty of 25 per cent on all American machinery.

"Germany is rushing in to take advantage of this, and great quantities of machinery that could have been sold in Russia by United States manufacturers are now being sold by the Germans. Thus Germany is indirectly reaping the benefit of the American duty on Russian sugar.

"I have been all through Siberia from end to end and from side to side.

"I was arrested once in Manchuria by the Russians, who were at first very fierce and ended by inviting me to dinner. The Russians will give up Manchuria about the same time that the English forsake Egypt—that is, when they are driven out."

The Bacillus of Love.

Some eminent professors in Paris have discovered that love is a bacillus and contains a malignant poison. "Love is one of our most dangerous inheritances from the dark ages, one that has been kept alive and fostered by polite literature," says Lady Violet Greville in the London Graphic. "It should be under control of a board of health that possesses full police authority." Farewell, then, to poets and romancers; farewell to all the Juliets and Francescas of the stage, sweet victims of love. We are progressing. The present generation is unromantic in the extreme, and it is the old, not the young, who now fall in love.

Braintree vs. Braintree.

Arrangements have been completed to bring together the old Braintree Base Ball Club, which made such an exceptionally good record several years ago.

A special game between the old club and the present Braintree Base Ball Club will be held on French's Common Sept. 6th.

This game will undoubtedly be the most interesting one, that has yet been played, and will be given as sort of a reunion of the old club. Nothing but the best of feeling has ever existed between the two clubs. A good game and large attendance is assured

The old club will consist of the following players:

W. Coughlan, p.,	H. Woodsum, s. s.
F. Burrill, c.,	W. Woodsum, l. f.
T. Mulligan, 1 b.,	T. Downey, a. f.
J. Condon. 2 b.,	L. Mulligan, r. f.
J. Rudderham, 3 b.

Castle Square Theatre.

The Castle Square Theatre will be reopened for the sixth regular fall and winter season of this popular playhouse on Monday, September 1st. During the weeks the theatre has been closed extensive structural repairs have been made, the entire auditorium has been renovated, an elegant new drop curtain, designed and painted by scenic artist Winthrop B. Nichols, has been hung and whatever could add to the attractiveness of the theatre has been attended to. The company engaged for the season includes in its membership artists of well known ability, the principals being Lillian Lawrence, Jane Irving, Leonora Bradley, Mary Sanders, Izetta Jewel, Alexia Durant, John Craig, John Sainpolis, John T. Craven, James L. Seeley, Lindsay Morison, Thomas Mac Larnie, Edward Wade, Louis Thiel, George Mack, William J. Hasson and John J. Geary. Mr. J. R. Pitman remains as stage director and Mr. Leon Fairbrother will lead the orchestra. The opening attraction will be Shakespeare's great comedy "As You Like It." which will be given a modern stage version and with great care in the matter of scenic and costume accessories.

PARK THEATRE.

The large audiences which have gathered every afternoon and evening at the Park theatre this week have been thoroughly pleased with the performances of "Friends" given by Corse Payton and his famous stock company. Mr. Payton, who has leased the Park for a term of years, has brought to Boston an excellent company of capable players, headed by himself, and he promises a series of entertainments in which the acting, scenery and costuming will be up to a high level. He will give two performances daily throughout the entire season, and there will be a change of bill every week. Popular prices will prevail throughout the entire house, but Mr. Payton's reputation is sufficient guarantee that there will be nothing cheap about the Park Theatre performances but the prices. Next week Lester Wallack's military drama, "Rosedale," gives a play always heartily welcomed by Bostonians, will be given. The leading roles will be played by Mr. Payton, and Miss Una Abel Brinker, the leading lady of the new stock company.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

Boston Music Hall opens its regular fall season Monday afternoon, with the popular comedians Fisher and Carroll, presenting for the first time in Boston their laughable farce-comedy success, entitled "That's All." This play is brand new this season but it comes to Boston with the hearty endorsement of other cities and it is expected will cause as much favorable comment here as it has received in other places. Next Monday will also mark the first day of the new management of Messrs. E. D. Stair and A. L. Wilbur, the enterprising firm of theatrical managers who have taken a long lease of the theatre and who will make it the home of all that is best and good in the way of theatrical attractions. Messrs. Stair and Wilbur are also the owners of the New Majestic Theatre, which will probably open in November. Popular prices will always prevail at the theatre, the best seats in the afternoon being 25 cents, with 15 cents for seats in the family circle. The evening prices will be 15, 25 and 50 cents and these prices will never be increased. For the accommodation of ladies visiting Boston the management will open a large reception room on the lower floor, the entrance being on Winter street, and this room will be absolutely free and all ladies are cordially invited to make it their headquarters while in the city.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The leading attraction at Keith's for the week of Sept. 1 will be the famous Japanese magician and conjuror Ten Ichi, whose cleverness is said to be equal to that of Ching Lin Foo, the Oriental who created so much of a stir in amusement circles, a couple of years back. Ten Ichi is said to be the principal magician to the Mikado, and he brings along with him a troupe of royal wonder workers, including the dainty Japanese beauty, Ten Katsu, whose name translated into English means "Heaven's Victory." It will be the last week for the tableaux vivants, and the popular pictures will be exhibited. Nichols Sisters, the cleverest black-face entertainers in the country; Harrigan, the noted "tramp" jugler and comedian; Aurie Dagwell, a favorite female vocalist, and a dozen others of note are to contribute pleasing specialties to the ten hours' program. The phenomenal business of the summer months bids fair to keep up through the fall and winter months, as the management promise some of the biggest shows ever offered in Boston.

—One who years ago visited the Nantasket and Revere beaches, before they came under control of the Park department, cannot but be pleased with the results. The rowdyism of older days has been relegated to the rear, and the beaches are now all that can be wished for.—Athol Chronicle.

—Coal has dropped $2 per ton in New York city.

September Magazines.

Ellen Olney Kirk's new novel is published entire in the September number of Lippincott's Magazine. It is a comedy particularly suited to lazy early-autumn days when readers want sauce piquante served as well with literary food as with every-day meals. The story is American, with a heroine "exquisite beyond all women!" Having at stake a fortune, she carries out an original scheme to marry the man she loves. Humor is paramount, and the plot stimulates, while that same charming human sentiment is evident which charaterized Mrs. Kirk's earlier success, "The Story of Margaret Kent."

The September number of Everybody's Magazine presents a variety of interesting stories, by writers of the first rank. There is a New England Ghost Story by Mary E. Wilkins—"The Vacant Lot," illustrated by Peter Newell Miss Eleanor Hoyt's story, "The Woman Who Forgot," is a charming love story and reveals a different phase of this author's talent.

If for no other reason, the September Woman's Home Companion would be notable for two features. In "The Real Springtown on the Pike," the scene and the people of Mr. Lloyd's notable novel are described and illustrated. The other great feature tells of recent excavations in Bible lands. It throws some new and startling light on Biblical history. The fiction for the month includes stories by Cyrus Townsend Brady, Stanley Waterloo, Zoe Anderson Norris and Herman Lee Ensign, whose animal stories have attained a wide popularity.

An interesting, particularly forceful looking new picture of President Roosevelt is the frontispiece of the September McClure's and the the leading feature of the number, accompanying the portrait, is an article on "Cuban Reciprocity—a Moral Issue," by William Allen White author of "Roosevelt," "Cleveland," "Platt' etc. Alberto Santos-Dumont tells "How I Became an Aeronat," and there is an illustrated article on "Pelee the Destroyer," by August F. Jaccaci that looks interesting, notwithstanding all that has been published on the eruption.

The leading article in the New England Magazine for August is a pleasantly written account of the Charles River Valley by Mrs. Augusta W. Kellogg. Tracing the serpentine windings of the river from its source the author deftly carries the reader's interest from one historic site to another, imforming without wearying him, and keeping his eye and mind ever alert for vista of enchantment just beyond the bend. With its well-chosen illustrations the article is a notable contribution to the literature of Masstchusetts river scenery and a credit to the magazine.

One of the most interesting articles in the September Pilgrim is entitled, "How Some Men Trade," in which Milton Marks, describes the Chicago Board of Trade. His article is illustrated with characteristic pictures by John T. McCutcheon. The "serious" article of the number is R. E. C. Long's account of the Russian Peasantry, whose conditition he makes known in a strikingly illustrated paper. A pictorial feature gives glimpses of many of the famous New York clubs.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and Senator Paris Gibson of Montana contribute to the September National strong articles on two public problems of the first-class. Senator Lodge takes occasion in his National article to interpret for the general understanding the terms of the Philippine civil government bill, which he chiefly shaped, and to forecast the future of the Filipinos under the flag of the United States. Senator Gibson urges the duty of Congress to save all remaining public lands for actual home seekers, and warns this country that tens of thousands of our farmers are settling in northwestern Canada because of our failure to adopt this policy.

—Col. William A. Gaston, who seeks the Democratic nomination for governor, has followed the example of Mr. Hamlin and has announced to the public his platform of principles. At a meeting of the State committee it was voted to hold the Democratic convention in Boston at Tremont Temple, September 17th. The caucuses are to be held September 10th.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a sneak. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.
